Typo yields more than $20,000 for Emmitsburg

By Stephanie Long Contributing Writer

EMMITSBURG, Md. - Rather than having to worry over what to cut from their 2008 budget, the Emmitsburg town commissioners spent much of a recent budget review deciding how to spend an additional $20,295 found in the budget.

"There was a typo made in the parking meter income, it should have been $22,250, the zero was left off at the end, meaning a net increase of $20,295 is in the budget," Mayor James Hoover said.

The Dispatch Community Newspapers discovered the and brought it to Hoover's attention. The typo created an opportunity for the commissioners to have their say in where the extra money should be spent.

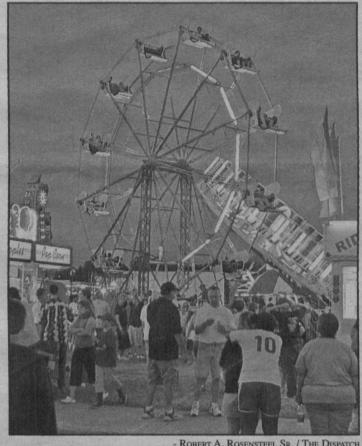

Commission President Chris Staiger proposed two ideas on how to spend the excess money. Currently Emmitsburg Elementary School is trying to acquire a tech cart, consisting of a laptop projector and document camera, for each classroom. Staiger proposed a motion that $2,443 be taken and donated to the elementary school PTA to cover the cost of purchasing

Circus causes commissioner controversy

By Stephanie Long Contributing Writer

EMMITSBURG, Md. - The Kelly Miller Circus may be coming to town, but not without opposition.

At the May 21 Town Meeting commissioner William O'Neil, Jr. let everyone know that he will not support the circus nor attend it because of one thing animal cruelty.

"In all good conscious I can't support the circus. I don't think it's right to basically underwrite or support enterprises that do abuse animals," O'Neil said. "And circuses have had many problems in the past, including this specific circus, Kelly Miller Circus."

O'Neil cited information he found on www.circuses.com as evidence to back up his claim that Kelly Miller Circus abuses animals.

According to the web site, Kelly Miller Circus has a long history of abusing animals and gives several descriptions of incidents. One example cites a complaint filed at an Arkansas police department by circus-goer who described an elephant being hit so hard it bled. Another case cited involved an eyewitness reporting that he saw an elephant hit by its handler 25 times in a EMMITSBURG, Md. - When the Great Emmitsburg Fire began two weeks before the Battle of Gettysburg in 1863, it started in a stable that was, at the time located where Elias Lutheran Church now stands. The flames rushed down Main Street destroying a good many buildings in the town.

On June 30 during the annual Community Day Celebration, people will gather on the parking lot of Elias Lutheran Church and begin their own journey through town that will include learning more about the fire. The in conjunction with the Emmitsburg Lions Club, will be sponsoring two historical walking tours of the town.

The tours will begin at 1:30 p.m. and 3 p.m. on Elias Lutheran Church parking lot. The tours will last about 90 minutes and make 20 stops as the group walks up one side of West Main Street and back the other. Each tour will be led by Mike Hillman, Harold Craig and Shirley Troxell.

"I'll be going

Greater Emmitsburg Area Historical Society, over the history of West Main Street from 1785 to 1930," Hillman said. "Shirley will be talking about the people in town and Harold is going to correct me as I go."

Toms Creek Methodist service a delight

The May 6 evening service at Toms Creek Methodist was a special treat. It featured the gospel songs of Dr. Fanny Crosby, some famous and some unfamiliar. The service was led by a trio who sang beautifully, accompanying themselves on guitar and synthesizer.

Both the songs and the performers were inspired and inspiring.

There was no admission fee but all of the free-will offering was dedicated to the work of the Westminster rescue Mission. This is especially appropriate, since Fanny Crosby (1820-1915) the blind poetess, taught in New York City and was deeply involved in the rescue mission there. She was truly a saint of the church.

Many or us brought up in the church remember singing joyfully: "Praise Him, Praise Him", "To God Be the Glory", "Pass Me Not O Gentle Savior", "Jesus Is Tenderly Calling Thee Home", "All the Way My Savior Leads Me", "Rescue the Perishing", and many others, all by Fanny Crosby.

If your church wishes to host this unpaid trio, you will do yourselves and the community a favor by booking them at Eternal Music Ministries at (410) 374-4283.

Israel is a good partner for the U.S.

In March, this newspaper carried a letter to the editor that attempted to make the case that Israel is destabilizing the Middle East. My question is when HAS the Middle East been stable? When that entire region lived sublimely under the Ottomans? Since its founding in 1948, the State of Israel has been the target of terrorism, as well as periodic open, declared warfare, by its Arab neighbors and the terrorist organizations housed within many of them. Fortunately, all have failed in their efforts and a few of them (Egypt and Jordan) have come to grips with reality and signed peace treaties with

The editorial added that the State of Israel was founded by 'Jewish Terrorists'. That statement is no more accurate than if one would say 'the United States of America was founded by colonial terrorists'. The U.N. passed a resolution in November 1947 — months before the Israelis declared their state — that called for the establishment of a Jewish state in Israel.

Israel sits on the lands that are its cultural, historical and inalienable heritage. Can anyone show that the Christians or Moslems were there before the Jews? What is it exactly that the mosques in Jerusalem are built on top of?

Additionally, those who talk of Palestinian refugees seldom talk about the hundreds of thousands of Jews who fled or were expelled from Arab countries in the years following Israel's establishment. What about their 'right of return?'

Is Israel a perfect nation? No, but one needs to look at a map of the countries that surround Israel, and count how many are diplomatically open and have freely elected, representative governments. This will give some indication of the need for Israel to be supported by America as the only reliable partner in that volatile region.

100 Years Ago "In this place" From The Emmitsburg Chronicle

This column offers a regular look back at Emmitsburg through the eyes of The Emmitsburg Chronicle which first appeared on June 14, 1879, published by Samuel Motter. In 1909 the paper became known as The Weekly Chronicle. It continued regular publication, allowing for a 5-year hiatus during World War II, until February 9, 1977.

Danger of Dictator

After describing what a great part Ohio had played in the civil war, both through its generals and through its men in civil life like Stanton, United States Senator Foraker at the close of his memorial address given on Decoration Day at Steubenville, O., after telling of the lofty position this country holds among the nations of the world, spoke of domestic problems and made a veiled attack on President Theodore Roosevelt's attitude on public questions.

"Thatwemustactcarefully," the Senator said, "and wisely and patriotically in dealing with public affairs all will agree; and yet it is becoming an every-day occurrence to hear and read expressions of impatience not only because somebody insists upon time for consideration and debate, but also because of constitutional restraints that interfere with freedom of action, coupled not infrequently with suggestions that no great harm would be done if in this, or that, or the other particular case, they should be disregarded.

"Those who fought to save the Constitution may be pardoned for entering a protest against this tendency. The American people do not need to be rushed. Their disposition is to go too fast rather than too slow. If allowed to proceed in their own way, they will not only meet every requirement, but they will be able to find that all governmental power necessary to be invoked can be exercised consistently with the letter as well as the spirit of our Constitution; and this should be insisted upon.

"But if we tolerate the idea that we may lightly evade, or disregard its provisions under supposed emergency, and upon the theory that the good that can be secured will more than counterbalance the harm that may be done, we shall soon be adrift without chart or compass.

"We are singularly fortunate to always having a patriotic, liberty-loving man in the White House, from whom no such danger could be apprehended, but the time may come when it will be different. We cannot hope to always escape misfortune. We must, therefore, reckon against the possibilities and among them is always the chance that evil days may overtake us in that respect, as they have always overtaken other nations.

"For an unscrupulous Executive, if we should ever be so unfortunate as to have one, this is a dangerous weapon with which to enforce his will on not only unwilling members of the other departments of the Government, but upon all who make public sentiment. Fear on the one hand and hope of favor on the other combine to aid his purposes."

Son of Outlaw Makes Honorable Career

Not often does a young man of ambition and attainment whose family name is dishonored by the taint of mortal crime - settle down in the very community once terrorized by a member of that family. Yet this is just what Jesse James, the son of the noted outlaw, is going to do; and much credit does he deserve for his brave determination to make an honorable career though handicapped at every turn by his father's misdeeds. The fact that young James has just won distinction as honor man in the graduating class of the Kansas City Law School is, in itself, earnest of his future career, and no doubt the legal fraternity of Missouri will be strengthened rather than weakened by the addition to its ranks of this courageous young attorney. Andin full justice to the man who is to make the brave fight it is to be hoped that in his case the sins of the father will not be visited on the son.

A VERY EXCITING RUNAWAY

This morning about nine o'clock Mr. Issac M. Annan, came in the pike from Thurmont in his new automobile which was at high gear. Noticing a four horse team on the road, Mr. Annan, desiring not to scare the horses by changing to low gear which is more noisy, passed the tem and turned into the Square. Just as the machine struck the cobblestones a tire burst and the report frightened a two horse team, belonging to Mr. W.H. Cover, which was standing in front of the bank building. The horses started off on a dead run dragging Mr. Baker, the driver, who rushed out to the team at the approach of the automobile. Mr. Baker bravely clung to the lines until the wagon crashed into and upset Mr. Wenchoff's buggy, hitched near Dr. Stone's office. The runaway team which fortunately did no further damage, was stopped at the upper end of town.

Staiger also proposed a motion that $7,500 be spent to build a tot lot in the Emmit Gardens area, which would provide the residents of Emmit Gardens a closer play area. The motion was passed without any objec-

William Commisoner O'Neil suggested, "The streets committee wanted to have some beautification effort undertaken in Emmitsburg. Right now when you come in off of 140 from Baltimore it's pretty much blighted."

O'Neil suggested spending $2,500 to aesthetically beautify the blighted "grassy null" and put forth a motion to take funds from the Education and Conference budget to pay for the beautification. Without receiving any support from the commissioners, the motion was killed. Realizing that there still was an excess of $9,943 O'Neil put forth a motion to use $2,500 of the excess funds to pay for the aesthetic beautification. The motion passed 4 to 1, with Commissioner Joyce Rosensteel opposed.

"I think this will be good to run the flag up the flag pole and see how this project actually plays itself out and see what happens to that $2,500 investment come August," Staiger said of the passed motion.

Both Commissioners Glenn Blanchard and Rosensteel did not have any suggestions on how to spend the remaining excess, but Commissioner Cliff Sweeney did.

"I'd like to allocate it [the excess] to help with pool repairs," Sweeney said.

Although Sweeney noted that the $7,852 remaining excess would not cover all of the repairs, it would help. After putting forth a motion to spend the remainder of the $20,295 excess on pool repairs, the commission voted unanimously and passed the motion.

The commissioners made several changes in other areas of the budget.

Staiger put forth a motion to specifically allocate $5,000 of the already proposed budget be set aside to repair the fences at the ball field; the motion was unanimously passed.

Blanchard put forth a motion to specifically allocate $1,000 of the already proposed budget be set aside to place two benches in the memorial park.

"I would like to see if some of the benches can be donated... we can have their name put on it for that person, that way it'll save an expense for the town," Sweeny suggested.

Staiger said that Sweeny had a good point and it would save the town money, but the motion was still voted on and passed unanimously.

No other changes were made to the budget. The commissioners will have an opportunity to discuss any additional recommendations for changes to the budget at the next town meeting.

In addition to O'Neil's belief that the circus abuses the animals, he claimed that the mayor did not follow the law and complete a thorough investigation on the circus or allow the commission to vote on whether or not to grant a

"If we don't take our laws seriously, if we don't take our charter seriously, if we're willing to just look the other way than I have a problem with that," O'Neil said.

Mayor James Hoover acknowledged that "obviously something took place" in regard to animal abuse, but noted that the last case of animal abuse "whether it makes it right or wrong, was 2001.'

Hoover also noted that no town permit had been issued for the circus and that "The past practice of the town has been that events such as this have been carried through through the mayor or the town staff" and the circus case "was not done in any other format than most other activities.'

O'Neil countered Hoover's statement and bluntly stated that the mayor cannot move forward and issue a permit for the circus until he has completed an investigation into the circus and if he did grant a permit without completing the investigation he "would be in violation of his own

After discussing the issue at length, the commissioners could not come to a consensus on whether or not the past practice of giving the mayor authority to issue the permits was acceptable. There was a consensus that a permit should be issued if an investigation were completed. The commissioners also agreed that a humane society representative should be at the circus to ensure that the animals are treated properly per O'Neil's request.

The circus will go on amidst the opposition, as a permit has been issued since the May 21 meeting. Hoover said that a written invitation has been extended to the humane society informing them of the circus and inviting them to monitor the animal care, show, performances and employees.

He said that animal cruelty should be alarming to anyone and he understands why one would be wary of allowing a circus, but acknowledges, "There's always going to be opposition to everything. If we prohibit anything that has a potentially negative impact for one reason or another, there's no way we'll ever do anything."

"I feel good about the circus coming, I think the community is looking forward to it and I think a lot of people are going to have a good time," Hoover said.

Circuses are for children not politics

Emmitsburg has a circus coming to town, but it's a shame that attention has been turned from the center ring to antics of the commissioners.

It began with the assertion by Commissioner Bill O'Neil Jr. and some others in town that circuses were not much more than torture chambers for animals. He proclaimed that he would not be attending the circus and he sought to find reasons to turn the circus away from town.

While we certainly don't want to see animals mistreated, according the information O'Neil presented Kelly Miller Circus has had a clean record for a number of year. There's also that fact that while we wouldn't say that circus animals live the easy life, it certainly isn't as bad as the animal rights groups make it out to be.

For instance, one thing noted in arguments against circuses is that if an elephant has ragged ears, it has been torn by trainers working with the animals. It does sound horrible, but is it really? I remember reading a book about circuses when I was younger that noted that as part of the grooming of elephants, trainers used blowtorches to burn off the stiff body hair of the elephants and the elephants didn't even flinch.

The other thing we find incredible is that the depiction of circuses as death camps paints the trainers as unfeeling and heartless. How many animal owners have you known who work in close proximity with their animals that don't care for them? Should a lion tamer feel any different than a horse trainer? Should a person who shows dogs care for them more than a person who has performing dogs in a circus? What about police trainers of K-9 units? They train and discipline their animals to attack or go into dangerous situations, but ask any police officers with a K-9 and you'll find that the officer loves the dog.

That being said, of course there can be problems and abuse. The commissioners made a responsible call in requesting that one of the county animal agencies be asked to supervise the treatment of the animals while the circus is in town.

However, the argument loses its moral high ground when the circus also becomes a way to attack the mayor as overstepping his authority by bringing the circus to town. Bringing in the political argument recasts the cruelty argument as a political one rather than an ethical one. It also makes the commissioners appear as if they are politicizing an event children and adults have enjoyed for generations.

If you'd rather not visit the circus, for whatever reason, that's your choice. Don't spoil the pleasure that generations of children have enjoyed, though, because you want to make a political statement.

Mount student traveling to Africa to help children

By Stephanie Long Contributing Writer

EMMITSBURG, Md. - While a student at Mount St. Mary's University, Ryan Trout had the opportunity to write many papers about various topics, but writing about one topic in particular, genocide in Africa, peaked his interest and he knew he wanted to

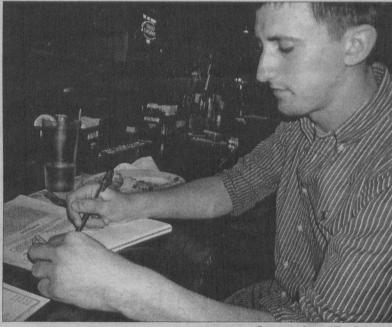

So when he found out that there was a program that would allow him to travel to Rwanda, Africa, and help youth dealing with the effects of genocide, Trout quickly jumped at the chance.

After filling out an application and doing an interview over an Internet phone, Trout was chosen as one of 14 individuals from the United States to go to Rwanda with Global Youth Connect, a non-profit organization that aims to "inspire the next generation to work for peaceful change."

Trout will spend five weeks in Rwanda, two of which he will spend in Kigali, the capital, making connections with other youth who are in peace positions and talking to government officials about genocide in Rwanda.

Two other weeks of Trout's stay will be spent working with Amahoro-Great Lakes, a group that works with youth to promote and protect human rights through education. Trout will interact with the youth of Rwanda oneon-one, teaching them sports and participating in cultural activities.

For one week, Trout will stay with a family in Rwanda.

Ryan Trout is traveling to Rwanda for five weeks helping children there deal with the effects of genocide. Trout took action after writing about the genocide for a paper at Mount St. Mary's University.

Although he could have simply read about the genocide in Africa, Trout said that going to Rwanda and seeing first hand what is going on will help him truly "understand the impact of genocide and obstacles overcome."

While some may say that what is going on in Africa has no affect on America or it's citizens, Trout disagrees.

"We're all very closely linked," Trout said. "Things that affect them are going to end up affecting us sooner or later."

That's why everyone should get involved in helping those in Rwanda, Trout said.

"We need to write our congressmen," Trout said. "Take action...be more politically

Trout is looking for people that are willing to get involved

"I would really like to see the community involved," Trout said. "I think it would be really positive for both areas."

Trout would like the community to donate gifts that he can take and hand out to the kids in Rwanda. Trout also hopes to create a dialogue between Rwanda and the community through pen

Those interested in becoming a pen pal or donating gifts to send to Rwanda should contact Ryan Trout via e-mail at Rptrout@email. msmary.edu or via telephone at (301) 845-2870.

Jones is Town's newest community deputy

By JAMES RADA JR. News Editor jrada@thedispatch.us

EMMITSBURG, Md. – Emmitsburg's newest community deputy is Deputy Harold Jones. He's been patrolling Emmitsburg's streets since February.

"I love what I do," Jones said. "There are not many jobs you can say that about, but I love my job."

The 28-year-old deputy sheriff has been with the Frederick County Sheriff's Office for 3.5 years, though he hasn't always been a deputy sheriff. When he first applied for the FCSO, it was past a deadline so he was advised to take an opening in the corrections side of the sheriff's office.

that got my foot in the door," Jones

He became a deputy sheriff the following year and found himself patrolling up around Emmitsburg often so the switch to become one of the town's community deputies felt like a natural move.

"I wanted to be a part of the community more rather than just driving through it," Jones said.

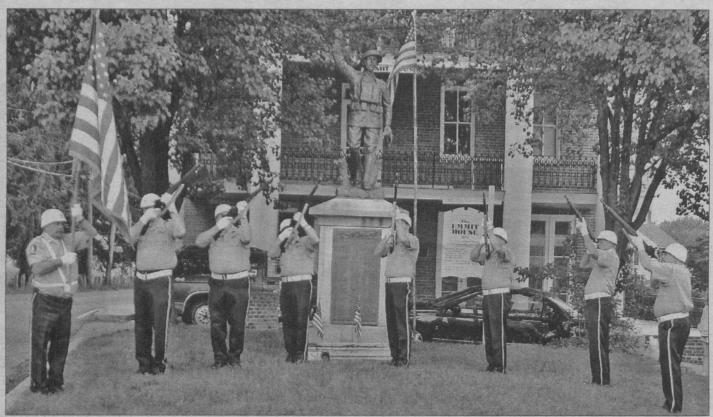

Now as a community deputy not only will residents see him driving through town, but he can also be seen on bike and

Though he and his wife now "It has always been a goal of live in the north county area, Jones mine to be in law enforcement and is a Linganore High and Frederick Community College graduate. When's he's not on the streets of Emmitsburg, he's enjoying time with his wife or playing golf.

"I like to spend time with my wife because on the weeks I work evenings, I don't really get to see her," Jones said.

Emmitsburg has three community deputies who are contracted through the town to specifically patrol the town and act, in essence, as its police force. The other community deputies are DFC John Bartlett and DFC Richard Gast.

Officials call county commissioner comment "disrespectful"

By JAMES RADA JR.

News Editor

jrada@thedispatch.us

THURMONT, Md. - The Frederick County Commissioners recent move to have municipal officials swear to or certify to information they provide to the county for inclusion in the county's water and sewer plan has angered some officials who call some of the comments surrounding the action "disparaging."

The idea was Commissioner John "Lennie" Thompson Jr.'s. He wrote in an e-mail to The Dispatch, "I bring a strong belief that public officials need to be accountable for their action or inactions concerning the public water or sewer systems they are responsible for."

At the County/Municipality

monthly meeting on May 24, the disparage municipal leadership," municipal officials told the county commissioners that they had no problem swearing to or certifying information they provide the county. Their problem was with Thompson saying that even if the officials swore to the information, he still might not Middletown Burgess John Miller called the comment "disparaging, disrespectful and irresponsible.'

Commission President Jan Gardner told Miller, "I would expect you to be upset." After saying the comment did reflect on the county commissioners as a whole, she also read an e-mail to Emmitsburg Commission President Chris Staiger explaining why the certified information was needed.

"We had no desire or intent to

Gardner said. She added that she believed that the comment that upset the municipal officials was made outside of the public meeting.

Thurmont Mayor Martin Burns said that this was an example that "communication stinks" between the county and municipalities. He agreed with Miller that the comments were "disrespectful."

"Anything to do with Middletown he just dismisses us 100 percent," Miller said. "That's just not behavior I think should be condoned by anybody."

"We're no better than any developer as far as he's concerned," Burns said.

The commissioners did not specifically support Thompson's contentious comment, but they did not dismiss it either. Commissioner Kai Hagen said, "Lennie's being Lennie.'

Thompson, who did not attend the county/municipality meeting, said in a later interview with The Dispatch, that his comment was directly specifically at the Town of Middletown.

"I would not believe anything emanating from the Town of Middletown," Thompson said.

As for whether he would believe certified information from other town officials, he said he wouldn't "presumptively" dismiss the information. It would depend on whether he received the information on water and sewer information that he has said repeatedly that he needs to make a decision.

Hats off to Phil Tylicki's graduation project

By STEPHANIE LONG
Contributing Writer

THURMONT, Md. – When Phil Tylicki had to pick a graduation project, he knew he wanted to do something different than anyone else, so when he heard about an eye condition called pterygium, he decided to collect baseball hats to help those afflicted.

Pterygium is an eye condition that causes tissue to grow on the cornea of the eye, which can eventually leading to partial or total loss of eyesight if left untreated. According to the National Eye Institute, it is believed that significant exposure to ultraviolet light from the sun causes Pterygium. Therefore wearing a baseball hat or sunglasses is key in preventing the occurrence of Pterygium.

Uncommon in the United States, Pterygium tends to afflict those in sunnier places in the world, such as Africa. When Tylicki learned this and that Pterygium especially affects men, he knew he wanted to help.

"Once a family man becomes blind they cannot go out and help their family survive," Tylicki said.

So Tylicki started collecting baseball caps to send to the sunnier places in the world. With some encouragement from his mom and help from a mentor, Dr, Segale, Tylicki has collected about 250 to 300 hats.

Donations have poured in from many different places, Tylicki said, and over the past two weeks he has spent many hours writing letters to various places and people looking for hat donations, but he still hasn't reached his goal of 1,000 hats and is looking for some help.

"I'm not asking for money, just baseball hats," Tyliki said. "Call me if you have some baseball hats. I'll pick them up."

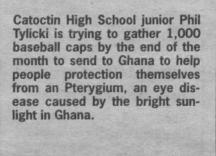

At the end of June, Tylicki will donate the baseball hats to Unite for Sight, an organization that works around the world educating people about eyesight and helping restore eyesight. Although he is unsure of exactly where all of the baseball hats will be sent, he knows that many will go to the Buduburam Refugee Camp in Ghana, Africa.

Whether or not Tylicki is able met his goal and collect 1,000 hats, he said that "really loves the project." And in giving to other he has discovered something about himself.

Tylicki has always been interested in being a doctor and his graduation project "has helped me decide what to do," Tylicki said. "I want to get into physical therapy."

Thurmont summer concert series opens June 10

THURMONT, Md. – Thurmont's Summer Concert Series opens on June 10 with a free concert by the Spires Brass Band. The concert begins at 6 p.m. in Memorial Park.

The Spires Brass Band, under the direction of John Slezak, has taken part in many brass band championships and won many awards. The Spires Brass Band first participated in the concert series in 2001 as part of the town's 250th anniversary celebration. They have appeared as part of the series since then.

"Thurmont is very proud to have the Spires Brass Band as part of our current concert series and will present an enjoyable program of patriotic and popular selections," said George Wireman, concert coordinator.

Concert attendees should bring their own lawn chairs and/or blankets for seating in the park.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the summer concert series, which began in 1987 at the suggestion of Mayor Terry Best.

The Thurmont Board of Commissioners and the Thurmont Park Commission sponsor the series each year.

Savor the tastes of Italy in Emmitsburg's new restaurant

By STEPAHNIE LONG
Contributing Writer

EMMITSBURG, Md. – When Sal Barone lived near Naples he ate authentic Italian food, and now that he lives in Maryland he continues to eat authentic Italian food thanks to his own restaurant, Alesandro Italian Bar and Grill.

Newly opened in Emmitsburg, Alesandro is Sal and his wife's, Linda, restaurant. Specializing in authentic Italian food, Alesandro brings a bit of Italy to the area.

"There's really nothing like it in the area," Linda said.

No stranger to the restaurant business, Sal has been treating Marylanders to the tastes of Italy since 1974 when he opened owned a pizza shop in Frederick, and later one in Walkersville; Sal and Linda actually met when she worked at his pizza shop in Frederick.

Named after their grandson, Ty Alexander, the restaurant is somewhat a family affair, with Sal doing all of the cooking, along with a bit of help, and their future son-in-law managing the restaurant while Linda helps.

The restaurant, which can seat 121 people, includes a bar and dinning room. Daily lunch and dinner specials are offered everyday in addition to the extensive menu, which gives customers an array of choices. Customers can choose from eight appetizers, 19 pizza topping, six specialty pizzas, over 15 subs, six seafood dishes, eight pasta dishes, five baked dishes, seven house specialties and much more.

Favorite dishes of Sal and Linda are veal and anything seafood, Linda said, adding with a smile that they're "seafood junkies."

But opening the restaurant was much harder task for Sal and Linda than naming their favorite dishes was. Since October of 2006 Sal and Linda have been working on the restaurant, investing countless hours into its opening.

"We've had a lot of hurdles, a lot of changes," Linda said. "It's been too long, just too many hurdles,"

Although the restaurant has only been opened for a short time, Sal and Linda have already seen the community respond and give Alesandro a try.

"It's been good," Sal simply said.

Alesandro is located on North Seton Avenue just north of Emmitsburg and opened from 11 a.m. to 12 a.m. Sunday to Thursday and 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Food is served from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. everyday, while the bar remains open during business hours.

New air-purification business in Emmitsburg

EMMITSBURG, Md. – A Closer Look Inc. has received a dealership of Ecoquest International purification equiptment, which they are selling in conjunction with their home inspection services.

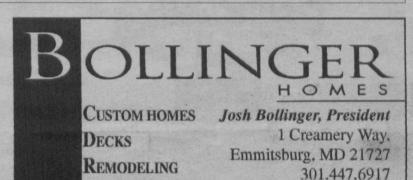

Ecoquest International produces state of the art electronic air and water purification systems to be used in industrial, commercial and residential areas. The technology used in the purification systems, was developed in conjunction with NASA for the purpose of eliminating airborne pathogens in space craft. The Space Foundation has recently recognized the Ecoquest International air purification system, as a Certified Space Technology product.

"I have used the air purification system for almost a year and I love the product!" said Kimberly Gore, owner of A Closer Look Inc. She added, "It provides healthier solutions for people. It's a perfect fit, for our inspection business."

Although the air purification equiptment is not a medical device, it has been known to assist individuals who suffer from allergies, sinus conditions, and asthma. It also helps to eliminate smoke, pet odors, mold and mildew. In home demonstrations are offered to interested individuals.

For more information or to inquire about an in-home demonstration, contact Kimberly Gore or Elizabeth Myers at (301) 447-2288.

Preserving Mason and Dixon

BRENDAN WEEKS / THE DISPATCH

The Mason-Dixon Line Preservation Partnership was formed in 1990. Since then, the groups has worked to locate all of the Mason-Dixon Line marker stones and commemorate them with memorials.

By Brendan Weeks
Contributing Writer

EMMITBURG, Md. – Living so close to the border between Maryland and Pennsylvania, we often cross the state line without thinking twice. For the Gauss family of Emmitsburg however, it was much more than a division between the two states.

In 1990, a group of surveyors, lead by Emmitsburg resident Robert Gauss met at the Carriage House Inn with an understanding of the significance of the Mason-Dixon Line. They knew that the efforts of the two British surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, may be underappreciated and something had to be done to preserve their work. It was there that the Mason-Dixon Line Preservation Partnership (MDLPP) was formed.

Chris Gauss, son of Robert, can remember his father's interest in the surveying marvel even as a child. "He's always been interested in the Mason-Dixon Line as long as I can remember," said Gauss, who began working with his father around the age of ten. "Whenever we had a job near the line, we would find it. If there were any (stones) near our survey, we would tie them into the survey."

The small group decided their first order of business was to make an inventory of each marker laid out by the original surveyors of the boundary. Beginning at the easternmost point of the 223-mile boundary, they searched and uncovered each mile marker, noting specific location and condition of each stone. "We feel that the position of the stone is important as the stone itself," said co-founder of the partnership Todd Babcock. "It marks the work of Mason and Dixon."

While re-tracing the line, the MDLPP noted that the line is not in fact perfect. In actuality it is shaped more like a wave. "We're finding that these the stones, they go to the south, then come back to the north, then go back to the south," said Babcock. The line dips as far as 900 feet south when it reaches Emmitsburg and around 300 feet to the north near Hancock, Md.

Nevertheless, their accuracy is still considered remarkable. "That's no fault of Mason and Dixon, it's something they didn't understand at the time," said Babcock. Using a surveying tool called a plumbob, they did not take into account the gravity of larger objects, such as mountains, affecting the accuracy of their equipment. "If they had known that information back then, they may have been within 50 feet of the intended line," said Babcock.

"For the undertaking of trying to set them and the equipment that they used, they did a remarkable job," said Gauss.

The project took the group two years to accomplish, but was well worth the effort. They were able to locate 132 stones, which accounts for all the main markers placed by the surveyors. At the time of the original survey, conditions grew hazardous the further west one traveled. Because there were no road structures beyond Sidling Hill near Hancock, the surveyors could not transport the large markers beyond the first 132 miles. Instead, they created natural markers, piling stones they would find.

Their next task, which is still ongoing, is to replace those stones that they found damaged or destroyed. "There were 15 stones that were damaged or destroyed," said Babcock, "We have replaced four of those and I have five more stones in my yard."

The most memorable of those markers is Crownstone 75, located in a field in Harney. After the passing of founder Robert Gauss in 2000, the Surveyors Historical Society, the MDLPP, and others chose to honor is work at the annual Rendezvous in 2002. With several hundred people in attendance, the stone was carried in on a horse-drawn cart, and set using only the tools that would have been available to Mason and Dixon. Engraved on the stone was the name of Robert Gauss, memorializing the work he had done.

Even with the passing of their founder, the partnership carries on. Their next project will be the replacement of a damaged stone in Washington County sometime next summer. After that, they only have a couple more stones to replace. "We've pretty much accomplished what we set out to do," said Babcock.

Interesting facts about the Mason-Dixon Line

• Though the line delineated between free and slave states during the Civil War, its original intent was to settle a land dispute between the Calvert and Penn families during the 1760's.

• The line is not much of a line, but in fact more like a wave, bending south, then north, then south again.

• Originally the line was intended to lie on the 40th parallel, which would have made Philadelphia and Gettysburg a part of Maryland. Only after years of disputes in court was it decided that the line would begin 15 miles south of Philadelphia.

• The final 22 miles of the boundary would be surveyed several years later. Native Indians were a great threat and it became far too risky for the surveyors to continue on.

Congregation returns to church after nearly 70 years

St. John's Lutheran Church in Creagerstown celebrated its 275th anniversary with a parade and an old-time church service preached by "Rev. Henry Muhlenberg."

-JAMES RADA JR. / THE DISPATCH

By JAMES RADA JR.

News Editor jrada@thedispatch.us

CREAGERSTOWN, Md. - The notes of "Onward Christian Soldiers" played by the Harmony Cornet Band could be heard before the parade could be seen on Blacks Mill Road in Creagerstown.

Eventually, the state and U.S. flags carried by the color guard could be seen and then the marchers and vehicles. It was a small parade of horses, carriages, old cars, marchers and children on bicycles to honor the 275th anniversary of the St. John's Union Church.

The parade ended at the doors of the old union church, which had been used for storage since 1945 and not used for a worship service since 1939. However, in recent years a group of concerned members had started restoring the building. Though far from finished, the old church has pews and pul-

"This is the first worship service we're going to have in our building in many, many years," Pastor Joan Copeland told the audience on May 20.

The guest of honor for the special service was Rev. Henry Muhlenberg (played by H. Gerard Knoche) dressed in his black and white "preaching robes." Muhlenberg is known as the father of American Lutheranism and had visited the church in the mid-1700s.

"He came forward to our time to preach to us," Copeland

Muhlenberg walked up the steps to the pulpit and turned to the congregation to deliver his sermon. He told the audience, "My brothers and sisters in the Lord, I have traveled a long way to be with you and I will not be with you long."

Then he urged the group to learn what they could of the gospel and to share it with those people they knew.

If the congregation did that, Muhlenberg said, "Then my travel here will be worth it and I will see a church growing in faith and numbers when I return."

It was a shrinking congregation that caused the Reform congregation to disband in 1939. At the last worship service, only nine members were in attendance.

"We knew it was coming," said Louise Seiss Lare who was one of the nine. "We hated to see it come, but nine people just can't keep a church going.'

And so the Lutheran congregation bought the building for $400, although they had their own building next door. The Reformed congregation became part of the Lutheran congregation and St. John's Union Church began to be used for Blanche Long Keilholtz also returned for the anniversary and to see the interior of the church she hadn't seen since she had been among the last nine Reformed congregation members to worship there. She had been confirmed in the church when she was a child.

Following the service, the group went across the street to the hall where they celebrated their heritage and community with a meal.

Mount Students continue Habitat support

FREDERICK, Md. – Mount St. Mary's University students recently donated $8,000 to Frederick County Habitat for Humanity. The students raised the money through various activities.

Once again the students at the Mount have shown their support of Habitat's mission," said Habitat Board President Larry Snody. "A few years ago they helped build a Habitat home on B&O Avenue in Frederick. In 2005 the Mount teamed up with the Frederick County United Methodist Churches and the Gettysburg College Habitat Chapter to build Habitat's first home in Emmitsburg," he added.

In past years, most of Habitat's construction in Frederick County occurred during late spring and summer when the Mount students were home for the summer. Habitat's increasingly busy building schedule gives the students many more opportunities to help the local Habitat chapter and students have responded enthusiastically. In addition, the university continues sending students to work on Habitat projects out of the area during school breaks. During the university's next winter break, a group will go to Biloxi, Mississippi, to work on a Habitat project rebuilding homes destroyed by Hurricane Katrina.

"Reaching out to others and helping those in need is part of the culture here at the Mount, so we are grateful to be able to work with the wonderful people of Habitat for Humanity," Mount Director of Community Services Melissa Main. "Students are excited that Habitat plans to build on two lots it owns right here in Emmitsburg during the next academic year. We anticipate a lot of student involvement." Main herself served on the steering committee for the first building project in Emmitsburg in

Once completed, the two homes in Emmitsburg will bring Habitat's total in Frederick County to 30. With financial support from Frederick's Evangelical Lutheran Church and the Frederick area Women's Giving Circle and a promise of skilled labor from the Frederick County Historic Trust and the County Builders' Association, Habitat will soon start renovating three homes in Frederick

Habitat also owns land in Frederick City, Middletown and Thurmont where it plans to build homes in the future. Updates on Habitat activities and projects are available on its Web

Frederick County grants available

FREDERICK, Md. - The Frederick County Parks and Recreation Commission is accepting applications for funding from its Community Grant Program for the fiscal year 2008. All applicants must be non-profit organizations who provide recreational opportunities for county residents.

The following organizations are eligible and may apply for grants: Homeowners associations, civic/community associations, athletic association and recreation councils.

The main purposes of the grants are to improve existing recreation facilities, or to assist with the construction of new ones. Funding is not permitted on land owned by municipalities or by Frederick County. Funds will be provided prior to project construction, and may be used to cover the cost of materials, equiptment and contracted labor. While the grants are generally used for the improvement of already existing facilities, they are not intended to meet the annual maintenance needs of a facility. In addition, organizations may not be funded any sooner that every two years.

Projects may not be started prior to the notice of award. Organizations that receive an award must have their projects completed within two years of July 1st of the funding year. In this case, the project completion date is set for June 30, 2009.

The application serves as the organizations presentation of their intended project. Each application is scored on recreational and community value, planning, site plan/ master plan, and local contribution.

All applications must be submitted by 4:30 p.m. on August 10. Organizations should be notified in November regarding grant awards.

For more information or to obtain an application, contact the Department of Parks and Recreation's office at (301) 600-1646.

Frederick County burning ban in effect

FREDERICK, Md. - Frederick County is under an open burning ban from June 1 through August 31. No open burning permits can be used during this time period. This ban does not apply to small recreational fires such as campfires, the use of barbeques, or gas grills.

Uniroyal

The annual ban, prescribed by the Maryland State Air Quality regulations, first went into effect in June 1995. The ban extends throughout the Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Region and is designed to reduce the high ozone levels that affect the region during the summer months.

The Frederick County Code calls for a fine up to $500 for open burning during a ban and the Maryland state regulations has a fine up to $25,000.
