DISCIPLINE. block of marble caught the glance Of Bnonarotti's eyes, Like meteor lighted skies. And one who stood beside him listened, Smiling as he heard, For "I will make an angel of it,"

Was the sculptor's word. And soon his mallet and chisel sharp The stubborn block assailed, And blow by blow, and pang by pang, The prisoner unveiled.

The brow was lifted high and pure, The wak'ning eyes outshone, And as the master sharply wrought, A smile broke through the stone.

Beneath the chisel's edge the hair Escaped in floating rings; And plume by plume was slowly freed The sweep of half-furled wings.

Their murble-fetters shed, And where the shapeless block had been, An angel stood instead.

O blows that smite! O hurts that pierce This shrinking heart of mine! What are ye but the Master's tools Forming a work divine?

O hope that crumbles to my feet, O joy that mocks and flies, What are ye but the clogs that blind My spirit from the skies?

Sculptor of souls! I lift to Thee Spare not the chisel, set me free, However dear the bands.

LET THE LAWS RULE.

The supremacy of the law is the unly safe-guard of liberty; indifference to its execution never fails to weaken its power, and every laxity in res. ct and reverence for its sanctity, meets its certain return in the lessening of its influence. The effeets of mob law upon a community. show themselves long after the passions of the hour seem to have subsided, and the moral effect of its judgment does little to diminish crime, compared with the stern force of the discipline which the rec-
