ON KINGSTON BRIDGE.

On All Souls' Night the dead walk on Kingston Bridge.—Old Legend.

On Kingston Bridge the starlight shone

Through hurrying mists with shrouded glow:

The bodied night wind made its moan,

The mighty river crept below:

'Twas All Souls' Night, and to and fro

The quick and dead together walked,

The quick and dead together talked,

On Kingston Bridge.

Two met who had not met for years—

Their hate was once too deep for fears;

One drew his rapier as he came—

Up leapt his anger like a flame;

With clash of mail he faced his foe,

And bade him stand and meet him so.

He felt a grave-yard wind go by—

Cold, cold as his was his enemy;

A stony horror held him fast.

The Dead looked with a ghastly stare,

And sighed, "I know thee not," and passed.

Like to the mist and left him there

On Kingston Bridge.

'Twas All Souls' Night, and to and fro

The quick and dead together walked,

The quick and dead together talked,

On Kingston Bridge.

Two met who had not met for years;

With grief that was too deep for tears

They parted last.

He clasped her hand, and in her eyes

He sought Love's rapturous surprise.

"O sweet," he cried, "hast thou come back

To say thou lovest thy lover still?"

Into the starlight pale and cold

She gazed afar—her hand was chill.

"Dost thou remember how we kept

Our ancient vigils—how we kissed?

Take thou these kisses as of old!"

An icy wind about him swept;

"I know thee not," she sighed and passed into the dim and shrouding mist

On Kingston Bridge.

'Twas All Souls' Night, and to and fro

The quick and dead together walked,

The quick and dead together talked,

On Kingston Bridge.

OLD MRS. GRIMES.

(Tune: "Old Grimes is Dead.")

Old Mrs. Grimes is dead. Alas!

We never shall see her more.

She was the wife of good old Grimes,

Who died some years before.

A very worthy dame is gone,

Since she gave up her breath;

Her head was white with frosts of time,

She lived until her death.

Though rough the path, her willing feet

E'er walked where duty led;

And never were a pair of shoes,

Except when out of bed.

Busy she was, from morn to night,

Spite of old Time's advances;

In easy circumstances.

Good Mrs. Grimes is now at rest,

She'll rest through endless ages;

The sun has set, her work is done,

She's gone to claim her wages.

Mistakes in Nursing.

A physician contributes to Chamber's Journal a paper on the nursing of the sick, from which we extract the most practical portion of the M. D.'s suggestions. It will be observed that the writer dwells upon the importance of avoiding over-tension on the part of the attendant in the sick room and the importance of quietude, which he defines as the absence of all excitement, and it must be remembered, the writer further adds, that anything out of the common will tend to excite the mind of a sufferer. Do not, therefore, walk on tiptoe, for this, in addition to its unusual elaboration of the gait, invariably causes a certain amount of creaking. Speak in low tones, but don't whisper; a whisper will often awaken a sleeper who would not be disturbed by ordinary conversation; and never say "Hush!" Let your clothes and foot covering be of noiseless and unobtrusive a character as possible, and instead of gliding and tottering about like a rickety ghost, do not hesitate to walk. If you have occasion to say anything in the room, say it so that the patient can hear it if he wishes, and do not let him be aware of your conspiring privately with the others, especially at the door.

That door has much to answer for.

If it be visible from the bed, people open it cautiously, put their heads in, and slowly withdraw again. If, as is more frequently the case, it is screened by the bed curtains, mysterious openings and shuttings are heard, unattended with any ingress or egress, and sotto voce colloquies go on outside. When you enter, do so honestly and at once; do not spend five minutes in turning the handle, like a housebreaker, thereby producing a series of irritating little clicks, finally terminating in a big snap, with which the door flies open. If the latch be at all rusty, a handle that is slowly wound back in this way will often stick, and either require to be rattled back into position, or, if left as it is, may start back suddenly after a time of its own accord with a report like a pistol shot. It is always well to recollect that it by no means follows that a sick person is asleep because his eyes are shut; he may be acutely conscious of all that is passing in the room though unable or unwilling to make any sign; and nothing can be more maddening, under such circumstances, than to have people hush-shing, and whispering around, and creaking about on the tips of their toes. We have all sympathized in our hearts with poor Sir Leicester Dedlock when his tongue was smitten with paralysis, with his sister constantly bending over him with clasped hands and murmuring, "He is asleep!" till, goaded to desperation, he makes signs for his slate and writes, "I am not."

Never stand at the foot of the bed and look at the patient. While talking to him it is better to sit by the side of the bed, and as near the pillow as possible, so that you may converse easily, while your face and body are turned in the same direction as his. By this means, you can make all necessary observations of his features without enforcing the arrest of his eyes to your own, which is so embarrassing and disagreeable to one lying in bed, and is almost unavoidable when facing him. Keep him in as comfortable a position as possible, by all means, but don't be too demonstrative in smoothing the pillows and little offices of that sort. Filigree attentions will worry him, and do him more harm than downright neglect.

When you are sleepy, it is better for your charge, as well as for your self, that you should go to bed at once, and get that repose in slumber to which you must succumb eventually, however strong your devotion may be, and however great the interest at stake. It is not necessary to dwell here on the prudence of economizing your strength, that you may be capable of greater or prolonged exertions, should the need for them arise, or to look at this detail from the point of view which effects yourself. But in any case, you can be of little or no service, worn out with fatigue, and in a condition more akin to somnambulism than vigilance, and the spectacle of a nodding, dozing nurse is neither soothing nor reassuring to the sufferer; while, if you be one near and dear to him, he will be tormented with anxiety lest you should impair your own health on his account. In such a case as this, you cannot do better than lie down comfortably on a sofa or bed where he can watch you, and there have a good nap—for his sake.

Some people have a great notion of "tempting the appetite" by the suggestion of all manner of eatables and drinkables, or by bringing them ready prepared to the bedside experimentally. This, no doubt, is very well at times—during convalescence, for instance; but as a medical man, I am persuaded that it is a mistake in the earlier stages of an illness, when all food is loathed alike, and the creation of an appetite is an impossibility. The only thing to be done is to impress on the invalid the necessity of taking what is ordered for him at stated times, just as he takes his medicine; and it should be prepared on the same footing as a medicine—with the understanding that it is a nauseous dose, and must be presented in a form that will admit of its being swallowed as compactly and rapidly as possible. It is worse than useless to employ flavoring matters at this stage, with the idea of making anything palatable; if you can render his food absolutely tasteless, you will do far more for him. And beyond this forcible administration, so to speak, of a certain amount, I think little good is gained by suggesting this or that delicacy, in the hope that your patient may be induced to "fancy" something. We may take it for granted that when he feels inclined for anything he will ask for it spontaneously; and the promptings of nature are more likely to lead him to a choice of what is best for him, than our string of suggestions. I have frequently observed that when sick people have mentioned a desire for any special food, they almost invariably eat of it when it is procured; whereas it often happens, when they have been persuaded to assent to something which has been proposed, the inclination—if it ever existed—has passed away before the dish or article can be brought to them.

I say, "If it ever existed;" for there is no doubt that a patient of ten yields to suggestions in sheer extremity, simply for the sake of peace.

I happened to be in a sick room the other day, when a relative arrived on the scene. She had been warned to repress all emotion, and succeeded very well; but her tender solicitude was wholly irrepressible. I am sure that she asked at least twenty questions in less than a minute, until the unhappy sufferer writhed under them. "Shall I raise your head a little? Will you have another pillow? Wouldn't you like your head a little higher? Let me fan you. Will you have the blind up? What can I get you? Some arrow-root? Do try some! I am sure you will be more comfortable with another pillow. Will you have one?—yes; do! I'll go and get one. Will you have a cup

A COMMUNICATION on "Our Public Schools" appeared in the Examiner this week, in which it is attempted to give a political bearing to the school affairs in the Union of Thursday Mr. D. T. Lakin secretary of the School Board gives his attention to the matters and things involved, and in such a neat, scholarly and overwhelming style that we can commend its perusal to all persons irrespective of party, "race, color or previous condition of servitude."

THE New York Sun of Wednesday last, says: It is a mistake, of course, to measure the value of a daily newspaper by the quantity of reading matter it contains. Matter may be reading matter in one sense, and yet be quite unreadable in another sense. If the best newspapers were those that stamped the most ink upon the pages of a white paper, THE SUN would be far inferior in circulation and influence to some of its contemporaries in other parts of the republic, such as the Chicago Tribune, for instance, vast pamphlets with brooding magnificence, sheet after sheet of desert literature, column after column alternating dreariness with slush.

Let there be Variety.

It is important that there should be variety in shade trees, sameness in most things wears. When the trees take on their "autumnal tints," it is very pleasing to behold them in manifold colors. Some are now quite denuded, others just changing their green robes and so on. Thus the dreary season is decked to relieve the view.

A Pistol at a Wedding.

Jake Bousall, the young desperado and thug, who became the commander of the notorious Welsh mountain gang of land pirates after the Bazzard was disposed of and locked in Lancaster jail a few months ago, has just faced the gallows on his criminal record in Berks, Lancaster and Lebanon counties, Pa., by forcing the Rev. Andrew J. Hoecker, at the point of a pistol, to marry him to Miss Lydia McCosmes Kline, the young, rich, pretty and deaf and dumb niece of Jacob V. Platterman, of Norwegian township. The enforced marriage ceremony was performed on Thursday last in the house of an ignorant German farm hand named Andrew Beck, who lives on the road between Schaefferstown, in Lebanon, and Conowingo, in Lancaster counties. On Friday the girl disappeared from her uncle's house, and Saturday Bousall and a tramp called "Horse" Spiggle were brought to bay by Constable Schwarz and Mr. Peitnerman and two other men, in Kline's woods, near the spurs of the mountains, near Womelsdorf. Both sides engaged in pistol practice at long range, and when the constable's posse emptied their revolvers and Bousall did not surrender, they retreated, leaving the representative of the Welsh mountain gang in possession of the bloodless field. The minister was induced to go to the house of the farm hand by Bousall, who informed him there was a dying man there who wanted to make a confession. -EX.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

President Arthur Names November 29th as a Day of National Praise.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.-The President has issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

In furtherance of the custom of this people at the closing of each year to engage, upon a day set apart for that purpose, in a special festival of praise to the Giver of all Good, I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, do hereby designate Thursday, the 29th day of November next, as a day of National Thanksgiving.

The year which is drawing to an end has been replete with evidences of Divine goodness. The prevalence of health, the fullness of the harvests, the stability of peace and order, the growth of fraternal feeling, the spread of intelligence and learning, the continued enjoyment of civil and religious liberty—all these and countless other blessings are in use for reverent rejoicing. I do therefore recommend that on the day above appointed the people rest from their accustomed labors, and meeting in their several places of worship, express their devout gratitude to God that he hath dealt so bountifully with this nation and pray that His grace and favor abide with it forever.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 26th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and eighth.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR, By the Pres. dnt. FREDK T. FREELINGHUYSEN, Secretary of State.

Keep Level. In order to elevate a man to office, it is not necessary to elevate yourself. Everybody don't know this.

Public Schools.

The public schools throughout the county were opened on Thursday. The first term will close on the 16th of January next.

Curious Oddities.

Mr. James Baker who resides near town sent us a curiously developed pair of cabbages. There are two solid heads, that grew from one and the same root, on separate stalks.

The Proprietors of the Occasion.

We always feel a respect for the man who uncovers his head as he hands in his vote at an election. It is a recognition of the sovereign authority, which gives him the position of being part and parcel of the body politic, and that he accepts it deferentially.

List of Letters.

The following letters remain in the Post Office, Emmitsburg, Md., November 1, 1882. Persons calling will please say advertised, otherwise they may not receive them:

N. R. Baker, Miss Nannie Dugan, Miss Jennie F. Izer, Miss Mamie E. Verlander Miss Mary Williams.

We had a pleasant call on Thursday from Frank C. Norwood, Esq., a Republican candidate for State's Attorney.

Miss Anna Motter of Taneytown visits her aunt, Miss Emma Motter.

Miss Maynard has again taken charge of the public school in this place.

Mr. Stewart Hartman, from near Lit-tlestown, accompanied by his mother and sister made a visit at Mr. Alex. Horner's.

Democratic Meeting.

Pursuant to public notice, the Democrats of Emmitsburg held a meeting at the Western Maryland Hotel in this place on Thursday evening, which was largely attended. Joseph Byers, Esq. called the meeting to order and nominated Dr. J. T. Bussey as Chairman, who was enthusiastically elected. Messrs. C. F. Zacharias, Juno, A. Flegle and Capt. A. McBride were then appointed as Vice-Presidents, and E. L. Rowe, Esq., Secretary. The chairman, in a few appropriate remarks then introduced Dr. Wm. H. Cole of Baltimore, who addressed the meeting in a highly acceptable manner and with much applause. He was followed by Mr. Joseph Thompson (the blacksmith), also of Baltimore, whose speech elicited the approbation of the assembly throughout. The next speaker was H. J. Stahle, Esq. of Gettysburg who was listened to with marked attention to the close. Col. L. V. Burghman of Frederick was the next speaker. Col. has the tact of inspiring his audience with his own enthusiastic spirit, and his remarks were received with high satisfaction. Hon. P. J. Nelson was also present. The Frederick City Glee Club sang campaign songs at intervals and Prof. Geo. E. Smith played several selections on the cornet. The meeting was enthusiastic throughout, and thoroughly enjoyed the Democracy of this district. Hon. A. P. Gorman, United States Senator from Maryland, came to Emmitsburg on Thursday morning, but could not remain to address the meeting, owing to an engagement in Baltimore. He was visited by numbers of our citizens at the Western Maryland Hotel, where he was stopping. Dr. Cole conveyed to the meeting the regrets of Mr. McLane at not being able to be present.

From the Herald and Torchlight.

Brown, Austin, a resident of William sport, this county, succeeded last Friday in shooting a lion along the Potomac River. The bird was sent to Master Ed-gar Small, of this city, to be properly mounted. Mr. Edgar A. Small, a son of Mr. Albert Small of this city, was made an associate member of the American Ornithologists Union at the meeting recently held in New York city, for its formation as a recognition of his work in ornithology, in cataloguing and describing the birds of our section of the State, &c. Between 10 and 11 o'clock, Monday morning, an old building, situated at the edge of Boonsboro', and in which was stored a quantity of farming implements, the property of Mr. John Reapomer, was destroyed by fire. A straw stack near the building, and to which the fire communicated, was also consumed. Mr. Caleb Stabler, one of the oldest residents of the Sandy Spring district of the Society of Friends in Montgomery county, died last Friday in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He had been in feeble health for some time with the affliction incident to old age. He was a brother to the late Wm. H. Stabler and Edward Stabler, the veteran postmaster, and all three brothers have died during the past year at a ripe old age. Mrs. Maggie Davis, wife of Mr. Elias Davis, residing in Boonsboro', was unexpectedly stricken with paralysis, on Tuesday morning, which resulted a few minutes thereafter in her death. Mr. Davis is at present employed by Mr. Amos F. Mullen in driving the stage between Boonsboro' and Hagerstown, and when he left home in the morning his wife was in her usual health, performing as was her custom, her household duties. Her husband had been gone but a few minutes, and was pursuing his way to Hagerstown unconscious of what was in store for him, when she was stricken down by death. The sad intelligence was broken to the bereaved husband, upon his arrival in this city, upon information received by telephone. Her funeral will take place this afternoon. Her age was 44 years, 1 month and 27 days.

The only pain we can safely make light of, is the window-pane, but the pain it racks our frame and tears our lungs is a matter of serious consequence. To alleviate the latter and effect a permanent cure, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is relied on by all sensible people.

David McConaughy has been elected General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Philadelphia and Wm. C. Stever, Esq. of York, Pa., has been elected Secretary. The former is a son of D. McConaughy, Esq., of this place, and the latter a son of the late Professor M. L. Stever.

On Friday week, as A. B. Jack, a traveling salesman for a York house, was going from Hampton to York Station, he was seized at a lone spot along the road two tramps made an assault upon him. The facts as we gather them are, that Mr. Jack had been selling goods in Hampton, and two men were in one of the stores at the same time and discovered that he had some money upon his person. After attending to his business he started for York Station, and a few minutes from Hampton, he met one of the men standing in the middle of the road with a large club, whom he recognized as one of the tramps he had seen a few hours before. The tramp said: "You had better get out here, these are the biggest chestnuts I ever saw." Mr. Jack realized the situation, and, drawing his six-shooter, said: "I can show you bigger chestnuts than those." He snatched his revolver twice, but although it failed to discharge, the fellow in front started on a run. His companion was ambushed on the side of the road, and when Mr. Jack drew his revolver, threw a club which struck him in the left side, bruising him considerably, but fortunately not inflicting serious injury.

There are 11,192 registered voters in Frederick county. Of this number 9,513 are white voters and 1,680 are colored voters, an increase of 480 white voters over last year and 755 colored.

The plate glass for the new bank at Emmitsburg, has been furnished by Mr. John Eisenhauer, of this city, who is agent for the Dewey Plate Glass Co., of New Albany, Indiana.

WHILE Mr. Jas. E. Staub was returning home from a gunning expedition on last Friday evening, his dog got into a fight with a bull-dog belonging to Mr. Wesley Cragger, near town. While trying to separate them the bull dog attacked Mr. Staub, who had recourse to his gun and fired, killing the dog outright. The dog had bitten Mr. Staub quite severely in the legs, and it was necessary to cauterize the wound.

Within the past few weeks Mr. George W. Coran, residing about four miles from this city, on the Jefferson pike, lost three children by scarlet fever. Mr. Coran's family in their bereavement have the sympathies of the whole community.

There are 190 persons in Frederick county drawing $5.00 from the United States Treasury as pension money.

The Circuit Court for Frederick county has granted a bill of divorce between Washington W. Doll and Alverti J. Doll his wife.

Saturday afternoon last David Poole employed at the Newby Wood Works, this city, made a narrow escape from a terrible death. Poole had gone to the cellar to arrange the lacing of a large strap that drives the machinery, and which had separated. While handling the strap he came in to close contact with a large driving wheel, and was caught by the key of the wheel in one of his pants pockets. He was whirled around several times with wonderful velocity, almost losing his breath in the flight, and was then thrown to one end of the building. He escaped without a scratch more than having his clothing entirely torn off, with the exception of his shoes.

A Little Fire. The cry of fire resounded through our streets on Wednesday afternoon, the fire originated in Mr. J. M. Donoghue's stable. Two boys had been in there smoking cigars. The fire engine was quickly on the ground, but water being near at hand and abundant, the flames were extinguished before the engine could be got ready, and very little damage was done.

The New Railroad.—Improvements.—The two trestles in the mountain are up, and track-laying is now progressing half a mile a day toward the "big trestle" near Clive's saw mill. That point once passed, the track will soon reach Opos-sum creek where the putting up of the iron bridge may consume a week—and the same time at the Cowwago. The way is then clear to Gettysburg, and only unfavorable weather can interfere with track-laying. Ties seem to be plenty and the iron comes promptly. "The work goes bravely on."

Many improvements are contemplated at Reuben Golden's, where the railroad crosses the Huntstown road. Mr. G. will build a warehouse and put the picnic grounds in good and permanent shape. A line kiln will be built by R. Golden & Son. R. E. Golden is erecting a two-story frame weatherboarded dwelling house, and L. E. Golden is doing the same. The latter will also build a large two-story carriage shop and carry on that business in all its branches. An ice house will be built and filled from the Cowwago during the winter. "Golden's station" is booming.

Periodicals.

The Century for November commences a new volume, which, if the initial number may be taken as a specimen promises to exceed in interest and entertainment, any of its predecessors. The portrait of Queen Victoria which graces the opening page, presents England's Queen, at the age of nineteen, and is said to be a very truthful likeness of her at that time. "The Bull-Flight," by Charles Dudley Warner, is full of interest, as describing that ancient Spanish pastime from the standpoint of the enlightened civilization of the present time, while "The Scenes of Cable's Romances," with their quaint illustrations, carry the reader back to the picturesque and semi-civilized New Orleans of other days; the anonymous story, "The Broad Winners," is continued and is beginning to grow exciting; "The American Artists in England," has some striking illustrations; and "The Silverado Squatters," by Robert L. Stevenson, is full of interest; "Tourgueneff in Paris," "Dr. Sevier," "Glimpses of Paris," "The Impressions of a Cousin," by Henry James, "The Capture of Jefferson Davis," "Mrs. Knollys," and much more, consisting of Topics of the Time, Open Letters, Poems and the usual Brice-a-Brac, make up the contents of this number. The Century Co., Union Square, New York.

The American Farmer has as usual, a great deal of useful information, many good suggestions and entertaining reading matter. A paper on "Japanese Maps," and one on "Remedies for Insect Depredations," are particularly worthy of notice, while the Home Department has many useful hints and recipes. Published by Samuel Sands & Son, 128 W. Baltimore St., Baltimore.

THE CENTURY

PROGRAMME FOR 1883-'84

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, THE CENTURY shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A New Novel by George W. Cable, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

"Life in the Thirteen Colonies," by Edward Eggleston, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

Three Stories by Henry James, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

The New Astronomy, untechnical articles, by Prof. S. P. Langley, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A Novelle by H. H. Boyesen, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

The New Era in American Architecture, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in
