THE SILENT CHORD.

Where shall I look for the hidden chord?
When will its harmonies come to me,
Full of all beauty of time and tune,
The psalm of immortality!
Eye cannot see what the ear may hear,
Ear may not hear what the eye can trace—
One for the voices of street and field,
One for the beauties of field and face.

Where shall I search for the hidden sound?
Where shall I look for its secret life?
Startle it out of its silent peace
Into the clamor of tuneful strife?
Alas! as deep as the pearl that lies
Under its fathoms of ocean brine,
Is the chord my nature has always lacked—
The harmonies mute which had been divine.

Lost! in the depths of a dreamer's soul,
The golden link of a wondrous tune,
Carved as the angels carve their crowns,
Sweet as the roses of fabled June.
Found! in the choir of an unseen land,
Voiced by the singers of heavenly lore,
The golden link of the missing chord
That my soul shall lack no more.

THE WHITE DOVE.

IT BROUGHT GOOD FORTUNE TO A WHOLE FAMILY.

The clouds hung low in the western sky one Eastern Eve as two little girls went hurrying through the crowded city streets. Suddenly a red gleam shot out from behind the dark cloud rampart just as the girls turned a street corner, and one of them cried out: "There! it's just as grandpa says; no matter how dark and stormy it's been all the week, there's always sure to be a bit of sunlight just before the Lord's Day."

"Does he say that?" cried pale little Cecile, eagerly. "Then there will be a great light this evening, for to-morrow is Easter, the day our Lord rose from the dead—Lord's Day, indeed!"

Even as the child spoke the color spread and deepened in the sky, and great platoons of sky-militia, in pink and purple and rosy-red, went flying in pursuit of the heavy, dull-gray cloud-warriors.

"See! see!" cried Cecile, her pale face flushing as with the glory of the skies. "See! the Lord has risen indeed!"

Her friend looked at her with a troubled face.

"Cecile, I'm most afraid when you look and talk like that. 'Please don't!'"

You see, Marian was plump and rosy-cheeked and practical. Cecile scarcely heard her, and the two walked on in silence.

The little friends were cash-girls in the same store. Every morning they went to their work in company and every evening the walk home was a pleasure because they could talk as they went. The children were very unlike. Cecile was a dreamy, sensitive little Swiss girl, while Marian, strong of heart and limb, was well fitted to meet the rebuffs of a busy, work-a-day world. Always quick, bright, ready, she was a general favorite, and saved her little friend Cecile from many a reprimand by her thoughtful watchfulness. For Cecile would fall to dreaming even in the busy store, and she did not always hear what was said to her, and so she made many mistakes, and people often lost patience and called her stupid and obstinate. How Marian would rise up then in her defense! And how she would fly to comfort the little troubled heart, and cheer her with assurances that things would be better in the future!

"I saw something so lovely to-day," said Cecile, as they neared the block of tenement-house in which they lived; "I can't help thinking about it all the time."
"What was it?" Where did you see it?" questioned Marian.
"In the store, among the Easter cards. It was a white dove, oh! so soft and white and pure, just spreading its wings to fly away. And the sky looked so blue and clear, just like that little bit down there that the clouds have rolled away from. I wanted the dove to hold, but I wanted it to fly away, too, up into the blue sky and out of sight."

"How queer you are to-night!" said Marian. "Going to Sunday-school to-morrow?"
"Yes; and to church, if papa will take me."
So the friends parted, and pale Cecile toiled up three flights of stairs, resting a little at the top of the last flight, that she might not be out of breath when she entered, and so distress the mother who watched for her.

The father was already at home, and Elsa and Fritz were clamoring for their supper.

The little room was bright and clean, but very, very poor and bare. It was easy to see where Cecile had found her tender eyes and gold-brown hair. The little mother, still fair and delicate in spite of care and poverty, embraced her little daughter tenderly, and said:
"Thou'rt late to-night, my kindchen."
"Yes, mutterchen; it is Easter Eve, you know; and, oh! father dear! I may not go to the church together with the tall spire, you know, where they have the lovely music? It seemed almost as if the angels were singing there at Christmas time."

The father turned a kind but tired, discouraged face upon his little girl.
"The fine church full of grand people is not the place for such as we. The angels sing for the rich, Cecile."
"Oh, father, I'm sure the angels don't mind, if only we are clean and neat, do they, mutterchen? And you will take me, I know you will; and we will sit in a corner where we will not be seen, and the music will lift us up, up, toward Heaven!" Cecile's arm were around the father's neck, and her soft cheek lay against his weather-beaten face.

"Thou wilt go, Johann," said the good wife; and he nodded his head gravely.

"Yes, yes, the child must have her will."
Then they all sat down to the plain supper, and Cecile told of the wonderful sunset glow, and the beautiful Easter card she had seen, and talked so long, and asked so many questions about doves in particular, that her father said at last:
"Why, child, thy head is turned by the picture of the white dove! Thou shouldst have a real dove for thy very own, if we had but a little spot in the green country where I could make thee a bird-house among the trees, and thou shouldst love and pet thy treasure to thy heart's content."

This opened the theme of the family hope. To get into the country and till a little piece of ground was Johann's earthly ambition, and to this the pale mother looked forward as eagerly as did the play-loving little ones and the nature-loving Cecile. For this all were toiling and saving; but, alas! the little fund grew so slowly, for the winter's supply of coal made it impossible to save any thing during that season, and meantime the little faces grew more pale and pinched-looking every day.

The suggestion of the bird-house was too beautiful to be readily given up, and for a good hour the patient, hard-working father and mother vied with the children in extravagant castle-building.

"But it will never be," said Johann at last. "The great city will swallow us up, and we shall toil on here all our days."
"No, no, father!" cried Cecile, eagerly. "Some day we shall spread our wings and fly; the white dove tells me so!"
"The white dove again!" said the mother. "Always the white dove. Go to thy sleep, dear child, and be thy dreams as pure and white as thy gentle dove."
Easter morning came, radiant with the glory of early spring. Cecile and her father set out promptly, that they might find a dark corner in the grand church, where they might not attract attention. They had to wait a long time, but when the music began they felt that they were well repaid. Little

Cecile had inherited her father's love of music, as well as his strong, rich voice, and to-day, when the dear old Easter hymn pealed out:
Christ the Lord is risen to-day,
Now let men and angels say—
she could not restrain the impulse to sing. Quite unconscious she stood, a slender little figure, singing out her whole soul, as it seemed, with no more thought of the curious eyes fixed upon her than a bird has. It was like Heaven to the beauty-loving child, the warm, sweet atmosphere of the flower-decked church, the heavenly music thrilling every nerve of her being, and the beautiful, happy-looking people she saw all about her!

She came back again to the earth as the music ceased, and, with a half-frightened glance around, seized her father's hand and held it fast as they found their way out of the crowded church.

"Oh! wasn't it lovely? You see, father dear, that the angels do sing for poor folks, don't you?" Cecile's eyes were shining and her heart throbbing with a great joy.

They were passing a stately mansion, and just inside the palings Cecile caught a glimpse of something which seemed to take her breath away. "Oh, papa, papa! Stop! The white dove! It is there, all wounded and bleeding!" she cried; and before he could stop her, she had darted inside the great gates, and was bending with sweetest compassion over the poor wounded dove that lay upon the ground.

"May I take it, father?" she cried, "and have it for my own and bring it back to life again? Oh! who could have been so cruel as to hurt a gentle little white dove?" And she held it close to her breast, and stroked it pitifully, while tears fell from her soft eyes.

She had rejoined her father on the street, and neither saw a lovely lady who had stopped to listen.

"It is, Herbert, it is the child who sang in the church!" she cried, excitedly. "Do you see, her eyes and hair and voice are all those of our Mabel?"

"Calm yourself, Helen," said the gentleman. "I will learn where the child lives, and you may find her there another day."

His wife was sobbing, and as he took Johann's address he explained briefly that Cecile was strikingly like their own little girl, who had gone to heaven on the last Easter day.

But Cecile could only think of the white dove, as she carried it home. It seemed so wonderful to her that it should have come to her on Easter day. "It is a promise of good, mutterchen," she said, over and over again.

And it was. The white dove grew well and strong again, nursed by tender hands. The lovely lady came, and told how the sweet voice singing high and clear—
"Christ, the Lord, is risen to-day,"
had brought back the image of her own Mabel; and when she turned to look in the soft, tender eyes and sensitive mouth she seemed to see her own darling again. Then she told how she had lost the little singer in getting out of the crowded church, and found her again, mourning over the wounded dove.

"It is God's voice to me," she said. "Christ is risen indeed in the person of one of His little ones, and the love and care which once I lavished upon what I fancied mine must now be given to his."

And so it has been and is. Johann is in his earthly paradise. The bit of ground so longed for is his own now, and roses bloom on his children's cheeks, and on the cottage porch. The bird-house has a place in the big elm tree that shades the yard, and the white dove has found a sweet home there.

Cecile's pale cheek has a faint flush upon it now. She is studying hard, and is quite the wonder of the little village where she lives. Some day she will be a prima donna, they say; and the rich lady in the city, who directs all her training, is to take her to Europe some day to complete her musical education.

But this is not all, nor the best. You have not forgotten Marian?

Through her, as Cecile's friend, Mrs. Leslie's mother-heart, has been strongly drawn toward the poor little cash-girls, and many a one has found a true friend and helper in her. Through her, also, other ladies have become interested, and a club has been formed of ladies who make it their pleasure to look after the little cash-girls who have fallen sick, or who have sickness or trouble in their homes. And so many little hearts, and bodies, too, have been comforted in time of trouble, and the kind ladies have been quite as much blessed in the giving as any have in the receiving.

"Said I not true, mutterchen," Cecile says, sometimes, "that my Easter dove brought a promise of good?"

"Yes, kindchen," answers the sweet little mother, "God sent it truly, as He sends all good things."

A Brave Woman.

Col. Aylett in his eloquent address in the Court House, during the late reunion, paid a beautiful tribute to the courage and devotion of a woman during the late war. In the course of it he said:
"The bravest woman I ever saw was a Pennsylvania girl, who defied Pickett's whole division while we marched through a little town called Greencastle. She had on a United States flag as an apron, which she defiantly waved up and down as our columns passed by her and dared us to take it from her. And there was not one man of us dared to do so. Struck by her courage and loyalty, Pickett, with hat off, gave her a military salute, my regiment presented arms and we cheered her with a good old-fashioned rebel yell, which some of you boys here have doubtless heard. God bless the true and brave little woman, and she was as lovely as she was brave. Would that she were here to-day that I might, in admiration of her pluck and truth, grasp the hand of that splendid and glorious type of American womanhood. She deserves a place by the side of those Carthaginian maidens who cut off their tresses as bowstrings to send their lovers' arrows hitting to the Roman heart."

The Valley Spirit says:
"Col. Aylett did not know it but that 'brave woman' was only twenty-two miles away. She was in 1863, Miss Dolly Harris but has been for over twenty years the wife of Mr. John Leshner, who was a Lieutenant in a Pennsylvania regiment. Mrs. Leshner now lives in Waynesboro, where her husband is employed in the shops."

The honor is also claimed for Miss Sadie Smith, a daughter of Jacob R. Smith, of Greencastle, who afterwards married Mr. Sibbett, and removed to Youngstown, Ohio, but who is now dead.—Star and Sentinel.

The Blind and Their Hearing.

A blind man told me once that he could tell by his ear when to cross a street, and that he was never mistaken in trusting to this faithful sentinel. The hearing of the blind is, of course, rendered peculiarly acute by their constant reliance upon it. They get so accustomed to their regular rounds in walking that they can tell just where they are at almost any moment. I was told by a blind man whom I occasionally meet about town that his only fear of accident was in being knocked down by a runaway horse; or some other sudden danger, which ever good eyesight is not always a safeguard against. It seems to me that the expression "go it blind," which is used to denote recklessness, must have been adopted before the cautious and wary procedure of sightless people had become known.—Boston Post.

MIDSUMMER CHURCH SERVICES.

We would be reluctant to make any suggestions in these columns, likely to wound the pious feelings of anyone; but there are many ways of viewing subjects, and in the multiplicity of counsel there is wisdom, if it be not darkened by words.

Every year brings its time known as the super-heated period, a time that is readily understood just now, and is met in various ways, according to the taste or circumstances of different individuals; some seeking the sea shore, some the mountains and woods; all desiring relaxation and escape from ordinary life at home; recreation, which in some form or another, is recognized by all, and may be enjoyed by all in at least the calm quiet of restful composure at home.

The constitution of our being involves mind and spirit as well as bodily organization. The due and orderly workings of all demand accord in the component parts; a sound mind in a healthy body is necessary for a perfect human being.

Thus then viewing things in the light of the correlation of forces, we submit that even in the holy influences of religion there may be a misdirection of efforts, and that for such occasions as last Sunday presented, there might with the utmost propriety be established a minimum of service even in the church.

The clergy should not be required to officiate more than once for the day; the people should not oftener be called from their home rest and contemplation, and this might be established as a rule during the period known as the Dog Days.

In some quarters they close the churches giving a vacation to the Pastors during the time; in most places the services are at least contracted, so that they are held only by day light.

If it be argued that Satan is as active now, as at other times, it may be replied—that to change the tactics of opposition at times, may be highly beneficial, and that his majesty knows full well to use most dexterously, the conditions of overpowering heat, the torments of the flies, and somnolent emotions, to his own advantage, and there he is—in the midst of them.

Experiment develops theories, and we believe a trial here will work well for all interests.

THE STORM AT CARLISLE.

CARLISLE, Pa., July 17, 1887.—The most terrible storm ever known in this county swept over it this afternoon. The storm gathered and burst at about three o'clock, and for three-quarters of an hour raged with great fury. It was accompanied by heavy thunder, lightning and hail. The hailstones were of the most peculiar shape, being circular, almost flat, and ranging in sizes from a quarter to half a dollar; their edges were as sharp as knives, and, driven before the hurricane, they cut the leaves from the trees in showers and fairly mowed down the crops.

But it was the wind that did the most damage. The town is full of shade trees, and when the storm had passed they lay piled in the streets by hundreds. Happily it was a hot Sunday afternoon and the streets were deserted, or the loss of life would have been great.

At Dickinson College the campus is strewn with fallen timber; many of the old forest trees which stood there before the college was built, a hundred years ago, and many of the class trees have been destroyed. One tall old pine was twisted in the air and hurled across the railroad track, where it had to be chopped up before the four o'clock express could pass.

At the Metzger Ladies' Institute many of the lawn trees are blown down, as is a line of locusts facing the road, and a big apple tree was blown into the main entrance.

The Indian schools were in the line of the storm, and a scene of terror reigned there. The roofs, chimneys and stormsheds of the school room were blown down. The roof and ventilators of the girls' building was stripped off. The tin roof was carried three hundred feet and hurled into the piazza of Captain Pratt's residence, doing great damage. One half of the small boys' building was stripped of roof, ventilators and chimneys and some of the windows and doors blown bodily in.

UTAH AS A STATE.

A constitutional convention was recently held at Salt Lake City, and steps were taken to have Utah admitted as one of the States of the Union. Every one feels the importance of this movement as there is ground for fear that under the plea of "broad and liberal views," Mormonism will find protection under the general government. The Mormons, in many cases affect to recognize polygamy, but it has been demonstrated over and over again, that there is no sincerity in their professions. Their representative men have skipped their bail, violated their oaths, and declared by their acts that they meant to be bound by no law. The polygamists are dominant in Utah and defiant as they can be in their attitude toward the federal authority. They are bringing tens of thousands of people to this country only to degrade them and to build up by their aid an institution that is polluting the very fountains of life. The body politic can no more survive such corruption than the human system can do it, and to legalize it would be wicked and suicidal.

But independent of this one crying sin, the whole theory of Mormonism is based upon the most outrageous kind of a union of Church and State. Indeed these people have the only State Church in this broad land, and it should be speedily and effectually disestablished. It has shown itself to be a cruel institution. The Mormon women are under the worst kind of bondage. Their sufferings are kept from the public by means of threats and violence. If the tortures of the Spanish inquisition are not practiced there, it is only because the tyrants are not yet able to do it.

There is no use to talk about the rights of men to do wrong because they choose to clothe sensuality with the beautiful garb of Christian principle; or of the constitutional power of the government to interfere in such matters. The safety of the people is the supreme law. The government that can legislate upon the rum traffic is competent to arrest this iniquity. The United States authorities have moved in this direction and there is no reason why there should not be a stringent national law that would not only regulate divorces in all the States, but make polygamy and bigamy punishable as crimes everywhere throughout the land.

Yet, as a matter of fact, in many cases this has not been done. Right here, then, these men are technical defaulters. Perhaps if they were to die suddenly, as Bacon did, it might be found that these men were actual defaulters—that instead of having the unexpended balances in their hands they had used them for their own personal ends. As the Treasury had become an accessory to this violation, it is a question whether the Government could recover from the defaulter's bondsmen. Then, again, the law provides that all vouchers and balance sheets shall be rendered to the Treasury Department every quarter. Yet this law is habitually and willfully violated. In some cases statements of accounts are a year behind date. The accounting officers have made repeated efforts to get these delinquent accounts, but the men who are in arrears seem to pay no attention to the requests of their superior officers or else stave them off with ingenious excuses. There is no way of compelling them to come to time, and the Auditor or Comptroller can only sit down and add still another letter to the correspondence on the subject.

THE LATEST RAILWAY HORROR.

On the 15th inst., at the crossing of Grand Trunk Railway and Michigan Central Railway, St. Thomas, Ont., an excursion train ran into a passing freight train with a number of cars attached, that were loaded with oil. The oil instantly took fire and burned very fiercely and communicated to the cars on both trains and extended to an adjoining ware house, coal and lime sheds, &c., all of which were entirely consumed. An engineer was burned in the wreck, the fireman by jumping escaped with slight injuries. There were many passengers who made desperate efforts to escape from the burning car, but it is feared that a number of lives were lost. At a time when thousands were crowded around the burning pile, an oil tank on the cars suddenly exploded, throwing hundreds forcibly to the ground and scattering the scorching oil in all directions. Numbers of bodies burned to crisp were recovered.

In the political field, the murmurings of the coming conflict are quite sullen; the issues not yet being made and the rivalries of opposing candidates not yet nominated being in abeyance. Meanwhile the comments of the press, eager for the fight, are highly diverging, for having nothing to say to any purpose, they go ahead keeping up a show of opposition from the mere necessity of seeming opposed, just for the sake of opposition.

The torrid heat of the week gone by was general everywhere east of the Mississippi. The casualties by heat, by storms, &c., were numbered by scores; of course we can only present a limited number of those occurring near by.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Cleveland visited Miss Rose Cleveland, and attended the Clinton Centennial, and the President's brother, Rev. W. N. Cleveland, at Forestport, last week.

GEN. POWELL was nominated on the second ballot, for Governor of Ohio, by the Democratic State convention on Thursday.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle. There are several gentlemen in the employ of the Government whose official chairs are resting right over a charged mine. The train to the mine is laid, and it needs but a spark to blow them up. When the match is applied and the smoke has cleared away the devastation wrought by the explosion may cause considerable surprise.

In other words, an investigation was started two months ago into the methods employed by disbursing agents of the Government, and to ascertain whether their accounts are all correct. This inquiry has been conducted very cautiously and with great secrecy, because the Treasury officials did not want the men whose accounts were being examined to have any idea of what was going on, and so jealously guarded has been the secret that when the people most interested read this it will produce a genuine sensation.

The investigation grew out of an assertion made to a prominent Treasury official that more than one-half of all the disbursing agents are either technical or actual defaulters, besides, which there is a feeling among the Democratic officials that the books ought to be examined. During the time that the investigation has been in progress an immense amount of data has been collected. Enough has already been developed to show that the greatest looseness exists. If this looseness is more than that, if it is criminality, later developments will show. The disbursing agents are the men here in Washington who pay off the clerks, and disburse all the money in connection with their departments; Indian agents, superintendents of public buildings in course of construction, collectors, internal revenue agents and others whose name is legion. The law provides that these agents shall have two years after the close of the fiscal year in which the appropriation has been made in which to cover into the Treasury any unexpended balances.

TECHNICAL DEFAULTERS.

Yet, as a matter of fact, in many cases this has not been done. Right here, then, these men are technical defaulters. Perhaps if they were to die suddenly, as Bacon did, it might be found that these men were actual defaulters—that instead of having the unexpended balances in their hands they had used them for their own personal ends. As the Treasury had become an accessory to this violation, it is a question whether the Government could recover from the defaulter's bondsmen. Then, again, the law provides that all vouchers and balance sheets shall be rendered to the Treasury Department every quarter. Yet this law is habitually and willfully violated. In some cases statements of accounts are a year behind date. The accounting officers have made repeated efforts to get these delinquent accounts, but the men who are in arrears seem to pay no attention to the requests of their superior officers or else stave them off with ingenious excuses. There is no way of compelling them to come to time, and the Auditor or Comptroller can only sit down and add still another letter to the correspondence on the subject.

ONE WAY TO CHECKMATE THIS HAS BEEN SUGGESTED.

One way to checkmate this has been suggested, and will probably be one of the tangible results of this investigation. It is that no disbursing agent shall be allowed to draw any money unless all his accounts have been turned in. If this system were adopted, the work of the accounting officer would be greatly simplified.

A GREAT FIELD FOR FRAUD.

But the greatest field for fraud exists in the fact that the money to run a Department may be derived from a dozen different appropriations. There is, for example, the appropriation for the pay of the employees, the contingent expense account, the fund for light and fuel and many others. The disbursing clerk draws from the Treasury on his requisition such money as he may need, and in the course of time turns in his vouchers for the money expended. Of course he has a balance on hand, sometimes a very considerable balance—yet none except the disbursing agent himself knows whether his safe contains the money or what has been done with it. Time and again the Government has been robbed, the last time when Col. Burnside, the disbursing agent of the Postoffice Department, was found to be short some $30,000.

To find out just exactly the standing of every disbursing agent the very simple test of counting the cash will be adopted. Those who can stand the test will be all right, those who cannot will be held strictly responsible. Besides accomplishing the object of examining the books this investigation will lead to several changes in the system of accounts now in force in the Treasury, and some recommendations to Congress. One of them, not the least important, will probably be that no disbursing agent shall receive at any one time a sum greater than the amount of his bond.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S BIRTHDAY.

The Herald begs to offer to Mrs. Cleveland its heartiest congratulations and its best wishes for many happy returns of the day. She is the youngest mistress the White House has ever had, and she bears the honors of her high position with such grace and dignity that the whole country will extend its felicitations on this her twenty-third birthday.

She will receive from intimate friends doubtless many rare and costly gifts to commemorate the season withal, but we are sure that she will prize none of them in comparison with the generous good will which with sixty millions of Americans offer their greetings.—N. Y. Herald, July 21.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

THE Baltimore and Ohio deal has been declared off.

THE President and Mrs. Cleveland returned to Washington on Wednesday.

A peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

THE town of Beclar, Tex., has been visited by a succession of earthquake shocks that has reduced the whole place to ruins.

AN Associated Press cable dispatch from Paris last night says that United States Minister McLane will sail for New York on the steamer Normandie July 30.

THE schooner Dora, from Ounak, Alaska, brought the news that the volcano of Akontan, on the island of Akontan, one of the Aleutian group, is in a state of eruption.

IT has been computed that the death rate of the globe is 67 a minute, 97,790 a day, and 35,639,835 a year, and the birth rate 70 a minute, 100,800 a day, and 36,792,000 a year.

THE demand for notes of small denominations continues heavy and the Treasury Department is unable as yet to meet it. The increased supply of silver certificates will be issued as soon as possible.

MUNKACS'S celebrated painting, "Christ before Pilate," has been taken to Boston by its new owner, John Wanaumaker of Philadelphia, and will be exhibited for several weeks at Horticultural Hall on Tremont street.

TWENTY-FIVE deaths from cholera have occurred in Cantania, Italy, during the past twenty-four hours. The people are panic stricken. Robbers are pillaging houses whose owners have fled to escape the scourge.

AN employer in a Rhode Island factory town recently paid his employees $700 on Saturday in new bills secretly marked. On the following Monday $400 worth of these marked bills were placed in bank by the saloon keepers of the place.

IT was reported at San Francisco, Cal., on Monday, that Catholic Archbishop C. J. Seghers, of Portland, Ore., who has been travelling on the Yukon River, Alaska, since last September, was shot near Nulato November 28 last, by his attendant, Brother Fuller.

THE St. Anthony elevator, one of the largest in the Northwest, located two miles east of Minneapolis, Minn., on the Manitoba railroad, was totally destroyed by fire at twenty minutes past seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, and the building is totally destroyed, with about 1,100,000 bushels of wheat.

IT is reported from London that Mr. Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer has been shot dead by natives with whom his expedition was fighting in order to get supplies. Another account says that the steamer on which Stanley was proceeding to the relief of Emin Bey was sunk and explorer was drowned.

A HAIL storm prevailed in the neighborhood of Wabash, Ind., on Tuesday. The stones were of the size of hen's eggs and could be gathered up by the bushel. The corn was riddled and stripped of the ears and silk. Oats were thrashed out and the stalks driven into the earth. Apples, melons, grapes and all small fruits and vegetables were cut to pieces.

A COMMITTEE of prominent New York veterans were at Gettysburg on Monday last to locate positions on Little Round-Top for a monument to Gen. G. K. Warren, who as chief of engineers on Gen. Meade's staff, from the eminence observed the movement of the Confederates to flank the Federal left and brought up Vincent's and Weed's brigades of the fifth corps, which checked the movement.

THE count of the cash and securities in the treasurer's office, which began May 23, will probably be concluded this week. The funds on hand amounted to $85,500,000, of which $61,500,000 was in standard silver dollars, $25,000,000 in gold coin, $2,000,000 in fractional silver coin, and the balance in notes and certificates. So far as is known not a single penny's deficiency has yet been found.

HON. R. M. T. HUNTER died at his home, Fount Hill, Essex county, Virginia, on Monday. He was one of Virginia's most eminent citizens for many years before and during the late war and was born in 1809. He served several terms in the national House of Representatives, being elected speaker of that body in 1839. Subsequently he was elected United States Senator and made chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in 1840, which position he held till the opening of the war. He gave Douglas a close run for the presidential nomination at the National Democratic Convention at Charleston in 1860. During the war he served as Confederate Secretary of State and Confederate Senator. He was also a member of the Peace Commission which met Abraham Lincoln in Hampton Roads. After the war he was elected treasurer of Virginia, holding that office for several terms, after which he retired to private life.

Home Evidence

No other preparation has won success at home equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In Lowell, Mass., where it is made, it is now, as it has been for years, the leading medicine for purifying the blood, and toning and strengthening the system. This "good name at home" is "a tower of strength abroad."

It would require a volume to print all Lowell people have said in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Albert Estes, living at 28 East Pine Street, Lowell, for 15 years employed as boss carpenter by J. W. Bennett, president of the Erie Telephone Company, had a large running sore come on his leg, which troubled him a year, when he began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The sore soon grew less in size, and in a short time disappeared.

Mr. John C. Scarborough, Solina, N. C., writes: "I got malaria in the Southern army, and for 40 years suffered from its debilitating effects. I was terribly run down when I heard of Kaskine, the new quinine. It helped me at once. I gained 35 pounds. Have not had such good health in 20 years."

Mr. Caroline Aden, Astoria, N. Y., says: "I had malaria and was so rapidly run down that I could not get up. I was in bed for three weeks. I was so weak that I could not get up of my nature. I think but for Kaskine I should now be dead. Letters from the above persons, giving full details, will be sent on application. Kaskine can be taken without any special medical advice. $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Sold by J. A. ELDER, Emmitsburg, or sent by mail on receipt of price to KASKINE CO., 54 Warren St., New York."

Yours truly, WM. M. GALT. Mr. Galt was Chairman of President Cleveland's Inauguration Committee.

BLACK PILLS aid digestion.

DURING the thunder storm of Monday night, the stable at the parsonage of the Reformed Church at Mount Pleasant, this county, was struck by lightning and burned. A horse and buggy belonging to the Rev. Mr. Shulenberg were destroyed.

The Annual Harvest Home Festival of the Mt. Zion Lutheran Sabbath School of Haugh's Church, will be held in Mr. D. C. Warner's grove, one mile west of the church, on the road leading from the church to Mecklenburg, on Saturday, July 30. Able addresses will be made by a number of speakers.

Wheel-Wright Shop. Having opened a shop in the same building with Jacob L. Topper's blacksmith shop, in Emmitsburg, I take this method of informing its citizens and those of its vicinity, that I am prepared to do all kinds of work in my line in a satisfactory manner. Give me a call. Jy 9-tf JOHN TOPPER.

The Village Record of Waynesboro entered upon its 41st year last week. The Record has laid its roots deep and far-spread in the community for whose interest it has long battled with good effect. We wish the editor long years of continued usefulness, with an always decreasing number of "delinquent" subscribers.

RECENTLY Mr. Beeler and his wife, of Tighmont, Washington county, drove to Williamsport to sell a lot of brooms of their own manufacture. Mr. Beeler is 82 years of age, Mrs. Beeler is 86, the horse they drove is 32 years old and the carriage they came in was built in 1816—all so different from the veneration family.—Transcript.

A FARMER residing near Hagerstown harvested his entire wheat crop, about thirty acres, without assistance other than a pair of horses and a self-binder. He cut, gathered and shocked the wheat himself. Although the job was a monstrous one, he was free from the possibilities of strikes and was exempt from extra preparations at meal time.—Globe.

As St. Swithen's day, July 15th was clear, bright and warm, we may expect a long season of comparatively dry weather, about 40 days as the legend calls for, not as we should infer, that there will not be occasional showers meanwhile, but the traditional rain of 40 days duration, will surely not occur. We trust the weather will favor the growing corn.

From certain intimations ominously put forth and darkly presented in the Chat of this week, it is to be inferred that Mecklenburg is about to erupt shortly. Perhaps "Chimney Rock" is already sending forth smoke. When the lava covers the plain, then mournfully it will be written as of old, Fall! Blinn.

Our esteemed neighbors of Mecklenburg contracted for the delivery of mains for their water at a time when the Reading foundries were about to shut down and soon after did so—so the iron don't turn up, and somebody is real mad. But surely there should be philosophical consideration in the case; human affairs, as well as true love, never did run always smoothly.

List of Letters. The following letters remain in the Post Office, Emmitsburg, Md., July 18, 1887. Persons calling will please say advertised, otherwise they may not receive them: Miss Katie Baker, C. F. Bevan, Calvin Byrum, James Crosby, Edward Falter, Jerome F. Kelly, Miss Ada Mosby, Mrs. Calvin Oehler.

Owing to the shortness of the time, between the notice and the meeting of those interested in the Canal, the assemblage at Cumberland the other day was somewhat slim, and it was arranged to have delegates attend the meeting of the Erie Canal, at Rochester notwithstanding. The interests involved in the C. & O. Canal are too momentous for them to fail of recognition by the people of Western Maryland. They should enlist the consideration of every citizen without regard to party or other conditions, and the flat should go forth. The Canal must and shall be saved, in the common interests of the entire people.

List of Patents. The following patents were granted to citizens of Maryland, bearing date July 12, '87, reported expressly for this paper by Louis Barger & Co., Mechanical Experts and Solicitors of Patents, Washington, D. C. Advice Free. J. T. Bridges, Hancock, fork and rake. H. S. Brownington, Baltimore, strap for packages. J. C. Christopher, Baltimore, pump motor. Josiah Kitzmiller, Keedysville, trace Fastener. Roderick Macrae, Baltimore, and F. G. Tavoron, Boston, Mass., Electric switch.

G. B. Maguire, Baltimore, spring balance scale (2 patents). S. H. Nicholson, Oxford, sled. J. L. Powell, Lewistown, lock and latch. R. A. Rogester, Baltimore, device for casting xxxxx metal.

The Beginning of the End. The beginning of disease is a slight debility or disorder of some of the vital organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dyspeptic symptoms, the liver is troublesome, the skin grows tawney and unhealthy looking, there are pains in the right side or through the right shoulder blade. The climax is often an utter prostration of the physical energies, perhaps a fatal issue. But if the difficulty is met in time with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is always effective as a remedy, and it should be resorted to at an early stage, there will be no reason to apprehend those injurious subsequent effects upon the system often entailed by cutting off the disease. For better let us, to employ this safe remedial agent in fever and acute, and other malarial complaints, than quinine and other potent drugs, which, even when they do prove effective for a time, ruin the stomach and impair the general health.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Mr. Joseph N. Smith (miller) occupying Horner's Mill, formerly Nunemaker's, in Liberty township, Adams county, Pa., three miles from this place, was in town on Tuesday evening, and returning to his home about ten o'clock, went into the mill and laid down and fell asleep. A young man named Edward Nindell was attending to the operations of the mill. After midnight the young man called to Mr. Smith and told him the water had run down. Smith arose and went to the door on the second floor, and in the act of placing his hand against its jam, he missed the jam and was precipitated to the ground below, a distance of about sixteen feet, striking on his forehead which was crushed, the blood flowing from his ears, and death ensued in a few minutes. Mr. Smith was a young man, being but 34 years old, had a pleasing address and was well esteemed. He leaves a wife and four children. The interment took place from St. Joseph's Catholic Church on Friday morning.

The Body Found—An Inquest—The Verdict—Story of the Lost Child.

On Saturday morning last, information was lodged before Henry Stokes, Esq., Justice of the Peace, that the body of the child of William Claybaugh, that mysteriously disappeared on July 1st, had been found near the top of the mountain, about one mile and a half from the home, near what is called "Sheeps Rock." The Squire thereupon commissioned constable W. H. Ashbaugh to summon a jury of inquest. The jury was composed as follows: Henry Stokes, coroner, Francis A. Maxwell, J. Henry Stokes, Michael Hoke, Geo. P. Beam, Daniel Lawrence, Albert Smith, William H. Hoke, Joshua S. Motter, James M. Kerrigan, Walter D. Willson, Singleton Dorsey, Jacob L. Topper, Dr. R. L. Annum, physician, who repaired to the place where the remains were found, and having viewed them and their surroundings, carefully removed them to the house of William Claybaugh, where the inquisition was held. Thirteen witnesses were closely examined and the following verdict was rendered: "That on the 1st day of July, in the year 1887, at the home of her parents, the said Emma Claybaugh wandered away from home and perished from exposure or some unknown cause to the jury."

The facts of the case may be summed up—that about 10 o'clock, a. m., on July 1, Mr. Claybaugh went to a neighbor to get some butter, his eldest child, a daughter about four years old and the youngest 22 months, about half an hour afterward started to follow him, and after they left the house; the elder child met the father at Bensell's whittler he had gone, and all she could tell him of her sister was "she went up the roof." On his return the wife enquired about the child Emma, and he knew nothing regarding her whereabouts. Shortly after Mr. C. and his wife started to search for the child and returning to the house, he went forth and secured the aid of some neighbors, to these others volunteered their services, until large bodies were on the search the night through, and for days succeeding without finding any trace of the missing one. About one and a half miles from the house, near the top of the mountain in a very rugged region and not far from some heavy rocks overhanging, the body of the child was discovered on Saturday last, and about ten paces from it at the roots of a tree, the skull, destitute of any integuments without, or within and yet perfect in form, it had evidently rolled down the declivity on being detached from the body; as to the body, the feet and part of the legs were the only discernible members, one arm was missing and a couple of ribs; the most of the skin remained in a dried state, the clothing greatly soiled and torn was the only basis of identification, but this was complete, through the evidence given. The verdict of the jury leads to the conclusion that the child, hearty and vigorous for its age, must have wandered to the place where found, and dying of exposure and starvation, became the prey of the buzzards, whose breeding grounds are near by.

The remains were interred at the Wincobranian Church, in Friend's Creek Valley, on Saturday afternoon.

The Jubilee season in London is represented by two articles in the current number of the Eclectic. "Victorian Literature," by Prof. Edward Dowden, and "The Progress of Thought in Our Time," by John Addington Symonds. "Oxford in the Middle Ages," by John C. Brodriek, is an interesting study of university life in the olden time. Algernon Charles Swinburne has a poem on the Jubilee. Andrew Lang has some sensible words to say on Literary Plagiarism, and James Keith, in a paper entitled "Our Great Competitor," studies the future of the United States. Mr. Gladstone attacks some of the conclusions in Mr. Lecky's last volume of "England in the Eighteenth Century." The papers entitled "Russia as the Enemy of English Trade," and "The Origin and Interpretation of Myths"—the latter by W. S. Rill—are highly suggestive and interesting. Mr. Westwood-Oliver is the contributor of a scientific article named "Earthquake Warnings," which will be read with profit by the many who have been recently alarmed by earthquake convulsions. Other articles of interest are a Sketch of Thomas Stevenson, the great engineer, by his son, Robert Louis Stevenson. "Free Love," a selection from Temple Bar. Special attention may be called to "Mar's Dag after the War," from Blackwood's Magazine. Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York.

At the Democratic County Convention held at Frederick on Saturday last, the following were chosen as delegates to the state convention, which meets in Baltimore on the 27th inst. Captain James McSherry, O. J. Miller, Edward Koontz, M. N. Rohrbach, Charles W. Ross, E. C. McSherry, George Wm. Smith, Joseph Byers, J. I. Jamison, Capt. Warner, G. Welsch, Dr. J. W. Downey, O. P. Crampton, D. K. Cramer, Wm. H. Lakin, Chas. E. Cassell, F. L. Stoner, Wm. M. Gaither, H. L. Gavar, George R. Stottlemeyer, Henry Unverzagt, Henry A. Peddie and G. A. T. Snauffer.

Old St. Swithin. St. Swithin's Day came without bringing a drop of rain. It was the common belief formerly that if no rain occurred on St. Swithin's Day the country would, in consequence, be deluged with showers for 40 days.

The above is an extract from a paragraph in the Examiner of this week. It is amusing, as "putting the cart before the horse;" being a new interpretation of an ancient legend, and also from the fact that the continuous rains of the past week give it plausible grounds for acceptance. The true idea as we have elsewhere given it, is, that the weather of the 15th of July will represent the prevailing state for the forty days next succeeding. The facts of history may be disputed, but that must be a daring pen that seeks to upset the traditions that have ruled the popular mind for ages.

In Brief, And To The Point. Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature. The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics. But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

In Memory of David L. Morrison.

David Landers Morrison was born near Emmitsburg on August 2nd, 1825. When nearing his majority he became a clerk in the store of the late Joshua Motter, of this place, and was well and favorably known for his gentlemanly deportment and efficiency in business. In after years he was connected with the late Joseph P. Troxell in the mercantile business, at the old stand upon which Messrs. I. S. Anan & Bro. have their place of business in this village. Subsequently he removed to Iowa, where he remained several years; but over thirty years ago he removed to Washington City, where he carried on the flour and feed business, and furnished the government hospitals with flour. In Washington he was married. His wife preceded him to the grave several years since. After the war ended he gave his attention to real estate investments, and was very successful and at the time of his decease, he occupied a position of influence in financial circles.

He was a man of a generous disposition, which manifested itself in acts of kindness and helpfulness to others. He was warmly attached to Emmitsburg and was one of the largest cash contributors towards the erection of the Fountain on our Public Square, and was earnestly interested in the success of the EMMITTSBURG CHRONICLE.

He leaves a large estate, the distribution of which he has provided for by his will. He connected himself with the Luther Palace Memorial Church of Washington City last spring, and died on Saturday last of a complication of ailments, including Bright's disease of the kidneys. May he rest in peace.

MR. UPTON ROOR a prominent and well known citizen of Uniontown district, Carroll county, died on Friday last week after a few days illness. He has time and again represented his county as one of its commissioners and also one of the Judges of the Orphan's Court.

Mrs. Julia Ann Crouse of Westminster was paralyzed on the Monday preceding and died on Friday.

A Good Appetite. Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The American Agriculturist for August already published, gives a complete "Fair List," as far as they have been determined upon, through correspondence with the "fair officials" in every State and Territory. The times and places of others not yet decided upon will be given in the September number. Much time and expense have been required in the movement and it will be appreciated everywhere by Agriculturists and others interested in the fairs.

There is a potent influence in green corn, that yields to experiment, beyond the necessity of enquiring for the component elements. Almost singularly it is adapted to the needs of most persons and has been known to benefit even febrile patients. Is it already the admiration of the perfected property which after distillation gives the residuum, and at the same time so distasteful to all prohibitionists in public? Let no one withhold corn!

At the Democratic County Convention held at Frederick on Saturday last, the following were chosen as delegates to the state convention, which meets in Baltimore on the 27th inst. Captain James McSherry, O. J. Miller, Edward Koontz, M. N. Rohrbach, Charles W. Ross, E. C. McSherry, George Wm. Smith, Joseph Byers, J. I. Jamison, Capt. Warner, G. Welsch, Dr. J. W. Downey, O. P. Crampton, D. K. Cramer, Wm. H. Lakin, Chas. E. Cassell, F. L. Stoner, Wm. M. Gaither, H. L. Gavar, George R. Stottlemeyer, Henry Unverzagt, Henry A. Peddie and G. A. T. Snauffer.

Thunder and Hail-Storm at Westminster. A heavy rain, wind and hail-storm, accompanied by thunder and lightning, passed over Westminster about 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, doing considerable damage. The course of the storm was northwest to southeast. The rain came down in torrents. The hail was the size of a pea, but in large quantities. Trees, fences and the growing corn along its course were blown down and damaged considerably. Two large trees at Spring Mills Station fell across the railroad track, breaking the telegraph wires and detaining the trains. At the edge of town a portion of the roof and cupola of the barn of Wesley Zile were blown off. The wagon shed of Jacob Myerly was blown from its foundation, and a large willow tree blown over, damaging the corner of his house. L. Gladhill's barn, north of town was blown over and scattered all over the field. The rafters on the new portion of the Western Maryland College were blown off, and the walls were sprung, also the two chimneys and a portion of the tin roof of the main building blown off. On one corner of the Reformed Church a finial, fifteen feet high, was blown off, breaking a large memorial window. The barn of George Lamotte, at the east end of town, was struck in two places. All along the streets trees were blown down and several chimneys of private houses blown off. The storm seemed the heaviest at the west end of town, but did great damage all through, twisting large limbs of trees off as if they were twigs and filling the air with leaves. The telephone wires are also damaged in several places. Before the storm the thermometer was 97, falling to 78 degrees. Another storm is passing over Westminster, and the rain is pouring down at eight o'clock.—Sun.

Affected by Lightning.

During the storm on Monday evening, as Mrs. W. H. Crouse was about to seat herself at the tea table, where the rest of the family had already assembled, a flash of lightning accompanied by a terrific crash of thunder occurred; the lightning played about a knife she held in her hand, producing, through fright, oppression of the heart. Dr. Wrigley administered remedies, which were effective in restoring her and she is doing well.

Re-committed to Montevue. On Saturday last Geo. W. Freeze residing in the upper end of Eyer's Valley made complaint to Henry Stokes, Esq., Justice of the peace in this place, that his son Wm. J. Freeze, about 20 years of age was insane and beyond his control and was a disturber of the peace of the neighborhood. After a hearing the Justice committed the son to Montevue Hospital. On Sunday morning Wm. H. Ashbaugh, constable, took him to the Hospital. This unfortunate youth had been to Montevue for some time, and on the supposition of being relieved of his disorder, was sent home, but very soon after his arrival there, became ungovernable and dangerous, and thus his return was absolutely necessary.

The Ballings to Remain. The county commissioners Tuesday took action on the petition of Col. J. B. Thomas, president of the Courtyard Improvement Committee, asking that the committee be granted the privilege of beautifying the yard of the court house property. The vote of the board was two for and two against the improvement. Col. Thomas stated to a Times reporter that he thought there was no prospect of the privilege being granted by the present board and that the matter would be allowed to rest until a new board should be elected, which will be next November. In the meantime the $1,000 fund now in the hands of the committee will be invested, so that the amount will be increased by the time the money is needed.—Times.

A Stormy Time. The hot wave of Saturday and Sunday last, was prolonged into Monday, and the mercury reached 101° in the shade, but just after noon there came up a little shower that gave some small relief, and was followed by others still later. About 6 o'clock, p. m., a severe thunder storm accompanied with hail, gave promise of still greater relief from the heat, and the rain continued at intervals during the night, the thunder being a continuous roll, with very vivid lightning, and Tuesday was pleasantly cool, Wednesday as well as comparatively cool, Wednesday was an old fashioned drizzling rainy day, which made thicker clothing necessary, and called forth thanks from weary workers who had been so long panting in the heat.

From the Frederick Union. Last week Mr. S. L. Powell, of Lewistown, was granted a United States patent on a lock and latch which he has invented.

A frightful accident happened at the fertilizer factory of Messrs. DeLashmatt & Son, on E. All Saints' street, last Friday afternoon, in which a colored man named Albert Brown came near losing his life. Brown was walking past an upright shaft that was revolving with great rapidity, which caught a bag hanging on his arm and in an instant the man was being whirled around. In being whirled around he struck a post, and when released from his perilous position it was found that his injuries consisted of an arm being broken in two places, a wrist dislocated, and other external and some internal injuries. The man is slowly improving, though his life is not yet past the point of danger.

BLACK PILLS relieve palpitation.

SUNDAY last was a day to be remembered for its torrid heat, the temperature arose to 96°. There was but little sleeping in church. In the afternoon a wind storm arose accompanied by a light rain, and the latter was resumed at night, with electrical accompaniments, and all together there was a great reduction in the air, but it continued heavy and sultry, until a late hour.

WHAT can be grander than a summer storm? Diverse currents meet in mid-air, the sea sends in its moisture to replace the evaporation of the heat on the land; attraction and repulsion do their work, with the resultants of lightning and thunder and rain, with or without hail as the temperature demands, and all of it goes forward according to the invisible laws of nature, always active, whether in sunshine and calm, or the hurly-burly of the elements, from the volcanoes to the earthquakes, tornadoes, cyclones, &c. In all appears the mighty power of their "Great Original."

Went to Mechanicstown. On Thursday afternoon, twenty-six of the members of the Vigilant Hose Company of this place, under the command of Lieut. G. W. Bushman, in response to the invitation of the Guardian Hose Company of Mechanicstown, to visit them during their fair now in progress, went to that place and spent the evening. They were met at the Miller House by the Mechanicstown Band, which, after an address of welcome by Dr. Leatherman, responded to on behalf of the Vigilants by Mr. A. S. Rowe, led them in a parade through the principal streets. On their return to the hotel they were greeted with a very pleasing address by Mr. Charles E. Cassell, Editor of the Clarion. The boys report a very pleasant evening, and returned home highly pleased with the entertainment they received.

From the Herald and Torch Light. The rain of Wednesday interfered sadly with the Methodist Assembly at Pen-Mar. Very extensive preparations were made and considerable expense incurred by the different committees, but the weather prevented the large attendance expected. There were only about five hundred persons there in the morning, half of whom came from Baltimore and a few from Washington.

Mr. Joseph Cromwell, of Baltimore, who is engaged by Brigadier-General Brown to erect the camps of the Maryland Militia, arrived in Hagerstown, Wednesday and will enter upon his duties immediately. There were erected yesterday two carloads of tents and a car containing the camp equipage of the Fifth Regiment.

Reports are coming in from the different military organizations of the state, and the prospect for a large encampment is gratifying. The persons having in charge the local arrangements such as obtaining subsistence and providing for the comfort of the troops, are busy and will spare no efforts to make the encampment successful.
