My Babes in the Wood.

Once, walking in the forest wide, Two little darlings I espied. The leaves had not yet begun to grow, And chill winds wandered to and fro; Yet strange! beside a giant tree No sweeter faces could there be Than those that locked up timidly. With teardrops in their deep blue eyes, While I looked down with glad surprise.

I thought of those two children sweet Whose story little folks repeat-The poor, forlorn babes in the wood-And then I spoke in kindly mood: 'Dear little darlings! oh, how fair, All, all alone in this cold air! The night may bring us snow and frost; Tell me, my pretties, are you lost? They seemed to nestle closer then, And, though I gently spoke again, They gave no answer to my words, But were as mute as songless birds.

I bore them homeward tenderly, And called my little ones to see The pretty darlings I had found, Oh! how the merry shouts rang round! Perhaps you may have guessed my pets? They were the first spring violets.

looked unutterable things. Miss Posie Green took off her sundown and fanned herself vigorously with it. She looked warm; her face was flushed with feeling no less than the weather. She and her sister were no longer as youthful as their names suggested. Moreover, irritation to John, which were never sent, in the brings out the lines and wrinkles of a face, and it is unquestionably irritating to be passed over for a slip of a thing with a doll-baby face, not one's own flesh and blood at that.

SATURDAY, JUNE 28, 1879.

A LAND OF PROMISE. Whilst in many of the States, immigration societies, committees of enquiry, &c., have been started, and are endeavoring to attract the attention of purchasers, to their respective States and localities, we desire to enlist attention to this most northern part of Frederick county.

The cry-"go west young man,' has often been heard, many have gone and-they have returned ; others have profited by their going; but take the matter all in all, we have remarked often and repeat it now, as the result of considerble observation and experience, that the men who started into work at home here, and have steadily persevered in well doing, have rarely failed to succeed in their efforts: They did voluntar- of the man. ily at home, what they would have been obliged to do in the west or elsewhere, to be successful; to put the case in short terms-do at home, as down the ladder of fame into the you must do elsewhere and you may hamlet by the wayside. safely conclude to stay at home. In a report of Joseph S. Gitt, Esq. civil engineer "to the president and directors of the W. M. R. R. Compa. ny," published 1865, there is contained a letter from Col. Jacob M. Kunkel, since deceased, upon "the Geology and Mineralogy" of the region of which we now write, from which, because of its interesting and learned character, we make some extracts.

After describing the formation of the respective mountain ranges of the district embraced in the review, he says:

Or you'll soon be the laughing-stock all over town!

And the barber kept on shaving. 'I've studied owls. And other night fowls, And I tell you What I know to be true: An owl cannot roost With his limbs so unloosed: No owl in this world Ever had his claws curled. Ever had his legs slanted, Ever had his bill canted. Ever had his neck screwed Into that attitude. He can't do it, because 'Tis against all bird laws. Anatomy teaches, Ornithology preaches, An owl has a too That can't turn out so! I've made the white owl my study for years, And to see such a job almost moves me to tears! Mr. Brown, I'm amazed You should be so gone crazed As to put up a bird In that posture absurd! To look at the owl really brings on a dizziness; The man who stuffed him don't half know his business! And the barber kept on shaving.

'Examine those eyes. I'm fixed with surprise Taxidermists should pass Off on you such poor glass; So unnatural they seem They'd make Audubon scream, And John Burroughs laugh To encounter such chaff. Do take that bird down; Have him stuffed again, Brown!' And the barber kept on shaving,

'With some sawdust and bark I could stuff in the dark An owl better than that. I could make an old hat Look more like an owl

Female Beauty.

Let us consider some of the customs those of the Indies paint them red. The women paint the entire body in compartments of red and black. In Greenland the women color their faces with blue and yellow, and they frequently tattoo their bodies by saturating threads in soot, inserting them beneath the skin, and then drawing them through. Hindoo females, when they wish to appear particularly lovely, smear themselves with a mixture of saffron, tumeric and grease. In nearly all the islands of the Pacific and Indian oceans the women, as well as the men, tattoo a great variety of figures on the face, lips and tongue and the whole body.

In New Holland the females cut themselves with shells, and by keeping open the wounds a long time, form deep scars in the flesh, which they deem highly ornamental. And another singular addition is made to their beauty by taking off, in infancy, the little finger of the left hand at the second joint. In ancient Persia an aquiline nose was often thought worthy of the crown; but the Sumatran mother carefully flattened the nose of her daughter. Among some of the savage tribes of Oregon, and also in Sumatra and Arracan, continual pressure is applied to the skull in order to flatten it, and thus give it a new beauty. The modern Persians have a strong aversion to red hair; the Turks, on the contrary, are warm admirers of it.

In China small, round eyes are liked; and the girls are continually plucking their eyebrows that they may be thin and long. But the great beauty of a Chinese lady is in her feet, which in childhood are so compressed by bandages as effectually to prevent any further increase in size. The four smaller toes are turned under the foot, to the sole of which they firmly adhere; and the poor girl not only endures much, but becomes a cripple for life. Another mark of beauty consists in having finger nails so long that the castings of bamboo are necessary to preserve them from injury. An African beauty must have small eyes, thick lips, a large flat nose, and a skin beautifully black. In New large piece of wood or bone is inserted. On the northwest coast of America an incision more than two inches in length is made in the lower lip and then filled

The Borrowing Acquaintance.

The much-borrowing, intimate acquaintance is a peculiar sort of fraud. When he wants a little money he comes to you with the most serious air in the world, and solemnly and confidentially asks you to 'let him have' so and so, throwing into his manner an assurance indicating that there is no doubt of your giving it to him on the spot, and quite as little doubt of his returning it in the course of an hour or so. When you meet him afterward he assumes a jocose style of address, laughs quite heartily, perhaps, at the idea of not having been able to pay you for two or three weeks, and goes off, leaving you with a confused impression of impending insolvency, which resolves itself into one of three propositions: that you are an exceedingly suspicious and ill-natured man to suspect or be annoyed at the little remissness of so sweet-tempered a friend; or that your acquaintance is most remarkably ignorant of the current value of ready money and of the rates of interest; or that he has become a hopeless maniac since the last time you had the misfortune to see him. The best way to cure this sort of person of mpared with what he might have done. his eccentricity, we have learned by experience, is to lend him so much money at one time that he will go away and die hidden in the wood-pile, and wondered of joy. What a Poem Should Be.

Mr. Joaquin Miller gives the following as his idea of a poem: 'To me a poem must be a picture; and it must be a picture, if a good poem, so simple that I can understand it at a glance, and see it and remember it as I would see and remember a sunset. I also demand that it shall be lofty in sentiment and sublime in expression. The only rule I have for measuring the merits of a written poem is by the hold that it takes on my mind and memory. I do not want to remember the words, but I do demand that it remain with me a picture and become a part of my existence.' Mr. Miller cites 'Evangeline' as answering his requirement, being a succession of pictures and beautiful in language.

To a young literary man afterward his amanuensis, Thackeray, the great novelist, wrote thus, on hearing that a loss had befallen him : 'I am sincerely sorry to hear of your position, and send the little contribution which came so opportunely from another friend whom I was enabled once to help. When you are well-to-do again, I know you will pay it back ; and I daresay somebody else will want the money, which is meanwhile most heartily at your service.'

Pope Leo XIII. is tall and spare, with a patrician air.
