More Uses for Proposed Ac-

The scope of program possible to the citizens, youth, and civic organizations of Taneytown to be derived from the Community Activities Building is broad indeed, to judge from the plans being drawn up for the ABC (Activities Building Committee) of Taneytown. The upper level of this proposed two-story structure will be Taneytown. The upper level of this proposed two-story structure will be an auditorium, with stage, and removable seats, so that it will double for plays and musicals, as well as for suppers and dances. Designed to fit into the Memorial Park rectangle adjoining the firemen's grounds, the comfort stations at both ends of the side adjacent to the carnival area will fulfill a long-felt need during carnival time. This is a chief reason for the wholehearted backing of the Firemen, who are holding off their original plans for restrooms so that the Complans for restrooms so that the Community Activities Building might take care of the growing necessity.

take care of the growing necessity.

One of the rooms on the lower level will be suitable for a Scoutroom, the need for which has been apparent for twenty years. In fact, it has only been through the farsighted generosity of the late John M. Hoagland, and today Mrs. Hoagland, that there has been any hall whatsoever available to the non-sectarian Taneytown Boy Scouts, who, formed as Troop 348 of the Baltimore Area Council, have been sponsored by Hesson-Snider Post 120 of the American Legion since the formation of the present troop in 1937. This group, too, has been raising money by paper collections for years towards the building of a new scout hall, which now will soon be realized with the execution of this project. These youngsters themselves have more than $1000 to advence to project. These youngsters themselves have more than $1000 to advance towards its completion.

There will also be rooms partition-

There will also be rooms partitioned off on the ground floor which can be devoted not only to meetings, but also to pingpong, darts, shuffleboard, quoits and the like. A game room for the youngest will also be a definite necessity. Any conceivable activity, in fact, can be accommodated in the contemplated structure except Twenty-three applications currently have been received by the Carroll County Scholarship Fund from students who are requesting find the contemplated structure except for basketball, which is more than adequately handled in the high school gymnasium.

mrs. Boyd Delp of Concord, N. C. attended services at Keysville and Taneytown United Churches of Christ on Sunday. She is visiting her son the Rev. Robert Delp, who is supply minister at these churches.

The project holds such golden opportunities for the people of Taneytown, young and old, that the ABC cannot wait to get started. To carry this out in fitting manner, the backing of every citizen will be hoped for, and we know that they can be counted on to lend their fullest support.

Chemical "policeman" in today's Super Shell guards against gum-fouled carburetors -to give your car top performance

One special ingredient among the nine in today's Super Shell gasoline is a gum preventive.

Like a policeman dealing with a mob, it works to keep unstable elements from clotting together. Hence no gum problem. Result: top performance.

Super Shell needs to stave off gum troubles that can hamper your car's performance. Gum forms when even the purest gasolines are held in storage. Unstable elements in the fuel combine chemically with oxygen and with each other. To say that Super Shell's chemical "policeman" protects your pocketbook is an understatement.

How the "policeman" works

"SPICE 'N' EVERYTHING NICE"

(continued from first page) Guard their cars. It was Mother's Day and whose all the children and there were ten who had moved to the city came back for the day with all the grandchildren (and there were many). She opened the freezer and brought out gobs of food and cooked it standing over the hot range practically all day. She worked harder than ever and the children appeared let loose from a menagarie. That night, she sat on the porch in that old rocker so com pletely exhausted and to a passer by who was a nearby neighbor she said just this, "Oh, it is so good to be in the quietness of my little home after so much excitement to-day!" And on her face was the sweet-

He was on a ship right then in the Navy taking the Soldiers overseas during World War 1 and overseas during World war 1 and william Reynolds and daughter Crystal and Crystal bringing the wounded ones back! So you see, Folks what I mean about a Mother. They are all alike—deep Beverly and Suzan all of Taneytown. down inside!

And the following poem I had sent to my Precious Mother when I was 17 years of age and the very first time away from her when I visited friends in Atlanta, Georgia. It was handed to me by an older sister when my dear Mother's hands were folded in another room in that deep deep sleen! other room in that deep, deep sleep!

Mother of Mine Mother of mine.

I see your face In every crowded street, My toil is light when I recall Your features, kind and sweet! I long to hear your voice again,

And see your smile divine,
I send with this a heart's best love, Mother, Mother of mine.
So again I write, say the wonderful things to your Mother now! Have a grand day and God Bless all Mothers everywhere! Until next week D. V.

I am, Faithfully,
YOUR OBSERVER And the following, Folks was sent to me from Harve de Grace while I was writing the above. (From a dear daughter.) Yet it is not Mother's Day.

TO Mother I think I never truly knew How very much I cared for you Until I was a mother, too.

Nor knew that any love could be As deep as that you give to me.

A love that gives but does not ask

That changes every little task
To joy; a love that stays the same A steady and enduring flame.
This love I give to her must be
The same love that you give to me;

And gave to me through all my years; years;
My joy, your joy; my tears, your tears.
Mother, I never truly knew,
Until I was a Mother too
Your love for me and mine for you.

In memory, I still can hear. And as the years went drifting by, She knew life's span was brief. She looked toward mansions in the sky With joy and not with grief.

Her voice was weaker, softer now, With quavering notes 'twould ring. The hair was silver on her brow But still she loved to pray and sing.

In Memorian—In loving memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. Ruth Hyser Harman for Mother's Day. Two years has passed since that sad day, God called our Mother away.

We miss you dear Mother More than any-one can know We will always miss and love you Wherever we may go.

There are possibly others like it in the world, but until the light of day hits them the "Three-for-Three Club" of some Missouri River duck hunters must be considered unique in the hunting world.

12:35 Background

The membership is not large, nor is there much hope of it rivaling Rotary for some time - the entrance exam is just too tough for most.

Duck hunters who frequent sand bars near the Squaw Creek Federal Migratory Waterfowl Refuge in northwest Missouri dreamed it up and keep it moving onward and

There are no dues, no meet-ings, no officers and no clubhouse — only members. To be a member a duck hunter must shoot three mallard drakes with three consecutive shots, and if it stopped there half the hunters in the country would be eligible.

COMPLICATED

But it is further complicated by the fact that he must shoot them as they pass overhead, in full flight. Pass shooting at any time is not easy, but shooting three-for-three, dropping only mallards and only drakes, is about as troublesome as trying to make a pet of a Bengal

"Fish," as my grandfather used to say, "ain't sittin' in no rockin' chair, son. They're out moving around lookin' for something to eat."

Therefore what was a redhot fishing spot last year or last week may be zilch today.
When the food fish leave the bigger boys follow them.
The seasons are one factor, because of water temperature, and there are several others, but as long as the fisherman can crank up his Merc motor and hunt them down he will continue to astound the boys at the dock with his catching

SITTING QUIETLY * To those who hunted deer last fall, and hunted in vain, comes the advice of a long-time guide and hunter himself.

Learn to sit still. He claims half the deer in the country that end their traveling days as a hood ornament for an automobile are there about 75 percent by mistake.

Says they were shot in spite of the hunter's skill, not because of it. Further injects that if hunters were able to freeze on a stand and stay there — not smoking, not scratching, not even wiggling their ears — the elusive deer would be bagged a whole lot easier and considerably quicker than when the hunters practice brush-busting. He claims the first 15 or 20 minutes are the hardest to stand and after that a hunter can sit perfectly still for several hours if necessary. Sounds easy.

Parent's Duty Lesson for May 14, 1961

N AMERICA the second Sunday I in May is called Mother's Day, and a few weeks after that, the windows of stores advertise various stuff for "Father's Day" presents. Maybe there would be more er's Day were combined. In the actual life of the home, if father and mother are not teamed up together, they will not carry the load. For once, friends, let us stop being senti-

Dr. Foreman mental about mothers, let us think about fathers and mothers together. Let's think about what parents must do for their children if they have any serious intention of bringing the children up right. And let's not talk as if it were easy and pleasant. Let us talk about something so difficult, so unpleasant, that thousands of parents put it off and neglect it, with results that bring disaster personal and national.

This is the duty of discipline. Children will not ask for it, they are disposed to resent it. It has to be done by the parents, both parents. The children must not get the idea that father can be played off against mother. Each must support the other. Any arguments about discipline had better be carried on either before the couple marry, or (after the children come) while the children are asleep. Now there are two things the parents must know, or their "discipline" will not work. 1. They must know what their children are doing. With very little children this means,-what they are doing every waking minute. The other thing to be sure about is how you want them to grow up, what sort of ideal you have for their character and life.

Discipline Is An Art

Discipline is not the same as punishment, though it involves punishment sometimes. It is not the same as being "possessive," wanting to manage every detail inlidren's lives. It is not treating some and daughters like perpetual children, picking out their wives and husbands, their colleges or their future careers. It means bringing them up so that when it comes time for them to make choices they will choose wisely and well.

This means, of course, that discipline is an art, not a science. It changes from family to family, from child to child. But one thing is certain: a child who always does exactly as he pleases, is an undisciplined child, a menace to himself, to his parents, and all too soon, to society. Juvenile delinquents are simply undisciplined children turned loose. It is easy at first for parents to dodge dis-

The Bible And Discipline

Old Testament and New push the duty of discipline. The very fact that discipline has to be set out as a parent's duty shows that parents were then, as they are now, inclined to skip it. The meaning of the word as we find it in the R.S.V. is interesting. Both in the Hebrew and the Greek, the word is the same as one translated sometimes "correction" or "punishment." We can combine the two ideas and say, Discipline in the home means correctionand-punishment. How much correction? How much punishment? That's where the art come in. But essentially the thing is always the same in principle. When a child shows signs, in character, actions or habits, of going away from the ideal person he ought to be, that is the time to correct and straighten him out, just as you would correct a rose or a tomatoplant that was dragging in the

And this gives the clue to the meaning of "the discipline of the of which Paul speaks (Eph 6:4) For in a Christian home, the ideal for every child will be Christ-likeness, nothing less. Few children (there may be saintly exceptions, unknown to this writer) will unfold into Christlikeness without help. As the gardener helps the flowers by not letting them sprawl naturally, so the parent helps the child by keeping him out of whatever soils the

MAN WHO SPENDS HALF HIS LIFE IN A BARBER CHAIR!

Creative artists are apt to employ all sorts of off-beat devices to stimulate their cerebral output — yogi, standing on one's head, or relaxing in a hammock with a mint julep in hand. The leader of America's avant garde architects, Morris Lanidus, spends his most pro-Lapidus, spends his most productive hours seated at his drawing board in, of all things, a barber chair.

Mr. Lapidus (pronounced Lapeh-dus), whose versatility seems limitless, has designed office buildings, apartment structures, hospitals and schools but is best known for his more colorful creations, the spectac-ular Americana, Eden Roc and Fountainebleau Hotels of Miami Fountainebleau Hotels of Miami Beach. Currently, he is engaged in adding new color and movement to the famed New York City skyline with his Summit and Americana of New York hotels, Manhattan's first new hostelries in 30 years. His hotel designs include not only the physical structures but every piece of furniture and decorapiece of furniture and decora-

"To be creative," says Mr.
Lapidus, "one must work in quiet and comfort. When I was a young man, the hours spent perched on a high stool before a drawing board proved extremely tiring. The only real relaxation I seemed to get was during intermittent visits to the barber shop. That's what prompted me to acquire a barber chair for my studio."

Lanidus who recently made

Lapidus, who recently made world-wide news with the results of his designs for the Lincoln Road mall in Miami Beach, is as painstaking in the details of his craft as a watchmaker. He's a product of Brooklyn, U.S.A. As a stage struck youngster, he entered the Drama School of New York University. He soon discovered that, as an actor, he was a better designer of sets and costumes and soon became affiliated with the Washington Square Players. His artistic bent led him to switch to an architectural course at Columbent led him to switch to an architectural course at Columbia University. Following his graduation with the Class of 1927, he spent two decades in modern store design, later diversifying into the hotel and building field.

"I guess I acquired a lot of hotel experience subconsciously," he says, "for during this phase, while building stores all over the country, I had to spend a great deal of my time in hotels."

Proper design of a building can be enormously important from merchandising and advertising standpoints, says Lapidus.
"Use of light, color and form creates an atmosphere inside and outside of a structure that makes the customer say "I like to go there!"

His designs for the Summit and Americana Hotels in New York are in vivid contrast to the monolithic steel, aluminum and bronze commercial structures that are mushrooming in
