GRASS ROOTS OPINION

BROWNSVILLE, PA., TELE-GRAPH: "Accidents with firearms cost more than 2,200 American lives every year. As a cause of fatal accidents, gunshot wounds rank fifth, following traffic accidents, falls, fires and drownings. These facts should give us fair warning as we move deeper into the hunting seasons.

BOONE, IOWA, NEWS-REPUB-LICAN: "Recently a balloonist over Minnesota reported absolute silence at an altitude of eight miles. We'll agree that some of the campaign shouting must get up at least seven and a half miles high."

LIBERAL, KAN., SOUTHWEST DAILY TIMES: " Longevity is the ideal today. In 1920 there were 6.4 million children orphaned in losing one or both of their parents, while last year the number dropped to 2.7 million. The decline, cut largely by improved medical science is even more significant when considering the great increase in the number of children under 18-a total of 55.5 million in 1955 compared to 40 million in 1920."

ARLINGTON, WASH., TIMES: "A healthful political climate for private enterprise is essential to progress." NORWALK, CONN., HOUR: "COME UNTO ME, ALL YE THAT LABOUR AND ARE HEAVY LAD-

EN, AND I WILL GIVE YOU REST." -MATTHEW 11:28. A child in its mother's arms dismisses fear and weariness. Christ was a carpenter. He honored labor. Labor did not make men untouchable according to his teaching. There are no slave labor camps in Christian lands."

KICKOFF DINNER HELD

The Carroll County Association for Retarded Children held its 1956 cam-paign kick-off dinner, Thursday evening, Nov. 8th, at Sunn-brook farm with approximately 250 volunteer so-licitors, guests, and members present. Ray C. LeGore, program chairman, was master of ceremonies, and in his opening comments he gave special recopening comments he gave special recognition to the following people who have been active in the program for the retarded: Fern L. Smith, Lyndon Myers, H. S. Albright, Wagner Miller, Mrs. John Carmody. Mrs. Ann Wagner, Mrs. Miriam Hollinger, Mrs. James K. Langdon, and the teachers, Miss Louise Bankert, Mrs. Mary Myers, and Mrs. Allgire and their assistants, Mrs. Milson Rill and Mrs. Arthur Shipley.

Group singing was led by Neal Herring with Mrs. Curvin Seitz as accompanist followed by the invocation by the Rev. Stephan Melycher, Pastor by St. Joseph's Rectory, Taneytown

Honorable State Senator Sherman E. Flannagan in extending greetings commended the Association on its accomplishments in the two years since its birth on Nov. 11, 1954. Fern L. Smith, president of the Association introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Jane Cooper who teaches a special class in the Kenwood High School. Mrs. Cooper is well-known for the outstanding job she does in this field this field.

Mrs. Cooper described the plight of the retarded in the years past. They were put in institutions where there was little or no rehabilitation—and literally forgotten— or they were hid-den at home with great shows. Show den at home with great shame. She pointed out that the needs of the many other afflicted persons—the blind, the deaf, the crippled were met long before attention was turned to the retarded. Now that the trend is toward the rehabilitation of all the the retarded. Now that the trend is toward the rehabilitation of all the afflicted, the peoples of all nations are beginning to think in terms of what can be done for the mentally retarded. "We can do much," says Mrs. Cooper," "but we don't know how much can be done for every day we are learning something new." These children have many abilities—the ability to see, to walk, to run, to use their to see, to walk, to run, to use their hands—they only lack the ability to think as clearly as others.

Have you ever thought of how many jobs are available about us that require little reasoning ability, asked Mrs. Cooper. There are many. The retarded can use his abilities to advantage in these jobs thus finding a place for himself in the community where he belongs. She mentioned several businesses and industries in Baltimore that cooperate by offering job placements for these children.

In conclusion and in answer to the question, what can we do for the retarded child, she stressed that should be recognized as an individual with one handicap and helped to use his many abilities; he could be given understanding, kept in the community like the blind and deaf he can find his place, enjoy home and community life, and make his contribution to this complex world in which he lives.

Mr. Franklin S. Gilds, Principal of the Westminster Elementary School, showed local slides of the summer showed local slides of the summer camp and class room activities in the three special classes operating in Carroll County under the Board of Education. He also showed the national film, "No Less Precious."

Fern L. Smith, campaign chairman, briefly commented on the great need for funds to be solicited during National Retarded Children's Week, November 11 through 22, after which the benediction was given by Rev. Stephen Galley, Pastor, Union Bridge

Methodist Church.

During the course of the evening Ray C. LeGore, expressed special appreciation to Elmer Frock of Sunnybrook Farm for his benevolence and cooperation in planning the Kickoff Dinner and to Stewart Dutterer for flowers for the speaker's table.

THIS BEATS ALL!

A prisoner was brought before the judge, charged with beating his wife. The judge, being in a sympathetic mood,said: "Do you admit that you would beat your own wife?"

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE

The visitor to the mountain region, you know Your County?" arranged by Mrs. Edgar G. Barnes and Dr. Arthur G. Tracey and conducted by Dr. Theodore M. Whitfield. Questions pertained to various first events, such as land grants, roads, elections, establishment of churches, school houses, mills, and various industries. Early place names such as Mutton Town for Bark Hill and Noodle Doosey for Manchester the visitor to the mountain region, finding a ancient cabin with an equally ancient character taking his ease on the rickety porch, was asked to sit awhile an' rest his bones. He accepted the proffered rocker gratefully. The old man wordlessly puffed his pipe. Finally he broke the silence. "Stranger," he said, "Yore sure a-wearin' yorself out. Whyn't you rock with the grain?"

It may take a Suex canal to throw ne world into a state of confusion and chaos, but it only took the first issue of report cards from our local school to throw our small community into a tate of bewilderment and resentment. When school opened in September we knew that there was a change of policy in our school system but it wasn't until last week that students and parents realized how drastic the change was. Heretofore students were allowed to muddle through high school subjects and at the end of the allotted time they were handed their diplomas.

NELL HARPER had bent over backwards to be an honest woman all her life, and no one could have made her believe that she would be hob-nobbing with crime that lovely autumn day.

She waited breathlessly at her farm-gate for the bus. It had been ages since she'd had a day to shop and browse around in town, but now that Tommy was in school along with the older ones, she was o - Minute free to go. Fiction "Here you are," Henry had said, handing her a twenty-dollar bill last night and she'd felt like a millionairess! "But don't buy the Brooklyn bridge," he'd laughed, knowing how easy she was. The bus was crowded and she sat next to the woman in the green hat. She settled her own navy one over her brown hair and brushed the specks from her good blue suit. It would be fun lunching in town, though she hoped she'd meet someone she knew. She'd never been one for going about the city alone.

The bus was crowded and she sat next to the woman in the green hat.

"Going shopping, I suppose?" The green hat leaned toward her in a friendly nod, noting her shopping bag.

"Why yes, though to tell the truth I'm almost frightened—I haven't been to the city for so long," she confided shyly.

"I feel the same way, dearie. I'm going in for new bedroom curtains and I hardly know where to go. Could you suggest-'

"Why, that's just what I'm looking for," Nell declared, and they began discussing curtains like a couple of kindred souls. The bus was rumbling into the city now, and they got off at the best department store and went up the elevator together. "Now isn't this nice!" Green Hat was exclaiming. "Here I've been dreading this, but with someone else, it's fun." She was a trifle ing, but a good-hearted soul, Nell was sure. She could overlook the cheap ankle-strap red shoes and the frayed imitation al-

When the curtains were bought, it was noon. "What say we have lunch together?" Green Hat insisted. "I know a cheap place around the corner where you get spaghetti and meat-balls for a song.'

Nell had pictured something exotic for lunch-Chinese food at Ming Toy's or chicken salad at a tea-room, but since the curtains had cost more than she expected. she should economize. She'd charged the curtains, so she'd have the twenty to splurge this after-

"There's a ladies' room right here, too." Green Hat ushered her in. "Here, I'll hold your purse and jacket and then you can hold mine." It certainly wasn't the kind of place where a maid stepped up to watch your things and hand you a linen towel.

But when she took her own purse and the other one and went to put on fresh lipstick, she noticed her wallet was gaping. Horrors! The twenty-dollar bill wasn't there! Quickly she opened the other purse and glanced in. Yes, there was a twenty carelssly—or else hurriedly -crumpled into a corner.

Well! So that was the sort of person she had fallen in with. Henry would be furious when she told him. She was always being taken in. And she had no desire to lunch with that type-a common, cheap thief! She put the bill in her own

When Green Hat came out and reached for her purse, Nell had her story ready. "I'm dreadfully sorry, but I've suddenly developed one of my migraine headaches. I wouldn't dare to eat any lunch. I'll have to go right home."

"Oh, now that's too bad! And I was looking forward to a nice time this afternoon-maybe take in a show or something. I sure am sorry, dearie. Shall I take you to the bus?"

Nell declined and fled. At home she unloaded her packages and then went to the desk to put away her purse. There in the drawer, exactly where she had laid it when Henry gave it to her last night, was the twenty-dollar

Top-Dress Old Alfalfa Fields

For Higher Yields, Savings on Seeds

The life expectancy of old alfalfa fields can be increased by several years when fields are top-dressed liberally with phosphate-potash fertilizer and boron if necessary, according to Midwestern agronomists.

C. J. Chapman, University of Wisconsin extension soils specialist, points out that if the plant food is put on this fall it will help the alfalfa resist winter kill and the nutrients will be there in the spring to build next year's crop.

Chapman says farmers get sev-

For best results in giving new life to old alfalfa stands, Midwestern agronomists recommend topdressing with 300 to 500 pounds per acre of a high potash fertilizer such as 0-10-30 or 0-9-27. On many soils it is advisable to use a fertilizer containing boron. The agronomists emphasize that a soil test can help tell what nutrients are needed and can be a good guide in determining the amount and ratio of fertilizer to use.

Healthy Cow Belches; Even If So Quietly

A cow or beef steer is very polite-even if unintentionally so. It belches almost inaudibly. And it belches a great deal. It has toa really ambitious cow will chonk from 100 to 200 of grass in a day of grazing. When she can't belch, that means bloat. And bloat can mean death.

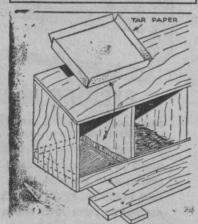

To amplify the quiet cow-belch and to listen to other inside-animal sounds, University of Minnesota veterinarians use an electronic stethoscope which "listens" at the animal's side and relays the sounds to an amplifier unit and loudspeaker. The once-quiet burp comes out a thunderous "york!"

Bloat-too much gas on the stomach—is a common problem in ruminants. Ruminants are complex-stomached animals such as cows and sheep, whose stomachs are in four parts, the first and largest called the rumen.

Bloat is most common in dairy cows and beef cattle. Gas develops while the animal is grazing. It usually is eliminated the same way as in man-by belching. But bloat results if, for some unknown reason, the animal cannot relieve itself by belching.

University veterinarians induce bloat experimentally and then try to restore the animal's belching ability by drugs or other treatment. They need the instrument to listen for the welcome belch which means "success."

GOD IS MIND-MAN ALSO IS MIND-

Why is it that men do not understand man? This, men have wondered since Time began; But, the answer is simple, when we understand, The laws which govern the Spirit land.

There are numerous things about which we don't know; But they all have a purpose, here below— The wind and the tides, the salt in the sea, Are among God's gifts to humanity.

The great mountains, so stately and grand, Not only beautify and protect the land; They also direct the winds which blow And send the rain-cloud where it should go.

Everything God has made is a servant to be To enchant and delight humanity;
Why men do not worship—One so grand Is another thing I can't understand. At the very beginning, let me say,
Man must be perfect in every way;
Few people know of God's marvelous plan
By which to make a perfect man.

It is the only way mortal man could be Made fit to live through eternity;
For, in a few score years these frail bodies of ours
Droop and fade just like the flowers.

But God, for man, has found a way
By which to live through the endless day;
Not one of His children shall ever be lost,
Regardless of what his salvation may cost.

Reincarnation is God's gracious plan By which to produce a perfect man; A single lifespan too short would be To teach him the laws of eternity.

The scripture tell us there is but one mind; And, that mind is God, I also find; And, since that is true, it is not hard to see Why men, with each other, fail to agree.

The physical I and the spiritual me
Are at odds, because they lack similarity;
Like water and oil they refuse to unite; And for that reason, continue to fight

In everyone's body there must be A spiritual I and physical me; And the two must be in perfect harmony Before they are fit for eternity.

Physical man is also a product of mind; But, from his Creater he is inclined To think for himself; and, go his way, So, that is the cause, of our worries to-day.

Mortal mind has been compared to a frog; Without the sub-conscious, it's as dead as a log; All it knows is what little it sees; So with things which are real ,it seldom agrees.

Another great cause of our worries, I find, Is that "men of the earth" do not understand mind; Mind is One; but, has two component parts; And, from that Trinity, everything starts.

Yes, God is Mind, the Great Father of all Who dwell on this "terrestrial ball"; He "declares to man what is his thought; And, unless he obeys Him much trouble is wrought.

God implants Himself in man at birth; So, He is his Personal God on earth; He is your life, your strength, shall always be Your Guide and Protector through eternity.

It is the Father, the Son, and the body, called me, Which forms the "Blessed Trinity," And this Trinity rules all the regions of space, Since God is with us in every place.

That God is Super-mind, it is true, Then the sub-conscious mind must be you;
For God does not speak to physical man;
To speak to him through you is His plan.

The sub-conscious Mind is God's potential son, So it has been since Time begun; And, for him, He has also set a goal To build a suitable home for the soul-body.

Is the test his two bodies must pass; In a body you shall spend the endless day; So, it must be perfect in every way. This may seem like a hard thing to do, But Jesus did it, and so must you; To live when a thousand years are as one day, One must have a body which shall not decay.

As face answers to face in a glass

The tree which stands in the storm-cloud's path

Is made much stronger because of its wrath; Its roots learn to face the winds which blow; So, it is with mortals, here below. Adversity, also, like the wind which blows

Prepares a man as, onward he goes
To enjoy the wonders which he shall behold
In that wonderland, the great city of gold. Men often grumble when they can't have their way, But a day is coming when they shall say; How Great! How Good! How Wise; was He

Who trained us to live in eternity! When you learn all the lessons on Truth, "Your bones shall be filled with the voice of youth", Your heart, like the heart of a bird shall be As you journey along through eternity.

Christian Persons

Lesson for November 18, 1956

W HICH is more important, what a person is or what he does? According to Jesus, what a person is, is the main thing. These two cannot be separated. On the one hand a person does what he does because he is the kind of person he is; on the other hand a person cannot be the kind of character Jesus describes, without doing. The ideal character, as Jesus draws it, is not to be grown in a hot-house nor in a cellar like Dr. Foreman mushrooms. An ideal person develops only in a world of persons. But let us see. Every one of what we call the eight "Beatitudes" or "Blessed's" needs very careful study. All one thin column can do is to call attention in a very general way to three facts about Christian persons as Jesus pictures them here. Perhaps no actual Christian every fully matches the picture, the ideal; but the more a Christian resembles this description, the more these three facts will be true about him.

A Christian Is Happy Again and again in reading the Bible we come to something that shows what nonsense it is to think of the Christian life, the God-pleasing life, as a sort of prison existence. God's requirements are not like chains, weights, handcuffs, barbed wire, electric fences. They are what makes life truly free and strong. When Jesus describes the ideal-God's ideal-character, in these Beatitudes, he begins every sentence with the word which though often translated "blessed" was the regular ordinary word for "happy." Some people get the whole business of what it means to be a Christian, sadly twisted. They think: What a Christian has to do and be is not pleasant; but he grits his teeth and goes through with his hard task bravely, knowing that God will one day reward him for his life of martyrdom. Not at all. According to Jesus, the ideal character is the one that finds real joy in becoming more and more like our Father in heaven. Your real athlete is the man who enjoys sports, not the man who goes out for athletics only so as to earn a "letter." Your real artist is the person who loves to paint or write, not the man who writes or paints only because he has to, to make money. Your real cook is the man or woman who enjoys cooking, not the one who feels like a martyr over a kitchen range. So your real Christian is the one who is happy being one.

Christian Life Flows Outward

A second fact about the Christian life is that it is not self-centered but flows outward. It is not like a swamp into which streams flow without ever finding an outlet; it is more like a mountain lake, fed by fresh springs and kept fresh because its water flow on in a sparkling river. A person cannot be truly good if he lives to himself and for himself. Consider how many of the Beatitudes could be true of a hermit living on an island apart from other people. Very few, if any. A selfish Christian is a contradiction in terms. "Love thy neighbor as thyself" is a commandment older than Christianity; but Christ him-self approved it. "What do I get?" is not the Christian's first question, but "How may I help?" This does not mean that a good Christian is a kind of meddlesome Mattie, running around sticking his finger into other people's affairs. It does mean that in the countless human contacts which he has everyday, as well as in his whole life-plan, he will not think of the world of men as merely an orange which is his to squeeze

Out of Line?

Now a man from Mars might think that Christians would be the most popular people in the world. Everybody would love them and want them around. As a matter of fact, we have to remember that Jesus himself was bitterly hated and finally crucified. In the Beatitudes themselves there is the prediction that "all manner of evil" things will be said of Christ's followers. The simple, ugly reason for this is that this is a world still mostly out of line with God, which in other words means out of line with Love. The true Christian will always seem somewhat out of line with this world. If all men speak well of you, there must be something wrong with you.

SHORT STORY

Lifeboat At Sea By Lyle Pace

CAPTAIN BEN LITTLE, of the Merchant Ship Providence, scanned the Atlantic with his binoculars held tight against his eyes. For an hour he had been doing that, trying to make up his mind what it was that caused a speck to appear, and then disappear. He'd had his radio operator send out a call, but as far as he knew there were no ships within a hundred miles of the Providence. 9 - Minute He turned and Fiction beckoned his first mate. "Take a look, Mr. Worth. Maybe these old eyes are playing tricks on me. But I could have sworn I saw something moving out there." He handed the mate the glasses.

Worth adjusted them. Moments later he handed the binoculars back to the skipper. He shrugged.

All Afternoon Captain Little swept the sea with his powerful glasses.

"Maybe, sir. But I can't be

All afternoon Captain Little swept the sea with his powerful glasses. And always there was that small speck on the horizon. When he finally went below to his charts he still could not get it out of his

But there was something he could do to satisfy his curiosity. He motioned to a seaman and in seconds the signal blinker was in operation, throwing its strong beam out over the water.

In rapid succession the signal declared: PROVIDENCE-MER-CHANT-ARE YOU RECEIVING?

But there was no answer, only the darkness and the light from the Providence. Captain Little sighed and went below

The next morning he was on the bridge as the sun broke out of the horizon and began its steady climb. Once again he picked up the glasses and squinted into the already dispersing haze. This time there something out there!

"Mr. Worth!" he exclaimed. "Look at this!"

The first mate hurried to the captain's side, quickly focusing the glasses. When he put them down he said: "Shall I halt the engines,

"Yes! And put out a boat. Take six men with you. Maybe it's already too late."

Quietly the master reproached himself for not believing what his eyes had told him yesterday, when he had first spotted something out there. A night on the ocean for the occupants of a lifeboat could mean life or death.

Hours later, it seemed, Worth's boat returned only now it was filled with other men and four women. Little hurried down to the main deck and watched as his seamen helped the new passengers aboard. Finally, one of them, a tall, lean man dressed in a yachtsman's uniform came up to him and wrung his hand.

Captain Little smiled. "I'm glad I was around, sir. It must have been quite an experience."

"Indeed it was. Captain Little, isn't it? Your mate told us the name. Well, I'm George Conroy. And I did own a sixty foot cruiser, but I'm afraid the Jennie-B has joined a lot of other vessels at the bottom of the sea.'

"It must have been quite a night out there," Little said. "I spent quite a few nights in a lifeboat Conroy looked surprised. Then he smiled. "Well, you're one up on me. I don't know what gave you the idea we spent a night in that lifeboat, but it doesn't matter. The Jennie-B caught fire early this morning. Thank goodness we were in that small boat only a couple of hours.

Captain little could not believe it. But he had seen something yesterday afternoon. He was positive that it was the lifeboat.

"Tell me Mr. Conroy," he said. "Did you see my signal last night?" Conroy shook his head. "Why, no. I don't understand." Captain Little said nothing. He could not understand, either. And if he had been anything but a sea captain it would have amazed him. But stranger things than that have happened on the broad, sweeping Atlantic. Any sailor could testify

It's true: Blue Cross protection is difficult to match. Not only does it protect you, as a subscriber, from the worry of unexpected hospital bills, but it protects your family as well, on a family membership, and keeps you protected after age 65, even though you move, change jobs, or retire.

Key to Blue Cross: "Service Benefits"

The heart of Blue Cross is hospital care. Blue Cross's way of providing for the hospital care you may need is "service benefits." These are, to put it simply, agreements between Blue Cross and the member hospital to provide the hospital care you need. All of the hospital's regular services are included in this agreement.

The emphasis, you see, is on care—not cash.

Blue Cross does not give you dollars to help pay your hospital bills. Inst ad Blue Cross, through its "service benefits" pays the hospital directly for the services covered in your membership. You don't have to file a claim, or wait for reimbursement. Dollar payments are often not enough to cover hospital bills. Blue Cross records show that Blue Cross "service benefits" do often cover a subscriber's hospital expenses in full.
