The mountains and plains are beautiful. We rode past several mountain peaks coated with snow. They seemed like they could not be real. At Salt Lake City we crossed a 30-mile bridge. Reno is a beautiful city, too."

Editor of Carroll Record,
Dear Sir: Enclosed please find check for renewal of Record for another year. Would not like to be without it. Seems like letter from home. What has become of the Woodbine correspondent? I am quite disappointed when there is no items. We are having rain daily here, and on Monday night the worst electric storm I ever experienced, doing lots of damage, flooding many places and running into cottage. Fortunately no damage to my property. My very best wishes to you all. Most sincerely, Leala B. Stahl.

SERVICE MEN LETTERS

Containing Thanks for Kits and The Record.

Gentlemen:

I've moved again and my address is that shown below. This is my primary flight training. I will be here about 2 months during which time I will get 65 hours of flying and 5 hours in the Link trainer as well as a number of ground school subjects. The training planes are Stearman PT-17's a very sturdy plane which can take plenty of hard knocks. I expect to make my first flight tomorrow morning and I assure you it will be a relief to get in the air. There has been very little fun in the training the last few months—only a lot of hard work.

This place looks like a mirage. The buildings are concrete and painted white; grass and palm trees are in the area between these buildings.

The training is very stiff and I understand about 60% of the cadets wash-out during their training at this field. The most common reason are air sickness and lack of progress.

Thanks again for the paper, it is appreciated very much by myself. Yours truly,

A/c KENNETH NUSBAUM,
443-K Carlston Field,
Arcadia, Florida.

Dear Sirs:

I am sorry I could not send my change of address sooner, but until now I have not had a permanent address. I am now a bombardier-gunner in the first and only horizontal bombing squadron in the Marine Corps. It is a swell outfit and we have fine officers. Hoping to receive your paper again soon, I remain sincerely yours,

CORP. F. B. BOWER,
Fourth Marine Air Wing
V. M. B. 413 U. S. M. C. A. S.
Cherry Point, N. C.

The Carroll Record,
Dear Sir:

I am now in the Hospital here in Bethesda, Md. I do not have to stay in bed, and I can go into Washington and do whatever I want to do; just as long as I report for sick call at nine o'clock every morning at the hospital.

The reason that I am here at the Hospital is because I had to have my middle finger on my left hand taken off. I received a compound fracture of the bone when one of the doors at the barracks was slammed on my finger. I will be here at the Hospital for a few weeks until it heals and then I go on with my training where I left off. This is the best hospital in the country and I am sure that I can remain here a few weeks and like it very much. Some of the other cadets call it a country club or a big hotel; and I am sure that anybody who enters this place would get the same idea.

I want to thank you very much for the Carroll Record, and I wish that you would send the Record to the address below. Sincerely,

A/c DAVID KEPHART,
S. O. Q. 8 Nat. War Med Center
Bethesda, Md.

OUTSTANDING SENIORS AWARDED MEDALS

Honors this year have gone to two boys in the Senior Class, Wirt Crapster and Harmon Stone, who have been outstanding students throughout their four years at T. H. S. The presentation of the medals was made at the Commencement Exercises, Wednesday evening, May 26, by Mr. B. Walter Crapster, President of the Taneytown Parent Teachers' Association. Wirt Crapster was presented with the activities medal for having earned the highest number of points. In four years Wirt had earned a total of 1179 points. Harmon Stone received the Scholastic Medal and Wirt Crapster received honorable mention. There were only 1½ points difference between the scores of the two boys. These students have left a wonderful record and a true challenge to future pupils.

Physical requirements for enlistment in the Naval Reserve for men seventeen years of age and those thirty-eight to fifty, have been modified as far as eyes, teeth and height are concerned, Lieutenant (g) D. O. Smith, Officer in charge of Navy Recruiting for Maryland, announced today.

Lieutenant Smith pointed out that those men previously rejected for defective vision or teeth, or those too short to meet the old requirements, should inquire at once at their nearest Navy Recruiting Station to determine their acceptability in the Naval Service on the basis of current physical standards.

The Recruiting Officer stated that the locations of Navy Recruiting Stations for Maryland are as follows: Baltimore, Post Office building; Cumberland, Post Office building; Hagerstown, City Hall; Salisbury, Post Office building.

However, farmers may still obtain some feed wheat through dealers and County AAA Committees to whom shipments have already been made. Additional orders will not be accepted by the corporation unless the State U. S. Department of Agriculture War Board determines that the wheat is needed to feed livestock during June.

TANEYTOWN MAN KILLED AT SHIPYARD

George Knobel a Victim of an Explosion

George Knobel, Jr., aged 33 a resident of Taneytown for the last ten years was killed Monday morning in an explosion at the Bethlehem Steel Shipyards, near Baltimore, where he was employed as a fireman. He was employed there for the past year and met death while helping to control a blaze. Death was practically instantaneous.

Another man, a Baltimorean, was killed, several injured from the blast which shook the entire ship, a steamer which was in drydock undergoing repairs and general overhauling. Oxygen in a metal container exploded when intense heat from the blaze came in contact with the tank. Knobel's body was hurled from the ship's deck to the dock below.

Mr. Knobel was the son of Geo. and Catharine Knobel, of Baltimore and was married to Violetta Shuff, of Frederick. Before his position in Baltimore he was employed at the Taneytown Manufacturing Co., for nine years.

Besides his wife and parents he is survived by a brother, Carl Knobel and a sister, Mrs. Francis Buckheiser, of Baltimore. He also leaves a large throng today at ceremonies at the Flag House here. "Well may we celebrate the fact that 'Our Flag is still there.' While that flag flies aloft, the whole world knows, and is inspired by the knowledge, that Democracy still is a virile force upon the earth.

Funeral services were conducted at 1 P. M., Wednesday, at his late residence. Rev. A. T. Sutcliffe, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, officiated. Interment was made in Mt. Olivet cemetery, Frederick.

The pallbearers were: Glenn Reaver, Nelson Bell, Sterling Fritz, John Hyde, Carroll Long and Eugene Eyer. The following members of the Taneytown Fire Company were honorary bearers: Raymond Davidson, Harold Mehring, Howard Welty, Norville Welty, Wilson Riffe, Elmer Crebs, Clarence LeGore, Cleve LeGore, James Burke, Charles Baker, Charles Arnold, Wilbur Fair, Augustus Shank, Thurston Putnam, David Smith, Mervin Eyer, Kenneth Frock, Donald Trayer.

FLAG DAY

Gov. O'Connor says: "Flag Day never had a more dramatic meaning than it does in this year of global war." Gov. Herbert R. O'Connor told a large throng today at ceremonies at the Flag House here. "Well may we celebrate the fact that 'Our Flag is still there.' While that flag flies aloft, the whole world knows, and is inspired by the knowledge, that Democracy still is a virile force upon the earth.

"From time to time in the years gone by, that flag has been threatened. Always it has survived, always it has emerged from the struggle brighter in hue, more glorious than ever. But what has happened in the past cannot be relied upon to preserve that flag today.

"On many a Flag Day in years gone by, as our people gathered to pay honor to the Stars and Stripes, only dimly in their minds was there any realization of the far-reaching meaning of that banner. Not so today, however. We have but to look to Poland and its unhappy subjects, or to Greece or Belgium or Holland or Norway; we have only to remember Lidice, its entire male population wiped out by Nazi vengeance; we have only to call to mind the barbarities, the inhumanities practiced alike by our German, Italian, and Japanese foes, to realize anew and fully the true significance of our great flag.

"Clear in mind, therefore, is the knowledge of what defeat of that would mean to us today. Deep in our hearts is the determination that, cost what may in blood and tears and wealth, America will never lay down its arms until that flag once more flies serenely above a peaceful land, and until the fear of slavery and barbarity is banished once and for all by the overthrow of all those who would enslave their fellow beings.

"Now is the time when we must remember that in this world those things that are priceless must be guarded well. Never must we forget that America is the guardian of that priceless human privilege termed liberty. Throughout the years we have shown the world that it is possible to grant all the people of a country full individual freedom, and to prosper greatly thereby. Now we must prove that, in time of stress, that individual liberty, instead of being a weakness, is indeed an uncharted and unlimited source of national strength.

"We are doing just that. Thank God, events of the past year have advanced us markedly along the road to Victory and Peace. We cannot, we must not, falter now. The road ahead is still steep and hard. But with a united will for victory, and with the determination that is in all our hearts to preserve for all times to come the sparkling gem of liberty that has been ours, there will be no let-down until victory is ours and peace once more reigns throughout the world.

"What a Flag Day that will be! Then truly, we and all the world can look aloft, to the Stars and Stripes gleaming in the sun of liberty, and see therein a vision of a better, freer life ahead. Today the Stars and Stripes are more than ever the hope of oppressed peoples everywhere. On this critical Flag Day let us resolve anew that we shall not fail our trust."

HOW TO GET FARM SUPPLIES

According to a new WPB priority regulation a dealer must furnish farm supplies if the farmer signs a certificate stating: "I certify to the War Production Board that I am a farmer and that the supplies covered by this order are needed now and will be used for the operation of a farm." A total of 140 items are affected by this order. Such certification will enable the farmer to buy up to $25 worth of any of the items on the list, and more if the certificate is approved by the local country farm rationing committee.

THE AUTO USE TAX STAMPS NOW ON SALE

The $5.00 Sticker to be Placed on Windshield

Collector of Internal Revenue M. Hampton Magruder announced today that auto use tax stamps in the denomination of $5.00 will be placed on sale in all postoffices and offices of Collectors of Internal Revenue, on Thursday, June 10. The stamps will evidence payment of the tax for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1943, and must be purchased on or before that date. The stamps will be serially numbered, will be gummed on the face, and will have provision on the back for entry of the make, model, serial number and State license number of the vehicle.

Mr. Magruder said that, to guard against loss or theft, it has been suggested that, when affixing the stamps the vehicle owner should dampen the windshield rather than the adhesive side of the stamp. The method has been recommended to keep the stamp intact upon the windshield. As an additional precaution, it has also been suggested that each motor vehicle owner should make a record of the serial number which appears on the use tax stamp in the event the stamp should become lost.

Every owner of a motor vehicle which is used upon the highways should call at his local postoffice or at the office of the Internal Revenue Collector and secure a $5.00 use tax stamp and affix it to his vehicle on or before July 1, 1943, the Collector said. The various postoffices will sell the stamps over the counter for cash only and no mail order business with respect thereto will be conducted by the post offices. Collectors of Internal Revenue are authorized to accept cash, postoffice money orders, and certified checks in payment of the use tax stamp. However, as revenue stamps have an intrinsic value, uncanceled checks will not be acceptable in payment therefor.

It is the desire of the Bureau of Internal Revenue that the use tax stamp shall be placed on the windshield in a location that will not be in conflict with State requirements. In the State of Maryland auto use tax stamps may be affixed any place on the windshield desired. In the District of Columbia such stamps may be placed on the windshield on the blind spot in front of rear view mirror. Mr. Magruder stresses the fact that the use tax law has not been repealed and cautions motor vehicle owners that failure to purchase and display the new use tax stamps on vehicles using the public highways after July 1, 1943, will subject the violators to severe penalties imposed by law.

BUTTER PRICE REDUCED

A reduction of five to six cents a pound in the retail price of butter will go into effect Thursday, June 10. The OPA intends to effect the rollback with a minimum of financial loss to the dairy industry, from the farm through the retailer. With the subsidy paid to them by the government, buyers of butterfat will get as much for their butter as before, and will be expected to continue to pay going prices to the farmer. "Butter shall include butter manufactured by a farmer on his farm from milk produced on his farm" according to an amendment to maximum price regulation No. 289 under which maximum prices were established for creamery butter.

DETROIT LETTER

Our Correspondent Writes Interestingly Again

It is queer how two persons, so widely separated, as far as miles are concerned, can think as near alike as my friend, W. J. H., and your humble servant do. And I want to say that my views, as presented in my last letter, were written long before his article was in print. He sure is, like the Irishman said, "A man after my own heart." In some ways, he and that other fine writer, L. B. H., sometimes write over my head, but I can sure understand what he writes, in regarding the matter of strikes and also the statement as to the relations between the present New Dealer Chief and that trouble maker, John Lewis. A truer statement was never made than that article on the matter of "Chickens Come Home to Roost."

You folks in your quiet town cannot realize, as we do, the conditions as they exist out here. In my letter, I have tried to be fair, and want to assure you that I have not exaggerated one bit, when I attempted to tell you how the war-effort is being hindered by so many who do not seem even at this late date, to realize that we are at war, and that our boys who are facing death or injury on the battle-front need all the guns, tanks, bombers, etc., that can be produced especially in this—the arsenal of the Nation.

This is written on the day that the Banks and merchants celebrate as Memorial Day. But the real celebration took place in downtown Detroit on Sunday. One thing that we noticed in the account of the parade, etc., was the presence of the last survivor of the thousands of members of the G. A. R. This statement took us back to the first such event we witnessed after coming out here, 25 years ago. Then there were hundreds and I might say thousands, of the Boys in Blue in line, and what a cheer they gave Teddy Roosevelt, who was the city's guest of honor that day. And it took us back to the many Decoration Days we took part in, back in old Taneytown. It does no good to wish for these days back again, and we can only say that we are glad that the people of the old town have again seen fit to honor the memory of those who helped to save our great Union and also of those who answered the call in all the wars that we have by force of circumstances, been compelled to take part in. And we cannot help thinking that many years after the present war has been won, and those who are now serving their country, have been called to their reward, there will still be a Decoration Day, for America is sure one nation that does not forget its preservers and the heroic deeds they did, in order that she might live.

Well, we are still having very wet weather. It seems that the weather man has a peculiar grudge against us, as before this Spring we have never experienced such disagreeable weather. But we notice that people everywhere in the U. S. are practically in the same boat, and no doubt feel as we do. One thing is sure, and that is, if Nature does not soon give us good planting and growing weather, the Government's estimate and demands for bigger crops will be sadly out of line. But all things come to an end—good or bad—and I think this disagreeable situation will come to an end some time soon, and later on we may be wishing for some of these rains that we dread so much now.

As we write this, we learn that the old industrial war horse, who retired from active service in the Ford activities, is now back in harness again. Whether you like the methods of the Ford Motor Car Company or not, you must admire its founder, Henry Ford, now very close to 80 years of age, now takes on himself the heavy duties that he put on the shoulders of his only son, Edsel, who has been compelled by death to relinquish them at a time he was needed most.

The strike situation has quieted down quite a bit since my last letter, and we sincerely hope that it will remain so. But we can never tell when the fever will strike again or what industry will be crippled. But the people of this city have enough other things to worry about, not the least of which is the actions of those in charge of the food situation. We had hoped that when ex-Senator Brown took hold of the OPA, things would be straightened out, but they seem more mixed up than ever. The Black Market in almost everything is flourishing, and there does not seem any relief of this situation, in sight. War does mix things up, doesn't it?

I wish sometimes, that I could wait to send by letters just about a day before the publication of the Record, as just about the time I have a letter finished, along comes a lot of news that could be written about. This has happened while finishing up this letter: The big coal strike, the exposure of the partiality shown to one of the highest officers in the OPA, who was allowed an immense stock of rationed goods, for use of, as he says, his help and friends whom he entertained at his "Lodge," and the damaging storm that passed over Detroit. But we cannot have all things as we would like them to happen, and so if my letters seem a little out of date, I hope to be excused.

JOHN J. REID.

FRIDAY, JUNE 11, 1943

A FORWARD STEP

About two weeks ago Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, named a committee of forty-nine to develop "a realistic peacetime program for American progress."

The committee is composed of five Senators, twenty-four Governors, twelve members representing the House of Representatives and eight party officials.

The Republican party chairman said it was expected that the group—to be known as the Republican Post-War Advisory Council—would be split up into subcommittees for the study of important phases of post-war economy, with the idea of seeking ways for accomplishing the changeover from war to peace time production and living.

Any recommendations which the council brings forth will be presented to the party's national committee prior to the meeting of the national convention next year.

Mr. Spangler asserted the council was organized with the cooperation of Senator McNary (Ore), and Representative Martin, (Mass.), Republican leaders of the Senate and House, respectively, who were named to its membership.

He added that all the leaders of the party will be consulted upon the program, including former President Herbert Hoover, and the last two Presidential candidates, Alfred M. Landon and Wendell L. Willkie. Outstanding spokesmen for agriculture, industry, labor and finance will be invited to advise the council, he said.

Even though this is a political step, it is a highly sensible procedure. Its one weakness is that it is political. What a world of meaning it would have if that same group, with a dozen Democrats like Byrd, of Va., and Tydings, of Md., could work together without seeking political advantage, taking council from churchmen, educators business men, workmen—whenever sane council could be found, and with courage to discard the visionary chaff that abounds.

It is a cause worthy of the study of the best brains and hearts of the world. It would accomplish far more than all the "official" councils that can be organized in any part of the world. L. B. H.

TRAIN UP THE CHILD

The parent, the home, the teacher, the school, the preacher, the church—these are the main factors for the training of the young to become useful citizens. Parents who find themselves too busy to guide, direct and admonish their children now are apt to be compelled later to take time to worry about their misdeeds. Every inmate of a reformatory or penal institution was at one time some fond mother's babe cradled in her arms. Criminals are not made in a day, 'tis the first wrong step usually that determines destiny. Lot fall to low estate, his wife to a pillar of salt, all happened because Lot "pitched his tent toward Sodom." Character counts, and those possessing character may suffer humility, they never lose self respect. Self respect is the safest road to security. He who cultivates self respect is not very likely to disrespect others, or do things to their detriment.

Train up a child in the way he should go, run speak to that young man. Suffer the little children to come—these and a thousand other truths point out the value of child training.

One thing that impresses me greatly in the study of this stupendous question is the effect that Sunday School attendance has had as a crime deterrent. Few indeed are the inmates of penal institutions who were reared in Sabbath Schools. A child may not understand Bible truths as taught in the Sabbath School; he cannot fail to be influenced by the lessons he learns there. Calling up the classes of my childhood I find few failures among Sabbath School habitués, and likewise but few who have become successful who never went to Sabbath School.

If all parents could be induced to send all children for two generations to Sabbath School crime thereafter would be diminished greatly. I have been a teacher all my life and believe thoroughly in schools, colleges and education generally, but if I had to decide the question and had choice of Sabbath School or the other schools, I'd choose the Sabbath School as the best character builder. W. J. H.

HUNT THEM DOWN

There came last week a story from Canada which illustrates what we consider as horrible a crime as a man can commit, deliberate sabotage. A track walker on a railroad saw a man pulling spikes on a curve, and disappearing into a woods when noticed.

The sectionman started to repair the damage when he was shot from the woods, hit twice in the shoulder and one shot went through his hat. It was a plain attempt to kill. The wounded man continued along the track a half mile and flagged a light engine, whose crew in turn flagged a fast train. Thus by heroic effort more serious damage was avoided, but without credit to the fiend or fiends who pulled the spikes.

There should be no let up in the search for criminals of that type. They certainly can be found and captured, and justice should be swift and severe. They plainly have forfeited the right to live. We have not heard later from this particular case, but we would have only one rule for all cases of its kind. L. B. H.

BOOK 3 REMINDER

Ration Book No. 3 is about to be issued to the American people. It will replace Book No. 1 which covers coffee, sugar and shoes.

Application cards for the new books have been delivered to 30,000,000 heads of households. It seems unnecessary to point out to the recipients that this is a whale of a job for Uncle Sam's postoffices, a job which can be made easy or difficult by those responsible for sending back the applications with the information requested properly filled in.

It will do no harm to emphasize a few points. First, the blanks should be mailed back immediately, and without fail before June 10. The applicant who fails to send in his card before June 10 will be put to extra trouble and inconvenience. Second, the small stub at the top of the blank must be torn off and returned by the rationee.

Third—and this becomes more complicated—the head of the household who fills out the application must put his own name on the blank in three different places: Once when he prints his name as the head of the household, again when he prints his name as an applicant in the family group, and a third time when he signs his name at the bottom of the blank in the space reserved for his signature. Fourth—and this is easier—the card requires a three-cent stamp because it is oversized and cannot be mailed at post card rates.

Each error made by applicants will cause delay in the distribution of the new books. Applicants should remember that this mass mailing system, if handled properly, will save them valuable time. It is up to the housewives to make the system work with as little friction and confusion as possible.—The Frederick Post.

GHOSTS OF OLD WARS

If the ghosts of old wars and battles linger about the scenes of their former victories and defeats, the Americans in Tunisia should have seen many of them. For the spots our boys have been conquering were the scenes of one of the greatest of empires of 2,000 years ago. The famous ancient city of Carthage once stood near the modern city of Tunis. Now only an insignificant little village and some old ruins remain as souvenirs of those great events.

At one time the city of Carthage had 700,000 inhabitants, and its warriors were feared all over the world. It fought fierce wars with the Greeks, also with the Romans, who ruled the territory, which is now Italy. They sent their armies through Spain and the countries now France and Italy had colonies on the Atlantic coast of Africa.

The downfall of this powerful nation is an illustration of how great countries come down to ruin because they could not live peacefully with their neighbors. Adolf Hitler should have considered Carthage.

Now we see the vast continent of Africa, in which great nations have arisen and fallen, coming into a new era. North Africa has been mostly under the control of Italy, France and Spain. Now it has been conquered by Great Britain and the United States. Our people will have great influence on its future.

They have freed it from Fascist rule, and will give it a chance to attain prosperity through freedom and good development. Perhaps some of our soldiers who have been fighting over those historic lands will see opportunities there, and will return to develop the country. If any ghosts of the old wars linger around, they will tell the world that all their fighting was vain, and accomplished nothing to build prosperity.—The Caroline Sun.

WAR CABINET?

President Roosevelt should not be surprised if the American people greet his latest juggling of the alphabet with a bit of reserve. There has been mounting criticism in recent days of the way the Administration has been fighting the war on the home front. The food situation is perturbing; strikes have been aggravating; and the Office of Price Administration has been forced openly to deny it is falling apart.

Under such circumstances in the past, the President has usually announced a reorganization, frequently superimposing new administrators over old ones. Sometimes this has brought improvement, but just as often has furnished new problems to take people's thoughts off former ones.

In the present instance, however, the President has set up, on paper, a six-man committee of such scope and caliber that it might easily serve as a War Cabinet—if the President uses it as such.

The President, in announcing the reshuffle, remarked that the United States is entering a phase of the war effort in which "we must streamline our activities, avoid duplication and overlapping, eliminate inter-departmental friction, make decisions with dispatch, and keep both our military machine and our essential civilian economy in team and at high speed."

As a matter of vivid fact the United States has been in that phase for months, or since Pearl Harbor. The Truman Committee, among others, brought it out, and early last March insisted the way to overcome the inadequate planning, conflicting authority, and hesitancy to adopt strong civilian policies was to establish a central executive authority, which is another way of saying War Cabinet in the new Office of War Mobilization the President omits the Food Administrator, the Manpower Commissioner, the Petroleum Administrator, the Price Administrator and some others who figure largely in the war mobilization; but the advantages of a group of small working size are apparent, and it is a fact that most of the men are included who establish the fundamental policies that some of the others, who happen to be closer to the public eye, carry out.

Inclusion of the War and Navy Secretaries should help in bringing into better mesh the gearing of civilian and military supplies. There is no question, for example, but what better planned Army and Navy food buying would result in a better, and probably substantially larger, civilian distribution. The same might apply to gasoline and other things.

So it is that this latest reorganization might mean much, as we greatly hope, or it may mean nothing. We shall have to wait and see.—Christian Science Monitor.

CORRESPONDENCE

Latest Items of Local News Furnished By Our Regular Staff of Writers

We desire correspondence to reach our office on Thursday, if at all possible. It will be necessary therefore, for most letters to be mailed on Wednesday, or by Fast Mail, west on W. M. R. E., Thursday morning. Letters mailed on Thursday evening may not reach us in time.

FEESERSBURG.

Moon-light and roses—and we are "knee-deep" in June. Farmers are plowing potatoes and corn—the soil is just planting corn, which was delayed by much rain, and thousands of tomato stalks have been planted in the community. The women are cooking early vegetables from their gardens, and everything is on the move—including June bugs and mosquitoes.

Miss Edna Sauerhammer and niece, Mrs. Mary D. Grouce, of near Littlestown, visited on account of sickness and business at the L. K. Birley home last Wednesday, bringing gorgeous blooms of cultivated peonies and iris. The peonies and peonies seemed to have excelled themselves in size and color this year.

There was preaching service first at Mt. Union on Sunday morning—when Rev. Bowersox gave a review of the recent sessions of Md. Synod which was held at Gettysburg Seminary, and must have been instructive and inspiring. Much has been accomplished financially, and yet there's much more to be done—at home and abroad. At Sunday School afterward, F. P. Bohn in charge read a letter of appreciation and thanks from Miss Elsie Fritz, for cards and favors sent her while in the Baltimore Hospital, with appendicitis from which she is recovering. Plans for a special offering for the Orphans Home at Loysville were considered to be acted on later.

Edgar and Ruth R. Bair who recently moved from Middleburg to Taneytown, have invited the class of Smiling Sunbeams to meet at their home next Tuesday evening—but will we be allowed to go? Will we have gas enough? "My Country 'Tis of thee Sweet Land of"—is it?

The Church Bulletin is made attractive by the tiny etchings of the pastor—this week of a dear little home surrounded by trees and flowers, a walk from the front door to the street—where an auto is waiting, presumably for ready service, or to go to church; then an exhortation on "Life itself is a building" within the paper is enclosed the poem—"The House inside me" by S. W. Gaffin, which is worthwhile. A list of the recent donors of the Bulletin, from each church is given; also of patients of the Parish in Hospitals—on just brought home. Congratulations are extended to the membership for their fine response to the Lutheran World Action campaign, which totaled $186.50. The announcement for Sunday School, Aug. 15 when Rev. Robert L. Lang, D. D., Superintendent of the National Home for the Aged will be at the various churches to tell of the work of the Home.

The funeral of Charles E. Buffington was well attended on Saturday morning at his home where he passed away on Wednesday evening, after a severe illness of two weeks. His pastor Rev. G. E. Bowersox, of Mt. Union officiated, and quite a number of cars followed the body to the Lutheran cemetery in Taneytown for burial. There was no singing, but very beautiful flowers testified to the esteem with which he was regarded, Charlie was a quiet peaceable citizen, a kind husband and father, and a devoted grandfather. He had been a farmer all his life and just three weeks before had called to see us and said, "I'm sorry I can't work any more, and I don't trust taking as long a walk as I did for fear I might fall and they couldn't find me." We think he enjoyed life here, and now may he enjoy the Glory there. The pall-bearers were John N. During Wednesday night of last week one of our neighbors who was alone, was awakened by barking antic a little pet dog in the house; then sounds as of some one trying to get in the house by way of the porch roof beneath her window; so called her neighbor men by phone, but together they couldn't discover the supposed burglar, then took the aroused sleeper home for rest.

On June 8, 1872—the free delivery of mail was instituted; what would happen to the PostOffice now if every one would have to go there for their mail? About this time June 10, 1752 Benjamin Franklin was experimenting with electricity when he and his young son made a kite of a large silk handkerchief and went out to fly it in a thunder storm. As the low thunder-cloud passed the electric fluid came down the string, and when Franklin touched a key he had fastened to the string, his knuckles threw sparks from it—which proved there was electricity there.

GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH AIDS WAR BOND DRIVE

Ringling Family at Helm in Cooperation with U. S. Government

With Robert, Aubrey and Mrs. Charles Ringling, owners, in harness and running in person the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which will exhibit in Baltimore, Monumental Show Grounds, 6 days beginning Monday, June 21, the cooperation they initiated with the U. S. Treasury Department and the ADT last winter is clicking daily.

Following the New York and Boston engagements' opening nights when only purchasers of war bonds were admitted, the Ringling have set aside an honor section at afternoon and night performances in every stand for bond buyers, a procedure planned with Treasury Department representatives in February. At the same time the Ringling family arranged to meet all the requirements of the ODT, which then approved the 1943 railroad tour, subject of course, to troop and war supply movements. To date, the Big Show has moved on schedule, for the Ringlings have extended the length of engagements in almost all cities in order to stay off the railway lines as much as possible. Further to relieve the railroads, the management has made many one-day stands into two-day stays.

Performances will be given at 2:15 and 8:15 P. M., with doors open at 1 and 7.

Most Envied Man Butter 'Detective'

Expert Grader Can Judge Feed Cows Have Eaten.

It may be news to even the farm folks that the conditions under which they milk their cows and the care they give the resulting product can be told immediately by an individual when he samples a portion of butter churned from the cream produced.

Where the milk or cream has been stored and what the cows have been eating are but a few of the odd bits of information that R. E. Eldred, rated as one of the country's best butter graders, can usually detect by putting a pat of butter into his mouth.

Mr. Eldred is chief inspector for the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company's Chicago warehouse. Actually, he doesn't sample each pound—but he he swallow any of the butter he is inspecting. A three-ounce sample, taken by a metal trier from a fiber box or wooden tub with weights ranging from 54 to 64 pounds, is sufficient.

An inspector can, in most instances, tell by tasting and smelling a sample of butter under what conditions the cream was produced and handled. Quality of the finished product is largely determined by the perfection of the raw material and care given the processing operations.

So acute is a grader's sense of taste and aroma that he can, with fairly consistent degree of accuracy, determine by the feed flavors the territory or origin of the butter. Skunkweed in Oklahoma, sageweed in the Dakotas, pepperglass in Nebraska, onion or garlic in Missouri, and the heavy feeding of alfalfa to cattle on the West coast, each imparts its own distinctive characteristics, although they are usually too faint to anyone but an expert.

Army Conserves Brass by Making Steel Cartridges

A newly developed method, which makes possible the substitution of steel for brass cases in caliber .45 ammunition, has been announced by the war department. The manufacturing process, perfected by the Evansville Ordnance plant working in conjunction with the army's Frankford arsenal, advances the army's program for conservation of critical materials another step.

A changeover from brass to steel for all types of fixed and semi-fixed artillery ammunition was completed the first of this year.

The saving in brass by the new process amounts to 1,774 pounds for each 100,000 rounds of ammunition. The new cartridges with steel cases have been tested and accepted by the using services. Large-scale production is already under way. All plants making caliber .45 ammunition will adopt the steel cartridge case.

Eight months ago the Evansville plant was close to a shutdown because of the acute brass shortage. Brass, which expands with the explosion of the powder charge and then contracts, permitting the extraction of the cartridge, had been universally used. The successful substitution of steel, removing a serious limitation on ammunition production, was accomplished in six months. In the same period the Frankford arsenal perfected a steel copper plated jacket for the caliber .45 bullet which resulted in a saving of 730 pounds of gilding metal for each 100,000 rounds.

Col' frames Can Lengthen Crowing Season of Plants

Coldframes, in which young plants are started or placed while it is still too cold for them in the open, can lengthen the growing season by a month to six weeks. Coldframes protect the plants from cold winds and frost and concentrate the sun's heat to provide favorable growing conditions.

Spinach, lettuce, tender crops such as tomatoes, and similar vegetables are started in coldframes, which also are used to "harden off" plants from hot beds. When the weather is suitable in the open, the plants are transplanted to their permanent locations.

A coldframe should be located on sheltered, well-drained ground on the south side of the house or garage or in a sunny corner of the garden plot. The coldframe itself consists of a framework of board from 12 to 16 inches in height at the back or north side and 6 to 10 inches at the front or south side.

Window sashes are placed on the top, or, as a substitute for glass, muslin may be stretched on frames for this purpose. Flats are placed in coldframes after the seedlings have started in a sunny window, or seedlings can be lifted from flats and transplanted into pots or into beds in the coldframes.

Layer of Ashes and Air From Pit Preserve Grates

Grates are put into furnaces for two purposes—to hold the fuel bed and to admit air.

Furnace manufacturers make these grates out of very high-grade alloyed iron and as heavy as possible, to prevent their warping and burning. In spite of this, many sets of grates are replaced each year. In every case this is the result of abuse by improper firing.

The remedy is simple: Keep a layer of ashes on top of the grates and keep the ash-pit clean. The ashes on the grates prevent their contact with the hot coals. The air flowing through the grates helps to keep them from becoming overheated. Scientific tests have shown that loose ashes have very little resistance to air flow. Therefore, four to six inches of ashes on the grates will not cut the draft appreciably.

Do not shake the grates violently and never dump the grates until you want to clean the furnace out for the summer. A full ash-pit, particularly when the ashes are in contact with the grates, prevents the proper circulation of air and causes the grates to become overheated.

English Regency

English Regency covered that period from 1811 to 1820, when George IV acted as regent for the insane George III. The Regency styles grew out of those we familiarly know as Georgian but they were strongly influenced by the Empire styles of France, reflecting the revival of interest in Roman, Egyptian and Greek architecture and design. Hence its chairs are rather robust versions of Directoire and Empire chairs, the cupboards and cabinets often have metal grills in place of glass in the doors. The most familiar woods were mahogany and rosewood, while black lacquered finish lined with gold was also popular.

Pasteurization of Cream Preserves Butter Flavor

Many farm people, making butter for home use for the first time in many years, inquire for information about how to keep butter from developing a rancid flavor. According to Forrest C. Button, professor of dairy manufactures, the answer to this question is pasteurization of the cream.

"The heat of pasteurization makes inactive the raw cream enzyme, which causes deterioration of the fat," Professor Button explains. "Pasteurization is a simple procedure: Just put the cream into a can or pail; place this container in a large kettle, boiler or other suitable container partly filled with water; place this on the stove and bring the cream to a temperature of 145 to 150 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes. A shorter method is to heat the cream to 165 to 170 degrees for 10 or 15 minutes, but the 30-minute method is the standard procedure. The cream should be stirred while being heated to facilitate heating."

When the pasteurization process is completed, Professor Button says that the cream should be cooled to 50 degrees Fahrenheit or lower and held at this temperature for at least three hours before churning in order to insure firm butter granules.

"For the sake of convenience," he says, "the cream may be held cold overnight. But if the butter is to be churned as soon after the three-hour period as possible, it may be cooled quickly by stirring it and running cold water into the kettle or by setting the cream can into the milk cooling tank which is available on most dairy farms. The desirability of using a dairy thermometer in heating and cooling the cream is obvious."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"God the Preserver of Man" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 13.

The Golden Text will be from Proverbs 18:10—"The name of the Lord is a strong tower; the righteous runneth into it, and is safe."

Among the citations comprising the Lesson-Sermon will be the following from the Bible—Psalms 121:6—"The Lord is thy keeper; the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand."

The Lesson-Sermon also will include passages from the Christian Science textbooks, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, among which is the following, page 4—"God is Love. More than this we cannot ask, higher we cannot look, farther we cannot go."

Governors Up in Air

Five governors gained an insight to aerial warfare through service during World War I in the army or navy air forces. Governors Spessard Holland of Florida, Dwight Green of Illinois, Sumner Sewall of Maine and Herbert B. Maw of Utah were army fliers; Gov. Andrew Schoepfel of Kansas enlisted in the naval reserve flying force in 1918, serving four years. Governor Holland brought down two enemy planes, was shot down once himself, and received the Distinguished Service Cross.

Complex Stomachs

Complex stomachs enable cattle, sheep and other ruminants to get all their protein needs from the commoner cereal and legume feeds. Animals with simple stomachs, such as hogs and chickens, cannot use any but the high quality protein feed-stuffs, and in addition must have a certain minimum amount of animal protein feed.

March to Guns

Today, as never before, troops advancing into battle "march to the sound of the guns." On all fronts artillery is thundering, cannon of calibers ranging from the 20 mm. aircraft weapon to 14-inch railway and 16-inch coast defense guns. Airborne troops are landed and roll their deadly little 37 mm.'s from the planes. Paratroopers float down along with the chutes carrying parts of their 75 mm. howitzers, assemble them and go into action. Mountain artillerymen strip their 75 mm. pack howitzers from the backs of pack mules and employ them on the heights. Horse artillery gallops along with the cavalry. Infantry mortars lob their finned shells in high arcs into the enemy trenches. Field artillery trucks halt, 105-mm. howitzers are uncoupled, laid and open fire. The swift self-propelled guns of the tank destroyers and the self-propelled howitzers and guns, which are the artillery of armored divisions, speed on to the field of battle.

Malaria Present in U. S.

Not confined entirely to tropical countries, malaria is endemic in 36 of the United States, and in 11 states it constitutes a major public health problem. "The only states apparently free of indigenous malaria today are the New England states, West Virginia, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, and Nevada," according to a recent declaration approved by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Although exact statistics are not obtainable, an estimated two to four million cases a year are normal, concentrated among the South Atlantic and Gulf states and reaching up along the lower Mississippi valley. A million cases were reported in 1936.

Restore Old Shrubs

Any old shrubs can be rejuvenated. In the case of hedges, it is best to cut them within a few inches of the ground in the early spring before the new growth starts. Then as the hedge grows up, shear it about every six inches to make it bushy and compact. If they are individual shrubs, they can be rejuvenated by removing a third of the oldest wood each year, cutting it off to the ground. As the new suckers come up, it is well to pinch off the tips, half an inch or so, each time they have grown a foot. This will develop more side branches and prevent the long slender unbranched shoots that you will get otherwise.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Torpedo Junction

"Awash amidship!" "Sparks," the radio operator, has sent his final message from another U-boat victim. The lifeboats are pulling away from the doomed vessel as millions of dollars' worth of food, supplies and munitions settle to the ocean bottom in another allied catastrophe in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Millions of dollars' worth of material that was paid for by the dollars we saved and invested in War Bonds. Thousands of man hours have been lost.

We can have but one answer: work harder, save more and invest more frequently in War Bonds.

Bureaucratic Blight

Early in December 1942 this column offered a pointed protest to a federal law calling for the renegotiation of war contracts. What I wrote at that time aroused a deal of criticism. My article was frankly a forecast, saying what was likely to result from trying to enforce the Renegotiation Law. I am no prophet. I only wish I had been able to foresee the worst. The law is a year old now and a Senate committee has learned and told part of the sad story.

Discussing the needlessly rapid growth of government bureaus, I wrote: "The law governing the renegotiation of war contracts will (by itself) create four boards, many branch offices and possibly 200,000 jobs for auditors, investigators, etc." In this same connection I mentioned that an estimated 100,000 married men had been needed to fill the November draft quota; i.e., every man of draft age who took a soft government job exposed one more husband and father to military service.

Figures Disputed

After the article was published, an administration man whom I admire, a man of unquestioned competence and patriotism, assured me with emphasis that only a small fraction of the 200,000 jobs I had suggested would actually be created by the Renegotiation Law. I do not know how many men finally were assigned to this job of fighting windmills but the pace set during the first ten months indicates that between 300 and 400 years will be required for its completion. This is true if the report of the Senate committee headed by Harry S. Truman of Missouri can be trusted, and I think it can.

Hearing that an unnecessary government bureau (composed of fewer men than was first feared) is hopelessly swamped with details, would be too small a matter to worry anybody, except for the fact that the very existence of the law hinders the war effort. It keeps contractors in a quandary that slows down production of military necessities; postpones victory.

The Actual Figures

The Renegotiation Law authorizes and directs the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Chairman of the Maritime Commission, whenever in his opinion excessive profits have been realized, or are likely to be realized, from any war contract, to recover such excess profits and revise the contract price.

Ignoring what, to one who is not a lawyer, looks like an unconstitutional assignment of judicial authority to executive officers, the law made some 85,000 separate contractors subject to its provisions. At last count, 203 of these had been obliged to do-over their government contracts; too many, but less than 1/4 of 1% of the 85,000. Progressing at this rate they will get through some time before the middle of the next millennium unless, as I suggested in December, they build up an enormous bureaucracy.

Not Worth Doing

Careful study of this renegotiation work proves the law worthless as a revenue measure. Take the War Department as an example: Its auditors have refigured contracts totaling 8.6 billion dollars and claim to have recovered for Uncle Sam 300 million dollars. This looks big on the deceiving face of it, but actually 80% to 90% of this revenue would have come in quite automatically through the excess profits tax that was working satisfactorily when the federal "Renig Law" was passed. Net recovery therefore has been 60 million dollars or 7/10 of 1% of the amounts involved.

The worst feature of the ill-conceived affair is that manufacturers have to turn their attentions from production of military essentials and let our fighting men wait while they palaver with government auditors. One manufacturer of five-inch gun mounts for steamships said recently, addressing the American Legion convention, "We shut down our plants two weeks to take a fiscal inventory essential to a formal audit. The historic display prepared for the Price Adjustment Board blacked out our drafting room for more than ten days."

A Tragic Ending

He went on: "The time wasted by management in renegotiating has resulted in a loss of at least 100 five-inch Merchant mounts which Secretary Knox says are the finest anti-aircraft weapon in the world. These 100 gun mounts which were not produced because of renegotiation would have adequately protected 100 Merchant Ships from enemy airplanes and submarines. And, I guess, that at least forty more of these cargo ships would have reached Murmansk instead of being sunk if they had been protected by these five-inch guns."

A loss of 40 merchant ships which the speaker said cost at least one billion dollars with their cargoes, would certainly dwarf the contemporary effort of bullet-proof bureaucrats to glean 60 million dollars the tedious way from builders of war materials. A small increase in the corporation tax rate would have raised the money without putting a monkey-wrench in the works.

And now there are 840,000 men of draft age on the government payroll in civilian clothes, the Costello Congressional Committee has revealed.

Vegetables Supply Nutrients

Reduced civilian supplies of milk and cheese mean that we shall need to eat other foods rich in calcium or lime. Cauliflower supplies calcium in season, but for a year-round supply of this food element, it has been suggested that calcium be added to bread.

As supplies of meat and cheese are limited, vegetable protein foods must take their place on the dinner table. Beans, peas, cereals, all contain some protein. Though citrus fruits furnish much vitamin C, along with foods like tomatoes and green vegetables, much of the citrus vitamin C is wasted by being thrown away in the peel.

Nylon Screens

An entirely new window screen, chemically made, and containing no metal, will be available to American householders after the war. It is made of nylon, now used exclusively for vital military purposes. Having all of the good characteristics of metal screening, and many qualities besides, it can be produced in any color, it will not stain the sills, it will not corrode, it requires no painting, and tests indicate it has extraordinary durability. Pencil or other sharp-pointed objects can be shoved through it without damage; the strength and elasticity of the strands is so great that they come back into place merely by rubbing them with one's fingers.

"Tanks" in the Victory Garden ... BEETLES

Our soldiers abroad find enemy tanks tough customers because the ordinary weapons of war bounce off their hides and do no damage. In the Victory Garden the "tanks" are the beetles and any experienced gardener will tell you that their shells are tough and thick and especial care is necessary to keep control of the situation.

Most Victory Gardens will have in them some vine plants such as squash, cucumbers, melons, pie pumpkin and the like. This means cucumber beetles to contend with. They are the smart ones. If you spread arsenical poison on the surface of the leaves they detect it and go to a clean feeding ground. There are two kinds of cucumber beetle, one with a striped back and one with a spotted back but both are equally active on foot and on the wing and are quick to get away from danger if they suspect it.

There are two methods of attack—one is by cultivation at the base of the plant to destroy the eggs which are laid in yellow clusters—the other is to spray the beetles with a contact spray made of 2 teaspoonfuls of Black Leaf 40 in a gallon of water with enough soap added to make suds. You must strike the beetles with this spray and wet them down to kill them.

Another of the tough customers on your vine crop is the squash bug. The adult is almost immune to either stomach poison or contact spray and the way to control it is to kill the young in the nymph stage. About the only way to kill the grown bug is to crush him. This is a tough job if you have a large planting, so spraying to kill the young bugs should begin early if any adults are seen so that the youngsters will be destroyed as they hatch. A good Black Leaf 40 dust is also effective on the young. Directions for making this dust will be given later in this series.

Another insect with a hard shell is the potato beetle, sometimes known as the Colorado potato bug. This insect when grown is almost entirely safe from contact sprays but is easily killed by a stomach poison. Paris green, also lead arsenate, are the well established treatments here and quickly get control if the plants are well covered. Thorough spraying is necessary though. The young of the potato beetle are small reddish brown soft bodied slugs and are easily killed by Black Leaf 40. If the potatoes are being sprayed with Bordeaux for blight, Black Leaf 40 should be added. This will kill the aphid on the vines and will also kill the young of the potato beetle, and it is all done with one job of spraying.

The adult Mexican bean beetle lays eggs of orange-yellow hue, attaching them to the under-side of the leaf. These eggs hatch in a week or two and out comes a fat worm, which grows to about one-third of an inch long and half as wide. It is yellow, has black-tipped spines on its back and has a heavy appetite. In due time it passes through the pupa stage and in about thirty days after the egg is laid it becomes a full-grown beetle.

Control is attained through poisonous dusts applied to the underside of the leaves, or by adding three pounds of calcium arsenate to one hundred gallons of BEETLES should be killed when young—Adults are tough.

Bordeaux mixture when spraying for fungus diseases.

Spraying of poisonous material on pod or green beans should be avoided in latter part of the season when harvesting time approaches. Arsenic is, of course, poisonous to mankind, and will do harm if this material clings to the pods which are eaten. Thorough control early in the season is the answer on this kind of bean so that when the later weeks come around, there will not be Mexican Bean Beetles to contend with.

Again we say with a monotony that we hope will sink into the minds of every Victory Gardener—Spray early! Spray often! Hit the first bugs seen—Don't give them a chance to multiply.

Mountain Romance

By BARBARA BENEDICT
 Associated Newspapers.
 WNU Features.

DAPHNE slipped upon a loose stone and sprained her ankle as she and David were coming down the mountain. David had picked her up gently and carried her the rest of the way to the base. He called the hotel from the camp there, asking them to send up a car. During the drive, she sat leaning against him, and once he thought she had fainted.

A doctor was called that night, and the injured ankle bandaged. David sent Daphne flowers the next morning—and that was the last she heard from him. She was surprised that he didn't visit her. She was astonished, when, on the day following, she hobbled down to the lobby and he wasn't there to greet her. The day wore on and her astonishment became wonder and, later, curiosity. She asked whether he was in his room. The clerk told her that Mr. Stearns had gone.

Checked out? Daphne stared. Checked out? What? The clerk had exhausted his supply of information. Mr. Stearns had checked out, that was all. Daphne was stunned, alarmed, disappointed, faintly angry. At first Daphne tried to find some logical explanation for it. She went over in her mind every detail of their association since that day they had met, a month before, on the summit of Green mountain.

That was the beginning of their friendship. David told her that he was a construction engineer. What did he like to do? Well, climb mountains for one, and swim and play tennis and take long walks and sit on lonely mountain peaks, and meditate about the universe and life and the planets. Crazy? Well, if those things were crazy then there were two crazy people stopping at Mountain Glen. Because that's what Daphne liked. Thus did each find in the other so many things of common interest. There followed delightful, happy days of climbing and hiking, of tennis and canoeing, of whipping fast mountain streams and stalking wild game with cameras.

Days and weeks of it, each hour more enjoyable than the one preceding. Two people in a universe of wonder, watching life go by. To Daphne it had been a glorious interlude to the humdrum existence to which she was accustomed. Something that was making a lasting impression on her memory; something she would treasure always. And now the end had come. Sitting on the sun-drenched veranda of the Mountain Glen hotel, she went over every detail of all that had happened, tried to piece things together and arrive at a logical explanation of David's mysterious departure—and failed.

A week passed; Daphne's ankle mended. She was allowed to walk about the grounds. Frequently she looked up at the peak of Green mountain resolved that she would have to get away from it all. And so at the end of another week, Daphne packed her things, wired for a reservation and took the early hotel bus to the tiny railroad station. The train whistle interrupted her thoughts. She sighed deeply, turned away and picked up her bags. The great locomotive swept by and stopped, a white-coated porter descended the steps of the single Pullman car and dropped his footstool. Daphne was on the verge of swinging aboard when a pair of masculine legs came down the steps toward her, and she paused.

She waited, instinctively looking up. And then her heart turned completely over. The man was David, and he was looking at her queerly. "Daphne, you're—of course you're not." He turned to the porter. "Here, give me those bags. Miss Cardwell is not taking this train." "Why, of all the—"

He grasped her arm and hurried her across the platform. "Save it," he snapped. "I know the answers anyhow. Besides, I've got to ask you something." "Oh, you have! Well, why didn't you ask me two weeks ago, instead of running off so impolitely—"

"I had to run off—to summon up enough courage. You see," he stopped and faced her. "You see, I didn't have the nerve. That Platonic friendship of ours was all right, but it had its drawbacks. I just couldn't take it, I guess. After all, I'm only a man." Daphne's heart was pounding wildly, but she said: "Whatever in the world are you talking about?" "Just this, being a man, I fell in love with you. Well, it was a question of whether I'd better risk telling you and losing your friendship altogether, or trying to keep going as we were. Then that day you sprained your ankle and I had to carry you down the mountain and you rested against me all the way back in the automobile—"

"But I didn't sprain my ankle. That is, I didn't intend to. I meant just to twist it a little so you'd have to carry me—and then in the car I leaned against you because I thought that if I did—well, of course, being a man, you wouldn't understand those things. Men are stupid." Far down the track the southbound tooted a farewell to Mountain Glen. It seemed to remind David of something, because he stopped staring like a speechless idiot, and took Daphne in his arms.

Tile Must Be 'Chinked'
 Tile must be laid to a uniform grade, carefully placed, joints covered with strips of building paper, sod, stubble or hay, carefully back-filled and the outlet protected with iron bars to exclude small animals. If the swampy spot to be drained is more than 50 feet wide, branches from the main tile line will be needed. Hillside seepage is corrected by a cut-off tie placed on the uphill side of the wet spot. The tile must be carefully located so that the line will lie in a channel cut into the impervious layer causing the seepage and yet allowing slope for good flow and sufficient depth for cultivation.

Novelist's Life Uneventful
 Novelist Jane Austen (1775-1817) was born in Hampshire, England, the youngest of seven children in a clergyman's family. Her life was singularly uneventful. She was assiduous about her household duties and never permitted even her writing to interfere with her domestic chores. She never married. Her best known books are "Sense and Sensibility," "Pride and Prejudice," "Emma" and "Northanger Abbey."

Answer to Riddle
 BERKELEY, CALIF.—When do women talk the least? The Welsh had an answer to that puzzler, contained in "A Collection of Welsh Riddles" published by the University of California Press. The answer to the riddle is February, the month having the least number of days.

Shipping Skyrockets
 During the first year of our participation in the last war, approximately 1,725,000 measurement tons of army freight were shipped overseas, as compared with 10,474,923 measurement tons in the comparable period of the present war. The largest monthly total in the first-mentioned period was 450,446 tons, while in one month of 1942 the tonnage figure reached 1,554,127. These tonnages relate solely to United States army freight, and do not include any of the military supplies which have been furnished to our Allies.

Start of Walnut Vogue
 Restoration was the period following the Cromwellian era—dated by the restoration of Charles II in 1660 and ending with the Bloodless Revolution in 1688. It includes the beginning of the vogue for walnut and marked a throwing off of all the Puritanical ideas introduced by Cromwell. Furniture during this period still retained its straight rectangular structure, but it was softened by carving, ornamental stretchers, spiral turning, curves and scrolls, crowns and crests, French and Flemish influences.

Quarters for Rabbits
 Rabbit hutches, which may be built of scrap material, should be adapted to the requirements of two mature does. Outside measurements should be approximately 30 inches width, 20 inches height and 10 to 12 feet length. A V-shaped hay rack made of three-quarter inch poultry wire may be placed in the center to serve both compartments. A slide trough eight inches wide and one inch deep beneath the hay rack will hold grain and catch hay leaves. Self-cleaning type floors are best made with one by two inch slats, or with half inch mesh hardware cloth.

Novelist's Life Uneventful
 Novelist Jane Austen (1775-1817) was born in Hampshire, England, the youngest of seven children in a clergyman's family. Her life was singularly uneventful. She was assiduous about her household duties and never permitted even her writing to interfere with her domestic chores. She never married. Her best known books are "Sense and Sensibility," "Pride and Prejudice," "Emma" and "Northanger Abbey."

Answer to Riddle
 BERKELEY, CALIF.—When do women talk the least? The Welsh had an answer to that puzzler, contained in "A Collection of Welsh Riddles" published by the University of California Press. The answer to the riddle is February, the month having the least number of days.

Maggots Foe of Beans

Seed corn maggots, or bean maggots, are an annual threat to the bean crop. The maggots attack the bean seeds as they sprout and destroy the first two leaves, leaving stems with the halves of the bean seed standing in the field, unable to grow. Two or more generations of the seed maggots are produced each spring so that the only safe time to plant beans is between generations of the small gray flies which lay the eggs that produce the bean maggots. This safe period for planting beans usually comes the second week in June, but as it is short, growers need to have a local test to determine the exact stage of the insects before they plant their beans.

Shipping Skyrockets
 During the first year of our participation in the last war, approximately 1,725,000 measurement tons of army freight were shipped overseas, as compared with 10,474,923 measurement tons in the comparable period of the present war. The largest monthly total in the first-mentioned period was 450,446 tons, while in one month of 1942 the tonnage figure reached 1,554,127. These tonnages relate solely to United States army freight, and do not include any of the military supplies which have been furnished to our Allies.

Start of Walnut Vogue
 Restoration was the period following the Cromwellian era—dated by the restoration of Charles II in 1660 and ending with the Bloodless Revolution in 1688. It includes the beginning of the vogue for walnut and marked a throwing off of all the Puritanical ideas introduced by Cromwell. Furniture during this period still retained its straight rectangular structure, but it was softened by carving, ornamental stretchers, spiral turning, curves and scrolls, crowns and crests, French and Flemish influences.

Quarters for Rabbits
 Rabbit hutches, which may be built of scrap material, should be adapted to the requirements of two mature does. Outside measurements should be approximately 30 inches width, 20 inches height and 10 to 12 feet length. A V-shaped hay rack made of three-quarter inch poultry wire may be placed in the center to serve both compartments. A slide trough eight inches wide and one inch deep beneath the hay rack will hold grain and catch hay leaves. Self-cleaning type floors are best made with one by two inch slats, or with half inch mesh hardware cloth.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

"Smoke Eaters"

A battlewagon loaded with various explosives, bombs, torpedoes, oil and gasoline is not the safest place to be with a fire raging, so all but the smaller ships of our Navy are equipped with elaborate fire fighting apparatus.

It may be that this equipment never will be used during the entire course of the war, but it must be paid for out of the War Bonds and Stamps that we are setting aside each payday. U. S. Treasury Department

What So Proudly We Hail

Old Glory, with the flags of our Allies, England, Russia and China, waves proudly on many battle fronts these war-scarred days. It carries its message of hope and freedom to the humblest souls of the oppressed peoples in the conquered lands and definitely warns the aggressor that the day of reckoning is at hand. In the history of our nation the flag has had a notable series of traditions to endure it to the hearts of Americans. The battlefields of this war will add to its great glory. The bravery of America's fighting men recalls the words of Oliver Wendell Holmes: "One flag, one land, one heart, one hand, one Nation, evermore!"

'... For Amber Waves of Grain'

As if joining in the observance of Flag day, these shocks of grain, country roads and wide-cut swaths form a replica of the American flag in this composite picture of a peaceful countryside. The flag symbolizes the patriotic efforts of American farmers to wage their own war against the Axis by increasing production in 1943. Their combined efforts to grow the biggest crop in the nation's history will have an overwhelming influence on the conduct of the war. There is the doubly difficult task of feeding and clothing our own fighting forces and civilians and helping to care for our United Nations allies.

GOD'S EXCEEDING GREAT PROMISES

LESSON TEXT—II Peter 1:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—He hath granted unto us His precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature.—II Peter 1:4, R. V.

Growth in grace and in knowledge of Christ are as normal and expected of the child of God as bodily growth of the physical child. Tragic as is the failure of one to develop physically, it is even more distressing and sad in the spiritual realm. Yet it is a common thing in our churches, where only comparatively few believers even come to full stature in Christ, where more have only a partial growth, and some are forever babes in Christ.

God has made perfect provision for us, and has in His Word given plain and explicit instructions on how to gain spiritual development.

I. All Things Provided (vv. 1-4).

In the physical world we are able to provide, at least in some degree, what is needed. We also know where to find mental food. Spiritual provision can come only from God, and we find from these verses that He has provided not just a small portion, or a limited ration, but "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," through the knowledge of Christ.

The "exceeding great and precious promises" of God are the abundant portion of the believer. They are sure promises, based in the altogether dependable Word of God.

God's provision for us in Christ has made it unnecessary to look elsewhere. Here is escape from the world's corruption, the new nature in Christ, faith, grace, peace, power—all in Him.

The opposite is also true, that without Christ men have only the weak and disappointing help of men on which to draw. Of such foolish ones the Lord said through Jeremiah the prophet that they "have committed two evils: They have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water" (Jer. 2:13).

II. All Diligence Required (vv. 5-7).

There is something that the Christian can do to insure his growth in grace. He is to be diligent, that is, have an earnest purpose and zeal to go ahead spiritually. This call for application and endeavor, just as progress in any other sphere of life, and possibly more.

Faith is the foundation of all such growth and without it there is nothing on which to build. But on it, or better, "in" it, we have all these other Christian graces springing up, as we give "all diligence" to encourage their growth.

Notice the ascending scale. Faith leads to virtue, that is, courageous, resolute Christian character. Then comes knowledge—the intelligent understanding and discernment of truth. This is bound together by temperance, meaning self-control. Next is patience, that steady endurance which keeps going in spite of trial or disappointment.

The sixth note in this octave of graces is godliness, which speaks of piety, true devotion to God, and reverence for His name. Such a believer will love his brethren in all brotherly kindness; and that leads us to the high point of love (the real meaning of "charity," v. 7). Here love for God is obviously in mind, as the crowning grace of the believer.

III. All Eternity Assured (vv. 8-11).

We should look forward to that abundant "entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" spoken of in verse 11. There is such a thing as being saved "so as by fire" (I Cor. 3:15), slipping into heaven with nothing to show for our life as followers of Christ here on earth (read I Cor. 3:12-15).

God does not want for His people such an unseemly entrance upon eternity. Why should we be satisfied so to live that it may be true of us. Saved? Yes, but that is all! Are you satisfied with that prospect?

We should note, too, that this growth in grace will show itself in our daily life. It will keep us from being "barren (idle) and unfruitful" (v. 8). The Christian life must not be barren of true service for Christ, nor unfruitful of gracious harvest for Him. We are not on a sort of spiritual joy ride, sitting at ease as we speed on to the heavenly dwelling places.

Works do not save a man. We are justified before God by faith. But our faith is justified before men by our works of righteousness. Fruit grows on the living and healthy tree.

Observe that the Christian who lacks these graces (Do you?) is a nearsighted one who lacks both vision and grateful remembrance of God's loving-kindness (v. 9). How many members of our churches need their spiritual memory jogged and their spiritual eyes anointed with God's "eyesalve" (Rev. 3:18).

Old War Heroes Serve Nation in Present Conflict

'Rick,' Donovan and York Take Leading Roles in Second World War.

While new American heroes are in the making in the steaming jungles of the Solomons, in the frozen wastes of the Arctic, in the burning sands of Tunisia and in the air over enslaved Europe, many of the heroes of World War I are busily engaged at the battle centers as well as the home front today.

Although 25 years older, these veterans have once again answered the call of the country, some to don uniforms for active service, others to perform vital wartime civilian tasks.

Hero of one of the most stirring episodes of the present war in the Pacific was Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker who, flying on a secret mission for the army, was lost with his crew, and picked up on a life raft near Samoa after being tossed in the open sea for three weeks. One member of the crew died from the ordeal before the brave crew was rescued.

Rickenbacker commanded the 94th Aerial Pursuit Squadron in 1918, and fought his way through 26 air victories to become America's top ace in that war. For his exploits with the first AEF, Rickenbacker was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross.

Patterson Directs Strategy.

Robert P. Patterson, winner of the DSC for heroism in the last war, today plays a leading role in directing strategy as undersecretary of war.

Another civilian who occupies a key position in this war is William J. Donovan, who directs American psychological warfare throughout the world. As commander of the famous "Fighting 69th" regiment in World War I, Donovan was known as "Wild Bill" for leading his troops into battles and his contempt for danger. Besides winning the Congressional Medal of Honor, Donovan also won the DSC and DSM for his many acts of bravery.

One of the busiest men on the civilian home front today is Harry M. Gumbrel, 1942 national winner of the annual $1,000 given by Lewis S. Rosenthal, New York industrialist, as a part of the program of the Americanism Commission of the American Legion. Cited as the Legionnaire who performed the most outstanding community service last year, Gumbrel was decorated in the last war with the Croix de Guerre and the Order of the Purple Heart for "devotion to duty and heroic conduct under fire" at Verdun.

York Infantry Consultant.

Best-known Yankee hero of the earlier war is Sgt. Alvin York, who one day led a series of attacks on machine-gun nests, and finally returned to his lines with 132 prisoners. Today York, holder of a string of awards including the coveted Congressional Medal of Honor, is serving the U. S. army as consultant on infantry problems in training ground troops.

Also acting in a similar consulting capacity with the army is Sam Woodfill, whom General Pershing called "America's greatest doughboy." Winner of the highest decorations of six nations, Woodfill's most spectacular act of valor was in single-handedly knocking out a series of German machine-gun nests that were holding up an Allied advance in 1918.

Just like their more famous comrades, millions of other Americans who donned the khaki in World War I are again in the service of the nation—some at the world's battle stations, others at the war council tables, and most of them doing essential civilian tasks on the home front.

More Debt-Free Homes Seen in U. S. After War

PHILADELPHIA.—There will be more debt-free homes in the United States at the end of the war than ever before in the nation's history, in the opinion of Newell J. Nessen, president of the Quaker City Federal Savings and Loan association.

"Individuals today are not reacting in the same manner as they did in the last war," Nessen declared. "In 1917-18 heavy spending was the rule. Luxuries and non-essentials of all descriptions were purchased in large amounts.

"It was not unusual for a man to pay $10 or $15 for a silk shirt, but this time just the reverse is true. Instead of spending, people are saving. They are saving in war bonds, in savings accounts, even hoarding—and they are paying off their mortgages."

Nessen recalled that President Roosevelt urged that, as a curb against inflation, individuals make larger payments on mortgage principal and pay off the mortgage in shorter time.

"It is doubtful whether the President or any home-financing institution anticipated the response which followed," the savings expert continued.

"According to reports from various home financing groups, an unusually large number of mortgages have been paid in full this year. This number has been increasing steadily. In many other cases, substantial reductions have been made in the mortgage principal."

King's Messenger Returns to Horse

LONDON.—King George VI, sponsoring a save-gasoline campaign, has returned to the horse-and-buggy days. A horse-drawn brougham, driven by a liveried coachman wearing a black cocked hat, now is used to carry the king's messengers bearing documents and communications.

U. S. Seizes 50,000 Nazi-Held Patents

American Manufacturers Given Use of Formulas to Aid War Effort.

WASHINGTON.—Axis assets in this country are:

1. Being used in the war effort against the Axis.

2. Being handled in such a way that the Axis never will get hold of them again.

3. The potentially richest—50,000 German-held patents—are to become permanent property of the American people, the government promises.

The haul in physical and real property runs into billions of dollars, according to the alien property custodian here in Washington.

In one operation, for instance, the United States is taking over and Americanizing such German assets as the American branches of the Nazi industrial colossus, I. G. Farbenindustrie Aktiengesellschaft, commonly known as I. G. Farben.

In the last war the Germans had world-wide monopolies on dyestuffs and other essentials through this and other organizations.

Then, as now, the United States took over the factories and patents and secret processes where they could be learned, but after the war, the Germans—intent on reconstructing their monopolies through an international cartel system—were allowed to buy up certain companies to which these assets had been turned over.

Won't Happen Again.

Uncle Sam says he doesn't intend to let that happen again.

Patents are being licensed to American manufacturers for the normal life of the patent, but there are no exclusive licenses.

The alien property custodian, Leo T. Crowley, further pledges that "We shall take all steps within our power to make certain that vested (seized) enemy patents are made available forever to American industry."

The United States has seized German-controlled companies which make such items as sulfa drugs, biologicals, dyes and photographic materials.

The navy now is operating an airplane factory in New Jersey seized from the Germans. Former German chemical companies are producing nitrates in New York state and borax and potash in California.

Seized Axis holdings vary from Japanese-owned grocery stores and fruit farms to the huge interests of Fritz von Opel of the German automobile manufacturing family. Von Opel's property included a brewery, a chain of service stations, a tank car company, and two holding corporations.

Confiscate 29 Axis Ships.

Atabrine, the quinine substitute, was German-controlled.

Then there were 29 Axis ships—28 Italian and one German—which we seized. We got no Japanese ships, but took over important stocks of silk, Japanese investments and bank deposits, and even a few Japanese patents. An entire steel mill for a specialized purpose, ready for shipment to Japan, was seized in this country.

The German patents, particularly, often represented the latest developments in their fields.

Many of these German patents involve secret operations, but there are others like a new type of steel concrete reinforcement with twisted metal, instead of our knobbed kind, together with a new process of pre-testing reinforced concrete. There are fuel injectors, and machine tools like the one that enables us to turn out faster the giant crankshafts for big marine Diesel engines.

The Japanese patents seized by our government run mostly to cheap processes of making electrical goods.

Firemen Raise Pigs in Heart of City of London

LONDON.—On the site of a bombed-out shop in Berners street where the clergy used to buy their vestments, there live today 32 healthy, grunting pigs.

The explanation of this farm-yard in the heart of London is that the members of the Berners street fire station next door decided to help the food situation by raising a bit of bacon in their spare time. At least one of the firemen kept pigs for many years previously.

The pigsties were constructed out of bricks and timber from the bombed-out houses in the district and food was obtained by the firemen taking turns at touring the neighborhood canteens and hotels for scraps. There hasn't been any shortage yet—nor a shortage of pigs, either, for in 10 months the firemen have raised 50 to 60 porkers.

OUR PLAN

Titans roam the earth as Cyclops did of old, Nations bow to their decree, few are brave or bold, Out of the man of envy, is spewed malice and hate, Few can escape and none can shun the things that for them wait.

Who will arise in this our day, modern St. George, dragon to slay, Is there such one upon the earth who lives in this one day? A little mouse may timid be, but from that mouse elephants flee.

So standing at the door of Fate we wait triumphant fill, Shall Freedom furl her banner before the tyrant horde, Shall nations tremble at his tread or heed his hated word?

No, we who here united be will stand to the last man And when the battle smoke is brushed from out the sky You'll find Old Glory waving there so proud, so high That none of tyrant brood will dare to change our plan.

MORE MONEY INTO BONDS

The average American family "should and must" be investing 25 per cent of its income in War Bonds by the end of 1943. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., said in announcing a new "streamlined" bond campaign. "Of the 45 billion dollars still necessary to complete our war financing needs for 1943," Morgenthau said, "at least 18 billion dollars, or almost 25 percent of the national income for the remainder of the year should come from purchases of bonds by individuals. From those workers earning $1,000 to $5,000 net, who will have seven-eighths of all the current available savings, 25 cents of each dollar is not too much to expect. In fact, they should and must invest more if our goal is to be met."

Keep uncooked, well-cured meat in a dark, cool, dry, airy place. Leave wrapping on ham, bacon, and other meat until ready to cook.

Don't let milk stand out. Keep it in the colder part of the refrigerator. When cooking, take out only milk and cream needed. Let rest stay cold.

Don't pour leftover milk back in the main supply. Keep odorous foods—fish, onions, cabbage, melons—away from milk.

No single food is as important in the diet as milk. Buy milk quantities large enough to meet the needs of your family and keep it in the best possible condition until used.

Use cottage and other soft cheese quickly, for they soon spoil. Hard, cured cheese, well wrapped, may be kept longer.

Every man and woman should be today a law to himself, herself, a law of loyalty to Jesus' Sermon on the Mount.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Keep cooked meat covered. Chopped and sliced meats spoil more quickly than meat in the piece. Cut or chop just before using.

It matters not what you are thought to be, but what you are.—Publius Syrus.
