Many Bills of a General Nature Presented to Legislature

that the Council Bills will pass, or even that they can not be improved by amendment. It does mean that a Convention" is here for the week and considerable amount of time, effort and consideration has been spent on such Bills before their introduction.

Thirty-one of the Council Bills were introduced in the House and thirty-two in the Senate. This week, and for the several weeks following, this letter will be devoted principally to a discussion of those bills proposed by the Council.

WIRETAPPING H.B. 1. At the present time the Courts of Maryland, in criminal cases, permit the introduction of evidence SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS MEETS obtained by wiretapping. The Federal Courts do not permit such evidence to be used. Certain groups are of the opinion that wiretapping violates certain Constitutional guarantees and are seeking to have the use of this type of evidence curtailed.

H.B. 1 provides that wiretapping evidence should be permitted only in such cases where the tap was made under Court order, much in the same manner as our law requiring warrants to be obtained prior to an arrest.

It is my own opinion that this is another instance in which the Constitution is being used to protect the wrong class of people. Only those engaged in criminal activity have anything to fear from wiretapping, and the restrictions placed upon the use of wiretapping will aid only this group. I might add that in one of the many hearings held on this subject was there any evidence of an abuse of wiretapping by any of our police departments. And if there is no abuse, then what is the necessity for this pill?

It is my hope that the Bill will be defeated.

Unemployment Compensation H.B. 2 increases the benefits paid to the unemployed in Maryland. Some

In B. 8 provides that these sessions shall be limited to budgetary matters only, and further provides that the question of elimination of categories. (2) and (3) shall be submitted to the voters at the 1954 election.

I would like to recommend support of this amendment when and if it appears on the ballot. Tax Distribution At present our Counties and incor-

To the best of my knowledge no town in Carroll County will be effected, but if there are any a change of tax policy is advised. Otherwise all State contributions from the above revenues will be cut off after July 1, 1953, the effective date of this Bill.

Dunbar expressed her thanks for the birthday card shower given her. The number up to that time was 85 and later it grew to 109. At the conclusion of the business she was given another surprise. Mrs. Merle Ohler presented her with a beautiful white cake with five lighted blue candles. She read an appropriate poem expressing the appreciation of the society for Mrs. Dunbar's devoted service. The cake was the gift of the other January babies.

BENEDICTION

In his farewell address to the nation over radio and television networks, President Truman reviewed his seven years in the biggest job in the world, at which he had put in 17 hours a day, signed his name 600 times a day, and had to take time out to greet thousands of people. "There is no job like it on the face of the earth", he said. "I want you to realize how big a job it is, not for my sake, I'm stepping out; but for my successor".

He was speaking, he said, from the historic presidential desk in the White House, where, as he worked, he had not felt alone. "You", he said, "were working with me". He wanted his hearers, and all Americans, regardless of party, he declared, to pledge their fullest support to President Eisenhower-as he had done.

As President, he said, he had traveled 135,000 miles by air, 77,000 by rail and 17,000 by ship-"but", he added, "the mail always followed me". No matter how long documents of state might travel around the Government bureaus, they finally came to him. "There is no place else for them to go". The decisions must be made by the President.

"I have no political statments to make", said Mr. Truman, "I just want to say goodbye". But he followed this with a somewhat reminiscent outline of the Truman triumphs and policies that could hardly fail to suggest that Missourians may yet have another chance to mark a ballot for him.

in closing, he referred to the job of being President. "I tried", he said, "to give it everything that was in me".

With that, no one can disagree .-National Industries News Service.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

NORWALK, CONN., HOUR: "A quarter of the country's gross output of goods and services is the result of government expenditure. If once more Americans assume individual responsibility for 'attaining' their share of domestic tranquility and welfare, their government can concentrate on what alone it can provide, the common defense6.....It is cheaper by billions to support ourselves than to support a huge government in order that it may support us."

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., POST: "Today flood-control and river and harbor projects do for the nation's lawmakers what post offices used to do. In other words, they supply the pork that legislators slice off for home consumption.....The coming to power of a new administration this month provides a fitting excuse for reviewing this entire program with the intent of putting it on a sound economical footing."

THE NEW YORKER: "A photograph in the Times the other morning showed the Declaration of Independence and the United States Constitution on the move—a couple of nonsemi-precious documents being shifted from the Library of Congress to the National Archives building. A military escort attended them, an armored ear bristled in the background, bagpipers squealed their delight and kindled the blood. How uncomplicated it looked, the physical act of guarding our greatest treasures! And how serene life would be if the essence of the documents could be guarded so easily, so precisely, and with such gay props as bagpipes and such exact ones as machine guns! Ah, liberty-you look so simple crossing town!"

The weather took it's cue from the Democrats on Tuesday and gave it's support to the Inaugural ceremonies by behaving in a friendly manner. Although the atmosphere at times was hazy, the temperature was spring-like and the sun appeared at times to beam sympathetically down on the colorful proceedings not always has the weather been in such a helpful mood, for Inaugurations have been held in blizzards downpours could be a support of the support of t in blizzards, downpours, gentle sun-shine and zero weather. Millions of Americans were able to eavesdrop, by means of T. V., on the nauguration of President Eisenhower. I imagine they liked what they saw. For both the incoming and outgoing President was a man of dignity, of courage, of awareness of the destiny of our country and of great humility for the common cause of hunan rights the world over. It was nost assuring for those who had been earful of the future to hear our new President speak in terms of the world. rather than just our own United States. For thoughtful and realistic people know that our own welfare and happiness is dependent in no small neasure upon the welfare and happiness of the peoples of Europe and Asia. We should, therefore, be thankful that our new President is worldminded.

It seems that each Inaugural parade becomes more lengthy than the proceeding one. Naturally each State wants to participate and impress upon the onlookers their particular part n the formation of our country. And well they should, for watching the parade on Tuesday was seeing our whole history from Washington to the present, parade down Pennsylvania Ave. As much as one enjoys this spectacle, some consideration should e given the President, for he is supposed to stand and review the entire parade. President Eisenhower must have stood at least four hours. For nim it was no task, because as a soldier he was used to long parades and reviews. Some future President may not take it so well and a time limit should be set for future parades, or lse permit the President to sit down while reviewing one.

Mr. Truman upon leaving Washington Tuesday for his home in Independence may well have recalled to mind the greeting given by President Buchanan to President-elect Lincoln in 1861. President Buchanan said: If you are as happy, my dear, sir, on entering this house as I am on leavng it and returning home, you are the nappiest man on earth." And indeed Truman did look very happy, for well he might. For almost eight years ne and his family had lived in the White House. Some of his efforts were greatly misunderstood but I personally believe that history will place his name, not only among the great Presidents of the United States, but also among the great men of the world. The Trumans will be missed. Mrs. Truman knew her limitations, but she was always a gracious and cind first lady. Margaret is a young service, 7:45. Rev. Arthur Pastor..

An old, old, wood range was throwing out welcome heat and it was real cozy—the kind of warmth that relaxes one inside as well as outside, and makes for conversation. In two hours, I learned from twin sisters about 70 in age, the full history of Bonneauville, including its tragedies. Whenever you need a stone-mason, you can find one there All the old houses are made of stone and some of them were standing when Pickett was making his charge at Gettysburg. Incidentally Bonneauville is just about 8 miles from the Battlefields. There were many fine pieces of china and brass at the sale, but it took the auctioneer two hours to sell the black-smith and mason tools so that we had to leave before the things we were interested in were sold. Antique dealers were a dime a dozen so we consoled ourselves that we couldn't have paid their prices if we had stayed. Even though one comes away from such a sale empty handed, meeting friendly people and hearing their town's history adds an interesting day to anyone's life.

Incident At Valley Post

By TED SHIMER OLD MAN BATES came out of the hills early that spring driven by an impulse to inspect his new grandson in the little crossroads settlement of Valley Post.

As he drove up the rutted street, he noted several changes since his last visit in the fall and waived) - Minute airly to old ac-Fiction quaintances, at the same time noticing a few empty seats made of packing cases in front of the blacksmith shop.

He duly visited his daughter whose husband was foreman at the saw mill and was unimpressed by his squalling, redfaced grandson. He guessed he expected much more, but maybe next year the little toddler could walk down to the village with

That afternoon Old Man Bates sat in his familiar seat of honor in front of Claney's General Store and, after holding forth on the merits of his own "diggins" far up in the hills, listened to the news.

About three o'clock in the afternoon the village was set agog by the appearance of a low black sedan touring through its main street. Automobiles were not too common in Valley Post with an occasional ramshackle Ford or clattering tractor drawing acute interest. Old Man Bates was eaten with curiosity and concealed awe.

He sat perfectly still as the sedan drew to a purring stop in front of the bank. Its rear end was mud spattered and splashed as witness to the fearful roads leading through the wilderness of virgin timber to Valley Post. With engine purring and its exhaust making little white puffs in the cool spring air, it was a symbol of latent power.

TWO young men stepped from the - car and one of them surveyed the bank with an expression of acute disgust on his dark features. Old Man Bates took an instant dislike to this one. The other one was a smiling, blond, young man in an impeccable gray suit. He smiled at Old Man Bates and said, "Hello. Pop, how'za about watching the horses?" Old Man Bates grinned toothlessly back at him and nodded.

Both men entered the bank and Old Man Bates squinted at the big, purring car with a child like curiosity. Finally he rose. Then with some finality as if having reached a great decision, he walked slowly to the car his hand clutched about a small

A moment later there rose a fusillade of shots, and Old Man Bates pushed further behind his potato barrel as the bank door slammed open. The dark young man stood there a moment surveying the street and scowling, a smoking pistol in his right hand and a small satchel in his left. He beckoned with the pistol and the blonde young man followed him slowly to the car. The dark man cursed and slid under the wheel of the car. He made several deft but futile movements on the dashboard and Old Man Bates heard the urgent whir of the starter. The car would not start. Down the street the Constable's office banged open and soon rifles and shotguns began to converge on the black sedan.

Old Man Bates joined the crowd of townsmen and worked his way to the rear of the car. Someone saw him stoop and retrieve an object from its rear end. A shout went up and soon men were pounding his slight form and shaking his hand. The Constable shoulddered his way through and pulled the two young bandits behind him.

"What's all the hullabaloo about back here," he demanded.
Old Man Bate's son-in-law put his arm around the slight shoulders.
"Pop here stopped yer bandits cold. Yes, sir, he stuck a potato in the tall pine of their car.

in the tail pipe of their car. "Darned smart work I calls it." Later when Old Man Bates was taken to his Daughter's house he dawdled his grandson on his knee. His son-in-law inquired, "Pop, where did you learn that plugging up a tail pipe would stop a gasoline engine?" Old Man Bates returned the candid unblinking gaze of his grandson and replied, "I ain't as old and dumb as some folks think. 'Sides! saw no sense in all that thar steam escaping from that tailend—so 1 plugged her up?"

MODERN ELECTRIC RANGE

How corny can you get?

Maybe you think because I'm young and a newlywed that I don't know much about cooking. Don't let the old jokes about new brides fool you. Nowdays, a lot of us find our way around a kitchen as well as old timers—maybe better!

School taught me about cooking and I've learned more since starting housekeeping. For me there's only one modern way to cook and that's on an electric range. It's not just that it's cleaner, safer, more convenient and less expensive. The really big advantage is that it's automatic.

Because I never have to guess temperatures I know the things I cook will turn out right every time. And I sure do like being able to set the controls and leave my stove to do the cooking while I go down town.

When I hear someone talk about other ways of cooking being "modern," I wonder if they still think horses and carriages are better than automobiles. Please don't think I'm just a fresh kid. I know what I'm talking about and I know you'd like modern electric cooking better, too.

Two Hardest

Lesson for January 25, 1953

WHEN YOU see a pole-vaulter sailing like a bird over the high bar, it looks like the easiest thing in the world. When you see a watchmaker putting a hairspring into place, or a good cook whipping a cake together, it looks simple. But the simple things are seldom as easy as they look. So it is in the Christian life. It can be made to sound absolutely simple; but it never is. And it never is easy, either. Perhaps the two hardest things sound the easiest. Jesus made it plain that without them one cannot call oneself a true Christian. One is humility and the other is forgiveness. How easy they sound! But try them. They will test your spiritual muscle.

Can This Be Right?

There is another paradox about these two indispensable qualities of Christian living. They are not only much harder to practice than they sound, but they sound worse than they are. What is the quality which all Americans advise, imitate and practice with all their might? Isn't Dr. Foreman it aggressiveness, the go-getting spirit? Humility sounds like the opposite of that, and so we seldom hear it praised, at Rotary luncheons, in political speeches or in school textbooks. Even in church we don't hear much about it. Advising people to be humble sounds like advising them to aim for the bottom of the ladder, not the top.

As for forgiveness, his too goes against the natural grain. We can forgive people for mistakes, we can forgive them with good grace when they haven't hurt us particularly. But when other people have actually done wrong, serious wrong, and done it to me or to some one I love, how then can I forgive them? Won't I be lowering myself to their level if I forgive? Won't it be the same as saying that what they did was quite right after all? Shan't I be calling wrong, right? Isn't forgiveness turning right and wrong upside down?

Humble Like a Child

Let us look into these matters a Take humility first. Jesus' illustration of humility is not some down-and-out lazy person without dreams, desires or ambitions. His model is the child. What is the humility of a child? It is the quality of teachableness. The child is not set in his ways. He is trustful. Even the liveliest child, even the most stubborn, will believe what he is told, and has a neversatisfied curiosity about everything. You can't tell the college sophomore much; he thinks he knows enough as it is. But no child thinks he knows everything. He is not suspicious, cynical, sophisticated, superior. He can grow.

Call the roll of the world's truly great men; they all have this quality of childlikeness, whether a greatly daring person like Scott, the explorer of the Antarctic, or a greatly wise person like Abraham Lincoln, or a greatly imaginative person like John Bunyan. All forms of greatness have in them the quality of the childlike. And the special humbleness that is essential for Christians is not only this, but humility before God. For the one sin that keeps one farthest away from God is the very opposite of childlikeness, namely pride.

Seventy Times Seven

Consider that other quality, the forgiving spirit. Does this really mean calling wrong, right? We should remember that forgiving is not the same thing as condoning. You condone a wrong when you act as if it were not a wrong at all, really. When God forgives us he does not pretend that we have done no wrong, and when we forgive others we should not confuse wrong with right. Condoning means approving; forgiving does not. You can condone without love; it takes love to forgive.

But nowhere in the Bible is it said that God forgives, or that we are expected to forgive, apart from repentance. The hard and unrepenting spirit makes forgiveness impossible. Forgiveness is not a one-sided affair. It calls for humility on both sides, for forgiveness is a restoring of fellowship, and that cannot be done in pride. But is forgiveness a sign of weakness? Wait till you have been insulted, injured or wronged, and you will learn the truth about it.

"Why do I have to go anyway, Mom?

"To learn, Timmy. To distinguish evil from right."

"You sure do talk funny, Mom. Mike's Dad talks swell. He tells us stories about soldiers, and guns, and all kinds of things."

"Timothy," she said in a shocked "haven't I told you not to go in that house."

The fight against polio goes on night and day in our great research laboratories. Tremendous strides toward eventual victory over this dread disease were announced recently, but years of costly work remain ahead before this goal can be realized.
