THOUGHTS IN A CITY CHURCH.

[THE SPECTATOR.]
Forgive the fault, if sometimes on Thy day,
And in Thine house, my prayer hath folded wing;
My spirit turned from Thee to things of sense,
And found delight in vain imagining.

Ah, cool and quiet places where men pray!
Without, the gentle sound of cawing rooks,
Within, the country faces flushed with health,
The white smocks bent above the dog-eared books;

Soft breath of mignonette and scented thyme
From the warm hands of children sitting by,
And through the open door a veil of elm
Across the glory of the Summer sky:

The sound of voices in the shady lane,
The trembling heat above some quiet mound,—
Add here the sunbeams, painting on the wall,
The ivy's shimmering shadow on the ground:

And everywhere a presence, without name,
Subtle, ineffable,—a spell, no more,—
Breathing from arch and elm, from flower and grove,—
Ay, from the trodden stones upon the floor—

A something that we know is not, to-day,
A something that gives strength to prayer and song;

And if we miss it, as we kneel to pray,
Art Thou extreme, O Lord, to mark it wrong?
Nay, for the desolate town was never Thine,
Unloveliness hath never part in Thee!

Yet, where gross man has married Thy handiwork,
Souls that he could not reach are white and free.

So that I breathe the breath of fragrant lives,
And learn that where flowers sicken, hearts grow strong,
The better man within me cries, "Content!"
Albeit the weaker whispers still, "How long?"

ONLY A FARE.

"Fare, ma'am," said the conductor. She was a shabby looking old woman, in rather rusty looking black, with a frayed lace scarf around her neck and an old-fashioned, heavily worked lace veil fastened about her bonnet rim.

"Fare!" repeated the conductor again. The passenger looked at him, dipped her hand into her pocket, rummaged in a queer little reticule she carried, and after exhausting all the patience of which a car conductor is supposed to be possessed, said slowly:

"I haven't got a penny. I suppose I've lost the change, or else I've had my pocket picked; and I'm going to — street, too."

There was a pause. The conductor looked at the passenger and hesitated. It was a damp, misty evening. The streets were ankle deep with mire. It was three miles to — street, and the car was not half full. It seemed only common humanity to permit an old woman to ride to her destination, whether she had her fare or not. But there on the platform, staring through the glass door our conductor saw the face of a car spy—a spotter, the men called him with green eyes, anxious to catch him tripping.

Poor as his place was, twenty men were waiting for it. His receipts must tally with the number of passengers recorded on the dial provided by the company for that purpose or off went his head on Saturday night. Still he could not put the old woman off his car; only one alternate remained—he could pay her fare.

Now a fare on the — road was only five cents, but 6 o'clock was coming, and he was hungry, and the supper he would have just time to snatch before his evening trip began would cost him ten cents—five cents for bread and cheese, five cents for a cup of coffee. He gave up one of these if he paid that old woman's fare. You see there was another old woman whom he called granny to be cared for, and clothes of some sort must be worn, and there were no pennies to spare. But it was the memory of old granny that arose in his heart, as he dropped in the coin, touched the bell, and nodded "all right!" to his passenger; and as he stepped from his car to take his brief rest, he handed the old woman to the curbstone, and saw her safe upon her way.

"No, I don't want anything but the coffee," he said, waving away the restaurant-keeper's boy, as he pressed the basket of rolls and sandwiches upon him. "Take that stuff away."

The bread was out of reach before he felt quite safe, he was so very hungry.

At that moment an old woman touched the car-starter upon the arm.

"Tell me the name of the conductor on car number five," she said.— "There he sits under the shed, drinking some coffee."

"That's Varnham—Tom Varnham," replied the starter, rather eagerly, for he had a relative waiting for the place. "If you have any complaint to make, there's the office." But the old woman toddled away.

Oh, the long, long winter, cold and cruel—a winter full of terrible storms of snow and sleet. Two drivers on the — line were badly frozen. Many died of lung complaints. The conductors suffered too, but not so terribly, and granny had been sick, and there was money to be spent for medicine and nourishing luxuries, and Tom Varnham's old great coat was stolen one night by a thief who made his way into the crowded lodging house.

After that he went without it, and he often wondered what it would be to be warm and to sit at a satisfying meal. Life seemed very hard, but to give up the poor situation and seek for one better was not to be thought of with granny on his hands.

The passengers who rode in car number five often snubbed their conductor, took him to task for the inconveniences they suffered, and abused him at their dining tables, or as they sat before their warm grates toasting their toes, while he shivered on the car platform. Perhaps the shabby old woman with the worked lace veil may have done it also, for she rode in the car very often, though she never found herself again without a fare.

"What's the matter?" asked a passenger.

"Three cars ahead stopped—some one hurt," replied the other. "What is it, conductor?"

"Conductor of number five dropped down," was the response. "Some say he's dead."

Tom Varnham lay in the midst of a little crowd, quite senseless and very pale.

The men were talking about him. "He's been starving himself and freezing, too," said one. "A sick old grandmother on his hands; and he was a clerk or something, never used to out-of-door work. I've seen this coming for days."

"You are the doctor," asked the shabby old woman, laying her hand on the arm of a gentleman who knelt beside poor Tom. The gentleman looked up.

"You said last week that I did not deserve to be called one, Madame Hover," he said demurely.

"Oh! Dr. Jones! Well, that was when you couldn't cure me of the neuralgia," replied the old lady. "But I want you to do something for me. Have this young man brought to my house; he did me a favor once, and do your best for him, and send the bill to me."

The doctor nodded, and when Tom Varnham came to himself he lay in a great old-fashioned feather bed in a room he had never seen before, and the old woman whose fare he had paid rocked to and fro beside his bed.

"You are not to talk," she said, waving a black fan at him, "but everything is all right. Your grandmother's board is paid to that rapacious old woman, and you needn't mind about anything. Go to sleep. You went without your bread and butter to give me a ride once, and I shan't forget, though I happen to be a rich old woman instead of a poor one, as you thought me."

Tom listened, found himself incapable of making any remark, and fell asleep again. But hard times was over for the poor fellow. When he was able to work again there was a fine position open for him in a great wholesale house, and he was able to keep a pretty suit of rooms, and a servant for old granny, and to live with her to her great joy. And moreover, it is well known that Madame Hover has made her will, leaving all her great fortune to Tom Varnham.

"Don't ask me why?" she said to the lawyer. "Perhaps you wouldn't think it much to go hungry on a stormy winter evening for the sake of a poor old woman. I could have called a coach, and I'd only lost my purse, but he didn't know that, and I always remembered just how he looked when he sent that bread away. I knew he was a good fellow, and so he is, and I have a right to leave my money according to my fancy."

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Happiness is like a sunbeam which the least shadow intercepts, while adversity is as often as the rain of spring.

Let him who regrets the loss of time make proper use of that which to come in the future.

To change and to be better are two different things.

All men look to happiness in the future. To every eye heaven and earth seem to embrace in the distance.

Modern education too often covers the fingers with rings, and at same time cuts the sinews of the wrists.

Our own hands are heaven's favorite instruments for supplying us with the necessaries and luxuries of life.

MEN are sowing seeds of truth or error, of dishonesty or integrity, every day they live and everywhere they go, that will take root in somebody's life.

Beauty.

There is something in beauty, whether it dwells in the human face, in the penciled leaves of flowers, the sparkling surface of a fountain, or that aspect which genius breathes over its statue, that makes us mourn its ruin. I should not envy that man his feelings who could see a leaf wither or a flower fall without some sentiment of regret. This tender interest in the beauty and frailty of things around us, is only a slight tribute of becoming grief and affection; for nature in our adversities never deserts us. She even comes more nearly to us in our sorrows, and, leading us away from the paths of disappointment and pain into her soothing recesses, allays the anguish of our bleeding hearts, binds up the wounds that have been inflicted, whispers the meek pledges of a better hope, and, in harmony with a spirit of still holier birth, points to that home where decay and death can never come.

A Knowing Donkey.

A Spanish peasant, living in the suburbs of Madrid, has long been in the habit of repairing daily to the city, accompanied by a donkey laden with milk for distribution among certain customers. One day, however, the master was taken ill, whereupon his wife suggested that the ass should be sent on the journey alone. The panniers were accordingly filled with cans of milk as usual, and a bit of paper was attached to the donkey's headstall, requesting the customers to help themselves to their ordinary allowance of milk, and to put back the cans into the panniers. Off started the donkey, and he returned in due course with the cans empty and with everything in order. The master found upon inquiry that the trusty messenger had called at the right doors some instances he had pulled the bell with his teeth when kept waiting. From that day forward the donkey has gone his rounds alone.

REMEDY FOR HARD TIMES.—Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read of it in another column.

No matter how poor people are, nearly every one can afford to keep a pair of horses—one for clothes and the other for wood.

No Family Can Be Happy Without One.

A day or two ago a motherly-looking woman of forty-five entered a Woodward-avenue clothing store having a man's linen duster on her arm, and when approached by a salesman she said:

"Some one in here sold this duster to my son yesterday."

"Yes, ma'am. I sold it myself," replied the clerk, as he looked at the garment.

"Did you tell my son that this duster could be worn either to a picnic, funeral, bridal party or quarterly meeting?"

"I did, madam, and so it can."

"Did you tell him it made a good flyblanket when not otherwise needed?"

"I did."

"That it could be used as a boat-sail, a stretcher, a straw-bed and a bedspread?"

"Yes, ma'am, I did."

"And that many people used them as table-covers?"

"I did."

"And that they would last for years and then make excellent stuff for a rag carpet?"

"I did."

"And you only charged a dollar?"

"Only a dollar, ma'am."

"Well, when John came home last night and brought the duster, and told me all you said, I made up my mind that he must have been drunk, and I was a little afraid he stole the garment. I am glad it's all right."

"It certainly is all right, ma'am, and since he was here yesterday we have discovered that the duster is a great conductor of sound, a preventative of sunstroke, and that no man with one on his back ever dropped dead of heart disease."

"Land save us!" she gasped, as she waited for the bundle; "but who knows that they won't fix 'em so 'fore long that they'll raise a mortgage off the farm?"

NOT FRATERNAL.—A colored man was busily engaged in sawing some wood for a Galveston gentleman.—The "man and brother" has a large Masonic breastpin in his shirt bosom.

"Do you colored Masons and white Masons affiliate?"

"Don't fillyate wuff a cuss."

"What's the matter?"

"Dunno, boss, I've tried it. Dar's a barkeeper in dis town what toted dis heah very same emblem. I was in d'stress, hadn't a dram all dat morning. I came in, and gabe de d'stress signal."

"Did he respond?"

"He didn't respond right."

"Why?"

"Case, he made a motion at de doah wid one hand and reached under de bar. I made one moah sign, and he fotched me 'tween de shoulders wid de bung stater, jest as I was gittin' out de doah."

FASHIONABLE: And now we are told that some of the fashionable young men at Saratoga and other watering places not only powder their faces, but that they actually paint. That they wear corsets has long been admitted. How far this aping of femininity is to extend it is hard to say; but we hope the young men will stop it before they actually become mothers.

SECTIONALISM.

In times like the present when the pride of learning and the suggestions of ambition, have full sway, when wavering hope looks doubtfully upon the sacred institutions of the past, the smile of incredulity is apt to meet allusions to the garnered wisdom of ages, and now in the midst of the heat and fury of our quadrennial Presidential election campaign it does not seem to be out of place for us to refer to some of the words of wisdom, which like divine inspirations, were enunciated by the patriotic fathers, in the formative period of our government.

The meagre harvest yields in Europe indicate that America must be looked to for bread. THIRTEEN thousand barrels of apples were shipped for Europe from New York on Saturday. THE Empress of Austria has received the title of honorary Colonel of a regiment of Russian Uhlans.

JOHN L. MARTINETT, aged 27, died in New York yesterday of hydrophobia. He was bitten twelve years ago by a pet dog. DR. W. A. HALLOCK, the founder of the American Tract Society, and its secretary for forty five years, died on Saturday last, aged 86.

THE spirit of sectionalism is evil and only evil. It cannot promote agriculture, it but paralyses the strong arm of commerce in general and defeats while it exists, all attempts at drawing closer the ends of social intercourse. The great prosperity of the North, the indispensable character of the Southern staple articles of production, the growing importance and wonderful increase of these, with the rapid development of the resources of their exhaustless soil, together with the rushing tide of the Western progress in every department of trade, are bringing the sections to realize more and more their interdependence upon each other.

GRAVOSA, where the allied fleet is now assembled with the object of making a "demonstration" on Dulcigno and compelling the Turks and Albanians to surrender it to Montenegro, is the seaport of Ragusa, one of the most considerable towns in the Austrian province of Dalmatia. Ragusa lies at the foot of Mount Sergins, and had in 1870 a population of 8,600. It contains a cathedral built by Richard Cœur de Lion, and is an old city, founded in the seventh century by the Venetians. It was a republic during the middle ages, and in the fifteenth century had 40,000 inhabitants.

THE COUNTRY PRESS. The National Tribune, published in Washington, D. C., pays a just compliment to the publishers of rural papers, as follows: "On looking over our extensive exchange list, we are often impelled to believe there is a larger share of practical wisdom to be found in the editorials of what are called 'country papers,' than in the more stylish and pretentious journals, published in our great cities. There may not be so many Latin quotations used, there may not be so much scholastic acquirement displayed, but you will observe, we think, evidences that their editors are not so speculative in their ideas; they mingle more with the people, they gather inspiration from discussing questions of public concern with the people they meet freely and socially; while the city editor, in his elegant mirrored and carpeted sanctum, wrapped up in opinions derived from books, and moving in a select and exclusive circle which stands aloof from the masses, is scarce ever in personal contact with men, who in their workshops or on their farms give the keynote to public opinion."

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 5th. The second annual Exhibition of the National Fair Association opened to-day, and lasts until the 16th. The business man's parade in the morning was the event of the day. It was large, and represented all the leading business houses of the city, and many prominent industries of the country. The attendance is more than satisfactory, and one is reminded forcibly by the people more than the buildings of the Philadelphia centennial.

There is one pleasant side to the Indiana contest, and that is the evident determination of both parties to secure a fair election. The Committee of the two parties have agreed upon a plan to secure a fair count, which is creditable to both.

Though the Republicans have but little hope of carrying the State, they are making a hard fight, and if they win, the victory will be as much a surprise as was the Maine victory to the Democrats. The number of government officials taking part in this campaign is greater than in any previous Presidential contest. Secretary Schurz is away doing duty for the Republicans. Secretary Sherman is in Ohio, Secretary Evarts in New York, Secretary Ramsey on the Pacific slope, and Secretary Thompson and Maynard are here there and everywhere.

The Washington Art School commences its autumn session this week amid favorable conditions and in the ecstacy of assured success. Taking into consideration the difficulties removed in the past, the obstacles surmounted, the genuine progress made in the right direction, it may be considered a brilliant success. There was a time when the establishment of an art school in Washington was an experiment, the results of which were shrouded in uncertainty.

The Washington Art School, under its present management, is no longer an experiment. The session which opens this week will be marked by the introduction of new opportunities for advancement in the technicalities of art, that hitherto, have not, for obvious reasons been afforded the student. Pife and technique classes will be formed. Those desiring to enter earnestly upon the study of the arts, and at the same time wish to enjoy the gaieties of a Washington winter, should come here and attend this school, its success, high standing, and the advancement of its students in the past is enough to favorably recommend it to all.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE Agricultural Society AND People of Frederick County!

At a special meeting of the Board of Managers of the Frederick County Agricultural Society held September 27th, 1880, the action of the Board of the Saturday previous was unanimously reversed by the substitution of the following:

Resolved, That the Annual Exhibition of this Society as advertised to commence on Tuesday, October 12th, be postponed to Tuesday, October 26th, and terminating on Friday, October 29th, 1880, subject to the same rules and regulations as prescribed in the regular premium list.

With the announcement of the above, the undersigned Committee was unanimously instructed by the Board to present succinctly and briefly the reasons which induced their actions.

With a just appreciation of their responsibilities as the custodians of the welfare and prosperity of the Society the Board felt assured that the Exhibition, as previously announced; in view of the obstacles opposed, would prove a lamentable failure.

To summarize briefly: The overshadowing influence of the grand Sesqui-Centennial (Baltimore's one hundred and fiftieth anniversary) progressing the same week as our proposed Fair, whilst attracting thousands of our citizens and farmers, the main stay and support of our institution, at the same time would draw from our country, many, very many, of the fair wives and daughters whose encouraging smiles and presence redound so largely to our success, and whose skilful handiwork has rendered our Household Department the centre of attraction and an object of admiration and pride. The Board deem it unnecessary to enlarge on the subject as its influence extends to every family, and is patent to all. Besides the development and prosperity of Baltimore should elicit the pride of every Marylander, and we should rejoice in the opportunity which presents to evince our interest in the great commercial city with which we are connected by all the ties natural to man.

Also, the "Great Fair" at Washington under national auspices, with its $25,000 in premiums and but an hour or two distant by rail, in progress at the same time, would further tend to deplete our population and leave, we sincerely believe, a meagre representation for us.

Also, by this action of the Board our Society avoids conflicting with her Sister Societies, Washington county, Gettysburg, and Winchester, all commencing October 19th, and those persons whose feelings point to "Pimlico," can indulge the bent of their inclinations without expatriating themselves from their own Society.

The Railroad fares so low, the attractions so many, the opportunities so great, what could we then present to stem the outward torrent. While a few tried and faithful friends would remain true to their first love, by far the largest number who seek excitement and pleasure and at little, if any additional expense, would be conspicuously absent.

Actuated by a sincere desire for the permanent success of our institution, the Board express the hope that their action will receive the approbation of every member and friend of the Society. [Signed on behalf of the Board.]

GLANDING'S Patent Trunk, Patented September 30, 1879, by Thomas Glanding, Baltimore, Md.

This Trunk is presented to the public, and the special attention of buyers is called to its advantages. The body and lid of the trunk are made in the usual manner. The trays, which are a special feature, are divided into two sections, the smaller tray or parasol case being attached to the lid, is raised out of the body when the lid is raised. The larger or main tray is attached to the ends of the body by means of parallel arms, so that the tray may be raised and carried back into the lid in its original horizontal position, and is supported on the arms, thus giving access to the body of the trunk. The arms are pivoted to plates of suitable metal, on which are knobs or projections to stop their motion and prevent the tray from falling back against the lid. We ask the ladies when in town to call and examine the Trunk at GEO. A. GILBERT'S Hat, Boot & Shoe Store, NO 16 N. MARKET ST., Frederick City, Maryland. Ask for Glanding's Patent Trunk. Use no other. mar1 1880

Agricultural.

A FRENCH paper relates the following experiment: A cow was milked three times a day for eleven days, and yielded 170 quarts of milk. With two milkings daily she gave only 146 quarts in the same number of days. Analysis moreover showed that the milk in the first case was richer in butter globules by more than one-seventh than in the second case.

NEVER water a horse directly after feeding him, especially if he is fed on corn. Thirst should be allayed before the feed is given, and if any water is allowed after it should be merely a mouth full, until the lapse of two or three hours time has been had for gastric digestion. Many valuable animals have been lost by allowing them to drink freely directly after eating.

VALUABLE RECIPES.

QUINCE SNOW.—One-third pound quince marmalade to whites of two eggs and quarter pound sugar; pile in a pyramid in a dish and bake a pale yellow.

BALSAM FOR CHAPPED LIPS.—Take two spoonfuls of clarified honey, with a few drops of lavender water, or any other perfume. Mix, and anoint the lips frequently.

WATER CAKES.—Two eggs beaten very light, one pint of cold water, one teaspoonful of salt, flour to make it as thick as fritters, bake half an hour in a hot oven; eat with butter; bake in little tins filled full.

PRESSED CHICKEN.—Take one or two chickens, boil in a small quantity of water with a little salt, and when thoroughly done take all the meat from the bones, keeping the light meat separated from the dark, chop fine and season; put in a pan a layer of dark and light, add the liquor it was boiled in, which should be about a teacupful, put on a small weight; when cold cut in slices.

RICE BLANCHMANGE.—Take one pint of new milk, add to it two eggs well beaten, four spoonfuls of ground rice, two spoonfuls of brandy; grate a little nutmeg, sweeten it to your taste, boil it; when near cold, put it into your mould; when quite cold, turn it out, mix a little sugar, cream and nutmeg, and put round it in the dish; garnish with red currant jelly.

LEMON PIE.—One grated lemon, two and one-half cups of boiling water, one-half a cup of cold water, one and one-half cups of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of corn starch, and butter the size of an egg. Put the corn starch in the cold water and stir in the boiling water. This makes two pies. Bake with under crust. Beat the whites of two eggs for frosting.

LEMON PRESERVE.—Cut the rind of the lemons as thick as you can without cutting the pulp; put the fruit in cold water, and boil it in three different waters until quite soft. Make a syrup of refined sugar, and put three quarters of a pound of sugar to each lemon.—Boil the syrup, and then put the lemons into it, and boil them sometime. Put them all into a basin, and turn them every day for four or five days. Then boil the syrup again, and put the lemons into separate pots, with enough syrup to cover them.

TO DRY PUMPKINS.—Take ripe pumpkins, pare, cut into small pieces, stew soft, mash and strain through a colander, as if for making pies. Spread this pulp on plates, in layers some half an inch thick; dry it in a stove oven, which should be kept at so low a temperature as not to scorch it. In about a day it will become dry and crisp. The sheets thus made can then be stowed away in a dry place, and are always ready for use, either for pies or stewing. The quick drying after cooking prevents the souring which is almost always the case when the uncooked pieces are dried, while the flavor is much better preserved and the after cooking dispensed with. On going to use soak portions of the article in a little milk over night, when it will return to as delicious a pulp as if made of a pumpkin when fresh.

"MY dear," said a sentimental maiden to her lover, "of what do these autumnal tints, this glowing baldric of the sky, this blazing garniture of the dying year, remind you?" "Pancakes!" he promptly answered. And then she realized for the first time that two hearts did not beat as one.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopedia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution. THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopedia in the field. Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume. Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free. Leading principles of the American Book Exchange: I. Publish only books of real value. II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago. III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers. IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity. V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value. VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.
