JIM HAWTHORN.

A True Sketch of a Plucky Boy who was in Earnest.

"Pretty cool way to speak to a fellow," soliloquized Jim Hawthorn, pausing a moment as he was entering the big iron works to glance at a figure receding up the street.

"Guess it's all right, though," he continued. "Etiquette only permits of flannel shirts for special social occasions and this isn't one of them."

The whirl of wheels in the machine shop soon drowned the tune he started to whistle, but he kept up the motions all the same. The errand he had been sent on had been satisfactorily attended to and he took up his work again as quickly as possible. Light-hearted and good-natured he entered into every task with enthusiasm, as though working for a purpose instead of from necessity.

"My, what a nice supper, mother!" said Jim, as he sat down that evening in the cozy dining-room.

"I always try to have things nice for you, James," lovingly replied Mrs. Hawthorn, "but sometimes I felt disappointed when you did not seem to appreciate my efforts."

"Well, working gives a fellow an appetite. Often when I have been out yachting I thought I was hungry, but somehow it was altogether different from the feeling I have now when I get home in the evening and get dressed up. I feel like a man that has earned his supper. By the way, speaking of yachting reminds me of an occurrence this morning. The foreman sent me out in a hurry, and just as I was coming back I met Fannie Stone, and she looked as though she did not know me in the flannel shirt that I have worn so often playing tennis or out boating with her."

"You will have to learn that circumstances makes a difference," smiled his mother.

"Of course I don't blame her, for society is very exacting. Etiquette draws a line just as distinct as the chalk mark of the tennis court. But as I am neither a martyr nor a reformer, I'll proceed to satisfy my appetite," said Jim, unable longer to resist the tempting supper.

"I met Mr. Morgan on the street this morning," said Mrs. Hawthorn, "and he complimented you on the interest you are taking in your work. He said, though, he was very much surprised when you applied to him, for he thought that a boy who graduated at the head of his class would want to enter one of the learned professions."

"But I do intend making my work a learned profession, at least for me," Jim spoke up, earnestly.

Jim's enthusiasm did not die out as soon as the novelty of his work had worn off. In fact he did not allow the novelty to wear off, for he made it a point to learn something new every day. He not only won the favor of his employers, but also the esteem of all the workmen, for no matter where he was placed he was courteous and kind to his associates, without, however, being familiar.

"There goes the whistle," said the foreman of the machine shop, and before the noise had stopped, tools were dropped and many of the workmen threw their coats over their shoulders and rushed out without even waiting to wash the dirt from their hands.

"I was in hopes we could finish this piece of work, for it is holding other work back."

"I will willingly stand and help you," cheerfully spoke up Jim.

"We can soon get it through."

"Well, Jim, I always count you as worth a half dozen boys, so with your six and my one the seven of us ought to soon get it done," smiled the foreman.

It took them a little longer than they had expected, but Jim considered himself well repaid for the extra exertion in the knowledge he had gained on several subjects.

Just as they were locking up Tom Allen, the head engineer, came running over to the shop and called out to the foreman:

"and me your key, Charlie; as we sput down for a holiday tomorrow I'm going to take the big engine apart and I may want some wrenches or tools out of the shop."

"Oh, can I come down and help you?" asked Jim.

"You'd better take all the holidays you can get, for we don't have many, 'cept when there's a breakdown, what ain't likely, if I can help it."

"But I want to learn something about engines," persisted Jim.

"Well, if you've nothing on hand come around and I'll make use of you."

"Where you goin'?" called a couple of the men who were passing the deserted works as Jim was entering the next morning.

"I am going to help Tom Allen overhaul the big engine. I hope you'll have a pleasant day," replied Jim in a good-natured way.

"Oh, on a little make, eh?" queried one.

"Orter get time and a half for overwork," suggested the other.

"No, I don't expect to get any pay except the experience," Jim answered.

"Well, you're a dunc; do it wunst an' they'll always expect it," continued one of the men, at which Jim merely smiled and passed on.

"You can't help likin' that fellow, can you," said one of the men to his companion as they walked away.

"You'd think he was proud, but he'd do anyone a turn quicker than any fellow in the works," was the answer. "He has a polite way of saying things, but he always means exactly what he says and never takes it back."

"Oh, I expected to see you come down all dressed up,

SHALL WE FIGHT FOR SAMOA?

The question as to what action this country will take in view of Germany's recent acts of aggression in the Samoan Islands continues to be the absorbing topic in political and diplomatic circles in Washington. The situation is conceded, on all sides, to be grave, the more so as it is to some extent confused by the lack of intelligent comprehension of the issues really involved. It is the misfortune of the administration that in the present crisis the Department of State is represented at Samoa by a subordinate official—Vice-Consul Blacklock—who is married to a Samoan woman, and whose statements are thought to be colored by his personal sympathies. Consul-General Sewell, who occupies a position of hostility to his official superiors at present, has not been at his post since August last.—Sun.

There seems to something ridiculously absurd in the idea of seriously discussing the possibilities of war between two great nations over the settlement of the political affairs of a little group of half-civilized islands in the South Pacific Ocean. The reported insult to the American flag was a very soul-stirring text for patriotic newspaper writers, and has been made the most of in their efforts to outdo each other in entertaining and exciting their eager, sensation-loving readers, but when traced back to its origin proves to be altogether without national significance, as the affair from which it grew was the result of domestic squabbles among the islanders as to the rights of the two claimants for rulership, in which squabbles or fights the resident foreigners naturally got mixed up.

As to Germany's claiming the right to regulate the political affairs of these distant islands, regardless of the prior claims of the United States, based upon treaties entered into by representatives of our government, it could hardly be supposed she would be willing to throw down the gage of war, or the United States to pick it up in the interest of those little far away islands that are of no earthly use to either nation except as coaling stations for the steamers crossing the Southern Pacific Ocean.

The following is from a Washington letter published in the Baltimore Sun of Monday:

Mr. Bayard states that, from the very beginning of the Samoan troubles, Germany has professed the utmost friendliness to the United States and regard for American interests on the islands. Only to-day he received a communication from the German minister expressing a sincere desire to reach a settlement satisfactory to this country. The whole trouble, in Mr. Bayard's opinion, is due to the course of the German trading companies which have large interests in the islands. They have striven to commit their government to indorsement of acts intended to promote their interests and practically to secure them control of affairs. Precisely the same state of affairs exists in Zanzibar.

The enemies of the administration have sought to make a strong point by contrasting the vigorous course of Secretary Bayard towards the puny republic of Hayti with his alleged timorousness in dealing with the big empire of Germany. When Secretary Bayard's attention was called to this point he said the situation in Hayti and the situation in Samoa were widely different. Hayti had distinctly violated its treaty obligations to this country, and had seized an American vessel.

EXPOSITION AND TRADES' DISPLAY.

A Movement for the Development of the Agricultural and Mechanical Interests of the State.

The Maryland Agricultural Association has decided to hold a State Fair at Pimlico, beginning about the tenth of September. The managers are determined to make the Fair a great success, in fact it will be an Exposition, suitable to set forth the Agricultural and Mechanical interests of the State, not only for the entertainment of its citizens, but to bring the same, with its unequalled advantages before citizens of other States. The following extract from an editorial on this subject, which appeared in the Baltimore Evening News of January 18, gives an idea of our present productions:

Everything is manufactured or produced in this State from a pin to a steel ship, from a needle to a ton of coal, from canned peas to watermelons, from a shrimp to a sturgeon, from a humming bird to a bald eagle. Let us show a sample of what we have—all that we have—and set it off to the best advantage. 'Tis an opportunity for enterprise—let us make the most of it. The sentiment expressed above is to the point. Why should we keep our resources hidden from the outside world. Let us come forward now and show the advantages Maryland presents, and the inducements offered for the investment of outside capital, for the development of Agricultural and Mechanical interests, and of the mineral wealth in which our mountains abound. We have abundant railroad and water facilities, and our climate is mild, not being subjected to extremes of either heat or cold.

Another feature presented by the Nears is that a Trades' Display be made on the streets of Baltimore during one day of the Fair, not to represent the business of Baltimore alone, but of the entire State.

In this particular section of the State, where Agriculture is the principal interest, no doubt great good will be accomplished if our farmers can attend this Exposition and have a chance to investigate more fully the advantages of stock raising and dairy farming, to which they seem to be paying more attention every year.

THE TRIUMPH OF BOULANGER.

General Boulanger was elected in Paris on Sunday last by a majority of 54,432 over all other candidates, and a plurality of 81,550 in a total vote of 433,708. His actual vote was 244,070, as against 162,520 for his principal opponent, M. Jacques, and about 27,000 for M. Boule and others. If the extent of the Boulanger vote did not surprise its recipient, for the General is said to have counted on having two hundred and fifty thousand ballots cast for him, it has certainly astonished the motley crowd of his adherents.

And what a political mosaic it was! Royalists, imperialists, clericals, and what Lord Palmerston once called "a fortuitous concurrence of atoms," made up of the bourgeoisie, the workmen of the faubourgs, thousands of the unclashed, and quite a number of the active spirits of the old commune, led by that reddist of petticoated politicians Louise Michel. Strange to say, they were so well drilled by their leaders that they resisted all provocations, and with the exception of one or two free fights, the most momentous election that Paris has seen in these latter days passed off quietly.—Sun.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but then it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedloe, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood, derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies will do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

DO SHUT THE DOOR!

The following short rhyme commends itself at this particular season. It seems to be the right thing said at the right time:

Don't let the door stand open, but shut it with much care, Without a bang, without a whang; yes, shut it fair and square; Without a slam, without a jam, without a slam, or a jerk, For if you've left it open, go shut it, and don't shirk.

No Christian man or woman, no well trained chick or child, Will let a door swing idly, to make weak nerves run wild, When chilly winds are blowing, and some one taking cold, While the open door is creaking and muttering like a scold.

Haste makes but waste, remember, so plenty take of time; Don't leave the door half open; a fault almost a crime; And if you've ever done so, don't do so any more; Whatever else you fail to do, don't fail to shut the door!

Wire as a Farm Convenience. Soft steel galvanized wire, such as is used for the cheap telephones, is wonderfully useful about the house or the farm.

Soft steel galvanized wire, such as is used for the cheap telephones, is wonderfully useful about the house or the farm. With a good pair of pliers it can be used almost like string.

When this cannot be had, common copper wire will answer just as well, but is a trifle more expensive and not so strong. In the absence of these soft iron wires used by stove men for putting up stove pipe will answer.

The latter, however, is rather large. Having either of these soft wires we may sew a button upon stiff cloth, fasten the ear of a tin pail in place, or bind a volume of periodicals. With the copper wire leather can be fastened in many places, as for example about a harness, where ordinary waxed ends will fail.

For training plants against the house wire is far better than string. For this purpose copper is first, the galvanized second, and plain iron wire last. Old fence wire may be worked in for this purpose.

In the garden two or three strands of it can be made partly if not entirely, to take the place of brush for peas. A pretty stout stake is wanted at each end of the row. Tomatoes can be supported by a pair of wires stretched along the row, one on each side. An old barrel hoop may be fastened to the wires so that the plant comes up through it.

In the pocket of the buggy and the farm wagon—in fact, in every carriage on the place—there should be a small roll of wire, as well as a ball of stout string. In the event of a breakdown all sorts of mending can be done with great ease.

A broken strap, thill, or even a tug, can be made whole, and accidents which are usually serious vexations become mere incidents. Wire wound tightly about the end of a stick, and the ends carefully tucked in, or the last turn, secured with a tack, makes a good and substantial ferrule. To learn how this should be done one has only to study the winding of wire upon a broom.

This broom wire is of about the right size for all the smaller jobs. There are places and times when a couple of turns of wire around the month of a bag are much better than string. A wire staple or band will hold a flapping strap, and without showing like a string. A stretched wire will keep flower pots from blowing off a bench or shelf in summer. A split knife-handle may be wound with wire and made to do good work. It must not be forgotten that a handle tightly wound with copper wire affords a very firm grip. Lastly, when your suspenders break, and needles and thread are a mile away, don't forget the copper wire.

American Agriculturist. How to Forget Sorrow. A druggist recently received a letter from a patient, a hollow man, who asked in candid tones if he could give him any remedy that would drive away a care that was like a care that was weighing upon his health. The man of drugs nodded, and compounded a mixture of quinine, wormwood, castor oil, and offered it to the despairing patient, who apathetically gulped it down. History repeats that for six months he could think of anything except how to get the taste out of his mouth.

Honest toil don't stand a chance: More we work, we have behind us Bigger patches on our pants.

RAYMOND is five years old and a strong Democrat.

"Raymond you must behave better," said his mother; "good Democrats don't act in that way."

"Do Republicans?" inquired Raymond.

"No," his mother, "good ones do not."

"Oh, Raymond," cried Laura, "do be good, or no one will have anything to do with you—unless," she added, "it is somebody like me, who hasn't any politics."—Harper's Young People.

Emergency Pie. Sometimes we are without fruit, and something is needed to complete the dinner. I have a recipe for a pie that the children have named "emergency pie," from my having to use it on such occasions.

I find, however, every person likes it: One teacupful of flour, 2 eggs, 1 heaping tablespoonful of sugar, 1/2 of a cupful of melted butter. Take sugar, butter, eggs and flour and beat them well together, and bake in one crust like a custard.—Mrs. Harris in Maryland Farmer.

"MARRIAGE a failure! I should say not!" remarked an Oregon farmer, whose opinion was desired on one of the great questions of the day.

"Why, there's Lucindy gits up in the mornin', milks six cows, gits breakfast, starts four children to school, looks after the other three, feeds the hens, likewise the hogs, likewise some motherless sheep, skims twenty pans o' milk, washes the clothes, gits dinner, et cetera et cetera."

"Think I could hire anybody to do it fur what she gits? Not much? Marriage, sir, is a success, sir; a great success!"—Youth's Companion.

A Large Epicurean Contract. William Blakes, the colored driver of Broadhead's stages at Media, has a task to accomplish on Washington's Birthday. He has undertaken to eat, in a sitting of one hour, a bushel of turnips, half a peck of potatoes, six cups of coffee, four loaves of bread, half a pound of stewed prunes, four pounds of beef, six small pies, three spring chickens, three oyster stews, fifty raw oysters, one can of salmon, and wash all this down with a pint of whiskey.

The turnips and potatoes are to be measured whole and afterwards boiled and mashed. The loser of the wager pays for the provisions. The entertainment will begin at 1 o'clock.—Philadelphia Record.

Something for Boys to Consider. Says the New York Medical Journal: "In an experimental observation of thirty-eight boys of all classes of society and of average health who had been using tobacco for periods ranging from two months to two years twenty-seven showed severe injury to the constitution and insufficient growth; thirty-two showed the existence of irregularity of the heart's action, disordered stomachs, coughs and a craving for alcohol; thirteen had intermittency of the pulse and one had consumption. After they had abandoned the use of tobacco within six months one-half were free from all their former symptoms, and the remainder had recovered by the end of the year."

THE street lamp on the corner of Broadway and Twenty-ninth street is the nightly business stand of a blind man and a dog. I watched them last night, having become interested in them through the stories that had come to me of the dog's intelligence. I heard the man ask the type of a gentleman who stopped to drop something in the box. He was told it was 10 o'clock. The gentleman walked on and the man called out to the dog: "Come, Tom, it's 10, and time for us to go home."

The little dog gathered himself together, held up the box to the man, waited until he took the money out and put it in his pocket, buttoned his old coat, and then stood on the curb and examined the cars coming along. Finally a green one came in sight and the dog drew the man out into the mud and stood until it came along. The driver evidently knew them, for when he came to where they stood he pulled up and they got in. I was assured that it was a regular thing, and that the dog has a remarkable faculty for facts. It is said that he even knows the people who give alms to the old fellow, and never fails to greet them with administration of pleasure.—New York Star.

The Foreign Magazines embody the best thoughts of the ablest writers of Europe. It is the aim of the ECLECTIC MAGAZINE to select and reprint these articles.

The plan of the ECLECTIC includes Science, Essays, Reviews, Biographical Sketches, Historical Papers, Art Criticisms, Travels, Poetry and Short Stories.

Its Editorial Departments comprise Literary Notices, dealing with current home books, Foreign Literary Notes, Science and Art, summarizing briefly the new discoveries and achievements in this field, and consisting of choice extracts from new books and foreign journals. The following are the names of some of the leading authors whose articles may be expected to appear in the pages of the ECLECTIC for the coming year.

AUTHORS.—Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Alfred Tennyson, Professor Huxley, Professor Tyndall, Rich. A. Proctor, E. A. Freeman, D. C. L., James Anthony Froude, Thomas Hughes, Algernon C. Swinburne, William Black, Mrs. Olney, Cardinal Manning, Mrs. Thackeray, Thomas Hardy, Robert Buchanan, etc., etc.

The ECLECTIC enables the American reader to keep himself informed on the great questions of the day throughout the world, and no intelligent American can afford to be without it.

STEEL ENGRAVINGS.—The ECLECTIC comprises each year two large volumes of over 1200 pages. Each of these volumes contains a fine steel engraving, which adds much to the attraction of the magazine.

TERMS.—Single copies, 45 cents; one copy, one year, $5. Five copies, $20. Total subscription for three months, $1. The ECLECTIC and any $4 magazine, $8.

THE BALTIMORE WEEKLY SUN continues to preserve its position, maintained for many years, as a model Family Newspaper. During the past year, in order to accommodate the great variety of matter seeking admission to its columns, it has been found necessary to issue a Supplement almost every week, presenting a home newspaper unequalled for freshness and variety.

Its literary features are selected with discriminating taste and with special reference to the entertainment and instruction of the family circle. Its Agricultural and Veterinary Departments, edited by specialists, have been of great value to the Farmer, while its Fashion Articles, Household Recipes, etc., have continued to be a source of weekly interest and instruction to ladies. The latest news up to the hour of publication is given in its correspondence and telegraphic dispatches, while its editorials, besides discussing current events in an impartial spirit, afford much wholesome advice and suggestion on social, economic and other topics. The proceedings of Congress, and Maryland and other Legislatures, the National Political Conventions, and the Presidential and Congressional elections are among the important features that will be promptly and copiously presented in its columns during 1889.

A. S. ABELL & CO., Address The Sun Building, Baltimore, Md.

The publishers of Scribner's Magazine aim to make it the most popular and enterprising of periodicals, while at all times preserving its high literary character. 25,000 new readers have been drawn to it during the past six months by the increased excellence of its contents (notably the Railway articles), and it closes its second year with a new impetus and an assured success. The illustrations will show the new effects, and nothing to make Scribner's Magazine attractive and interesting will be neglected.

THE RAILROAD ARTICLES will be continued by several very striking papers; one especially interesting by E. Postmaster-General Thomas C. James on "The Railway Postal Service."

MR. ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON'S serial novel "The Master of Ballantrae," will run through the greater part of the year. Begun in November.

A CORRESPONDENCE and collection of manuscript memoirs relating to J. F. Millet and a famous group of modern FRENCH PAINTERS will furnish the substance of several articles.

The brief end papers written last year by Robert Louis Stevenson, will be replaced by equally interesting contributions by different famous authors. Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich will write the first of them for the January number.

Many valuable LITERARY ARTICLES will appear: a paper on Walter Scott's Methods of Work, illustrated from original MSS., a second "Shelf of Old Books," by Mrs. James T. Fields, and many other articles equally noteworthy.

Articles on ART SUBJECTS will be a feature. Papers are arranged to appear by Clarence Cooper, E. H. Blasfield, Austin Dobson, and many others.

FISHING ARTICLES describing sport in the best fishing grounds will appear. Salmon, Winnish, Bass, and Tarpon are the subjects now arranged. The authors are well-known sportsmen.

ILLUSTRATED ARTICLES of great variety, touching upon all manner of subjects, travel, biography, description, etc., will appear, but not of the conventional commonplace sort.

Among the most interesting in the list of scientific papers for the year will be a remarkable article by Professor John Trowbridge, upon the most recent developments and uses of PHOTOGRAPHY.

A class of articles which has proved of special interest will be continued by a group of papers upon ELECTRICITY in its most recent applications, by eminent authorities; a remarkable paper on DEEP MINING, and other interesting papers. Unique illustrations.

A SPECIAL OFFER to cover last year's numbers, which include all the RAILWAY ARTICLES, as follows: A year's subscription (1888) and the numbers for 1889, $4.50

A year's subscription (1889) in cloth $6.00

numbers for 1888, bound in cloth $6.00

IT IS AND WILL CONTINUE TO BE THE Greatest and Cheapest Family Journal

IN THE UNITED STATES.

The coming year promises to be crowded with stirring events. In the United States entrance of new issues into the political arena has been followed by a change of Administration. But the great economic question on which the campaign turned is still unsettled, and its solution is now committed to a Congress almost equally divided between the two great parties.

Europe is a vast camp. Army corps patrol the frontiers, and millions of men await the signal for the most gigantic war the world has ever seen. The HERALD'S news-gathering machinery is unequalled. Its correspondents dot the habitable globe. Nothing can escape their vigilance, and no expense is spared in spreading the results of their efforts before the HERALD'S readers.

ALL THE NEWS OF AMERICA will be found each week in the HERALD, while its FOREIGN DEPARTMENT will contain a panorama of the Old World, flashed under the sea over the COMMERCIAL CABLES.
