POTOMAC SYNOD

Meeting of the Evangelical Reformed Church.

Highlights of the third annual meeting of the Potomac Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, Hood College, Frederick, June 16, 18, 1941.

Dr. Scott R. Wagner, Hagerstown, President of Synod, and Rev. Titus Lehman, of Baltimore, Vice-President shared the duty of presiding at the meetings.

On Monday evening, Dr. L. W. Goebel, President of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, used John 3:16 as the basis of a confronting and challenging discourse on "Our Source of Hope in a Dark Hour." In his address on Tuesday afternoon in the capacity as representative of the denominational work, Dr. Goebel said this is a time of opportunity. The Church has been on the defensive long enough; this is the time for advance.

Dr. S. L. Flickinger, Winchester, Va., in his devotional talk on Tuesday morning urged a "Return to God" as a means to meet our needs.

Rev. E. G. F. Dettbarn, Baltimore, chairman of the Kingdom Service Committee, reported that Potomac Synod has stood at the head of the 34 Synods of the church in percentage paid on budget for denominational causes.

Rev. Dr. John S. Hollenbach, Manchester, who was in charge of the Stewardship Contest, reported that 7 of the 90 denominational prizes were awarded to people in Potomac Synod.

Dr. A. V. Casselman, one of the Executive Secretaries of the Board of International Missions, said that in spite of current difficulties the work is going on and the outlook encouraging and challenging.

Dr. D. C. Dearborn, Prof. of mathematics in Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C., spoke about the work of that institution.

On Tuesday evening Dr. Theodore F. Herman of the Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa., stressed the need of the Christian world view as opposed to what current systems have to offer.

Dr. Charles Enders, of Washington, D. C., Recording Secretary of the Board of National Missions, said the Church must win for Christ the whole life in the areas that have been covered geographically.

On Wednesday morning Rev. W. H. Kochheim of Baltimore said we must have faith in the Eternal God in the midst of changing values and boundaries.

Dr. W. F. DeLong, of Philadelphia, Pa., spoke of the work of National Missions as a representative of the Board of National Missions. There are still some areas not properly church.

Rev. A. W. Newell, of Richmond, Va., in his report on Committee of Christian Education mentioned the camp to be conducted at Fannettsburg, Pa.

The Brunswick, Md., and the Lovettsville, Va., congregations were constituted a charge with the Rev. Kendall B. Shoffner as pastor.

The officers were re-elected for a two year term as follows: Rev. Scott R. Wagner, D. D., Hagerstown, as President; Rev. Titus Lehman, Baltimore, as Vice-President; Rev. N. L. Horn, Baltimore, as Secretary; Mr. Charles F. Kimpel, as Treasurer; Mr. Henry W. Scultheis, Baltimore, as lay member of the Synodical Council.

REV. W. E. ROOP ON TOUR NOW IN CALIFORNIA.

Spent two weeks with our youngest son Earl, who lives for the past 10 years in Seattle, Washington.

Safe and pleasant trip so far. Will likely cover 9,000 miles, before I reach home again. So far have traveled in 85 h. p. car about 4,500 miles and 2,000 by train, when I reach LaVerne, tomorrow, when our annual meeting begins, for a six days conference. Will represent Meadow Branch congregation, as their delegate, throughout all of the sessions.

Have had snow-capped mountains Shiasta in sight for more than 100 miles, thru the Sacramento Valley. It is a beautiful well irrigated country, with varied products. Almond groves, many acres; also wheat to cut and good. Also oats to cut and heavy. Some corn a foot high. Palms along some of the larger city streets. Oranges rare yet. Large dairy farms. Also great ranches of growing cattle and horses. Anglus, and all other breeds, where the water can not be gotten on the land, besides sage bush, things look yellow and dead. Had a short wait in Sacramento, while I write this note. More later.

A motor horn which cannot be blown unless the car is in motion is hailed as a beneficent new invention. But our recollection is that our old Model T boasted just such a vexatious contraption.

FLAG DAY TRIBUTE

by Francis S. Key-Smith at Flag Day ceremonies, East front of the Capitol, Washington, D. C. sponsored by the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, and other patriotic organizations, June 14, 1941.

(We thank Judge Edward S. Delaplaine, Frederick, for the following copy of address.—Ed.)

It is indeed both a pleasure and a privilege to join with you upon this occasion of your celebration of the anniversary of our flag—the most beautiful and symbolic flag of any people in the world. If I can leave with you some genuinely encouraging and inspiring thoughts in this stone man's age of high modern civilization I will feel that my effort has not been in vain.

There are some outstanding American anniversaries which are especially appealing to the minds and hearts of every true American. Among these is the 22nd. of February, the anniversary of the birth of General Washington who designed our flag and did more towards the establishment of human liberty than any man who ever lived.

Another such anniversary is the Fourth of July when a few courageous Americans, appealing to their God for the rectitude of their intentions, proclaimed to an astonished world that the American colonies, "were, and of right ought to be, free and independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown."

A third such anniversary is today, the anniversary of the 14th. of June 1777, when Congress declared by Resolution, that:

"The flag of the thirteen United States shall be thirteen alternate red and white stripes with a blue Union of thirteen stars, white, representing a new constellation."

Constellation, meaning cluster. Shall we preserve this symbolism for a un-

TIME TO REDUCE ALL UNNECESSARY EXPENDITURES.

Now that the nation is dedicated to "All-out" Defense, every man, every machine and every dollar must be made available for the defense of democracy. All three are essential.

To take men or machines from the jobs slows up the defense program. The same is true of dollars. Every dollar wasted away on non-essential non-defense boondoggling is a dollar spent in anti-defense.

The taxpayers of the nation do not begrudge paying the tremendous tax bills that are now being placed on them, but their common sense does revolt at the thought of their earnings being wasted in non-defense spending at a time when every dollar may be needed to insure our liberty.

Although Mr. Morgenthau recently suggested a billion dollars of non-defense federal spending might be postponed during the war emergency, little has been accomplished in this respect after several weeks of congressional consideration.

There has been a lot of oratory in Washington on the subject, but so far there is little or no indication that anything will be done about it unless the people back home make their will known to their representatives and Senators in Congress.

Can you permit extravagance to endanger the success of the defense program without expressing your opinion against it? Your Senators and your Congressmen will be interested in your views, and as an interested citizen we urge you and the members of your Association to write or wire them today and tell them that federal non-defense spending must be reduced at least during the war emergency.—John L. Hougardy, Executive Director, Maryland Public Expenditure Council, Inc.

NIGHT AUTO ACCIDENTS.

Non-uniformity of lights on motor vehicles is held by the Keystone Automobile Club to be a contributing cause to many night accidents in cities and towns.

The Club advocates the uniform use of headlamps, pointing out that when two cars with headlamps approach an intersection the projected beams serve as a warning to the drivers, who are thus enabled to take the necessary precautions. When only cowl lights or parking lights are used on one or both of the approaching cars, the danger of collision is appreciably increased.

"The hazard is multiplied," said Edward P. Curran, Saffey Director of the Club, "when cars thus operated are of older type equipped with very small cowl lights. Such lamps are virtually useless, both as a means of affording illumination and of giving warning to other operators and pedestrians."

"Motor vehicle law requires the use of headlamps under conditions where other vehicles, pedestrians, and substantial objects are not readily discernible. We believe the police can aid materially in reducing night accidents by stopping motorists whose cars are insufficiently illuminated and instructing them to turn on the head lamps. We also believe the police should pay more attention to "one-eyed" cars. In most cases, drivers are unaware of the condition and appreciate having it called to their attention. Spare bulbs should be carried by every motorist for this emergency."

LETTER FROM SHANGHAI

From our Missionary Friend, the Rev. H. G. C. HALLOCK.

Dear Friend:— I am coming close to the end of my forty-fifth year in China and it seems the most unfortunate of all. Yet it has been a year of blessing also. I am used to being surrounded by mobs but it seems strange to be surrounded by troops and the city being treated as a foreign country. Everything that comes into Shanghai from the interior has to pay a kind of graft to the army, so that costs go up enormously. Eggs are 40 times the price they were when I came to China. Rice is more than 40 times the price. Paper for my books and tracts and letters costs ten times as much. This is a very serious matter to me for much of my work is on paper as I cannot spread myself all over China, so I spread my message by paper. Until these troubles began I could reach twelve thousand places in China with my Gospel literature. Now we have much trouble getting mail up into the interior. I have tracts and Christian almanacs to send. To more than half the places in China only letters can be sent.

There is much danger in Shanghai's outskirts where there are gambling dens galore. They are beyond municipal control. There are assassinations. The police are nearly helpless. The banks are having a hard time for there is shooting between the banks of the political parties that own them. Money matters are bad. There are five kinds of paper money in circulation, largely forced on us. Formerly we had copper and silver coins worth what they weighed.

Hardly a day goes by without numbers of army and navy aeroplanes going over our heads. The other day 54 of them went in a flock. All this means that people for whom I have given nearly 45 years of my life are suffering. We have good reason to pray for faith and freedom from anxiety.

Some ask me why I do not quit and come home? How can I with 1200 Brownies in my Ragged Sunday Schools and a Church and Sunday School with nearly 400 English speaking young people connected with them? No, my work is here until I find a hole in the ground. I must not be unfaithful to the Lord when He has been so faithful to me for the many years I have been in His service. But it would be a great pleasure to be present at my class reunions at Princeton and see the other classes have their good times.

God is with us and we have His promises which are precious. He is all we need for now and for eternity. Please pray for my Brownies that their lives may be spared. Pray for my Church that all may be well and that it prospers, and for me that I may be faithful and true. If you wish to help with my work, please send my brother, Rev. G. E. F. Hallock, D. D., 10 Livingston Park, Rochester, N. Y. Very best wishes and kindest regards.

Yours in Christ's glad service, (Rev.) H. G. C. HALLOCK.

FAMILY REUNION HELD.

Eighty-one persons were present Sunday, June 22, at the third annual Reindollar reunion, which met at Big Pipe Creek Park, near Taneytown.

After greeting old acquaintances and meeting new members of the clan a picnic lunch was enjoyed. A business meeting and program followed. Henry I. Reindollar, Jr. led the singing of "America the Beautiful" and "God Bless America," with Henry I. Reindollar, Sr. at the piano. The minutes of the last reunion were read and accepted. The election of officers resulted in re-electing all the former officers, except Mr. P. B. Englar, who asked to resign.

Officers are: Henry I. Reindollar, Sr., President; Eugene Reindollar, Vice-President; Franklin Reindollar, Treasurer; Mrs. Margaret Franquist, Secretary; Mrs. Margaret Nutton, Historian.

Mrs. Paul Griffith sang two solos, Paul Griffith at the piano; Miss Betsy Reindollar and Miss Gottwald delighted their audience by a graceful interpretation in tap dancing. Two solos by Henry Reindollar, accompanied by his father at the piano.

Although the weather was warm all enjoyed the hours spent together, and parted hoping to be present next year.

TYPISTS IN DEMAND.

Because of difficulty in filling office positions, stenographers and typists in the State service will be chosen from "open lists, without advertised examinations," Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones said here.

Jones explained that when positions in a particular classification were to be filled from an open list he could call an examination whenever enough applications are on hand. Already, he said, 35 classifications were being filled by these un-announced examinations.

Applications for the classifications of junior stenographer and junior typist, he said, might be filed at any time.

TO CORRESPONDENTS AND OTHERS.

As July 4 will fall on Friday next, there will be no Record published on that day. It will be necessary, therefore for Correspondents and patrons to send their copy one day earlier than usual next week.

RED CROSS NURSES GREATLY WANTED.

Maryland's State Service is very short of aid.

The Maryland State and Local Nursing Service Committee of the American Red Cross today reported a serious shortage of nurses in the Red Cross Reserve Corps.

Miss Helen E. Wright, of University Hospital, chairman of the committee, said the corps—which must be prepared to handle any disaster or emergency arising in Maryland—needs at least 2,000 members to bring it to full strength.

It is from the reserve, Miss Wright pointed out, that nurses are drawn for duty in the Army and Navy. She said approximately 75 Maryland Red Cross nurses already have been appointed to military posts as second lieutenants. "Right now," said Miss Wright today, "there are only 431 nurses in the first reserve. This group is expected to supply the nurses for the army and navy and for more active type of work. These nurses must be unmarried and under 40 years of age."

"There are 418 nurses in the second reserve, which is made up of nurses more than 40 years of age, are married or for some other reason are not able to take on very active work. "There should be 2,000 more nurses in the first and second reserve. Should an emergency call come to us we would then be in a position to answer full-heartedly, in the true Maryland way."

All reserve nurses must be graduates of accredited nursing schools, which have no less than 50 patients a day, and be members of the Maryland State Nurses' Association. She said the association boasts a membership of 3,200. Married, retired or inactive nurses are urged to take hospital positions to release younger nurses should reserve members be called.

"One of the main problems we must be prepared to meet," it was pointed out by Miss Eileen McLaughlin, of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, secretary of the committee, "is that we must have a reserve large enough to answer any disaster appeal quickly without understaffing civilian hospitals. That is why we want to hear from all nurses, even though they may have been inactive for many years. We are contemplating some refresher courses for such women as these."

Applications for enrollment should be sent to Miss McLaughlin, committee secretary.

Both Miss Wright and Miss McLaughlin are members of the medical sub-committee of the Disaster Relief Committee of the Baltimore Red Cross Chapter. They procure nurses needed when disasters, such as floods, fires, hurricanes or industrial plant explosions, strike in Maryland. The nurses won much praise for their work during the Cumberland Valley flood in 1936, and more recently at the Hercules Powder Plant explosion in New Jersey.

The reserve is not open to persons without training. Miss Wright urged young girls studying a career to turn to nursing, as virtually all nursing schools are now in search of applicants.

The personnel of the Maryland State and Local Nursing Committee on the reserve follows:

Mrs. Dorothy Miller McBride, State Board of Examiners, 2 West Second St. Frederick; Miss Edith B. Olive, 17 Revel St., Annapolis; Miss G. C. Menke, 156 South Morley St.; Miss Katherine R. Nelson, Johns Hopkins Hospital; Miss Myrtle M. Nock, Peninsula General Hospital, of Salisbury; Miss Ruth M. Scheper, Hospital for the Women of Maryland; Miss Gladys LaRue, Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, Md., and Miss Catherine Corley, State Department of Health, Baltimore, as well as the chairman and secretary.

THE RECORD APPRECIATED

DEAR MR. ENGLAR:— The years slip by and are gone—yet they add their count on us, and we know they have passed. I love my birth-date, and I have enjoyed the "Record" since almost its beginning.

It has always seemed like "a letter from home" and I have appreciated your personal care in its editorship. It is not easy to keep a local paper impartial in politics or neighborhood issues.

With my subscription check for the coming year I give you personal best wishes for health and happiness.

Sincerely yours, ANNIE DIEHL BRUMBAUGH, Orange, N. J.

Dept. of Labor, who spoke on "Food for Fitness"; T. L. The annual sight-seeing trip this year was to the National Gallery of Art in Washington, which has been open only a short time.

MARGARET HITCHCOCK TO BE DR. THOMAS' BRIDE.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Margaret A. Hitchcock, daughter of Dr. Nelson A. Hitchcock, of Taneytown, and the late Mrs. Alice A. Hitchcock, to Dr. A. Seymour Thomas, Jr. son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Thomas, of 274 Argyle Road, Brooklyn, N. Y. Miss Hitchcock was graduated from Church Home and Infirmary, Baltimore, and took a post graduate course in ophthalmology at Wilmer Institute of John Hopkins Hospital. She is now affiliated with the Presbyterian Hospital of Columbia University.

Dr. Thomas was graduated from Bard College, Columbia University and the school of Dental and Oral Surgery, Columbia University.

Why do we say "it's hot" when everybody knows it—without consulting a thermometer.

Random Thoughts

PIECE WORKERS.

Just because a coat fits a man does not mean that the vest and pantaloons also fit. The main reason why, perhaps is that one of the makers makes the coat, and two others, the other two garments.

It is the custom of factories in general that "piece work" is the rule. A tour of an automobile factory demonstrates the moving plan as the auto moves first on its wheels, and is finished with upholstery work and paint, and goes off the track almost ready for the buyer and salesman.

A blast furnace begins work on a unit for a railroad, the process being directed from overhead by a compressed air conveyor, and finally its ends are sawed off.

This is only a rough sketch of the job, but it shows that completion is the result of skilled workmen, each with a part to perform as in making what we call a "suit," and what sort of "piece worker" we may be.

FRIDAY, JUNE 27, 1941.

A LONG HELD THOUGHT.

Somehow, it happens that our thought has been, from the beginning, that Germany will not win this war—especially, that it will not defeat England. The end is still far away, perhaps, but one can not help having opinions. How Russia will stand up, is a matter of uncertainty; but it would seem that with its pressure, in the East, and of England from the west, that victory for Germany is at least indefinitely postponed.

Uncertain quantities are Japan, Spain, France, Greece, Turkey, China and still more of the smaller nations all of which have relation to our thought.

There is no discounting the bulldog tenacity of England. "John Bull" has been a long-standing nickname for it, and one evidently earned.

WAR PRICES POSSIBLE.

There is hardly any doubt that, due to war conditions, most prices will advance. Some advances have already been slowly made, showing the desire of merchants and mechanics to avoid profiteering; also, in order that a panic may not be made to store up articles of food—such as was the case with sugar and some other articles in the first great war.

We advise that the situation be met calmly, between one another. Let us have a fair deal, as between friends. Whatever happens, there will be an ending to it, and we will need friends.

Profiteering should be marked in long memories. There are already some evidences that sales have been at the end of a dicker unfair on the part of the one having the best opportunity to "add on" to prices.

OUR COURSE IS SET.

The following from our well qualified Editor Stromberg of the Ellicott City Times, is worthy of close consideration as to "our course set."

"The war in Europe has produced differences of opinion in the United States, ranging from insistence that we take immediate action to help the British by force of arms to a calm and placid belief that this nation should do nothing because it is not and will not be, concerned with what happens abroad.

It is comparatively easy to comprehend the position of those who have worked for peace through the years as pronounced pacifists and now find themselves challenged by the trend of actual events. It is more difficult to understand the attitude of other citizens who say they dislike Adolf Hitler, but dislike the British so much more they are unwilling for the United States to do anything that will, in any way, amount to assisting the British. This view, which is more widespread than some people believe, slows effective national mobilization.

Whether we always agree or not with President Roosevelt, it is beginning to be clear that he is taking wide consideration of the whole subject. We figuratively "jump at" conclusions without seeing our landing place.

We are sure enough that the people of the U. S. will have a stupendous debt to help retire—with the government as lender and we the people as bond-holders, very much like that of the war of about twenty years ago; but a position as "pacifists" will not help them, and the stop dodging point has about been reached, and Mr. Stromberg says sightly "our course is set."

COMPULSORY ARBITRATION NEEDED.

If people who have differences would sit around the table and talk it out there would be fewer fights and fewer bloody noses and broken bones. For a good many years I have believed that ALL labor disputes should be subject to compulsory arbitration before a tribunal of equal number of representatives of employer, employee and the consuming public. If this were done and the public representatives were members of the Supreme Court of the state where the difficulty existed there would be hope for reasonable settlement of the difficulty. While the arbiters were considering the matter work should be carried on in the industry as usual. This should please and satisfy all parties concerned.

The average laborer wants justice but he does not want to cease work and earning, and his wife and children who must suffer if he no longer earns certainly do not want a strike. If so arbitrated all great labor disputes could be settled without loss to any one except the co-called labor leaders who "neither toil nor spin, yet solomon in all his glory was never arrayed in power, as one of these." Didn't John L. Lewis blandly hand over to a presidential candidate a half million dollars (of laborers dues) for campaign fund without batting an eye, and for what? You guess the answer. Labor leaders never labor; they just boss others and collect dues and draw enormous salaries and to earn those salaries must do something, and the only thing they seem capable of doing is to call strikes.

Strikes are unnecessary. They can be eliminated and should be. If strikes were universally eliminated wars in time would also be eliminated; while groups of men continue to strike, groups of "statesmen" (God save the mark!) will continue to cause wars. Why should not all wars be eliminated? They can be, and they will be when men grow up and acquire sense enough to know that differences among nations and peoples can be settled by arbitration.

Don't believe it, eh? Read Isaiah 2-4 "And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." There is a better world ahead for the people of the future. How far that time is removed only the Lord knows. Man must settle that problem, and he seems not yet ready or willing to do so. W. J. H.

GOVERNOR VETOES 550.

Governor O'Connor vetoed House Bill 550 known as the perishable products act in spite of the wishes of farmers throughout Maryland. This bill made it unlawful for any individual or organization to maliciously interfere with the production, transportation or distribution of perishable food products. Its purpose is evident, its intent was to protect all consumers including laborers and at the same time protect all producers of perishable products.

These products spoil if marketing is delayed a day and the producer who is a third party when and if strikes occur is the one who loses. Such losses have occurred in the past in the Cambridge strike and on the Baltimore Produce Market. Strikes are more prevalent now and farmers through their organization sought to protect themselves and the consumers by legislation.

Governor O'Connor by his veto of this bill has nullified the efforts of farmers and has assumed this responsibility.—Md. Farm Bureau.

NEAR THE EDGE.

Washington, D. C., June—When a German submarine sank the United States freighter Robin Moor about the last cord of friendly relations between Germany and the United States Government was severed. Feeling ran high in Washington for several days, but cooled off when news reached the Capital that all of the missing survivors had been rescued.

The President ordered the freezing of all German assets in the United States, and then the State Department was directed by the President to request the German Government to close all of its consulates, and travel and propaganda agencies in this country by July 10. The German Embassy still functions in Washington.

Blustering Hitler has gone beyond his threat that he would sink a British freighter carrying British supplies. The Robin Moor had no such supplies, and the sinking of it was accepted by our own Government as defiance of our claim of "freedom of the seas," even outside the war zones.

There will be more declarations of purpose by the United States Government that Germany will think hostile. About the next thing that may be expected to happen will be the discontinuance of maneuvers and precautions by American Naval ships in the Atlantic; inasmuch as the Administration is committed to deliver arms, ammunition, food and supplies to England. That means that our Government is ready to meet Germany and if necessary, to go-gunning for submarines and destroyers that interfere with American merchant or Naval Ships.—J. E. Jones, in N. I. Service.

added, may be held every two weeks or every month, whereas they formerly were held only once a year. In this connection let us recall upon this anniversary of our flag and the disturbed state of the world, the words of Chief Justice Marshall in rendering the opinion of the Supreme Court in McCulloch vs Maryland.

"No political dreamer was ever wild enough to think of breaking down the lines which separate the States and of compounding the American people in one mass." Also, let us recall the even better known words of Lincoln at Gettysburg:

"A government of the people, for the people and by the people," which is the antithesis of a people of the government, for the government and by the government.

And further, let us recall the eloquent words of Henry W. Grady, of Georgia, in speaking at the university of Virginia in 1889, for the subject will bear another expression of the same fundamental truths, "Exalt the citizen," declared Grady "As the State is the unit of government, he is the unit of the State—make himself respecting, self-reliant and responsible. Let him lean on the State for nothing that his own arm can do, and on the government for nothing that his State can do. Let him cultivate independence to the point of sacrifice and learn that humble things with unbartered liberty are better than splendors bought with its price. Let him neither surrender his individuality to the government, nor merge it with the mob."

These are the true American principles, established by the founders and maintained by all our early patriots and left to us as our priceless American heritage. They are the principles under which Americans have ever been encouraged to forge ahead in honest effort and thrift and to unexcelled commercial and industrial progress. If we continue to cherish and preserve them we will continue to forge ahead in successful effort throughout the present and the future and erect the strongest national defense against all attack whether from within or from without.

They are the principles which created that country to which, Chas. Phillips, a famous Irish advocate paid so high and eloquent tribute in speaking in 1823 at a dinner given in Ireland in honor of the American, Howard Payne, author of "Home Sweet Home," when he exclaimed: "Search creation round, where can you find a country that presents so sublime a view, so interesting an anticipation? What noble institutions. What a comprehensive policy. What a wise equalization of every political advantage. The oppressed of all countries, the martyrs of every creed, the innocent victim of despotic arrogance or superstitious frenzy, may there find refuge; his industry encouraged, his piety respected, his ambition animated; with no restraint but those laws which are the same for all, and no distinction but that which his merit may originate, who can deny that the existence of such a country presents a subject for human congratulation?"

Another American anniversary, closely associated with our flag is the 13th and 14th. of September, then anniversary of the occasion upon which the flag was christened in verse: "The Star Spangled Banner," and our country, "The land of the free and the home of the brave." The occasion of the gallant defense of Baltimore which inspired, Francis Scott Key, to write the immortal words of, "The Star Spangled Banner," which almost immediately became by popular acclaim the National Anthem of the American people and have so continued throughout the one hundred and twenty-seven years which have since intervened.

Key, as many of us, perhaps, know was not a prisoner aboard a British Man-of-war when he wrote the words of the National Anthem but was detained with a small party of Americans aboard a small American sloop upon which they had gone to visit the British fleet under a flag of truce to solicit the release of a Doctor William Beams whom the British had taken prisoner upon their retreat to their ships after capturing and burning this city and this Capitol building and many other public buildings of this city.

The attack upon Baltimore began between two and three o'clock of the afternoon of September 13, 1814 and continued until about the same hours of the next morning when it suddenly ceased and Key knew the battle was over but he had little reason to believe the fate of Baltimore had been other than that of Washington a few weeks previous, which tragic event he had also witnessed.

Hoping against hope, for, as Byron wrote, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," he anxiously paced the deck of the small American sloop for three or four anxious hours—the longer to him because of his increasing anxiety—awaiting the approach of day by the early light of which he hoped to still see the Stars and Stripes waving triumphantly over the fortifications.

With the first streak of dawn he strained his weary eyes in the direction of the Fort to see, "If our flag was still there."

The first stanza of the anthem, as its words clearly indicate, was written before he saw the flag for it contains only a natural query, most up-permost in his mind and heart as it would have been in the minds and hearts of any of us were we similarly situated.

"Oh, say can you see by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?
Whose broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming;
And the rocket's red glare, bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there,
Oh say, does that Star Spangled Banner yet wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?"

The words of the second stanza also clearly show that they were begun as Key first dimly saw the flag and as he proceeded they caught the "Gleam of the morning's first beam" and then burst into full glory shining "in the stream of the dawn's early light."

They are:
"On the shore, dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, now conceals, now discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines in the stream;
'Tis the Star Spangled Banner; O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

So assured of the safety of his State and country through, "Victory and peace," he recalled the impressions which he had gained of the enemy during the eleven days he had spent within their lines.

As he afterwards wrote John Randolph, an intimate friend:
"With some exception they appeared to be illiberal, ignorant and vulgar and seemed filled with a spirit of malignity against everything American. To make my feelings still more acute, the Admiral had intimated his fears that the town must be burned and I was sure that if taken it would have been given up to plunder. I have reason to believe that such a promise was given to their soldiers. It was filled with women and children. I hope I shall never cease to feel the warmest gratitude when I think of this most merciful deliverance."

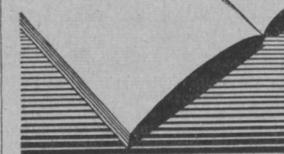

These impressions and the knowledge that a large number of the British soldiers in the attack were not British subjects but hired mercenaries were responsible for the sentiments of the third stanza of the anthem. A stanza which has in recent years been eliminated from school books and some official publications.

"And where is the foe who so vauntingly swore,
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion,
A home and a country should leave us no more;
Their blood was washed out their foul footsteps' pollution;
So refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave.
And the Star Spangled Banner in triumph doth wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

In the fourth and last stanza Key gives expression to that sturdy faith for which he was renowned amongst his friends. This stanza is, perhaps, one of the finest examples of religious fortitude and pure patriotism, extant in the annals of mankind.

"Oh! thus be it ever when freemen shall stand,
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation;
Blest with vict'ry and peace may the heaven rescued land,
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation!
Then conquer we must when our cause is just,
And this be our motto, "In God is our trust."
And the Star Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Insurance Companies Hit Hard by Claim Racket.

ST. LOUIS.—What price an arm? Or a leg? Or weeks of pain?

Postal inspectors who break up fake accident rings by bringing the operators to trial for using the mails to defraud insurance companies of hundreds of thousands of dollars annually say the deliberate sacrifice of a limb almost never pays the ring members more than $1,000.

According to William L. Noah, chief inspector in charge of the St. Louis office, by far the greater number of faked accidents results in small claims of a few hundred dollars being paid.

He recalled the notorious "serum case." In 1925, a widespread ring of fake accident victims was uncovered in northern Arkansas and southern Missouri. The ring leaders had discovered that heavy injections of turpentine with a hypodermic needle would result in swift and lasting breakdown of the surrounding tissues.

The resultant bluish on the flesh had all the appearance and characteristics of a deep-seated bruise. Infection and sloughing often followed. For years the ring succeeded in collecting small claim after claim.

Inspector A. F. Burt said that fake accident victims who are able successfully to simulate paralysis following supposed injuries were nonexistent. Reflex action and response to the stimuli of pin pricks or electrical shocks are impossible to fake, he pointed out.

However, Burt said, many persons have been able to collect liability or accident insurance claims by simulating injuries to the back and muscles.

Preceding the ceremony a fifteen minute organ recital was presented by Mrs. Martin Koons, cousin of the groom. The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was used as the processional and the recessional was Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Mrs. George Dodrer sang, "O Promise Me." The church was attractively decorated for the occasion with palms and cut flowers which included blue delphinium, blue and pink larkspur, white gladiolus, daisies and pink roses. The church was lighted with candles.

TANEYTOWN KIWANIS WEEKLY MEETING.

Interesting Account of Trip to Atlanta, Georgia

The Taneytown Kiwanis Club held its regular weekly meeting at Sauble's Inn on Wednesday evening, June 25, at 6 o'clock. Pres., Harry M. Mohney, presided; Raymond Wright had charge of the musical program, with Mrs. Wallace Yingling at the piano. Members present; twenty-three; also one visitor, Donald Sponseller of Westminster, and one guest, Rev. Arthur Garvin as the guest of Edgar H. Essig.

Rev. A. T. Sutcliffe was in charge of the program, which consisted of reports of the delegates from the local Club to the annual convention held at Atlanta, Ga. The delegation consisted of Rev. Miles S. Reifsnider, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar H. Essig, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Yingling and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wright.

Edgar Essig gave an account of the trip to and from Atlanta. The party left Taneytown on Friday, June 13, at 2 o'clock, going by way of Hagerstown, then by Route 11 through Winchester, Harrisonburg, Staunton, Bristol, Johnson City and Gainsville, into Atlanta. The party arrived at Atlanta on Sunday afternoon. The return trip was made by Augusta, thence by Route 1 to Washington, then through Frederick to Taneytown.

Mr. Essig mentioned many things of interest noted on the way. He described the country through which the party passed, calling attention especially to the fine farming land and the great variety of crops, in the ground and harvested. He saw so many road-side markets that he was inclined to come to the conclusion that most of the people gained their living by catering to the tourists passing through. As objects of interest he mentioned Madison College at Harrisonburg, Massachusetts Academy at Woodstock, the Staunton Military Academy, and the house in Stanton in which Woodrow Wilson was born. The party sent the first night away from home at Natural Bridge, Va., and enjoyed the wonderful sight of the bridge, one of the wonders of the world, the beauty of which at night is greatly enhanced by the peculiar lighting effects of the great natural wonder and accompanying music.

Mr. Essig called attention to the unique manner of marking streets which he noticed in Johnson City, Ga. Here the street names are marked on concrete posts, about three feet high, planted at the street intersections. He noticed that Johnson City, the soil is very red but fertile, as evidenced by the fine growing crops of cabbage, tobacco, and other seasonal vegetables and grains. He described the large NYA Training Camp at Ashville, N. C., and the Daniel Boone Boy Scout Reservation at Canton in the same state. At Sylvan, N. C., he noted that the tourists cabins are built in a peculiar manner, the front of the cabins being built in the form of a wigwag. He praised the cleanliness and conveniences of the tourist cabins which the party used during the journey. He spoke in terms of the highest praise of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park, which was described by tourists with whom Mr. Essig spoke as showing the finest scenery from the Pacific Coast to that point. In the Park he saw much evidence of wild life and was particularly impressed with the fact that the whole mountain country is covered with trees, ferns and flowers. The distance from one side of the park to the other is sixty miles and the highest elevation reached on the highway is 6600 feet. At the entrance to the Park is a Cherokee Indian Reservation, inhabited by a class of Indians who seemed very intelligent and spoke English fluently. At Gainsville, Ga., he noted the effects of the tornado which nearly entirely destroyed the city several years ago. At the edge of Atlanta he saw a large military training camp, not quite completed.

The party arrived in Atlanta on Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock and reported at Kiwanis headquarters at the Henry Grady Hotel, but on account of the great crowd had to seek accommodations at one of the homes of Kiwanians in Atlanta, many of whom threw open their homes for the entertainment of guests. The hospitality encountered by the party at Atlanta and on the way to and from the convention city was far beyond their expectations.

During their stay in Atlanta, the time was fully taken up by attendance of the sessions of the convention and at a number of social functions arranged for the thousands of guests. Among these Mr. Essig mentioned the Capital District Breakfast, and the banquet arranged for delegates from the district. The party attended a Kiwanis barbecue at Lakewood Park at which more than 4000 lbs of beef, pork and lamb was consumed, besides great quantities of Brunswick stew, rolls, pickles, and lemonade. The entertainment features were concluded with the "Dixie Cavalcade," a gigantic pageant, depicting the life of Georgia from 1499 to the present.

Raymond Wright described particularly the business sessions, some of the high lights of which were an address "This is My Land" by Prof. George McCarty; an address by W. G. O'Leary, Editor of the Ottawa (Canada) Journal; a discussion of Kiwanis motives, men, money and methods; and addresses by J. P. Gallager and Clyde Hoy, former Governor of the State of North Carolina.

Mrs. Yingling spoke of some of the features of entertainment provided for the visiting women to the convention.

The meeting next week will be in charge of the Committee on Public Affairs and will be held at Pipe Creek Park on Wednesday evening, July 2, at 6 o'clock. President Mohney announced that the members of the Club are invited to attend the inter-club meeting to be held at the Westminster Hotel on Tuesday evening, July 1. This meeting will be sponsored by the Westminster Club and U. S. Senator Millard Tydings will be the speaker. Also that the Taneytown Club is invited to meet with the Westminster Club at the Rod and Gun Camp near Detour the week following.

Hike Hazardous For a Boy Scout From Venezuela

Lad, Now in U. S., Relates Adventures in 3-Year Good Will Trek.

HOUSTON. —The saga of Boy Scout Julio Cesar Berrizbeitia may never be equaled.

The story of the 20-year-old Scout from Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, is one of adventure with savage Indians in Colombia, of killing thirst in a Peruvian desert and of stalking animals in Panama.

Berrizbeitia paused here on his 18,500-mile hike which began November 1, 1928, and will end when he places a wreath on George Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon.

The dusky, wiry youth is an Eagle Scout and has 13 merit badges. His present accomplishment in touring the Americas afoot as an "ambassador" of hemisphere goodwill rests lightly on his head.

Gesture of Friendship.

He explained that the hike is a gesture of friendship on the part of all South American Boy Scouts to their brother Scouts of North America.

Berrizbeitia began the long trek to Mount Vernon with five other Boy Scouts from Porto Cabello, first with a swing through South America.

"I am the only one left," he said simply. "We buried Jesus Antonio Garcia, 22, in Lima, after carrying his dead body about 200 miles through a Peruvian desert.

"That trek through the desert was one of our worst experiences. We ran out of water and went about a week without taking any fluid. The sand clogged our throats and our bodies were almost entirely dehydrated.

"Garcia died of thirst. We others staggered for days and were saved when we found a prospector's hut at the edge of the desert. After two days, he took us into Lima."

Undeterred, the five boys continued their hike, which took them ultimately through the Guianas, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, and Panama.

"We were attacked by the Indians on the Colombia border," Berrizbeitia said. "Without warning, they shot at us with arrows. I was struck in the neck and left leg, but we managed to escape in the jungle."

Sets Out Alone.

Soon afterward, one of the Scouts contracted pneumonia and three remained with him, deciding to return home, but Berrizbeitia set out alone. Friendly Panamanian Indians fed him snake meat.

"They cut the snake's head and tail off and ate the middle," the Scout said. "It tasted like pork."

He hiked through Costa Rica, Nicaragua, San Salvador, Honduras and to Mexico City, where he dined with Lazaro Cardenas, then president of Mexico.

Berrizbeitia entered the United States at Laredo, Texas. He said that he had declined "lifts" by motorists although many were offered. So far, he has worn out 50 pairs of boots. He travels with a 100-pound pack strapped to his shoulders. He wears a regulation Scout uniform and carries a dust-stained and faded Venezuelan banner.

Berrizbeitia's trip is financed by Venezuelan Boy Scouts and those of cities through which he passes.

Problem Solved
By MEREDITH SCHOLL
(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

BEGINNING with the day that Donald Winslow had blackened the eye of the town bully for trying to kiss Sylvia Quentin, Donald had been Sylvia's hero. At that time the pair had been aged 12 and 8 respectively. Now they were 26 and 22, and the situation hadn't changed a great deal. Sylvia still looked upon Donald as a protector and an adviser. A role which Donald filled willingly and capably.

Today as Sylvia looked out across the lawn of her father's estate, across the highway and along the drive that led to the home of Donald's father and the abiding place of Donald himself, her expression was one of forlorn distress. At the moment she needed Donald's help and counsel more than ever. Yet she was reluctant to seek him out.

It was possible, she thought, that Donald might not take too kindly to this most important of all requests. That would hurt. And to be hurt right now, especially by Donald, would be torture.

Sylvia took the time to reflect back to the day when Donald had blackened the eye of the town bully in her defense. From this point forward her thoughts followed her own and Donald's career to the conclusion of grammar school, through high school, through college, and the years that followed after graduation. And not once could she remember a time when Donald had failed to come to her aid. He had been noble, kind, thoughtful, always considerate and concerned with her problems as much as though they had been his own.

No, she decided, he would not fail her now. No matter what the nature of her troubles might be.

And so Sylvia arranged her hair, powdered her nose, caught up a wrap and went out. She found Donald down on the shore of the lake that bordered on the Winslow place. He was tinkering with the motor of an old power boat. His hands were greasy and his face was streaked. He seemed on the point of exasperation, yet at Sylvia's step he looked up, and at sight of her the exasperated look departed and was replaced by a cheerful and welcoming grin.

"Hello," he said, sitting down on the gunwale. "Glad you dropped over. Soon's I get this old tub fixed I'll give you a ride."

Sylvia did not return the grin. She sat down on the wharf's edge and stared soberly out over the shimmering blue of the lake.

Donald puckered his brow into a frown, ceased idly drumming with a hammer handle on the gunwale, and waited. He knew the signs.

Presently Sylvia said, without looking up, "Donald, ever since we've been kids I've come to you with my problems, heaped my burdens on your shoulders. And you've always been kind and helpful. Always sort of—looked after me."

Donald scratched his chin with a grimy forefinger. "Sure, Sylvia, why not? You've always been like a sister to me. Why shouldn't I look after you?"

Sylvia gnawed at her lip and hesitated. Then, "Donald, I'm in trouble now, and you've got to help me."

Donald slid down on the wharf close beside her. "Of course, Sylvia."

Sylvia turned and looked at him squarely. "Donald, I'm in love!"

Donald's jaw sagged open. Surprise, pain, incredulity came into his eyes and were replaced by blank astonishment.

"In love, Sylvia! You! In love! Sylvia, for heaven's sake!"

Sylvia suddenly looked away. "I knew you wouldn't take me seriously, knew you wouldn't understand."

Donald gulped and laid a grimy paw on her white frock. "But, Sylvia, I do understand. Of course. You took me by surprise. I—well, it always seemed—that is—who is he, Sylvia! Why don't you marry him?"

Sylvia buried her face in her hands. "That's just it. That's why I came to you. He won't ask me!"

"Won't ask you! You mean he doesn't love you! Why, the skunk, I'll—just tell me his name! He can't get away with a thing like that!"

"Don't be absurd, Donald. You can't use violence in a case such as this. You can't force a man to love a girl! We—must think of some other way."

Donald nodded, as if the logic of her words had suddenly occurred to him also. He drew away his hand and stared moodily out over the lake.

"Donald, can't you think of some way?"

"Donald didn't return her look. 'Sylvia, I don't want you to get married!'"

"Don't want me to! Donald, what ever are you saying? Why don't you want me to?"

He didn't reply at once, and Sylvia went on, "I know what you're thinking. You're thinking he's a cad for making me miserable. But he isn't, Donald. He's wonderful and grand and handsome. And, oh, he could make me so happy. I've waited and waited for him to propose. And—and now, Donald, I've come to you for help. You simply must think of something!"

Donald turned at last and met her gaze squarely. "It isn't that that I was thinking, Sylvia. I wasn't thinking about him, or how miserable he's made you, or how to solve your problem."

Sylvia looked at him aghast. "You weren't! Then you won't help me; don't want to help me?"

"I was thinking," Donald went on, "that it isn't fair. It isn't fair at all—to have you want to marry."

"Fair? I don't believe I understand, Donald. What isn't fair?"

"It isn't fair," said Donald, drawing close to her, "it isn't fair to have you love someone else when— He suddenly reached out, and his arms encircled her in a fierce grip. His lips crushed against hers. She yielded. He held her thus for it seemed, an eternity. He kissed her again and again.

At last he released her, looking fiercely into her eyes. "It isn't fair he continued huskily, "for you want to marry someone else when I love you madly, when I've always loved you, when I've dreamed endlessly of the day when I can claim you all for my own. That's what isn't fair!"

Breathless, flushed, her eyes shining with a strange, unaccountable light, Sylvia clung to him tenderly.

"Donald, Donald! Dear, darling Donald! It is fair! It is! Don't you see? Can't you understand what I was trying to say? Trying to make you do?"

And when he stared at her in speechless incredulity, she went on happily. "Donald, darling, precious, you're the man! You are the man I'm in love with, who won't ask me to marry him, who is making me miserable!"

And then the white frock became more grease besmeared than ever.

Africans Use Tom Toms For Music, Messages

In the wilds of Africa, the swaying trees, moaning winds and rumbling thunder give sounds to which the natives listen. Song birds sing or twitter, and wild beasts screech, howl or roar. The more-or-less savage people of African jungles add to the sounds. They make music which has rhythm even when it does not sound very pleasant to the ears of a white traveler. The tom-toms of Africa are famed for their savage beat. A tom-tom is a drum, and was so named in imitation of the sound it gives forth.

Some African drums are made entirely of hollowed wood, and their boom may be heard for great distances.

African natives often use a signal system based on the beating of drums. Messages are sent far and wide in this way. Word of the coming of soldiers is obtained in one camp and then sent to another with the help of beating drums.

Certain tribes have learned to make drums by stretching skins over wooden boxes, or over metal pots. There are "drum orchestras" with big and little drums; when one of these gets into operation, the natives have a wild time, dancing to the beat and singing as well.

One strange musical instrument of Africa is a kind of xylophone. It is composed of hollow tubes in a row. The tubes differ in length, and for that reason make different notes when they are struck. This instrument has been nicknamed "the African piano."

Robert Burns

Scotchmen in all parts of the world assemble on January 25 to observe the anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, when they celebrate the glories of their country as well as the fame of its greatest poet. Burns was born near Ayr in 1759. He worked as a plowboy on his father's farm and read the Spectator and Pope's translation of the Iliad and learned a little French and Latin. When his father died he and his brother took a farm, where he wrote poetry and failed to earn a living. He planned to go to Jamaica, but the publication of his first volume of verse in 1786 won so much praise that he decided to remain in Scotland. The second edition of the book netted him about $2,000. In 1789 he accepted appointment as an excise officer. He died in 1796, worn out with excessive drinking. His fame has grown with the years and he is regarded as one of the greatest lyric poets of his race.

Aged Trio Spurns Relief And Dies of Starvation

LINDSAY, ONT.—Choosing death in preference to charity, a 75-year-old woman and her two brothers died of starvation here.

Charlotte Shouclike and her brothers, Isaac, 70, and Thomas, 68, lived a secluded life on their 50-acre farm in Mariposa township. The farm, ordinarily, provided for their needs, but last year, failing health prevented them from working it.

Recently a neighbor, visiting the lonely farmhouse, found all three occupants in a state of exhaustion from hunger. He notified the township relief officer, who walked more than a mile through deep snowdrifts, to bring the trio an offer of food. They rejected it, insisting "We don't want charity."

The relief officer called health authorities, who ordered all three removed to a hospital here. The sister and her younger brother died within an hour of each other and were given a double funeral. Five hours after their burial the other brother had joined them in death.

Famous Yosemite Pine Thrives Without Soil

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, CALIF.—Occasioned by the questions of tourists, a study of a lone pine tree that grows out of a solid rock surface high above the Yosemite valley has been made by the National Park Service.

Naturalists said the tree, which is 80 feet tall, grows out of a fissure in the granite face known as El Capitan. Its food is manufactured in its leaves from water and carbon dioxide, and such minerals as it requires may be obtained from the rock. Its supply of moisture apparently is gained from winter rain and snow.

Thus it thrives without soil.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Lesson for June 29

LESSONS FROM THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—I Corinthians 3:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ—I Corinthians 3:11.

Corinth in the time of Paul was a great city, as renowned for its commerce and culture as it was notorious for its vice and licentiousness. Here on his second missionary journey, Paul, with Silas and Timothy, spent 18 months winning many to Christ, in spite of the hostility of the Jews and the opposition of wicked men.

The church established in Corinth became the victim of a factional spirit which divided the loyalty of the people, hindering spiritual growth, destroying discipline, and resulting in low standards of life.

Paul found it necessary to write to the church regarding its difficulties, and we may well learn salutary lessons from his epistle.

I. A Lesson in Spirituality (vv. 1-4).

The further a man drifts from his place of spiritual power and usefulness, the more apt he is to try to keep up a "front" to take up any possible means of justification. The Corinthian church was divided into four groups, each one priding itself on being right. There was "a Pauline party, overzealous for the founder of the church; an Apollonian party, bewitched by the oratory of Apollon; a Petrine party, which, claiming Peter as authority, was bent on mixing Jewish ideas with Christianity; and a Christ party, which, in antagonizing other elements, became itself a faction" (Moore). (See I Cor. 1:11-13.) All this activity was covering up the fact that they were having.

1. Milk Instead of Meat (vv. 1, 2). In other words they were spiritual babes when they should have been grown-ups. Milk is a marvelous food, but there is need of stronger food for virile men and women.

How true it is that many ministers must spoon-feed or bottle-feed a lot of spiritual babes who should long since have grown up to the place where they can feed themselves and help others.

2. Strife Instead of Stability (vv. 3, 4). God does not want Christians to be like other men. When will we learn that lesson? One of the sure ways to stifle spiritual growth in a church or in an individual life is to engage in strife. Let us heed Paul's admonition and put away our bickerings, that we may become strong in the Lord.

II. A Lesson on Service (vv. 5-15).

Here is helpful instruction to the minister regarding his calling. Brethren, let us judge ourselves in the light of it lest we hinder God's work by having the wrong attitude or encourage our people to think carelessly on this important subject.

1. The Minister (vv. 5-9). There is no higher or holier calling than that to the ministry. We should not forget that, and will not, but will rather glorify the calling, when we realize that "minister" (v. 5) means "servant," "attendant," or "waiter." So Paul and Apollon, men of highest office and highest gifts, were God's waiters, to bring forth the bread of life; His servants, to plant and cultivate His field; and His builders, laboring on His building. Ministers are only instruments in God's hands, but they should be clean, well-prepared, and submissive instruments in His hands.

2. The Manner (v. 10). The servant of God must take heed how he builds. If, like Paul, he has the privilege of laying the foundation, he must be careful that it is the true foundation and is properly laid. He who builds must also be careful that every stone he lays is fitly placed and well-chosen.

3. The Materials (vv. 11, 12). How important it is that the materials of a building be right. If that be true of a physical building, it is a thousand times more important in God's building.

First of all there is only one foundation which the true minister can lay—Jesus Christ. It is the only foundation upon which anyone can build a lasting life structure for time and for eternity.

But there are other materials in the building which need to be chosen with care. It will not do for the minister to substitute the wood, hay, and stubble of his wisdom or the philosophy of men for the gold, silver, and precious stones of God's Word. Terrifying shame and loss is all that can result from such folly, for remember there is a day of judgment coming.

4. The Manifestation (vv. 13-15). Flaming fire will one day reveal how we have built. The "wood-hay-and-stubble" preacher or teacher of God's Word may himself be saved, but, oh, the tragedy of coming into God's presence after years of service like a man who has escaped from a burning building empty-handed; saved from the fire himself, but ashamed that he has so built as to suffer loss.

What Goes Into Sandwich Makes It Taste Better

What goes into the sandwich in your picnic basket is important, but not nearly as much so as the daily sandwich for the lunch box of the school child, or the office or factory worker.

But where there is ingenuity there can also be variety aplenty and actual food satisfaction.

Here are suggestions for tasty sandwich fillings that have the additional virtues of being appetizing, hearty and nutritive.

Chopped or sliced olives with sea-food, boiled egg, cheese or baked beans . . . ground liver and bacon with minced celery and onion . . . chopped lamb and mint leaves . . . simmered frankfurts ground with mustard pickles . . . devilled ham creamed with cheese . . . crisp diced bacon with peanut butter . . . chopped ham with currant jelly . . . beef and pork ground with sweet pickles and pimiento . . . tongue with Swiss cheese . . . baked beans and bacon on Boston brown bread . . . ground corned beef seasoned with chopped sweet pickle and mustard . . . sliced roast beef with horseradish sauce . . . liverwurst and pepper relish on rye bread . . . dried beef with creamed roquefort cheese . . . bacon, cheese and pickle with mayonnaise . . . chopped ham, hardcooked eggs, mayonnaise and cucumber slices . . . meat loaf sliced thin and butter creamed with prepared mustard and horseradish . . . chopped veal seasoned with salt, lemon juice and a little pepper and mustard . . . bacon, hardcooked eggs and chopped, stuffed olives . . . ground roast pork seasoned with tomato ketchup and a dash of Worcestershire.

Strict Feeding Schedule May Build Resentment

The mother who puts her young baby on a strict feeding schedule may be building up a personality that will resent co-operation in later life.

This seems to be the implication of a report by Dr. J. V. Hunt of Brown University to the American Psychological association.

In a laboratory experiment with rats, Dr. Hunt found scientific confirmation for the Freudian doctrine that experiences in very early infancy have a profound effect on the character of adult men and women.

Dr. Hunt put baby rats on a "schedule." For two weeks he gave them only a limited amount of food instead of feeding them all they wanted. When they were grown, the rats turned into misers, hoarding great quantities of food if they felt even slight pangs of hunger. Rats who were "put on a schedule" early in infancy were affected more in later life than those whose dieting was begun later.

In human terms, this might mean that babies brought up strictly on schedule, regardless of how hungry they may sometimes be, are likely to be peculiarly sensitive to any deprivation or neglect in later life.

First Balloon Ascension

The first successful balloon ascension in this country was made by Francois Blanchard, a Frenchman, at Philadelphia on January 9, 1783. Blanchard had tried in 1784 to make a balloon with sails and a rudder, and in 1785 he crossed the English channel in a balloon and in the same year used a parachute. He came to America in 1792 and arranged to make an ascent from the yard of the old Walnut street prison in Philadelphia. President Washington was among the spectators on the date fixed. When the balloon rose into the air a salute was fired and a band played a lively tune. Blanchard landed at Coopers Ferry, in New Jersey, 45 minutes later and returned to Philadelphia, where he paid his respects to the President at his house.

Electric Muff for Hands

Probably the most famous hands for any active composer are those of Sergei Rachmaninoff, the Russian pianist-composer. There is not a country in the world where Rachmaninoff has not played during his long and varied career. During his current transcontinental tour, when appearing in cities where the temperature is extremely cold, he keeps his hands and his fingers supple by the use of an electric muff. This muff is an indispensable part of his traveling equipment. Made of wool, the muff has inner wiring that produces quick heat when the current is turned on. Thus his long, slender fingers are kept flexible no matter what the temperature.

Plane Drops Live Fish

Game fish dropped from a plane is the newest method employed to stock fish ponds in the wild areas of northern Maine. Hauling 6,000 baby fish on each trip, Pilot William Turgeon of Lewiston distributes trout and other game fish from the Birch river rearing pools at Winterville to the lakes in this area of the state. The tiny trout, togue and salmon are placed in 10-gallon cans aboard the plane. Air is conveyed to these containers by an air intake which is located in the wings of the plane. The air filters in the cabin and passes through a distributor to each can. The plane is also used to plant wild rice, and to fly over beaver dams and colonies to ascertain if they are numerous enough to trap.

In Place of Beer

Every family has its choice to make: on the one hand there's the ultimate unhappiness which flows out of beer stein, wine glass, or whisky bottle; on the other hand, the W.C.T.U. points out, there's a chance for a lot of personal and family happiness.

The nation spends $3,350,000,000 each year for beer, wine, and other liquors. Translating this sum into necessities and recreation, temperance workers show what Mr. Average Citizen could buy if he stayed out of taverns or liquor stores.

The total money "now wasted on alcohol" would buy all of the following items for three million American families:

Pay $30 a month house rent for a year; buy 2 loaves of bread daily for a year; buy 2 quarts of milk daily for a year; buy 15 pounds of meat weekly for a year; buy $4 worth of fruit a month for a year; pay for 4 movie tickets a week for a year; buy a daily paper or 4 weekly paper subscriptions for a year; buy 2 magazines for a year; pay the doctor $50; give $32 to support the church; buy another suit for father and pay $80 for more clothes for mother and children; buy 3 pairs of $5 shoes; pay $50 for extra household supplies. And, all of this would still leave 14 million dollars for miscellaneous items.

This is why the social workers declare that family budgets stand the economic loss in connection with liquor and that the man who actually pays the liquor bill is the grocer, the tailor, the butcher, the baker, the doctor, the landlord, the printer, or the shoemaker.

A Judge's Opinion
A Des Moines, Iowa, judge studied evidence presented to a grand jury and declared that the amount of alcohol it takes to put a man "under the influence of liquor" is 1 cocktail, or 1 highball, or 2 bottles of beer.

Restoring Cut Flowers
Cut flowers, slightly withered, can be restored by pouring a weak solution of camphor into the water in which the flowers stand.

Adding Fruit Colorings
In adding fruit colorings to foods be sure to mix it in thoroughly to prevent streaks. Add only a small amount at a time.

Good Sheeting
High thread count in sheets is one indication of good construction, fineness and beauty in sheeting.

Importing Grapefruit
Mediterranean countries shipped 75,000,000 pounds of grapefruit to the United Kingdom last year.

Plants Digest Insects
Like Venus' flytrap, more than 400 different species of plants capture and digest insects.

Prisoner Feigns Deafness
But Hears the Good Word
NEWTON, MASS.—When Judge James A. Delay recalled that the district court's most persistent visitor was making his 100th appearance on drunkenness charges, the prisoner cupped a hand to one ear and said:
"I can't hear you, judge."
The remark was repeated twice with the same result. A weary court clerk turned to the judge and murmured:
"I suggest the case be filed."
"Thank you," said the smiling prisoner.

Vaccines Being Tested To Prevent Influenza

"We are testing vaccines which probably will be successful in preventing a repetition of the World War influenza epidemic."

This and other information regarding the progress of medicine as a constructive force for combating the evils which accompany war was revealed recently by Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, medical savant, of California.

The former faculty member of the University of California, who now is consultant and research scientist of the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., spoke at the dedication of the new $500,000 wing of the Collis P. Huntington Memorial hospital, Pasadena.

Dr. Alvarez drew back the veil from "New Things That Hospitals and Physicians Are Doing for Mankind." He revealed recently discovered drugs, new methods of anesthesia and advances in plastic surgery which effectively offset the usual hazards of warfare.

"In addition to combating influenza," announced Dr. Alvarez, "we have a vaccine to prevent a plague of measles . . . the deadliness of pneumonia has been overcome and new drugs have lessened the dangers from blood infections."

He pointed out that anesthesia is now far superior to past forms, largely eliminating pain, and that deformities are being overcome by the miracles of plastic surgery.

New Mystery Force May Give Light Without Wire

More than 100 scientists and educators watched a demonstration recently of "klystron," a new type of generator which the inventors said sends out beams of power, without the use of wires, over great distances.

The scientists and educators met in Bloomfield, N. J., at the laboratories of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

I. E. Mouroumteff, research scientist engaged by Westinghouse, said the new type of generator might be employed eventually to turn on lights at great distances over the air.

Homes could be illuminated by power coming over the air just as radio programs are now received.

He foresaw the time when the generator might be used to increase the number of television transmission channels and to increase the number of messages transmitted simultaneously over telephone wires.

He said the new generator had potential value for producing heat for medical purposes and for improving the means of aircraft navigation.

"The possible uses of the apparatus are limited only by the imagination," he declared.

Klystron was originated about two years ago by scientists at Leland Stanford university.

Substituting Cooking Fats

Can fats be substituted for one another measure for measure? Not usually. The amount of actual fat in a cupful is not the same for all fats. Follow these handy rules in making substitutions.

If the recipe calls for lard and you want to use butter or oleomargarine instead, add an extra 2 table-spoons of butter or oleomargarine for each cup of fat called for in the recipe.

Substituting the other way round—use seven-eighths of a cup of lard (1 cup less two tablespoons) of lard for every cupful of butter or oleomargarine called for in the recipe.

If the recipe calls for lard, and you are substituting a hydrogenated fat for it, add an extra 1½ table-spoons for every cup of lard called for in the recipe.

Glow Worm Stars

Possible explanation came recently of the strange variations in hues of those red stars known as "glow worms." They increase and decrease in brightness 100 to 1,000 times in every 300 days, and in no other stars are found such irregularity of intensity in hydrogen, iron and silicon bands. At Mount Wilson observatory, California, Dr. Paul W. Merrill, astronomer, said the explanation seems to be the fact that excitation of atoms of hydrogen comes deeper within the glow worm stars. "Where part of the bands in the spectrum are almost blotted out, it is due to absorption of light by material higher in such a star's atmosphere," he went on. "The variable stars are low in temperature and in density. Because they are so cool, it is still a puzzle how they can make their hydrogen, iron and silicon lines shine so brightly. Where such lines are not partly blotted out, they are very bright."

THE FARM CHEMURGIC MOVEMENT

For many years the American farmer has paid for the experiments and developments of industry. In the price of every product bought by the American farmer there is a portion which goes to pay for the many pioneering expenses necessary to the birth of a new industry. It is about time for industry to return these expenditures. The farm market has been exploited by industry; now it must be rebuilt by industry.

The farmer needs a new source of income. Unless this new source of income is established, our whole American economy is in grave danger. Wages of labor and profits of industry may rise temporarily but, in the final analysis, the only solution for the problem of a permanent, healthy national economy lies in a completely revitalized American agriculture.

The establishment of new sources of farm income is not an impossibility. The great hope lies in research. The manufacturing industry, as a whole, spends about one-half of one percent of the value of goods it sells on research. Agriculture, however, only expends about one-seventh of one percent of the value of its products on research. Practically all the money spent on research by agriculture is provided by government—state and federal.

In 1939 industry spent more than $250,000,000 to develop new products, improve old ones, or to reduce costs.

The Farm Chemurgic movement has dedicated itself to research for the development of new industrial uses for farm products. The word "chemurgic" seems complicated but, taken literally, means "putting chemistry to work." Chemistry at work in industry can transform farm products into usable industrial materials. Much has already been accomplished in this direction. Millions have already been invested in new industries, which will use crops raised on American farms for raw materials.

Chemurgic products fall into six general classes, namely—rayon, casein and soybean protein, plastics, motor fuels, starches and vegetable oils.

Four great laboratories, dedicated to the work of finding new uses for farm products, have been established by the Federal government. Though much of their work is just beginning, they promise to do much for the farmer.

One of the fields open to agriculture is that of motor fuel. We use only petroleum for automobile fuel but our resources of this are being used to the point that costs are rising. The American Petroleum Institute estimates that our petroleum reserves will reach exhaustion in possibly fifteen years.

Many foreign governments have enforced legislation requiring that alcohol from agricultural resources be blended with gasoline for the purpose of motor fuels. In several countries 25% alcohol is not uncommon in motor fuel blends, and is used with great efficiency.

The present corn crop in the United States is about 2,500,000,000 bushels. Should motor fuel be required by law to contain 25% corn alcohol, it would require about half our annual corn crop to supply it. The cost to the consumer would be very little more and, as a matter of fact, some authorities state that on the basis of equal motor performance, the blended fuel would be cheaper.

Regardless of a slight cost differential either way, the prospect of using up half of our annual corn crop through a near outlet is worth serious consideration. Here is a concrete way for city folks to return to the farmer some of the billions the farmer has contributed to their enjoyment at a loss to himself and his family. It is industry's turn to help agriculture.

Woman to Woman By Marion Conger

HATS are doing a right-about-face this summer. They've become headlines instead of sidelines. They're big and wide and alluring, framing the face and acting as the focal point of the whole costume. The new styles do, in fact, just what a frame does for a picture, giving a woman that necessary finished look.

One of the grandest things about the season's millinery treasures is that they are so varied every one can find her own type among them. Brims are big, but versatile, and a selection of becoming hats can make one good linen suit or silk shirtmaker dress seem like a whole new costume with every change of bonnet.

Another welcome bit of fashion news is that these hats are soft, feminine and really kind to women. They make plain women pretty and pretty women completely irresistible. The brims are even so skillfully manipulated that they can perform small facial miracles, making short necks seem longer, long noses seem shorter and in general playing up lovely contours.

The trend toward the molding of brims to flatter individual faces will carry right into the fall, and the smart woman will shop around and ascertain her particular style right now. And once having found the hat that does the most for her, she will do well to stick to it selecting it in different colors and textures to add variety to her wardrobe.

Norman Edwards, who made his fame in London when he started designing dresses for the Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Windsor, then Wallis Simpson, has another piece of advice to offer about the selection of a hat.

"Always stand up when buying a hat," says Mr. Edwards, "and look at yourself in a long mirror. A hat can not only add charm to your face but do wonders for your figure. It is an integral part of your costume, and only by seeing it as such at the time of purchase can you get the very one you need."

Mr. Edwards goes on to say that a woman is not completely dressed unless she is wearing a hat. He feels that American women have now emerged from the informal stage in their dressing and are entering a period of real elegance, which calls for the wearing of hats at all times in public places.

These Women Drivers

The husband in the case has the sympathy of the Milwaukee State Motor Vehicle bureau, which received this letter: "Enclosed find check for $14.50 for 1941 registration. Is it possible to get a low number, inasmuch as I'm short on memory (according to my husband) and I can never remember where I park." The sender forgot to: Sign her name, enclose the check or forward the license renewal stub.

Farmers' Cash Income

The farmers' cash income for 1939 will total approximately $7,900,000,000, the bureau of agriculture economics estimates. This compares with $8,020,000,000 in 1938 and $8,988,000,000 in 1937, when farm income was the highest in 10 years. The low point was in 1932 when cash income from farm marketing amounted to only $4,606,000,000.

Didn't Bother the Bank

The bank called Mr. Elkstein to tell him that he had overdrawn his account by $200. "What was my account at this time last year?" Elkstein inquired. "You had a balance of $2,000," the bank clerk replied. "Well," replied Elkstein triumphantly, "did I ring you up?"

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEET

The Taneytown Chamber of Commerce met in regular session Monday night. In the absence of the president Merwyn C. Fuss, vice-president David Smith presided.

The feature of the meeting was the address by Mr. Asa Watkins of the Mt. Airy Chamber of Commerce. His message was very helpful and much appreciated by the members in attendance.

The minutes of the May meeting were read by the Secretary B. J. Arnold and approved by the body.

The Treasurer Charles R. Arnold reported a balance on hand.

The members considered plans for the Bay trip and meal and referred the matter to the committee, David Smith, chairman, William Hopkins and Delmar Riffle. The Secretary was directed to send out cards to the members to ascertain how many would make the trip. The date for the July meeting was advanced one week to July 21—this will permit final arrangements for the trip down the bay on July 23rd.

The matter of dedication of the Taneytown Air Port was given consideration and the chamber authorized the President M. C. Fuss to appoint a committee to arrange the program. The Chamber decided to purchase some directional signs leading to the air port. A matter concerning the Boy Scouts was taken up but action was deferred until the next meeting.

County Commissioner, Norman R. Hess made a report on the county road situation and asked for the opinion of the members as to whether they felt it better for the state to operate them as they have been or for the county to take them over.

Refreshments were served after the business session.

The final returns on Father's Day sentiment doubtless will be heard when the bills come in on July 1.

HOW BORROWERS LOSE MONEY ON "Cut Rate" LOANS

Some other lending agency may advertise loans at lower than bank rates. But when the cost of "inspection fees" and other required extras are figured in, the rate may no longer look so low.

Your banker is a man of your own community who is interested in your welfare. He is able to give prompt service without red tape and the use of many valuable and convenient banking facilities. His interest rates, too, are reasonable.

The more closely you figure out all these benefits in advance, the more likely you are to come to your bank for a loan.
