BOYS WANTED.

Boys of spirit, boys of will,
Boys of muscle, brain and power,
Fit to cope with anything,
These are wanted every hour.

Not the weak and winning drones,
Who all troubles magnify:
Not the watchword of "I can't,"
But the nobler one, "I'll try."

Do what'er you have to do
With a true and earnest zeal;
Bend your sinews to the task,
"Put your shoulders to the wheel."

Though your duty may be hard,
Look not on it as an ill;
If it be an honest task,
Do it with an honest will.

In the workshop, on the farm,
At the desk, where'er you be,
From your future efforts boys,
Comes a nation's destiny.—

The Mysterious Babies.

BY REV. FD. S. GREGORY.

THE best friends of the old doctor could not deny that he was disposed to be absent-minded. It may be that his thoughts were generally occupied about his patients and their diseases. It may be that he had acquired this habit of abstraction, as it is called, because he was so often on the road, both by day and night; and I have noticed that those who dwell familiarly with nature are often so fascinated by its beauties and its mysteries that they get out of the ordinary run of small cares and small talk. When people fall into this way of dwelling apart from the circumstances about them they are said to be wool-gathering; though why absent-minded folks should be thought to gather wool rather than hay or hickory-nuts or huckle berries is one of those things that no fellow has ever found out.

The doctor was not so very old when the incident about the six babies took place. That period was a long time ago, when the good county of Bedford, in Virginia, was not so highly civilized as it is at present. At the time that I speak of people lived very far apart and along very rough and difficult roads. They visited little, spending most of their time at home, the men at work on their farms, the ladies managing their houses, their servants and their children. The doctor knew all of them of course. Whenever there way any public gathering, political or religious, then all the good people for scores of miles in every direction assembled, bringing their dinners in baskets and hampers, and spending often not only one day but several and having a good time generally in an old fashioned way.

The occasion on which the incident of the mysterious babies occurred was a grand annual meeting of the Old Side Baptist Association. The brethren were out in full force. The time was summer, but the weather was not warm; the trees were in full leaf; the church was beautifully situated in the midst of a deep and ancient grove, and near at hand was a mountain brook, whose gentle descent over the rocks and roots made sweet and tinkling music to the ear. Along the fence many hundreds of horses were tied and hundreds of others to twigs and saplings; some with men's saddles on them, some side saddles, some pack-saddles, some pillows and some no saddles at all. And there were carriages, buggies, barouches, wagons, gigs, carryalls, carts, clashes and ox drags, and in fact pretty much everything that could carry people from one point to another. And sure enough the people were there to prove that the wagons and other conveyances had conveyed them. Nobody ever saw a more lively and animated sight; those moving figures of old and young, male and female, great and small, white and black, through the long green arches of the wood and upon its quilted carpet of interlaced shadow and sunshine. But if I linger in this way over the crowd and the scene I will never have a chance to tell you about the mysterious babies.

The doctor was at the Association as where else ought the doctor to have been? Not that only, but he was the most important personage on the ground. The candidate for Congress was also there and be sure he didn't lack for attention from men or women. The delegate who sat in the legislature was also present and he was shaking hands with his dear constituents all day and was in high feather. Both of these gentlemen were anxious to save the country, and both very certain that the country could not be saved unless they were elected. And many people followed them about and thought themselves highly honored when these great men gave them a passing word.

The doctor had barely arrived on the ground when he was asked to prescribe for a sick baby. He found very little the matter with the child but wrote off some simple prescription of home remedies and thought nothing more about it. Or rather he did not notice that the colored girl who brought the child to him was in a broad grin; that used to be the way with those honest people and is so yet, and therefore that did not long engage his thoughts.

Before the doctor had time to ask the news he was again called into requisition, this time to draw a poor fellow's jaw-tooth—a big one, an old one and a heavy one.

We draw a veil over that struggle, for in those days tooth-pulling was tooth-pulling and no mistake. The doctor wiped the blood from the old-fashioned forceps on some red dog-wood leaves and looked up to find a colored woman standing by him with a baby in her arms. The woman was fat, the baby thin and had a yellow shawl around it. The woman, in a laugh, said the baby was sick and its mother wanted him to prescribe for it.

"Who is its mother?" demanded the doctor.

"Miss Smif, whar lives down by Possum Hollow Creek," said the negro.

[Take good notice that "Miss" is a short way the Southern negroes have or had of saying "Mrs." or "Mistress."]

"Well, I don't know Mrs. Smith who lives at Possum Hollow Creek," answered the doctor, "but if the baby is sick it shall have some physic." Then he felt its pulse and looked at its tongue and found very little the matter with the baby, considering that it was sick; but he wrote off another prescription of things that would do no harm if they did no good, and sent the girl away.

The doctor's family were somewhere on the ground but he had not yet seen them. They had come with escorts of their own, in the family coach, and had arrived there before him. He began to think it was time he should look them up.—So great was the crowd and so extensive the woods that the doctor could not all at once find his people. This worried him so that he forgot all about the babies he had prescribed for, and so he was not at all surprised when, in passing a group on the grass, a lady called him up and asked him as a special favor, to look at her baby who had been ailing for several days.

"With all the pleasure in the world, madam," replied the doctor, who was a gentleman of the old school; and when the infant was brought forward with a blue shawl cast around it, he asked a great many questions, felt its pulse and looked at its tongue with great interest and gravity.

"I am glad to say, madam," remarked the doctor, "that I find the little one by no means seriously sick. I will give you some simple preparation from my saddle bags, and I am sure the child will be well in a day or two."

The lady was made so happy at hearing this good news that she smiled very broadly, in fact laughed, and that loudly. The doctor could hear her laughing very loudly after he left her, and it did him good to think he could afford people that much pleasure.

Well, the doctor discovered his family at last, and in due course of time the dinner was served, and many of their friends, after the old fashion of the country, shared the meal with them, and contributed their own to the common stock.—Everybody was cheerful, and the doctor was telling his best anecdotes—the ones that he had frequently put to the test and knew to be good ones—and the dinner was good, and the day was fine, and everything above and below was delightful.—But the doctor had hardly finished his fifth anecdote when his oldest daughter drew him lightly aside and whispered:

"Father, Mrs. Simmons says she wants to see you a little while about her baby. It hasn't been well for several days."

There was Mrs. Simmons, sure enough, with the sick baby wrapped up in a green cloak. The baby looked unusually well for a sick baby. But what has medical science to do with such things as these? The doctor looked very grave; suggested peritonitis, even cyanosis trachealis. But after a while he cheered the afflicted mother with the assurance that he could discover no serious symptoms, and that a dose of catnip tea would probably set the infant right. Then the doctor kissed the baby, and chuckled it under the chin, and called it "a pretty little thing, just like its mother," which made Mrs. Simmons so proud that she burst into a roar of laughter that shook the leaves for a yard around her.

The doctor did not like being treated with so much levity, even by his best friends, but he took off his hat to the lady with the best grace, and said he was happy to be of service to her. Then he returned to his family and friends and their dinner, which was still progressing.

Twice more during the meal the doctor was interrupted during his anecdotes by an exactly similar professional summons. One of the times the sick child was borne in the arms of a colored nurse, and was clad in a scarlet sacque; the other time it was brought to him by Mrs. Pentecost, a neighbor, who had protected her offspring from the weather by casting over him an orange hood. Both times the babies were less sick than sick babies generally are; and the colored nurse seemed more hilarious and showed more of her teeth than is allowed to the happiest negro in the height of the corn shucking; and Mrs. Pentecost appeared to enjoy her baby's illness as if it were one of the choicest jokes of the season.

In fact, everybody seemed to the doctor to be in a splendid humour. When he went back to his friends, all of them had their handkerchiefs stuffed into their mouths, and his wife in particular, appeared to be on the eve of having hysterics. The doctor, absent-minded as he was, saw that there was some joke afloat, and he was keen to discover it, and to enjoy the laugh at the expense of some worthy friend.

So he demanded an explanation. And he got it.

To this effect, namely: that his own baby, one Luke, two years of age, had been palmed off on him six times that morning by as many as six different people, as their several babies, and had been duly prescribed for as such; whereas, the own dear father of the poor little creature never once recognized his own features in those of the mysterious infants that were presented to him.

Luke did not take any of the physic prescribed for him, and hence grew up to be a remarkably fine and healthy boy. He was well grown before people ceased to tell and laugh over the joke they had practiced on his father at the Old Side Association. I saw Luke only the other day, and found him a great big man, with grizzled whiskers and a little bald spot, like a priest's tonsure, on the top of his head. He has been a brave captain and is now a leading lawyer in the distant county in which he lives; and he has as many children around his own knees and fireside as he represented in his own person on that long remembered day at the Association.—South Atlantic Magazine.

Presence of Mind.

Presence of mind has lately proved valuable in several interesting cases. Henry Kuhn, at the bottom of Dubuque well drove his pickaxe into the side, and stood under it when he saw the earth-laden bucket falling, thus saving himself from being crushed. John Carey, when lightning struck the New Haven mill of which he was foreman, knocked down three of the panic stricken operators, who were madly rushing toward the narrow exit, and so prevented a dangerous jam on a stairway. Mrs. Dunkin, of Long Prairie, Minn., was threatened with an axe by her crazy son. She said, "Well if you want to cut my head off, let's go to the chopping block." He nodded, and they passed out to the wood-pile. It was dark, and addressing him with, "Now, I'll put my head on the block," she drew the white kerchief from her neck and threw it down and slipped away.—The lunatic struck the kerchief a heavy but harmless blow. Julia Clarke, a San Francisco factory girl, was caught in a machine by her long hair. She seized a pair of shears and cut off her tresses so quickly that she was not drawn between the wheels and killed, as she otherwise would have been. Ten men started down the shaft of a Nevada mine in a small skip. The donkey engine broke, and the miners felt their vessel sink downward with lightning speed. Deathly fear turned every face white. In the panic most of them clutched the skip to wait for the crash. At the first intimation of disaster, Patrick McCarthy, the engineer at the top of the shaft, seized a heavy plank and thrust the end between the pinion shaft and the reel, from which the cable was running off. The drum was revolving with terrific speed, and the friction produced streams of fire and smoke. But the engineer's thrust was exactly at the right point, and the end of the board soon checked the descent, bringing the skip to a standstill a few feet from the bottom.

Never Return.

It is said that one out of every four real invalids who go to Denver, Col., to recover health, never returns to the East or South except as a corpse. The undertakers, next to the hotel keepers, have the most profitable business. This excessive mortality may be prevented and patients saved and cured under the care of friends and loved ones at home, if they will but use Hop Bitters in time. This we know. See other column.

Married People would be Happy. If home trials were never told to neighbors.

If they kissed and made up after every quarrel.

If household expenses were proportioned to receipts.

If they tried to be as agreeable as in courtship days.

If each would try to be a support and comfort to the other.

If each remembered the other was a human being, not an angel.

If women were as kind to their husbands as they were to their lovers.

If fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of summer work.

If both parties remembered that they married for worse as well as for better.

If men were as thoughtful for their wives as they were for their sweethearts.

If there were fewer "please darlings," in public, and more common manners in private.

If wives and husbands would take some pleasure as they go along and not degenerate into mere toiling machines. Recreation is necessary to keep the heart in its place, and to get along without it is a big mistake.

If men would remember that a woman can't be always smiling who has to cook the dinner, answer the door bell half a dozen times, and get rid of a neighbor who has dropped in, tend to a sick baby, tie up the cut finger of a two-year-old, gather up the playthings of a four-year-old, tie up the head of a six-year-old, and get an eight-year-old ready for school, to say nothing of sweeping, cleaning, etc. A woman with all this to contend with may claim it as a privilege to look and feel a little tired some times, and a word of sympathy would not be too much to expect from the man, who during the honeymoon wouldn't let her carry as much as a sunshade.

WHILE ten men watch for chances one man makes chances; while ten men wait for something to turn up, one turns up something. So while ten fail, one succeeds and is called a man of luck and a favorite of fortune. There is no luck like pluck, and fortune most favors those who are most indifferent to fortune.

POLITICAL NOTES.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD'S COUP DE MAIN.

The movements in the field of politics, within the last ten days, have been of more than ordinary interest.

After about six weeks spent by the Senate of the United States, in the effort to complete its organization, preparatory to commencing the public business, the dead-lock arising from the evenly balanced members of the parties, was broken about the middle of last week.

The distinguished Senator Conkling of New York, in his great desire to control the nominations from his State, having manipulated the caucus determinations of his party to suit his ends, proposed to secure the approval of his favorites, and then have the nomination of Judge Robertson as collector of the port of New York, to lie over till next December.

Robertson's nomination has been objectionable in the extreme to him. It was owing in great measure to his course, that the Grant party was defeated at Chicago last year, of that party Mr. Conkling was the unyielding leader, hence his bitter and unrelenting opposition to Robertson.

At the moment when the caucus rulings seemed to favour the Senator's plans, the President with a stroke of the pen withdrew all the nominations, which Conkling had hoped to have confirmed, and that of Robertson, so objectionable to him, alone remains of the New York list. This action of the President took the Senator aback, as well as the whole country. The will of Conkling has ruled for years past, in the party, and thinking to maintain his leadership, he bade defiance to the administration, and thus the course of the President in thwarting the plans of opposition, has met the warmest applause of his friends, who hail his action as indicative of manliness, self-respect and independence, suitable to the high office he fills.

The Country will now look on anxiously, to learn by what means the haughty, yet sagacious and skillful politician, of New York, may seek to retaliate upon the administration, or how gracefully, or ungracefully he may retire from the scenes, in which he has been so splendidly out-generalled, and yet it must not be supposed these issues have been simply personal.

The active investigations of the new Post-Master-General have uncovered contracts in the star-route service by which immense frauds have been perpetrated on the Postal department of the government, through a long course of years. The investigations still proceed, and the determination seems to be, to make the work thorough, and that the guilty shall be punished.

Among the first business transacted by the Senate has been the ratification of the Chinese treaties. One of these regards, commerce between this country and China, the other pertains to the immigration of Chinese labourers, a question which has profoundly agitated the State of California. The terms of the treaties have not, up to this writing, been made public.

LABOUR strikes have arisen in various sections of the land. The war against monopolies continues, and we trust it may go forward, in the interest of the people, until the occasions for industrial disturbances shall grow less and less. The discernment of the popular judgment, when not influenced by seducing elements, continually gravitates to what is just and right.

THE Rev. Arthur Edwards, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, will leave Chicago for Europe shortly to make a bicycle tour of the British islands and some of the continental countries.

SECRETARY BLAINE and Senator Conkling have engaged rooms in the same hotel at Manhattan Beach for the coming August.

THE Russian government has decided to discontinue public executions.

THE butter, cheese, egg, and milk business of this country is estimated to be worth $480,000,000.

THE illumination of the cataract at Niagara by electricity will be resumed some time this month.

THE Crown Prince Radolph of Austria and the Princess Staphanie of Belgium were married Tuesday.

MR. ARCHIBALD MACMARTER, the founder and editor of the Musical Review, died in New York yesterday, aged thirty-five years.

THE French are now making printing type from glass. They are said to be harder, clearer and more durable than those made of ordinary type metal.

IN Memphis, Tenn., yesterday, Dr. Ray, a leading physician, was killed and Capt. Fowler, a druggist, fatally injured by the explosion of a soda fountain at the latter's place of business.

HENRY WARD BEECHER says he doesn't know anything about evolution, and doesn't care whether he descended from a monkey or not, provided he has descended far enough.

THE British 3 per cent. consol bond was quoted in London, last week, at 102 1-16 and 102 3-16, which is believed to be the highest figure ever reached. In 1852 they were quoted at 102.

THE Rev. Mr. Talmage welcomed three hundred and ten new members on Sunday, the fruit of the recent revival. In his sermon, speaking of infidels, he said: "I have more respect for the fangs of a rattlesnake than for a man who would sting to death the hope of a whole race and substitute nothing."

GUARD AGAINST DISEASE.—If you find yourself getting bilious, head heavy, mouth foul, eyes yellow, kidneys disordered, symptoms of piles tormenting you, take at once a few doses of Kidney-Wort. It is nature's great assisting. Use it as an advance guard—don't wait to get down sick. See large advertisement.

DETROIT MAY 9.—Lyman Gody, a young farmer, living near Lamont, 12 miles west of Grand Rapids, this State, was killed this morning by his hired man, Gorman, with whom he quarreled. The origin of the dispute is not known. The murderer was arrested. Gody was a respected citizen. He leaves a wife and one child.

THE French papers announce the discovery of a remedy, which is declared to be instantaneous in its efficacy, for burns occasioned by oil of vitriol—a soft paste of calcined magnesia and water, with which the parts burned are covered to the thickness of an inch. The pain is almost immediately alleviated, and after a few hours, when the paste is removed, no scar remains.

CHICAGO, May 9.—A man was found lying unconscious on the sidewalk about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. By the aid of restoratives he partially recovered, but soon relapsed and a doctor pronounced it a genuine case of sunstroke. The mercury rose as high as 85 degrees during the afternoon yesterday, and the heat, coming so close upon the cold weather, caused considerable distress.

THE canning house of Mr. William H. Mahan, near Churchville, Harford county, has been repeatedly robbed of late. Friday morning Mr. Mahan and one of his hands surprised and captured four tramps in the canning house. They had probably passed the night there, and were making their breakfast on canned fruit. They gave their names as James Brady, William Edwards, James Thompson and Edward Smith, and hail from Philadelphia. Justice Loflin committed them to jail.

THE majority of the hands employed by the Pocomoke Steam Mill Company will, it is said, "strike" for higher wages on Monday next. The men employed in the lumber yard are now receiving 75 cents per day, and claim that they cannot live on that amount; on the other hand, the company claim that the present low prices of lumber will not justify them in acceding to the demands of the men, who want $1 per day. Their hands now work from "sun to sun," or about 13 hours out of 24.

CEREBRO-SPINAL MENINGITIS.—The deaths from cerebro spinal meningitis, otherwise known as spotted fever, have been so numerous in New York city since January as to call for special action by the health department, which is endeavoring to prevent an epidemic of the disease. The total number of cases reported from Jan. 1. to last Saturday was 268, of which 223 were fatal. The number of deaths from the disease in 1879 was 108, and in 1880, 170, so that the increase this year affords just occasion for alarm.

Agricultural.

The Cow Pea.

The value of the cow pea for forage and the renovating of worn-out lands is too little appreciated by most farmers. It takes the place of clover in the South, the hot dry summers usually burning the latter out there. It is sown among corn at the last working; having plenty of time to form a heavy mass of foliage before frost; being not only a good fertilizer but affording pasturage for hogs and cattle. I used to wonder why it was given the name of "Cow Pea," until I noticed the greedy relish with which my cattle fed upon them, eating not only the pods but the dry vines in preference to good corn fodder. Last season (about June 20th) I sowed four or five acres broadcast upon the poorest sandy land I had, plowed them in lightly and left them to care for themselves. Before frost they had made such a growth as made it difficult to walk through them; this was upon land where clover would not even take. Contrary to the usual rule, I let them lay upon the land all winter instead of plowing in; experience has taught me that it is best not to plow sandy land in the fall, as it is injured by exposure to the cold and winds of winter and spring. Upon turning my cattle out on the peas soon after frost had killed them all, the flow of milk and yield of butter was doubled. One which I intended to butcher fattened upon them alone. Although they would fill themselves with the peas they did not seem to be injured by them; but I would suggest a little caution about turning them upon them during wet weather.

A neighbor of mine told me that he threw the peas and corn together to his hogs, and they would pick out the peas in preference. There can be no doubt their value as food for hogs. I expect to sow a field in them this season, in which to turn my hogs next fall to fatten. Some may argue that if allowed to go to seed they will take more from the land than they give back, but I hold that if they are fed upon the land all or nearly all will be returned again and the vines which the stock trample down afford a good mulch for the land during winter, and is as valuable as that much clover to plow in the following spring. Chemists say that clover and peas contain about the same quantity of fertilizing elements. The cow pea has the advantage of growing anywhere, while clover requires good land. I think it would be a good plan to sow them among many crops that are laid by early; such as corn, peas, potatoes, &c., they are slow in starting and would not injure those crops before they mature, and would cover the ground with their foliage to the exclusion of weeds and grass. Although they will grow upon the poorest land the addition of manure or guano is a great help to a vigorous growth; upon rich land they may be mown for hay as soon as in full blossom, curing as readily as clover hay, and equally as valuable for cattle. The kinds mostly raised at the South are the black corn-field pea, and the whippoorwill, the latter though smaller is the rankest grower and preferred for plowing under green; the seed can be readily obtained of most of the seedmen of Baltimore for from seventy-five cents to one dollar per bushel. One bushel to the acre is sufficient in sowing, which can be done either in drills or broadcast, the first admits of their being cultivated, which is a great advantage, causing a much greater growth of pods and vine.—R. S. C. American Farmer.

CORN.—Mr. Wm. T. Aud, one of the most successful farmers of Medley's district, kindly furnishes the ADVOCATE his method of preventing the ravages of the worm in his corn. He tells us that he has used the plan given below for a number of years and with the very best results. The seed corn is put in fish brine over night; in the morning the brine is made to run off and the corn is then ready for planting. The seed must be moist with brine before it is put into the ground. If in the morning it is discovered that not sufficient seed has been soaked, then put other seed in the brine allowing it to remain until dinner time and then take out as in the first instance.—Rockville Advocate.

Humorous.

YOUNG men may be too fresh, but eggs—never.

To steal a ride on an elevated railway would be highway robbery.

THE young man that runs often after a sherry cobbler will never get his shoes mended.

WHEN that young man out West hugged his best girl to death was it not a dead-lock?

WHEN two women with new hats on pass on the street, there is a pair of back stares built immediately.

"He's an honest young man," said the saloon keeper, with an approving smile; "he sold his vote to pay his whisky bill."

It is a noticeable fact that a hog has to be killed before he is cured. This is true of two-legged hogs as well as of quadrupeds.

A YOUNG man in love is not necessarily a mathematician, but he is nearly always a sigh for her. If you can't cipher this out we sigh for you.

THE words of Mr. Joshua Billings are pointed. "Thar iz advice enuff now laying around loose to run three just such worlds as this; what we are suffering most for iz sum good examples."

No man can go to heaven on another man's goodness. Every ticket of admission into paradise is marked "Not transferable," or, in the language of the colored thinker, "No gentleman admitted unless he comes hisself."

A poor darkey was in despair at the immortality of the world. He said: "Moses cut all the commandments wid a chisel in stone, but he broke 'em all before he got down the hill. Den, when he cut a new set, de chillum of Isrl broke 'em all again."

A VERY tall, thin Highlander said that he "had a cold in his head, originating in wet feet." She looked at him slowly from head to foot and back again, as if measuring the distance the cold had to travel, and then ejaculated, "Gracious me! you must have wet your feet some time last year."

A LITTLE boy who was to pass the afternoon with the doctor's little daughter was given two pieces of candy. When he returned his mother inquired if he gave the larger piece to the little girl. "No, mother, I didn't. You told me always to give the biggest piece to company, and I was company over there."

A BIG six-footer was lifting for all he was worth on a wagon wheel which was stuck, when a little two foot mite of humanity nearly as broad as he was long, and just out of dresses and into pants, with his hands in his pockets and a swaggering air, sang out: "Mister, do you want me to help you? I can grunt while you lift."

A NEW JERSEY preacher, who was annoyed by the ladies of his congregation turning about in their seats, paused in his discourse to say: "Ladies, if you will give me your attention for a few moments, I will keep a lookout on the door, and if anything worse than a man enters, I will warn you in time for you to make your escape."

A LITTLE miss has a grandfather who has taught her to open and shut his crush hat. The other day, however, he came with an ordinary silk one. Suddenly he sees the child coming with the new stove-pipe wrinkled like an accordion. "Oh, grandfather," she says, "this is very hard. I've had to sit on it but I can't get it more than half shut."

A COUPLE of young men went out fishing the other day, and on returning were going past a farm house and felt hungry. They yelled to the farmer's daughters: "Girls have you any butter milk?" The reply was gently wafted back to their ears: "Yes, but we keep it for our own calves." The boys calculated that they had business away—and they went.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge:
An Encyclopedia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.
THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopedia in the field.
Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume.
Special Discounts are made to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.
Leading principles of the American Book Exchange:
I. Publish only books of real value.
II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago. III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers.
IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.
V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding" fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to in order to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.
VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.
