Miscellaneous.

How People Live.

There are many odd and interesting bits of information buried in the Consular reports sent to the State Department. For instance, here is an account of flower-farming in France that gives one some expansive ideas of the way the thrifty French people cultivate all their natural resources.

By combination and treatment of the strong extracts thus obtained, an innumerable variety of scents are obtained. The exhausted pomades are used in the manufacture of fine toilet soaps, and some use is found for the residue of every part of the process.

Plants Grown for their Perfumes. We admire flowers quite as much for their fragrance as for their elegance of form and beauty of color.

He was a little fellow, not over 12 years old, and he was sitting behind a box over at the Omaha depot the other morning softly crying and looking very dirty and forlorn.

NEWSPAPER men are not unfrequently met with the remark: "I like your paper very well, but you have too much advertising in it."

Humorous.

TEACHER—"Hans, name three beasts of prey." Hans—"Two lions and a tiger."

"I AM going to make things warm for you folks yet," remarked spring, gentle spring, this morning.—Washington Critic.

It almost takes one's breath away to hear an Englishman speak of hateen 'undred and hatey-hate.—Boston Transcript.

A CLERGYMAN was telling a marvelous story, when his little girl said: "Now, Pa, is that true or is it only preaching?"

"Am I not a little pale?" inquired a lady, who was rather short and corpulent, of a crusty bachelor.

A NOTICE said to have been seen over the entrance-gate to a French burying-ground was as follows: "Only the dead who live in this parish are buried here."

A Prohibition Incident. A tall, lank, red-nosed man came into a country store with a large jug, which he placed on the counter with the remark: "I want a gallon of rum—baby's sick."

BOSTON landlord to porter—"See if the gentlemen in Parlor F have finished discussing their dinner."

A PATENT-right suit was brought before Judge Nelson. Mr. William H. Seward was counsel on one side. In summing up he occupied a whole day. The counsel on the other side made a long speech, the Judge charged the jury. After the jury had been absent about two hours, they came into court and the foreman said, "Your Honor, the jury would like to ask a question."

He wanted to go home to Ma. He was a little fellow, not over 12 years old, and he was sitting behind a box over at the Omaha depot the other morning softly crying and looking very dirty and forlorn.

"What's the matter?" we asked. "Hain't nothin' the matter," he said defiantly, sitting up straight, hastily brushing away his tears and pushing back his jacket a little so as to display the handle of an old revolver in his pocket.

"Oh, mister, I've been a-runnin' away, an' I want 'o go home." "What made you run away?" "I thought it would be nice, but it hain't, no it hain't," and rested his face in his hands and looked the picture of woe.

"Who was Dick Dagger?" "Didn't you ever hear o' him! He was the boy scout of the Rockies, an' I wanted to be like him. There hain't Indians what'll hurt a feller round here, is there?"

"No." "I wouldn't shoot 'em if I there was. Dick shot 'em, but I didn't want to. I want to get back home, but mebbe I never will again."

"Where did you live?" "Oh, I lived down at Marian, in Illinois, and it just about killed me riding in that old freight car, an' I hurt my knee, an' I'm cold and hain't had no breakfast, nor supper, neither. I wish I'd never heard of Dick—I don't see how he got along so well—and if I ever get home again and see my—my—my ma—" but the thought of his mother was too much for him.

"I don't want to hunt Indians or bears or nothin', nor rescue no maidens, an' I'm tired of that old thing!" and he pulled a rusty revolver out of his pocket that hadn't been fired for ten years, and misther it across the track. "Please, mister, get me something to eat and I'll work all day for you," and he looked up pitifully and straightened his little cap on his curly head.

We took him along and he ate three or four meals in one, but even after that he didn't say a word about exterminating the Indian. The next day a grave looking father arrived looking for a very homesick boy, and they went back together. So the government lost another scout, but an anxious mother got back a boy who will never run away again.—Dakota Bell.
