1942 ONION SETS

Temporary sixty day ceilings have been placed on the 1942 crop of onion sets by OPA, at the highest levels at which sales were made by growers or merchandisers during the five days between February 10 and 14, 1943. Both commercial growers and "victory gardeners" will benefit by the regulation. The new ceilings reflect an average price to the grower of about $5 a bushel and are more than double the price paid during the 1937-1941 seasons.

INCOME TAX WARNING

M. H. Magruder, Collector of Internal Revenue, reported Tuesday that the number of income tax returns filed by individuals is below the number which could reasonably be expected at this time. He again pointed out that an income tax return must be filed by every single person whose gross income from all sources was $500 or more for 1942, and that an income tax return must be filed by every married person living with husband or wife if their combined gross income was $1,200 or more for the

The Collector said that possibly the delay in filing returns may be attributed in part to an erronmous impression that legislative proposals before the Congress, commonly known as

HELPING THE FISHERMEN

The Game and Inland Fish Commission of Maryland, realizing the difficulties attached to your sport of fishing this year because of the restriction on pleasure driving, has decided to place trout in a number of streams that are not considered as Class A trout streams.

The new streams selected have all been considered because of the accessibility to either car or bus lines. These streams will be stocked periodically throughout the open trout season. This policy will continue for the duration of the war. No trout will be stocked under 8 in. A large percentage of the trout stocked will be

GENERAL ASSEMBLY IS PRAISED BY GOVERNOR

I wish to thank the Record Co. for WORK NOW Done Indicates Session Will Be "Outstanding"

Reviewing the accomplishments of the Maryland General Assembly during the first 45 days of the session, Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor on Monday declared the results already shown for the first half indicate that the session will be "outstanding in the session will be "outstanding in the annals of the State."

"With the current session just completing the first half of its allotted 90 days," the Governor declared in a prepared statement; "it is extremely gratifying to note that a review of ts activities to date indicates most creditable work on the part of the legislators. In keeping with the needs of these critical times, the members have addressed themselves to their duties in a business-like and efficient manner so that the results already achieved give clear promise that this 1943 session will be out-standing in the annals of the State, and will be productive of lasting good to our people.

"Particularly significant is the record of 92 measures passed by both Houses, of which 31 have already received Executive approval and have become law. Fifty-one other bills have passed both Houses and are now being studied by Attorney General Walsh before my signature is affixed. "In addition, 139 bills have passed the Branch in which they were introduced and 71 more have been reported out of committees and are ready for final action in the Senate or House of Delegates. To date 654 Bills have been introduced."

The Governor's statement commented favorably on the study of the Budget, and the Legislative Council. He said, "The members of the Legislature are to be congratulated sincerely upon their accomplishments to date. They well merit the thanks of date. They well merit the thanks of the people and I am sure will continue to deserve this approbation."

The first episode of Washington's life gives you a picture of him in his earlier days, surveying, at the young age of sixteen, the estate of Sir William Fairfax. George Null portrayed the part of Washington in this scene and throughout the entire program. Accompanying surveyors are Maurice Feeser and Eugene Clutz.

The second episode reveals George Washington as the gallant military leader who assembled his own army of one thousand men. Later he proved his courage and military tactics during the bitter winter of 1777, at Forge. #### COMIC STRIPS

It is but little short of being one of the wonders of the age, how the strip comics continue to occupy valuable space in many of our daily, and some weekly, newspapers. We do not know why this horrible in art should be so long lived, but it must be that there is a reader attitude for it, maybe among children. Certainly, intelligent grown-ups can hardly make up the patronage that, in our judgment, is mainly beneficial to the artists (?) engaged in suuplying the extravaganzas, and to the paper and ink makers.

A "little nonsense now and then" is relished, but many of these comics are far from nonsense, and deal entirely in distorted images of human beings, and the most irrational of acts scenes, unfit for children or anybody to get healthy pleasure

If used as circulation builders, the executives of newspapers no doubt think they are justified: but we think it would be a good plan to take a poll of public sentiment on the matter.

LET CONGRESS LEAD

There is such a multiplicity of propositions with regard to the post-war world, involving new and momentous obligations for America, that we face the danger of confusion and disaster when the fighting is over. In fact there is danger that when the order goes out "cease firing," a real battle of another kind will begin.

Some of these proposals have merand without common sense. On the other hand, just as at the close of the first World War President Wilson was too liberal for the reactionaries, so now multitudes of leaders are so wedded to the destructive forces of fear, hate and revenge that they will ferryboat commuters between New not be ready from that side to listen | York and Staten Island these last few to common sense.

WAKE UP.

Both among our own leaders and among our enemies, men seem to be waking up to the fact that we never do our best work while blindfolded. That it is possible to carry the "military secret" idea to extremes is beyond question.

In contrast with former practices Secretary Stimson promptly told us of temporary setbacks in Tunisia. This did not tell the Nazi authorities anything they did not know, but it did help to stir up the patriotism and to increase the confidence of Ameri-

At the same time Goebbels, who lately has been more in evidence than Hitler, deemed it wise to tell the German people "the unvarnished truth" with regard to the eastern front. If this policy had been followed earlier it might have saved the Germans thousands of lives and uncounted millions in money, and it might have helped the arch murderers when facing the day of reckoning.

We have not been inclined to criticize our military leaders, but we have never believed that half the censorship has been wise or necessary. We can not always be winning, but let us have the truth, so that in victory we may cheer the heroes, and in it in them but many more are wild times of reverses we may be stirred to greater endeavor. TYDINGS ON FARM SITUATION

Senator Tydings devoted his broadcast over WBAL last Sunday, at 1:30 P. M., to the situation of the farmer and farm worker. We quote a part of the address:

"In order to provide sufficient food for the nation's wartime requirements Secretary Wickard, the Food Administrator, has asked the farmers to produce in 1943 30% more food than they produced in 1942. It is a stuundertaking. Already millions of farm workers have left for the higher wages of the industrial Other farm workers have been drafted for the armed services. There is a great shortage of farm labor throughout the Nation.

It is abundantly plain that if the quantity of food desired is to be forthcoming, it is going to require much favorable weather, a lot of good luck, and many very long hours each day of very hard work on the nation's

For many, many years the farmers, farm workers and the farming problem has had little consideration in the economic program of our country. Chickens are now coming home to Let me illustrate. What do you think is the average monthly wage paid to farm workers in the United States? Make a guess. I am confident your guess is very much higher than the actual monthly wage which the farm worker receives. Well here are the real figures received last Friday from Mr. Roger Hale of the Agricultural Statistical Section of e Department of Agriculture.

In 1939, the average farm wage for the whole country was $35.82 a month. In 1940 the average farm monthly wage was $36.68. In 1941 the average monthly wage for farm labor was $43.64 a month. For last year, that is, 1942,the average month-farm wage was $56.07. In the midst of the highest industrial wages this country has ever seen farm workers were receiving $56.07 a month for producing all of the food, all of the clothing, and most of the shelter for all the other people of

Let me state it more bluntly—the farm workers of America, those who are employed without board and most of them are so employed, are now making on an average less than $2 a day. With that income they must feed, clothe and shelter themselves and their families.

Now, in many places, huge industrial plants are built in or near the farming territory. In these plants the workers are employed for eight hours a day. They have the highest wages ever paid in history. They have time and a half for over time on Saturday. and until recently had double time for Sunday. The work week is limited to 48 hours. Industrial ment insurance as well as pay when they reach mature age

The farmers and the farm workers pay taxes to provide all of these benfarmers and the farm workers get none of these benefits for themselves. Yet, on the farms today the average of this the average monthly salary of ing and are up against in this crazy pattern of inequities woven into our national laws throughout the past

FEESERSBURG.

February 22, and many birthdays to celebrate the Father of our country -who will be the next famous on this date? Of course it's now a holiday for stores, banks, mail carriers; while the rest of us keep on our daily rounds or do more work than usual, this beautiful Spring-like day.

Wasn't last week wonderful for clear skies in mid-winter? Achingly cold the first days and quite warm at the close, with spring birds whistling and a temperature for gardening-only the ground was full of water.

Saturday was moving day for some of the neighbors when the Moore family moved from the former W. Shaffer place to Frederick, and Joseph Garber and family moved from the stone house of Clarence Buf-fington, near Mt. Union Church to the tenant home of Charles Mehring, near

L. K. Birely returned from the Hospital on Friday morning not strong —and still confined to bed, but improving day by day. He is on a rigid diet—"Aye there comes the rub." Hospitals are great, the Doctors and Nurses are fine, but home is the best to attend Grandfather Wolfe's funeral last week with their aunt and uncle, Cleon Wolfe, were callers at Grove Dale, on Monday evening.

On Friday after the funeral of our cousin by marriage, Milton Devilbiss, conducted at the Delaplaine home, near Detour which we couldn't attend Roy C. Haugh and wife, Waynesboro, called at the Birely home to see how the family have stood the winter so far, and all's well.

A pleasant surprise on Sunday af-ternoon was to have Pvt. Paul Spur-rier pay us a brief call as he was home on a short furlough and trying to see as many friends as possible. He is looking well, says he has been treated well and seen a lot of our south eastern coast. He returned to Edgewood arsenal on Sunday evening.

Mrs. Millard Roelke, spent a few days at the Aberdeen Proving grounds last week for examination and instruction—and won some honors; but we are not nearly as well informed on terms, division and honors. as writers should be and the letters of the alphabet are jig-saw puzzles now. Miss Emma Ecker, of New Windsor spent an afternoon with us last week bringing an hour glass for service and entertainment, and the first Spring blossoms of snow drops, sweet little white bells that pushed through not over-crowded. There was no Missionary meeting afterward but an offering was requested before the close for that treasury. We are pleased with the prospect of releasing some of the men from work on Sunday at the Glenn Martin Plants. God says, "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." Men says "it can't be done, business would fail," etc. We also read: "We ought to obey God rather than man."

Some of the farmers are spending days in the woods just now cutting down trees, sawing and splitting wood and hauling it home for future use: and some who were at it early last week have frozen feet and hands to contend with

Our local carpenters were repairing the slate roof on Mt. Union Church the first of week, where the high winds of the past season had done some damage.

On Saturday we received a phone message announcing the death of our good friend, Mrs. James P. Reese, of Lutherville, Md. We knew she had been ill which we had mentioned in this column recently, but heard she was improving so the fact of her departure came as a surprise, and shock. Active from youth in the Lutheran Church, especially the Missionary Department; she held many important offices, and was well known, and well loved. Intelligent, bright and cheerful and always in the ranks, she will be greatly missed. Although afflicted with neutritis a long time, and sometimes bedfast, her spirit remained undaunted and her interest continued so that she attended all the meetings possible until very recently Three daughters and one son, Dr. Morris Reeee, of Lutherville, survive. Devoted children of a loving mother, Just the week before Mrs. S. F. Zeigler, of Baltimore, her colleague for many years in the Maryland Synodical Missionary Society had departed this life; so we can only think of these two friends with "Life's work well done, Life's crown well won, now

The drowning of Paul G. Crouse, Jr., of Laurel. Del., has brought grief to many of his friends in this part of the country. Such sad death at such an interesting time of life! Mr. Crouse was instructor of music at the Elmer A. Wilfe High School at Union Bridge for some time before he went to Delaware, and was well liked by teachers and pupils.

Endowed Inertia Approximately 2,000,000 men have left the farms of the United States to enter war and war industries since the Pearl Harbor raid. The only thing that can replace the consequent shortage of manpower is power equipment. This statement was made in middle January by Rep. Leslie C. Arends of Illinois on the floor of the House of Representatives in Washington. The shortage of farm machinery is well known to every farmer. On a farm regularly using horses, one man might do nearly two men's work with a tractor, but the few new tractors being built will never replace the worn-out tractors this year, not to mention farm teams. Farm hands are being imported to the United States from Latin America. Every farm worker is a real help but not all imported laborers are suitable for all kinds of farm

Busy Keeping Idle

Nothing seems more apparent to a serious observer than that literally thousands of government employees in admittedly essential industries are having a hard time trying to justify the existence of their highfalutin jobs. Read this recent utterance by Rep. Forest A. Harness of Indiana on the floor of the

"There is hardly a Federal agency, emergency or regular, where the pruning knife cannot be used to great advantage . . . We have one civilian employee for every three men in fighting uniform. . . sure we can weed out upward of a million Federal Employees who can go into the essential private fields now crying for help.'

An enterprising planner in the National Capital recently got up some cardboard signs to be used in overcrowded rooming houses for the protection of night workers who sleep in daytime. The sign read:

"Quiet Please-A war worker is resting here.

But the signs found an unexpected use. Just for horse-play, some joker took the signs to certain big alphabetical agencies and posed them around on desks of bureaucrats who seemed to have nothing to do. Banter on this subject goes on in Washington endlessly. Just the same, it is a vitally serious matter. There is a government bureau in Washington whose job it is to select occasionally some item of food that appears to be an especially good bargain and recommend its immediate use by housewives. The selection of any product implies that its supply exceeds the demand, that the price is right and that eating it up is a patriotic act. There is another bureau in Washington whose duty it is to keep a look-out for food scarcity. It pays attention to specific items in which a shortage seems to be developing and urges that farmers increase their production of such things to improve their profit per acre, also as an act of patriotism.

Dry Edible Beans

The whole thing looks pretty good on paper but in practice (to coin a phrase) it shows human fallibility. For instance, on January 16 newspapers announced a new "Victory Food Special" to American housewives, namely, dry edible beans. The hint was broad—too many beans on hand. Specialists wrote blurbs of praise about the food value of beans. Experts in cooking published formulas for making beans taste good. Wives and mothers, bent on service to home and country, sallied forth to buy beans. The next day, January 17, an official press release by the U. S. Department of Agriculture began urg ing farmers far and near to increase their acreage of dry edible beans; 500,000 acres more this year than last, a gain of about 17.5 per cent from 2.8 million to 3.3 million acres. A bonus per acre to farmers planting above a certain minimum was announced. At the same time a 25c increase in the "support price" was proclaimed for new No. 1 beans at country points.

Not Hard to Keep This is a sample of planned economy. One planner sees a shortage coming, another one sees a surplus. If beans were things that would not keep, like bananas or cantaloupes, you could admit that the planners, after all, might be seeing eye-to-eye. But beans will keep indefinitely in a clean dry place. If there is to be a shortage; if the Army is going to need beans in a few weeks to win the war, there is no point to choking the immediately available supply down the necks of the civilian popu-

This is not a preachment against beans. They are good food. I am offering no protest against setting up inducements and making arbi-trary price bids to stimulate production of any military necessity. My protest is only against buncombe. A Washington correspondent I know, remarked bitterly, "It looks like the planners will have to have a co-ordinator to keep them from playing both ends against the middle.

Will Congressman Harness' suggestion come to anything? Can we thin out the idle minds and bodies in Washington and send back a million people to the food producing

Leonora

Leonora straightened the objects on her desk with great care. She had put her desk at the end of her room facing the door so that when her mother came in she would have to cross the whole room under Leo-nora's stern executive eye to get to her. From movies and pictures in the newspapers Leonora had gotten a good idea of how the desk of a busy woman of affairs should look.

With an important scowl, Leonora picked up a sheet of paper. Now should be a sheet of paper.

picked up a sheet of paper. Now she was two people—herself, the busy woman, and her own stenographer. "Miss Simpkins, take a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, will you?" she murmured under her breath.

"Yes, immediate-ly," she murly," she mur-mured back at herself.

Leonora cleared her throat and looked at the ceiling for inspiration. Miss Simpkins bent over the sheet of paper hanging on the words about to fall.

"Dear Mr. Morgenthau," — "Got

"Don't bother me with these details," said Leonora)—my privilege as an American to invest at least ten percent of my income in War Bonds.

Yours truly,"
"Get that off at once, Miss Simpkins," said Leonora. "Yes, Ma'am!

The engineering student was stumped in the examination by a question concerning the bridging of a river which ran over a rocky bed. Finally in disgust he wrote: "Damn the river and blast the bed." He got full credit with one point deducted for bad spelling.

B. A. BENEDICT

Associated Newspapers. WNU Features.

LEN SPARTON loathed monotony. He tired of doing one thing almost before he got it under way. Tired also of people, liked to see new faces. He was impulsive, active and extremely temperamental.

And then on his twenty-sixth birthday he met Evelyn. She didn't fall for his line, was never considerate of his disposition, never awed by his eccentricities; insisted on having her own way and, at the same time, delighted with his dread of monotony. He fell in love with her, and she with him-because he was her idea of a real husband.

So they were married. And for a time-more than a yearno two people were ever more happily united. After a month of it they discovered that their love for each other was a lot more deeply embedded than either had dreamed. They adored each other.

They did crazy things together, that no other couple would dream of doing. They'd get up in the middle of the night and start out on automobile trips. They'd eat their meals at crazy hours. They climbed mountains and sailed boats, attended balls and gave parties. They did everything and anything that their fancy chose, everything but settle down and keep house like an ordinary mentally balanced couple. And they loved it! Glen would come home to a gorgeously prepared dinner and say: "Surprise! We're going to eat at the club tonight." And Evelyn would laugh and leave the dinner in the icebox for another

Or Evelyn would wake up bright and early some morning, ruffle the hair of her slumbering husband and say: "Surprise! We're going to the beach and sail a boat all day." And Glen would jump up with exclamations of delight and enthusiasm.

This sort of thing went on for a year. They gradually became more settled, or Evelyn did. They seemed to have done everything and gone everywhere. There seemed nothing new to excite their interest or stimulate their desire for excitement.

True, Glen seemed as vivacious and eager to break the monotony as ever. But his efforts had somehow lost their glamour. They were always the same old things, over and over again. Evelyn began to tire of it.

Glen, too, noticed the change. And, obstinate male that he was, he laid it to his wife. It had, he reflected bitterly, turned out about as he thought it would. Evelyn, after all, was not unlike a hundred other girls he had known and paid court. She was going to become a

Thus reasoning he at length hit upon an idea. Perhaps, he thought, it would be better if he went away for a time. It would help matters, without a doubt, if he and Evelyn didn't see each other for a space. There was such a thing, he told himself, as an overdose of companionship. The more he thought of the thing, the more it seemed like sound and sensible reasoning. Besides, if he went away for a while, he might get just the thrill he needed to satisfy his longing for something new and different. To his surprise, Evelyn agreed to his plan. It was, she thought, a splendid idea. It would, perhaps, break up the threatening monotony of their Glen was a little hurt that she should so readily indorse his idea. It was hard to believe that she might be getting sick of him, too. He decided, therefore, to teach her a lesson. He'd make his trip an extended one; so long, in fact, that when he did return Evelyn would be longing for the sight of him.

So he packed his things and went away, bearing with him the disturbing good wishes of his wife. Without telling Evelyn of his plans, Glen hired a fishing yacht and set sail for a lengthy trip. For five months he cruised along the Grand Banks. Returning, he was imbued with a sense of guilt. He wondered if she missed him. He knew a feeling of shame at having left her to her own devices for so long. Yet he knew also that had he remained within a day's travel of home, he would have weakened long ago and returned to his wife. And then, striving to justify his own guilt, Glen felt a new emotion: Suspicion! Was she interested in some one else? Was that why she so agreeably accepted his plan to go away? The thought tormented him. And yet he could not bring himself to go sneaking home to assure himself of her loyalty. He wouldn't admit the girl he'd picked out to become his wife was untrue. She was too fine for that. So Glen worried and fretted while the fishing yacht bore him swiftly homeward. By the time they had docked in Boston, Glen was in mental agony. He'd been away long enough. He wanted more than anything to be with Evelyn again and do once more the foolish, crazy things that had made them so happy. He knew now that the thrill for which he'd gone seeking would never come unless Evelyn had a part in providing it.

Thinking thus, yet conscious of an empty, hopeless feeling that those times were never again to be, that there would never be more thrills and crazy excitement, he hurried to the hotel where he'd told Evelyn to write him. At the desk the clerk handed him a telegram. He ripped open the envelope and read, and as he read his pulse began to race, the hair at the nape of his neck began to creep, a funny little thrill began at the foot of his spinal column and raced up his back. He felt a tingling feeling all over. He felt himself grow cold and then hot. And he knew that he was getting a thrill bigger than all the others combined. Never had he known such a complete feeling of happiness, joy, fear, shame, guilt, pity, remorse and love-all combined in one.

The telegram read: "Surprise! You're the father of a bouncing baby boy! (Signed) Evelyn."

"M AKE a platter," Agent Art Sydney said. "That's the only way I or any other agent can get you into the studios."

Mel Burdon smiled crookedly. "All right," he said. "I'll have one made this afternoon, if you think I ought.'

But down in his heart Mel felt it wouldn't do much good. It would cost four dollars to have a back-toback recording made of his voice. Four from five left one. One dollar for him and Ruth to get along on until something happened.

Mel walked up Vine street to Hollywood Boulevard. When he and Ruth had landed in Hollywood seven months ago they had been confident that before the first month had passed Mel would have landed a contract with one of the major stu-

But the only thing that had happened that first month was that it passed.

An agent, they had learned, was important to anyone who wanted to break into movies, but they had also learned that agents were scarce who were eager to help unknowns. Then they had found Art Sydney, who was sympathetic, but not very encouraging.

Ruth was waiting with her understanding smile when Mel got home. "He wants me to make a plat-Mel told her disconsolately Ruth lighted a cigarette and handed it to him. "If it's the only way, it's the only way," she said.

"Some guys," said Mel dismally, "use a gag to get in. Like singing a serenade under a producer's window. That's crazy. I'm not a gag man, I'm a singer." "Let's have a sandwich," said Ruth, "then you go down and make your recording. We'll have a dollar left. Let's go out and spend it tonight."

Mel grinn

anyway. It was dark when Mel got home with his record. When Ruth gave him a list of the things she wanted at the store he went to get them without the usual twinge of conscience because the list included a few delicacies. Left alone Ruth took the record and placed it on the battered old table model phonograph, their only possession, and sat down to listen. Mel's voice came to her clear and sweet, singing "Summertime."

"Look, Frank," Art Sydney said to Producer Frank Stevens, "I've got a record here I want you to listen to. You need a tenor for 'Dream Lover,' and I tell you this boy's got something . "Yeah. Yeah. They all have something. They're all good. Nuts! I've listened to hundreds, and I'm here to tell you they're all the same. Well, go ahead and play it. I've only got about nine hours' work ahead of me.'

Agent Sydney hesitated. "You might at least give us a break, friend," a clear, pleasant feminine voice said. "After all, you're inside and we're out and this is the only chance we have of showing you what we have." Producer Stevens whirled in his chair and stared at the phonograph. Art Sydney stared, too. But before either of them could speak, Mel's voice came out of the speaker, clear and sweet and good. The song ended. The pleasant feminine voice said: "Thank you. That's the best we have to offer. We hope you liked it. If you have a place for us in your next picture, we'd appreciate a chance to sing again for you-to show you what else we can do." Producer Stevens exchanged glances with Agent Sydney. Then he turned, opened a drawer and took out a contract . There were tears in Mel's eyes. "Honey! Honey! Just look! A contract! Seventy-five a week. It's a start. Nothing will stop me now! That's what we get for having faith and sticking to it. Merit counts after all . "Of course it does, honey. That's all that counts." She kissed him happily. Tomorrow, she thought, she'd have to go down and pay the two dollars she owed the music store for adding her voice to the record.

Mel must never know.

JESUS RESTORES LAZARUS TO LIFE

LESSON TEXT—John 11:32-35, 38-44. GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the resurrection, and the life."—John 11:25.

Suffering, sorrow and bereavement are so common in our day that this lesson is peculiarly appropriate. Life, even to the Christian, finds its full measure of things which hurt and grieve. Many ask: "Why must I, a follower of Christ, bear such burdens?'

The answer is, that while the believer is not "of the world," he is "in the world," and here he must meet the problems of life, including the evils to which the flesh is heir because of sin. The fact that Jesus is our Friend and our Saviour does not exempt us from human sorrow. but it does assure us of the needed grace to bear the trial and makes us ready to trust Him even in life's darkest hour.

Lazarus, the friend of Jesus, was sick. The home in which Jesus had found rest and fellowship was in deep trouble. Jesus was no longer in Judea. In haste, word was sent to Him of His friend's illness. But He did not come.

Why does He delay? Such is the heart-cry of thousands today who call on Him in their hour of trouble. The purposes of God we cannot fully understand. We need only to trust

Him and abide His time. Notice that His failure to respond at once to the message of Lazarus' sisters did not mean that He had deserted them (John 11:4-6). Nor did it mean that He had denied them

His help (v. 7). Above all, note that He came. He always does. Jesus has never failed any child of His. The time and the manner of His answer to our prayers may not conform to our opinion of what should have been done; but let us remember that we know only in part. He knows all. Let us trust Him. Job, in his darkest hour, said: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him" (Job 13:15). The steps from sorrow to victorious joy in this story are three in could only weep as the thou hadst been here-" Try as we may to temper its cruel blow, the fact remains that death is the enemy of man. It came into the world as the result of sin (Rom. 5:12), and only in Christ is it "swallowed up in victory" (I Cor. 15:54). Until the glorious day of Christ's returning, when the redemption of the body will be complete (Rom. 8:23), death will continue to bring sorrow to the heart and tears to the eyes.

But let us not fail to notice that as the friends of Jesus, we do not sorrow alone. "Jesus wept" (v. 35) with Martha and Mary. We know that He weeps with us in our trying hour. He is the "friend that sticketh closer than a brother." He is the one who gives grace to meet the deepest sorrow, and to bear it with grace because of His tender

II. Faith and Hope (vv. 38-40).

"If thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God," said Jesus to Martha. She must look beyond the evident fact of the deadness of her brother and see God's glory in his resurrection. Thus faith assures us that those who believe in Christ have more than the comfort of His sympathizing presence-they have a sure hope (read I Thess. 4:14-18).

Sorrow and unbelief would becloud our faith and thus rob us of our hope. Martha needed to have her faith stimulated by the gracious words of the Lord; and then she triumphantly put her hope in Him, the Christ of God. Once we recognize Him as God, we have no hesitation in believing in His miraculous power.

III. Christ and Resurrection (vv.

Majestic and authoritative are the words of Christ, "I am the resurrection and the life" (v. 25). He it was who gave life, for was He not "in the beginning with God"? And is it not said of Him, that "all things were made by him" (John 1:2, 3)? Paul tells us that "by him all things consist" (Col. 1:17). He is the only one who could say: "I lay down my life . . . I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up again" (John 10:17, 18).

So it can rightly be said that if we have Christ we have everything -both in this world and in the world to come. But if we do not have Christ, we have nothing; we are without God and without hope. "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (v. 25) is the promise of Christ to us. Let us believe it.

The resurrection power of Christ is at work in the world today raising the spiritually dead to newness of life in Him.

May we see many such a Lazarus By the time Jesus came, Lazarus | called forth—loosed from was dead and his family and friends | clothes of sin and set free. called forth-loosed from the grave

I do not want any one to think that I am criticizing any one who wrote the headline for my article on the "Pay-as-you-go" plan, in the issue of the 5th., but just want to call your at-tention to the fact that the heading and the comments on the plan do not agree. In fact I am very much in favor of this much discussed proposition. And with that explanation, I will proceed to give my stand on several other matters that are being discussed in the daily papers of this city, which may, or not, be a little interest.

T. Eckenrode 114 134 130 378 ing to the readers of the Record.

Not being much of a reporter, at least in this city, I must gather what news I want to give you, from the col-umns of my favorite daily, and I am glad to say that the Editor of that paper does not hesitate to say what he thinks, either politically or otherwise. So I suppose I will be safe in criticizing some of the things that are being done by those who are supposed to b running things almost everywhere.

The latest thing that is stirring th citizens of this city, is this Rationing We are told that we should not com plain if the Government cuts down o whatever we have been accustomed to and I suppose that is right. When we think of the privations the people of other lands have to go through in this line of rationing, as well as many oth er things that we now know nothin about, and which I hope that we wi never have to experience, we ought t keep mighty quiet about the few hard ships we have to bear.

I know it will not be much news t you folks in and around Taneytown, as you have been, and are now passing through, the same trouble we are now doing, and have become used to by this time, but you have no Labor Union leaders to stir you up over every little disturbance of the way they want things to be done, and so you settle things your own way, and are I am sure, much less disturbed than are the workers out here.

The latest in the rationing line, at the time of this writing, is shoes. We as well as you, are told that you cannot buy more than three pairs in one year. At first thought it seems that this is enough in the shoe line to last anybody. But here comes the factory worker, and says, "Why I can't get along on that few; I use a pair eve month." And away above him is t Society leader, who has to have on different pair every time she steps of the house, or even goes from croom to another. We have plenty both out here, and both are howli

Well, I guess they will both set down after a while, and the world v go on as it did before. But just people tried to evade the Prohibiti Laws, back before repeal, so now the are those who try to get away w illegal ways, and even now, we re of those who are "bootlegging" sho and some have fallen into the har

Now comes an orderforevery work er-man or woman to work 48 hour a week. but the New Deal, which spite of the war, are still runnin things to suit themselves, is might careful not to cut out the overtime pay. At first sight, we thought the this order would not affect anybor but war workers, but from the grow ings that are going on all over t whole city, it appears that it appli to everybody, even to the small reta stores. How this will help the wa effort, I do not know, and don't thin the authors of the order know them

There are many private concerns as necessary in their way as war work, that do not require their employees to work even 40 hours, and I am sure these should be excluded in

A great deal of activity in the buy-ing of clothing was stirred up the past week, by the rumor that cloth-ing would be rationed, but I think this has died down, since the denial by the rationing authorities, that nothing of the kind is being thought of at this time. As time goes on and anything new turns up in the lines mentioned above I will try to give you a little idea of just how Detroit is taking them, and if misstatements have been made I will correct them as soon as possible after I find that I have been mistaken. I know you will bear with me in this line, as I will do the best I can to treat all these questions fairly.

JOHN J. REID. (Yes, John J. we stand corrected. We did err last week in heading your article that you were opposed to the Pay-as-You-Go Plan in taxation. Sorry.—Ed. Record.)

What You Buy With

That new cocking range, whether it be gas, electric or otherwise, is something to look forward to when the War is won. But you can start saving now to buy it. Put a definite amount every payday, ten percent of your pay check . . into War

When your Bonds mature you will have the money ready for that new range. You will have made a good investment, getting back $4 for every $3. And your purchase of War Bonds is helping that boy, husband or sweetheart on the fighting front.

Was Obliged to Answer

Queries Put by His Wife TULLAHOMA, TENN.—They had been married only two months but she had him where he had to answer every question—and correctly too. How much do you make? What size shoe do you wear? Do you have any children? These were but a few of the questions Mrs. Virginia Dunkleberger, 20-year-old inductee interviewer, asked husband Austin when he appeared before her at Camp Forrest after his induction into the "I felt weak at the knees when I saw him sitting across the table from me," the wife-interviewer said, "but he's 1-A in the army and I'm as proud as can be." The couple lived at nearby Winchester and both had worked at Camp Forrest before Dunkelberger joined the army, the husband as a clerk in the quartermasters office and the wife in the induction office.

Dog Is Severest Critic

Of Reception Center Band MINERAL WELLS, TEXAS.—It's an outworn gag for a creative artist to call his wife his "best friend and severest critic.'

At Camp Wolters, the best friend and severest critic of the Reception Center band is a 14-month-old dog. His ear for music is infallible, assert the musicians. He howls if someone strikes a sour note, or if an instrument is off pitch. But if the band is performing smoothly, "Johnnie" curls up between the drummer and the first trumpet player and goes to sleep. Johnnie, whose ancestors apparently carried democracy to extremes, thinks any one in uniform is O. K. As for civilians-he used to chase them away from recitals of the band, but now he's learned that they must be tolerated.
