"THE MOTHER OF US ALL."

DR. HENRY F. DARNELL. Down 'mid the tangled copses, Where the gold-eyed daisies shine, Down through the sweet green pastures, Linger glad groups of children All the long summer day, Making the wildwood echo With their shouting loud and gay.

Thronging the crowded city, Weary, and worn, and thin, Bearing the grievous burden Of sorrow, perchance of sin; Too heavy for mirth or laughter, When the wolf looks in through the door,

Are the children of the poor. And yet the same God made them, Marvels of wisdom all: His image stamped upon them, Gleams through the ruinous fall; Each one is a drop in the rainbow That spans this world of care:

Each one is a gem to be fashioned.

Crouching on curb and doorstep

For the diadem Christ shall wear. Oh, Church of the loving Shepherd, Whose death our life hath won! Go forth, like a true, fond mother, And keep the children one;

Let not the links be broken Which God's own hand hath wrought;

His precious blood hath bought. -Churchman.

CONTSITUTION.

The Centenial Anniversary of the adoption of the Federal Constitution will be celebrated at Philadelphia, on the 15, 16, 17, inst., by an elaborate trades procession, military and naval review and other ceremonies and festivities in which the President and his Cabinet will take part. All of the "Original Thirteen," and a majority of the other States and Territories will be represented. This beyond doubt will be the most notable demonstration in the land since 1876 when the one hundreth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence was observed.

In the New Princeton Review for September, inst., Mr. Alexander Johnston furnishes an article on "the First Century of the Constitution" that is intensely interesting for its evidences of earnest research, profundity of thought and lucidity of style. It should be read by everybody. We propose to present in a runing manner to our readers some of its salient points. There was great opposition in several of the most important State Conventions to the adoption of the Constitution. "For months the most acute political observer dared not venture a prophecy as to the success or failure of the new Constitution; and the change of 2 out of 60 votes in New York, of 5 out of 168 votes in Virginia, and of 10 out of 355 in Massachusetts, on the decisive ballots would have been enough to reject the instrument and to throw the country back into chaos." This intense opposition was supplanted however, by what has been called "the worship of the Constitution." In a few years the original opponents began to pose as "friends of the Constitution." "Kingdoms and thrones have risen or fallen; the governments of all other civilized countries have. been changed in form and essence; the jurisdiction of the United States has spread over a new territory, far larger than the whole original country for which the Constitution was intended; and the instrument itself has been subjected to all the encroaching influences of advancing
