"SPICE 'N' EVERYTHING NICE"

With all my heart, I wish you every morning
A smile that shall last until the next day's dawning.
I wish you health—life's greatest wealth;
I wish you always near so that I may help to cheer
Each future day and in some way—help to bring you happiness!

It seems so strange that many individuals will be reluctant in expressing for whom they are going to vote. That one I cannot understand. There should be discussions about the individual for Nomination in all groups and all types of people who are eligible to vote.

The nice part about being "INDEPENDENT" is that one can always vote for the best man and that is exactly what I have done each year since I was three seven!

One of the most brilliant men and grand leader to have been nominated would have been the Honorable Ambassador HENRY CABOT LODGE! Of course, he is most valuable with the U. N. but think what it all would mean. I was talking to a gentleman this morning who had been over to Washington listening to a speech by our Vice-President and this gentleman told me that Nixon did not have a note from which to read and spoke for fully one hour and that he was terrific and a grand leader.

Hope, Folks you did not miss the show called, "In The Presence of Mine Enemies" on T.V. with Charles Laughton. The story? A Rabbi and other residents of The Warsaw Ghetto lived, existed, suffered and fought back against their Nazi Oppressors! That should be repeated and everyone should see and hear the story. There were 60 MILLION HEBREWS placed in the gas chambers in Germany and many escaped to jump in the river instead!

Folks, anyone who ever speaks one word against the Hebrews or slurs them in anyway, shape or form is not a Christian!

My Minister used to get up in the Pulpit and state to the Congregation that it was bitter jealousy. There is not any big organization that is not backed by the Jewish people—regardless. Have you ever noticed the Jews do not desire to fight nor do they have delinquent children!

More and more cigarettes are being made and other companies started to get into the big swing. Seeing one of those men who fill up the case in the stores with all brands, I approached him and asked which is the biggest seller and to this came the quick reply as he looked at me and said in much astonishment, "Why, CAMELS of course! Always has been and always will be!"

Those cute "Whimsies" are going big as many

FARM INCOME AND FARM MACHINERY

The small drop (about 2 per cent) in gross farm income that occurred in 1959 as against 1958 has been given all kinds of attention. It has been blown up as both a political and an economic problem. For instance, some have forecast that as a result of the drop, farmers will severely curtail their purchases of mechanized equipment.

Farm equipment makers do not share this pessimism, and with good reason. The income decline has not been universal, geographically speaking. Many farmers in various areas are doing as well or better than before. Their purchasing power is unimpaired.

More important, farm economists understand that first-class mechanized equipment is an investment, not merely an expenditure—and an essential investment. For instance, there were 30,000 fewer farm workers in 1959 than in 1958, and that downward trend is expected to continue.

In most farm operations, the cost of human-labor has become prohibitive. Modern machinery can do a superior job at far less cost. As evidence of this, automation has been going forward at a rapid pace in U. S. agriculture. Farm machinery assets, valued at 1940 prices, increased 135.9 per cent between 1940 and 1959.

Finally, the trend is for the number of American farms to decline, while the average acreage per farm increases. Again, machinery makes this possible.

Successful farming and mechanized farming are virtually synonymous terms these days. That will remain true, regardless of minor ups and downs in farm incomes.

THE POWER OF ADVERTISING

As a young man, George Romney, now one of our best known industrialists, went from Utah to Washington, D. C., to seek his fortune. What happened is told in a Harper's book, "The Story of George Romney" by Tom Mahoney which is being hailed by reviewers as one of the best recent business biographies.

One morning, George noticed a male-help wanted advertisement in a newspaper. It simply said stenographer at a room in the Senate Office Building. Out of a hundred candidates, he landed the job working for the late Senator David L. Walsh of Massachusetts. This started a career which a few years ago made him head of American Motors Corp.

With such an incident in his background, it is natural for George Romney to be interested in newspaper advertising. In fact he is so interested that his company spends a larger share of its advertising money in newspapers than any other automobile manufacturer. As those who follow the financial pages know, the results have been very happy for him.

"The outstanding success story—in fact the only automotive success story of 1958—was that of American Motors," noted Editor & Publisher, the trade magazine. It spent about $4,300,000, more than two-thirds of its advertising budget in newspapers. The company was the only one with greater sales than the previous year and had profits of $26,000,000.

Last year Romney's company spent $8,507,433 in newspapers, virtually double the year before, and had profits of $60,000,000. In the compact car field, where it was once alone, his company now has a host of competitors. But it is still putting the bulk of its advertising in newspapers and in April had a greater share of the greatly expanded 1960 compact market than any other company!

This is not surprising. When we seek something as vital as a job or want to make a purchase as important as an automobile, it is only natural that we turn to our newspaper where the essential information is recorded in black and white and usually with a local address at which we can do business.—U. S. Press Association.

GRASS ROOTS OPINIONS

OCONTO, WISC., REPORTER: "There is still a loud and persistent clamor to turn over more and more responsibilities to Uncle Sam. This embraces not only welfare but medicine and education."

"One cannot rule out the value of coordinating effort in many fields on the national level. But let us make certain that we, the private citizens, do not abandon our continuing responsibility and place it in the hands of bureaucrats."

"Those who are concerned about Soviet Russia's progress in certain fields ought to keep in mind that they not only stole our atomic secrets but several of our effective industrial methods—methods that evolved from the American free enterprise system, not the bureaucrats."

WYNNE, ARK., PROGRESS: "More than 3000 people are killed each year by farm work accidents—more than in any other major industry."

"More than 11,000 farm residents are killed each year in all types of accidents."

"Farmers are getting scarcer all the time. Let's not waste them through accidents."

ALEDO, ILL., TIMES RECORD: "Reports reaching the free world in ever greater volume from the Iron Curtain countries indicate that 15 years of sustained attack by the Satellite states on Christianity and 30 years of such atheistic crusade by the USSR have failed to eliminate Christian mores from the hearts and minds of the people."

"In all cities of Russia, large and small, churches were filled to capacity in spite of the government's general disapproval of religion...."

"The free world can well be heartened at the manner in which the chained millions of the Communist world have with dignity and forbearance answered the atheistic, decades-long crusade of the Soviet propagandists."

MILES CITY, MONT., STAR: "That wartime excise tax on all domestic passenger transportation, first imposed by Congress in 1941 to discourage travel by those who weren't obliged to go somewhere, is still effective...."

"Last year the Senate voted overwhelmingly for its full repeal, but niffnawing in the House resulted in a compromise—reduction of the travel excise from ten to five percent on July 1st, this year. But this leaves the job only half done."

"It continues to depress the travel industry, the air, bus and rail lines, in many cases cutting taxable earnings to the point where the Government loses more in income tax than it gains from the travel tax."

ALMA, MICH., RECORD: "Contrary to a sometimes heard observation, newspapers must have support if they are to serve. There is rarely a week goes by that we don't have more news than we can publish because of a lack of advertising to support it. There is rarely a week goes by that someone doesn't suggest that we expand this way or that. We appreciate these suggestions and are keeping them on file for future reference. Yet the fact remains that these needs cannot be accomplished without recognition and support of the people."

LAWRENCEVILLE, VA., NEWS: "The Internal Revenue Service recently ruled that certain advertisements by private power companies, advertisements which discussed public power companies could not be deducted as a business expense by the private power companies...."

"We...believe that the private power companies have a perfect right to...decide what is legitimate advertising expense and what is not—not the Internal Revenue Service of the U. S. Government. If the Service can do this to the private power industry, it can intimidate many other major industries and curtail freedom of expression and opinion to an alarming degree."

A spokesman for the Citizens Public Expenditure Survey states that "if the federal government does not start paying off the present debt, in the next 30 years we will pay interest charges equal to the $284 billion principal of the debt—and still owe all of it."

Apples Are in Season

HERE'S A DELICIOUS NEW VERSION of the popular lemon chiffon pie filling mix, made with apple juice and pecans and decorated with whipped cream and sections of a crisp, crunchy red apple. Extra chopped nuts may be folded with the whipped cream, if you want a really scrumptious dessert topping.

The nicest part of this party pie is its ease of preparation because it's made with the "no-cook" chiffon pie mix (about 6 minutes preparation time). Make it up in the morning and put it in the refrigerator to chill. Then, just before serving time, whip up the cream, slice an apple in sections and add the finishing touches—a delightful treat for this time of year.

APPLE-NUT CHIFFON PIE

- 1 package Jell-O Lemon Chiffon Pie Filling
- ½ cup boiling water
- ½ cup very cold apple juice
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup toasted chopped pecans
- 1 cooled baked 8- or 9-inch pie shell

Place mix in a large, deep mixing bowl. Add boiling water and mix thoroughly. Add very cold apple juice and beat vigorously with rotary beater or at highest speed of electric mixer until mixture is very foamy—takes about 1 minute. Add sugar and beat until filling stands in peaks—takes 1 to 3 minutes. Then fold in pecans. Pour into pie shell. Chill until set, about 2 hours. Serve with whipped cream in which extra chopped pecans have been folded and sections of fresh apples.

Note: Store leftover pie in refrigerator, covered with inverted pie pan.

Boys' Clubs Growing In Grass Roots

Currently celebrating "a century of service to youth," the Boys' Clubs of America movement was launched at Hartford, Conn., in 1860 when New England mill-town residents founded "The Dashaway Boys Club." There are now more than 550 Boys' Clubs in some 370 communities throughout the country.

In mid-Summer, the United States Post Office will salute the 100th anniversary of the Boys' Clubs of America movement through the issuance of a special commemorative stamp, 120,000,000 of these four cent stamps will be issued.

As a "building-centered" youth-serving organization, the Boys' Clubs of America believe in bringing the Club to the boy and vice versa. A full gamut of physical, mental, arts, crafts, hobby and other fitness services are housed in some 550 Boys' Clubs with a replacement value of more than $150,000,000.

New national headquarters for the Boys' Clubs of America, to be opened in mid-year, will be known as "The Herbert Hoover Building" in honor of the former president who has actively served BCA as board chairman for more than 25 years. The five story structure opposite UN Headquarters in New York cost more than $1,000,000.

Each member Boys' Club of the Boys' Clubs of America is completely autonomous. Locally built, locally supported through United Fund, Community Chest and various service, civic, fraternal, labor and other groups, these Clubs help build Juvenile Delinquency as an antidote to juvenile delinquency.

NEW LIGHT - AFTER DARK

American homeowners everywhere are finding that there's nothing like a summer evening outdoors. And home builders say that this year's biggest exodus will be a quick step from the house to the backyard, porch or patio.

Yet, for the man or woman who likes to read his paper or a good book in the evening, the darkened patio is like a forbidden wish. He needs light after dark.

Outdoor lighting is easier to obtain than many people think. You can buy your fixtures or make them yourself. They can be used to illuminate wide areas or be focused down to a spotlight. Colored bulbs add warmth and gaiety.

Modern aluminum lamp posts and external lighting fixtures combine utility with beauty. These range from portable spike poles, equipped with a rubber extension cord, to permanent post types. They are waterproof and inexpensive. In fact, enterprising tinkers have found it easy to devise "personality" or "tailored utility" lights from standard aluminum stock.

Poles for patio lighting can incorporate a shelf about 30 inches above the ground which will serve as a table for snacks and beverages.

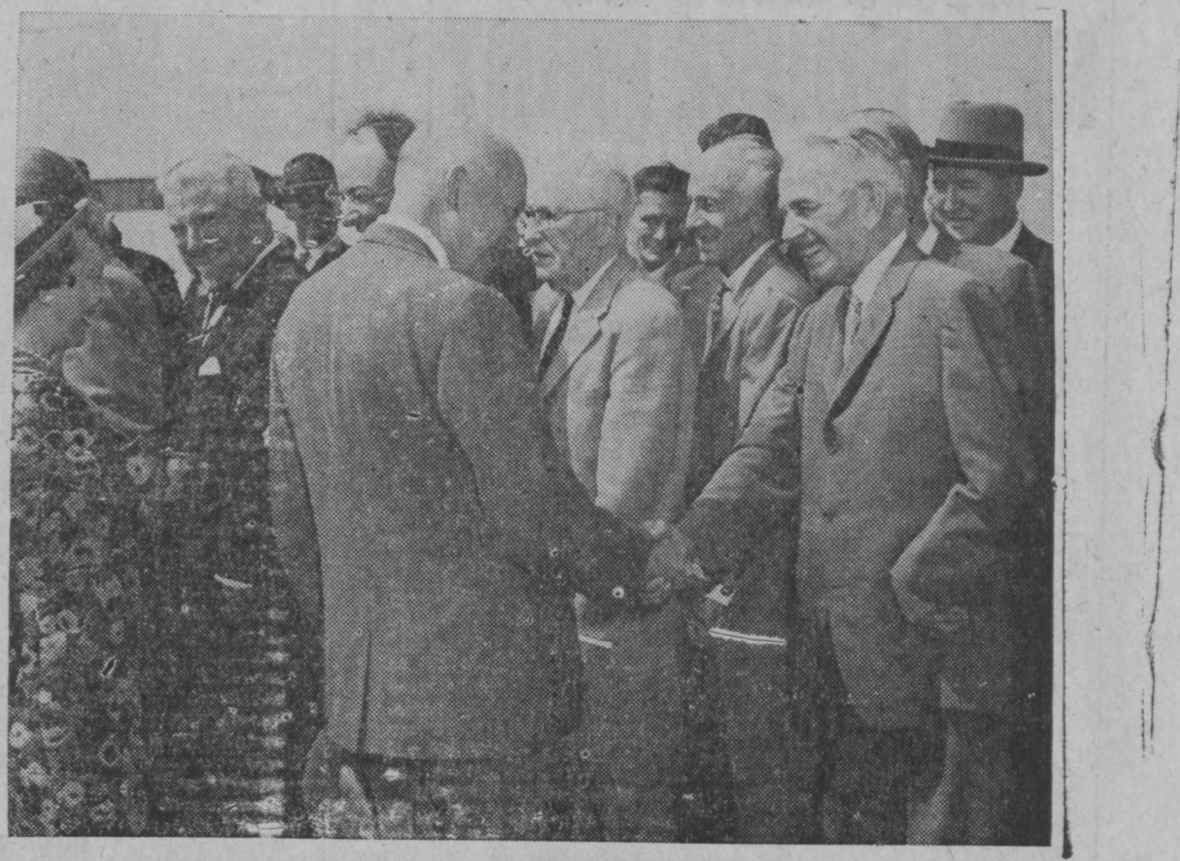

The idea of outdoor lighting is just one of many ideas and suggestions found in a new booklet called "Home Owner's Guide to Better Living... With Aluminum," offered free by Aluminum Limited, one of North America's leading producers of aluminum. Other ideas include: growing strawberries in a barrel, making a terraced garden for herbs; barbecue treats, smoke cooking, and others.

Dad's Day Dream: A Real Fish Fry

Mother's work will be easy on Father's Day when she plans a real day of fun for him. And what better fun than a day out-of-doors doing the things he likes to do best? Fishin', for instance. After Dad's brought in his catch, Mom can fry them to a delicious golden crisp on the new Bernz-O-Matic propane-fueled outdoor cookstove... her Father's Day gift to him (and herself, too!). She and Dad will both love it because there's no gasoline to spill; nothing to pump, prime or fill. It's so safe even the kids can take a turn at cooking on it. Who says Mother can't have fun on Father's Day, too?

Lieutenant Veditz checks what's cooking for dinner as Mrs. Veditz takes a call on her kitchen phone. She also has a phone in her bedroom.

Mrs. Veditz of Salisbury, Maryland, is the busy wife of a Maryland State Police officer, mother of three youngsters, cub scout den mother, treasurer of her church group and active in the P.T.A.

Her telephone is almost as much a part of her active life as she kept for two weeks proved the time, money and traveling a telephone can save.

Keeping the diary was fun. Looking through it later reminded her of the ease with which a telephone reaches others, the extra hours it gives a person for activities—and the money it saves.

If you think the experience of Mrs. Veditz and her family unusual, why don't you keep a telephone diary of your own? See if your phone doesn't pay for itself in convenience alone—and in money savings as well.

The Golden Rule

Lesson for June 5, 1960

WHAT IS THE Bible driving at? What is the essence of the Bible, what is it that can't be thrown away or left out? Jesus put the answer to this pretty strongly once. He did not quote any verse from the Old Testament (his Bible). He gave a single sentence of his own, and said "This is the Law and the Prophets." He never said as much about any other sentence.

No wonder the Christian church hit on the name "Golden Rule" for this sentence which Jesus boldly identified with the Law and the Prophets. It is indeed golden. But "rule" can be misunderstood. Most rules are designed to save people the trouble of thinking. Applying rules is a scientific procedure. But this "Golden Rule" is of such a nature that applying it is an art, not a science. So far from saving any one the trouble of thinking, it demands thought. The Golden Rule, in the life of a stupid and selfish person, produces only a mess, and can do great harm.

Intelligence

At least three things are necessary in order to make the Golden Rule work. What is this Golden Rule? "Whatever you wish that men would do to you, do so to them." This is a challenge, first of all, to intelligence. It is really a principle, not a rule. It does not tell you to do any particular act. It does not describe any particular situation. It is open to being misunderstood (as all wise sayings are) by the foolish and the stupid. What could we say of a man who would give his wife a shotgun just because he would like to have one?

Imagination

The Golden Rule calls for imagination as well as intelligence. If the man who gave his wife the shotgun would try to put himself into his wife's place, he would ask, "If I were my wife, what birthday present would I want?" And he might remember that she had said something about wanting new bathroom curtains. Or, if he had an even stronger power of imagination, he could think his way into her mind and guess at something she had never so much as mentioned—an extension telephone, or a trip to her old home. Whatever you would wish people to do to you—if you were in their place—do so to them. That is the real meaning of this rule.

Sometimes it calls for the kind of imagination that can look into the future. Parents and teachers need this greatly. You can perhaps imagine what this child, this student, wants you to do now. He wants you not to punish him. He wants you not to require hard work of him. Now you can let the child do as he pleases without lifting a hand against him, and that will suit his down to the ground. But ten years from now you—and he too—may sorely wish you had spanked him good when spanking would do some good. Likewise the teacher can be easy on the class—with the consequence that they learn nothing. Years later they may fail in competition with those who once studied under harder-driving teachers. Then they will wish the teacher had put on the screws.

The Christian Heart
The Golden Rule calls for something beyond, or rather undergirding, intelligence and imagination. Its right use calls for the Christian heart, that is to say, a heart in tune with the heart of Jesus, a heart wherein dwells the Holy Spirit; a heart sensitive not merely to the wants of others but to their needs. Jesus himself gave an illustration of this when the paralyzed man was brought to him by the man's four friends who let him down through the roof. The first thing Jesus said to him was "Your sins are forgiven." Some people would have criticized Jesus for that. Where was any evidence that this man wanted his sins forgiven? Would his friends think a trick had been played on them? A forgiven cripple weighs just as much as an unforgiven cripple, doesn't he? But our Lord knew what the man needed most of all was forgiveness. Only a Christ-like heart can see through what to need.

Civil Defense Work Described

I wish to relate some statistics of civil defense structure relative to our state of readiness. I hope that when talking about civil defense we are talking about a program which is a deterrent to war and therefore a force for peace, all of us have the greatest desire for peace and it is my judgment that home front preparedness is one of the steps that will prevent war in the world. An unprepared home front is an inviting target for an enemy and weakens our diplomats at the bargaining tables of international negotiations. Not only in Government but industry and business as well, are pursuing the civil defense program. We are happy to hear about these concerns which are interested in the welfare of our nation as examples we can cite Public Utilities and the banking, food and transportation industries, this is as it should be, business and Government working together.

So I will confine my remarks to our present non-military defense readiness from a national standpoint, the basis for improving this readiness and what we are doing to improve it. You're all familiar with the threat we face, so I won't go into that, you know, and I know that a nuclear assault today against the 50 most important metropolitan areas of the United States, and that includes Baltimore and Washington would bring 55 per cent of our population and 75 per cent of our industry under direct attack. What are we doing about it at the national level? Should an attack occur today, our operations plan, facilities and personnel are closely tied into the distant early warning system, conelrad would be used as one means to alert the public and to broadcast instructions. 45 Federal agencies are prepared to move to 92 locations sites near Washington as soon as warning is received. These same agencies also have selected 315 relocation sites in the field for their staffs—all outside primary target areas many of them are in Maryland. Our national staff operations are dispersed to facilities in Battle Creek. A sub-basement provides some fall out shelter protection and we are improving that. Eventually we hope to have all Regional Headquarters in secure sites underground. Congress last year appropriated fund to build the first one at Denton, Texas for Region 5, each regional headquarters has plans to expand in an emergency—drawing heavily from the regional offices of other Federal agencies, Military Units, Industry, Colleges and Universities, and other private groups—we have an active executive reserve and staff reserve. Our capability for detection and measurement of radiation is substantial.

Today more than 720,000 radiological instruments are in the hands of State and local government agencies and schools, we have an additional 80,000 instruments in reserve, 80,000 persons have been trained to measure radiation, and in reporting procedures. 7,000 qualified instructors are instructing additional thousands, daily. 7,000 high school science departments are now using radiological defense kits distributed by OCDM and an additional 8,000 kits are currently being distributed to other high schools, colleges and universities for use in their science courses. Municipal and State Police, Fire and Health departments have developed radiological defense monitoring capability, as well as many other agencies of local, State and Federal Governments, and the field establishments of Federal agencies. The ODM National staff Colleges; the Instructor training centers at Manhattan Beach, N. Y., and at Alameda, California, and the fifty-three or more State and local training facilities throughout the country must be considered as part of our readiness situation because, every day, these institutions are adding to the number of persons with the skill and knowledge essential to management of war-caused or natural disasters.

Perhaps the most tangible evidence of our present state of readiness is provided by Federal stockpiles of critical and strategic materials to meet the requirements of possible emergency situations. We now have more than seven billions of dollars represented by these stockpiles, which include 73 kinds of materials, 216 dispersed locations hold great supplies of crude rubber, minerals and metals, necessary for defense production, other strategic materials, machine tools and so on, in 43 scattered locations we have more than 219 millions dollars worth of medical and engineering items which would be in greatest demand in event of emergencies such as we must anticipate. A source of stored food items that would be available for our use in emergency is the great inventory of commodities acquired by the Federal Government under price support programs and stored largely in commercial stockpiles by the commodity credit corporation. More than 1600—200 bed emergency hospitals are in place, ready to be put into operation in relatively safe locations of small towns in buildings such as town halls, schools, churches, armories and other structures that are suitable for hospital use. An additional sixty to seventy of such emergency hospitals are presently being used by states, on a loan basis for training 12 of these were loaned to states of region 2. All are ready for use in an emergency if need should be indicated for their distribution, we have some 42,500 masks tested against such lethal agents as nerve-gas ready for use and now held in strategically located warehouses. We also have about 5 1/2 million doses of atropine, the counter acting drug against nerve gas, similarly dispersed for detection of agents of chemical warfare we have 5000 detection kits immediately available in both Federal and State locations.

It should be noted that many manufacturers of medical supplies also maintain stockpiles of their products, on their own premises, for possible emergency need of civil defense, such products include vaccines and other medicines which are rotated in schedules to constantly assure their freshness and potency. In the engineering field we have 45 stockpiles, dispersed throughout the nation 13 of them in to maintain pure water supplies and water distribution, since their establishment, these materials have on a number of occasions been used for natural disaster relief. At this moment the State and local communities of the nation have well over $164,000,000 of dollars worth of engineering equipment radiological defense items, medical and communications equipment, ready for operation all use, that has been purchased with half the cost borne by the Federal Government under the matching funds program.

Federal surplus property has also provided States and communities with motor vehicles, trailers, rescue and fire-fighting equipment crash trucks communications equipment, electrical generators and other items worth a total of more than $92,000,000. These items have tremendously increased the national status of readiness but have placed little financial burden on communities where they are now available for emergency service.

The national plan for Civil Defense and Defense Mobilization has given us solid ground upon which to establish the facilities of readiness for an emergency. All agencies of the Federal Government now understand their responsibilities and function clearly. All of the States in Region 2 specifically have completed their own operational survival plans, these plans as originally anticipated, will never be complete and final enough to cover all contingencies of a possible enemy attack, with weapons that are constantly vary in their effectiveness of manner of delivery. We are certain, however, that if an enemy attack should be launched against this nation—or if some great natural calamity should occur, we do now have the guide lines for effective action, to prevent, minimize, repair and recover from injury and damage.

I think we can take much heart from the progress that has been made. But instead of pausing to shake with ourselves, we must get on with the job. Our first objective, as defined in section 2 of the national plan is "to deter either limited or general war." The present state of readiness, as I have been outlining it, mainly demonstrates our capability for handling the consequences of war. As such, it is a strong deterrent, but the greatest effectiveness of our efforts will be realized only when we have convinced the great bulk of our citizens that their own, personal readiness, can be the deciding factor of an enemies decision of whether or not he dares to attack this nation.

Governments in America cannot dictate what the individual citizen will do, at our respective levels of the governmental structure, we have done much of what is necessary, and within the scope of our authority, and will continue to plan, and make our own arrangements for the protection of lives and property, and to reconstruct our economic life, in event the blow falls. Yes we will amplify our stockpiles of resources, we will increase the effectiveness of our present warning capability, we will provide for continuity of government, the preservation of essential records, we will care for the injured and displaced, and do all of those other things that are within the province of government.

This will be of little avail, however, if the individual does not himself, assure personal survival, the evaluation of past "Operations Alert", and the findings of the Rockefeller report indicate that the great majority of casualties from nuclear warfare, 77 out of each 100 casualties would result from nuclear fallout, not from the direct blast or heat of a weapon explosion, this is the reason why our future readiness activities must strongly accent family fallout shelters, because, if an enemy should realize that his weapons would be only 23% effective, instead of 100%, in the immediate target area—approximately 3% in the nation at large—in a massive nuclear offensive he would certainly be reluctant to attack.

The Federal Government again is taking leadership in the program of Family fall out shelters. Federally financed family fallout shelters have been opened as prototype at Wheaton, Md., and Thomasville, Ga. Other prototype shelters are being built with Federal funds for State sponsorship, within the Region. Larger community-type shelters also are being financed within Region 2 and in other regions of OCDM. Contractors are becoming interested, and at least making provisions for Family fallout shelters in new home designs. The Federal Government will take the lead in fallout shelters in all new public building construction. This program is directed at the first objective of the civil defense mission—as a deterrent to attack. Other measures of readiness are complementary to their program. Advance warning, so that people may take necessary cover, radiation detection and measures of intensity, so that people may know when shelter is necessary and when and for what periods, every program of civil defense, continuity of government, rural defense, industrial production. Home preparedness, and so on, is, and must be related to the program of fall out shelter. I could continue with some very impressive recital of statistics concerning other aspects of our readiness posture.

I have chosen instead to single out the program in which we are least ready to assure our individual and national survival and, by the same token, to fulfill our mission to deter either limited or general war. I am pleased with the record of civil defense accomplishment to date. All who have been engaged in the work of civil defense have much to be proud of. Let us now turn our determined attention to the subject that is best calculated to deter war—to save lives and make possible the quick rehabilitation of our economic and personal lives, if ever we are called upon to demonstrate our readiness to cope with the facts of nuclear warfare.
