OMISSION.

It isn't the thing you do, dear, It's the thing you leave undone Which gives you a bit of heartache At the setting of the sun; The tender word forgotten, The letter you did not write, The flower you might have sent, dear, Are you haunting ghosts to-night.

The stone you might have lifted Out of the brother's way; The bit of heartstone counsel You were hurried too-much to say; The loving touch of the hand, dear, The gentle and winsome tone That you had no time or thought for With trouble enough of your own.

These little acts of kindness So easily out of mind, These chances to be angels Which even mortals find— They come in night and silence, Each child reproachful wraith, When hope is faint and flagging And a blight has dropped on faith.

For life is all too short, dear And sorrow is all too great, To suffer our slow compassion That tarries until too late; And it's not the thing you do, dear, It's the thing you leave undone, Which gives you the bitter heartache At the setting of the sun.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

LITTLE JIM.

BY DAVID KERR.

"Rough" enough he looked, indeed, the great black-bearded, grimy fellow, with his greasy cap pulled down over his hard, surly bull-dog face. And he was rough by nature as well as by name.

Those huge bony hands of his, which could swing the heaviest pickaxe for hours without tiring, and could toss about great lumps of coal which other men could hardly lift, were always ready to knock down any one who displeased him; and many a sturdy fellow in the Blackpool Collieries wore scars and bruises enough to make him sorry for having ever tried his strength against the terrible Jack.

But there was one person to whom even Rough Jack never said a harsh word; and that was little Jim, the only child he had. Jim's mother had died soon after he was born, and his aunt, who kept house for Jack, was a big, bony, sullen-faced woman, almost as untidy and coarse-looking as the rough collier himself. But no mother could have been more tenderly careful of the little fellow than they were.

However dirty and untidy they might be themselves, they did their best to keep Jim's face clean and his clothes in order; and cross-grained Aunt Susan, who was always grumbling at having "such a power o' work to do," sat up at night several times, after her day's work was over, to knit a little pair of socks as a birthday present for him.

Jim had been the pet of the whole neighborhood ever since he could remember, and these savage, wild-looking men, so fierce and surly with every one else, always had a kind word for "Rough Jack's little lad," as they called him. Every day he used to carry his father's dinner to the works in a little basket, going fearlessly among the collier's savage bull-dogs, which seemed to know him quite as well as their masters, and would wag their stumpy tails and put up their flat-nosed heads to be patted whenever he went by.

Indeed, the "little lad" seemed to have such perfect trust in every one, and to be so sure that nobody would hurt or vex him, that it was not easy for any one even to think of doing so. The rough collier lads, whose great sport was to pelt each other with heavy lumps of coal which made a bruise wherever they hit, shouted to one another to stop the moment they saw the little fair-haired head in the distance, and once, when Rough Jack and his mate—who had had great friends heretofore—quarreled about something, and were going to fight, little Jim stepped in between them and, taking hold of his father's jacket, looked up at them both with an air of such piteous astonishment, that the two fierce men, after eyeing him blankly for a moment, turned their backs and slouched off in a shame-faced kind of way; and the next morning they were as good friends as ever.

But after a while troubles began to come upon Blackpool Colliery. Business grew slack and wages had to be reduced, which bore very hard upon these reckless fellows, who spent their money as fast as they got it, never thinking of laying anything by. There was plenty of grumbling and growling against young Harry Forrester, the great man of the district, whom his father's death, about a year before, had left sole owner of the colliery; and the quiet people of the neighborhood began to fear a riot, and to talk of sending for soldiers from the nearest large town.

But amid all their troubles the rough men were still as loyal as ever to their "little lad." Many a grumbler went without his dinner to buy something good for Jim; and Rough Jack, as he danced the little fellow on his broad shoulder, wore something as nearly approaching to a smile as his iron face could assume.

At last it began to be whispered one day among the colliers that a number of them were to be discharged. No one knew how the report had arisen, or even whether it was true or not; but the mere thought of it was quite enough for these wild fellows, ripe as they already were for mischief.

"We mun [must] strike," muttered a big, sullen-looking pitman. "Ay, we mun strike—but not as thou mean'st," growled Rough Jack, clinching his sledge-hammer fist with terrible emphasis. "I see not let my little lad starve for a'th' gentles' sake i' England. We mun strike Mester Forrester's yed [head] so as he'll feel. Who'll join, lads?"

"I will."

"And I."

"And so'll I."

In face every man there was as eager as Jack himself; and it was soon agreed that they should watch for a chance of attacking young Forrester, and then beat him with an inch of his life—"and mayhap hit farther," as the burly pitman muttered, with a cruel gleam in his eyes. Two sharp lads were at once chosen to keep watch upon "young Squoie Harry," who had come down from London a few days before; and, on the third morning, one of the scouts came running in to report that Harry had gone to see a friend a few miles from the colliery, and had sent the groom home with his horse, saying that he would walk back in the evening, the road being too rough to risk a good horse on after dark.

The looks exchanged by the colliers at this news said more than any words could do. All was soon settled. Midway along the road which Forrester must take lay a patch of bare, lonely moorland, well known to Rough Jack as his little boy's favorite playground. Here they would hide in a deep hollow overgrown with bushes, and pounce upon their victim as he passed.

Night drew on. One by one (for they knew that it would not do for many of them to be seen together), Jack and his gang came stealing down to the fatal spot, and, crouching down amid the bushes, waited for their prey. But as time went on, and it grew darker and darker, and still there was no sign of him, they began to get uneasy. Could he have changed his mind and stayed all night? or could their plot have been discovered? No—there at last was a firm step approaching, and the rising moon showed them the tall, active figure and handsome face which they all knew and hated.

The savage men clatched their heavy cudgels, and drew themselves together, like tigers crouching for a spring. But just then there was a rattle of wheels and hoofs in the opposite direction, and a light dog-cart came rushing along the highway like a whirlwind, evidently driven by some wild young fellow, who thought it fine fun to risk breaking his neck. At the same moment there appeared, slowly crossing the road, right in the path of the maddened beast and reckless driver, the figure of Rough Jack's little lad.

With a cry that made the air ring, the colliers burst from their hidingplace, forgetting everything but the peril of their little pet. As they ran they saw the child stumble and fall in trying to escape, and Harry sprang forward to catch him up; but then horse and dog-cart came dashing down upon them both and everything vanished in a whirl of dust.

But as the dust cleared away Harry Forrester was seen rising slowly to his feet. There was a thin streak of blood stealing down his smooth, white forehead, and his left hand was sorely bruised and up; but his right arm was still firmly around the child, who was looking up in his face with round, wondering blue eyes, as if hardly knowing whether to be frightened or not.

Jack sprang to his child like a tiger whose cub has been wounded, and, finding him quite unharmed, took the tiny face between his huge, black hands and kissed it passionately again and again.

"God bless thee, my little lad," said he, in a broken voice; "God bless thee!"

Then his mood seemed to change, and, flinging his cap on the ground and, flinging his feet, he folded his arms on his brawny chest and looked the young man full in the face.

"Look 'ee here, Mester," said he, firmly; "we coom out this neet [night] to beat and hammer thee—mayhap to kill thee outright; and thou'st nigh killed thyself to save yon little lad, as I'd gi' my heart's blood for onny day. Now, here I stand; knock me down if thou wilt, or gi' me over to the police, or what ye loike. I see ne'er lift hand to stop thee, for I ha' done a craddently [cowardly] thing."

"And so say we a', every man of us," cried the other men, gathering round their leader.

It was a strange scene upon which the full moon fell in all its brightness; the wild waste of dark moorland in the background; the slender, handsome, gayly dressed young man, with little Jim's tiny face nestling against his shoulder; the sooty skins and savage faces of the grim giants around him, and in front the mighty figure of Rough Jack, silently awaiting his sentence.

But the sentence came in a form which Jack little expected. With one hand Forrester put the little boy into his father's arms, while with the other he gave the collier's great black hand a cordial grasp.

"If you've been wrong, my man, I dare say I've been wrong, too," said he, heartily; "but, luckily, it's not too late yet to set things straight. We must just try and understand each other a little better after this; and, please God, we'll do it, with the help of this little peacemaker here."

He spoke truly, for from that day there were not three better friends in all England than Harry Forrester, "Rough Jack" and "Rough Jack's little lad."—N. Y. Independent.

Bengal Superstitions.
 According to a paper printed in the annual report of the Bombay Anthropological Society, the following superstitions are current in Bengal: Shouting the name of the king of birds, (Garuda) drives away snakes. Shouting Ram Ram drives away ghosts. Cholera that attacks on Monday or Saturday ends fatally, but not cholera that attacks on Thursday. The flowering of bamboos augurs famine. In fanning, if the fan strikes the body it should be thrice knocked against the ground. When giving alms the giver and receiver should not be standing on different sides of the threshold. If a snake is killed, it should be burned, for it is a Brahman. At night the words "snake" and "tiger" should not be used; call them creepers and insects. Do not wake up a sleeping physician. A morning dream always comes to pass. Devotion without head gear is wrong. Iron is a charm against ghosts. A black cat with a white face in very auspicious.

THERE is nothing loath about the flannel shirt. On the contrary, it is modest and shrinking.—Washington Capital.

REPUBLICS were ever ungrateful. We put our great men on postage stamps and then punch their heads.—Puck.

OUR PUBLIC ROADS.
 From the Hagerstown Mail.

MR. EDITOR:—I see different articles from time to time in your paper on this subject, and as it is the subject of subjects to beautify a country and make it desirable to travelers, and those who seek homes, I shall add my idea on this subject.

That farming land, with good and convenient roads, is worth from five to fifteen dollars per acre more than land not so provided has never been denied to my knowledge, therefore, I assume this statement as a general fact. From observation I also arrive at the conclusion that there is about half a mile of public road to every one hundred acre farm on an average in the county, whose value can be thus improved from five to fifteen dollars per acre.

Now, then, let us see what it will cost to make these five or even fifteen dollars per acre on our land. I answer, simply a little better management on our part, and the same management that you have for your town to insure proper grades and sidewalks. Your engineer gives the directions, and the owner must either do it himself or the town does it at his expense. Give us a county road engineer to direct how the roads must be graded or made, and give the present county appropriation every year to that end, and make the owner responsible for the balance, or the road made and kept as directed by said engineer. When you hold the land-owners responsible for the condition of the roads which pass through their lands they will see that the drains are kept open, and the road is prevented from washing. As it now is they often use the road as a water-drain to their land, and keep the water on the road as long as they can.

I believe it is a general law that water must not be turned from its natural course, yet no sooner is a new road made, instead of passing the water at convenient places across the road as before the road was made, the road is made a drain for all the water on the upper side, which soon wears dangerous and ugly gullies. This should be prevented by fines. Many seem to think it is the county's property, which it must be a part of their business to injure as much as they can, and they would spend three hours to inform the supervisors of what they could themselves remedy by half an hour's work. And the supervisor, as a rule, is bound to give as little work for the money as he can help, because he has already earned that money once by his vote, as he imagines, by voting in his party.

Of course there are noble exceptions to these land-owners and supervisors, and the consequence is pretty good roads; but we pay money enough to have the very best roads everywhere, and some such way as I have indicated will bring them, because then the farmer, with plough and team, will do the work when it is too wet on the farm, and the very time he can do most for the least money on the hard roads. Jno. M. GROH, A Land Owner and Farmer.

Cabbage Cooked in Half an Hour.
 Have plenty of salted, boiling water, in which a teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved, plunge the cabbage in, top downward, leave it uncovered and let it boil until tender, that will be, as given in the time table, from twenty minutes to half an hour. Take it out into a colander, drain well, put in bits of butter, some salt and pepper, and serve at once. It will be as delicate as cauliflower; the color will be retained and there will not be an unpleasant odor over the house, such as is always associated with boiling cabbage. Try it once, and then see if the School Kitchen Learning has not gotten several steps in advance of your old, traditional methods.

REPUBLICS were ever ungrateful. We put our great men on postage stamps and then punch their heads.—Puck.

OUR COUNTY ROADS.

Appropos to an article which appears on the first page of this issue, under the heading of "Our Public Roads," we wish to call the attention of the tax-payers in this county, particularly in our own district to the bad condition of our public roads under the present imperfect system of road making...

Frequent complaint has been made about the condition of the Bruceville road near Wm. Koons residence, which was badly damaged by the flood in the early part of last summer, and having been repaired by the supervisor, Joshua S. Motter, was soon after damaged by the succeeding heavy rains...

We Suggest a Spunking. The schools having opened for the fall term, and our citizens are already being annoyed by children marking the houses on Main street with chalk. It is a common thing to see a chalk mark in the front of a house, or on awning posts, tree boxes, etc. We suggest that a good spanking would do more to break up this nuisance than anything else, and refer the matter to the school teachers.

Registration in Full. The registration books closed for registering voters on Thursday evening, but Registrar Taney will be in his office at the Western Maryland Hotel to-day and Saturday morning. The October sitting resulted in the registering of 39 new voters; 39 were disqualified and 2 dead. The total amount of the three sittings is, qualified, 60; disqualified, 74; dead, 19. Thus Emmitsburg district loses 33 names from its list since last year.

Consumption Surely Cured. To the Editor.—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post office address.

It Won't Bake Bread. In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it will do, and their proof is from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or prompted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The reasonable response of making an honest man's word your own will not be disappointed in the result.

A Night School. A friend, whose judgment we hold in high esteem, has suggested that the Chamber of Commerce should open a night school for young men this winter. This is a matter that needs neither deliberation or discussion. Next week we will call a meeting through these columns of all interested, and if it meets with reasonable response the school will be started forthwith. We propose to join you in this matter boys, and can see no reason why a large class should not be started.

Fire at Fountain Dale. A special from Fountain Dale to this paper says that about one o'clock last Sunday afternoon the roof of Frederick McIntire's house at that place was discovered to be on fire, and was damaged so badly that a new roof will be required on the building. The fire originated in the wing used as a kitchen. The property is insured in the Gettysburg Insurance Co., and agent White was promptly on hand on Monday morning and assessed the damages.

Best Nourishment for Consumptives. Consumptive persons are said to be greatly benefited by the use of Speer's Grape wine, both fermented and Unfermented. It seems to give comfort and strength when every other remedy fails. The rich properties of the wine derived from the iron in the soil in which the grapes grow makes new blood and if it does not cure, we believe it prolongs life in many cases of consumption. It has cured many of the most perfect cures effected by the use of Speer's Port Wine.

HYMENIAL. The residence of Rev. M. Valentine, D. D., President of Gettysburg Theological Seminary was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Thursday afternoon, when Rev. Edgar G. Miller of Middleburg, N. Y., and Miss Esther A. Valentine were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, assisted by Rev. Dr. C. A. Hay. The bride wore a handsome white silk trimmed with orange blossoms. The bridesmaids were Misses Grace Valentine and Ada Miller. After the ceremony the bride and groom left the way to the dining room, where a wedding lunch was served. The house was handsomely but not elaborately decorated. Over 300 invitations were sent out and the number of guests present was estimated to be about 275. The costumes of some of the ladies were elaborate. Mr. and Mrs. Miller left Gettysburg on the 5 p. m. train for Atlantic City, and will remain there and in Philadelphia for two weeks, after which they go to their future home in Middleburg. Rev. Miller being pastor of the Lutheran Church at that place. The presents were numerous and many of them expensive and beautiful.

Among the guests present were Dr. Sterling Valentine and wife of Lebanon, Pa., Rev. M. H. Valentine and wife of Bedford, Pa., brothers of the bride, Mrs. Sterling Galt and Mrs. J. Taylor Motter of Washington, Miss Jennie Galt of Baltimore, Mr. Wm. Miller, Jr. and family of York, G. Carter of Philadelphia, Rev. Dr. McKnight and family of Gettysburg, all the Professors of both College and Seminary with their families. Rev. Luther DeYoe, Mr. E. M. Kerschner and Miss Hallie Motter of this place.

Malaria. Literally means bad air. Poisonous germs arising from low, marshy land, or from decaying vegetable matter, are breathed into the lungs, taken up by the blood, and unless the vital fluid is purified by the use of a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the unfortunate victim is soon overpowered. Even in the more advanced cases, where the terrible fever prevails, this successful medicine has effected remarkable cures. Those who are exposed to malarial or other poisons should keep the blood pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Two Fires Saturday Night. The large bank barn and wagon shed of Daniel J. Baumgardner, one and a-half miles north of Westminster, on the Littlestown pike, was destroyed by fire on Saturday evening. The fire was assisted in saving Mr. Baumgardner's house and in getting his horses and cattle from the barn. The loss is between $4,000 and $5,000, partly insured.

The Anlinger mill, at Williamsport, Washington county, owned by Mr. F. T. Spigler, was burned Saturday night. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. The mill has not been used since the fire, and the insurance, $2,000, will nearly cover the loss.

A Dig in the Ribs. If on the right side and lower part of the diaphragm, though playfully meant and delivered, is called out to evoke profanity from a chappy whose liver is out of order. When that region is sore and congested, pokes seem fennish. Look at Keysville, and has always on D. Miller, in this skin and eyeballs have a yellow tinge, you may infer also that his tongue is furred, his breath apt to be sour, that he has pains not only beneath his ribs, but also under the right shoulder-blade. Also, that his bowels are irregular and his digestion impaired. Instead of making a loose demonstration on his ribs, recommend him to take, and steadily persist in taking, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The medicinal and alterative medicine extant. Incomparable it is, also, for dyspepsia, rheumatism, nervousness, kidney trouble, and fever and ague.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION. NO. 5000 EQUITY. In the Circuit Court for Frederick County, sitting in Equity. SEPTEMBER TERM, 1889.

Michael Lingg and Marjary A. V. Lingg his wife, Plaintiffs, against Richard J. O'Toole and Anna V. O'Toole his wife, Thomas E. Warthen and Louisa P. Warthen his wife, George Livers and Mary H. Livers his wife and Emma L. O'Toole, Defendants.

The Bill in this case is filed to procure a decree for the sale of certain Real Estate in Frederick County, which said Real Estate is described in a deed from Matthew Moran and wife to the said Ann C. O'Toole, a certified copy of which is filed with the bill marked Exhibit A.

1. That Ann C. O'Toole, late of Frederick County, deceased, was in her lifetime and at the time of her death, seized and possessed of certain Real Estate, situated in Frederick County, which said Real Estate is described in a deed from Matthew Moran and wife to the said Ann C. O'Toole, a certified copy of which is filed with the bill marked Exhibit A.

2. That Thomas O'Toole, the husband of the said Ann C. O'Toole, late of Frederick County, deceased, was also in his lifetime and at the time of his death seized and possessed of certain other Real Estate situated in Frederick County, which said Real Estate is described in a deed from John T. Paddock and wife, to the said Thomas O'Toole, certified copies of which are filed with the Bill, marked respectively Exhibits B & C.

3. That the said Ann C. O'Toole died intestate some years ago and that the said Thomas O'Toole, her husband, after surviving her some years also died intestate on or about the seventeenth day of September in the year Eighteen hundred and eighty-nine.

4. That the said Ann C. O'Toole and the said Thomas O'Toole her husband, left surviving them the following children and heirs-at-law: (a) The plaintiff, Marjary A. V. Lingg in marriage with the plaintiff Michael Lingg, both of whom are of full age and reside in Frederick County.

(b) The defendant Richard J. O'Toole, intermarried with the defendant Anna V. O'Toole, both of whom are of full age and reside in Frederick County.

(c) The defendant, Louisa P. Warthen intermarried with the defendant Thomas E. Warthen, both of whom are of full age and reside in Frederick County.

(d) The defendant, Mary H. Livers, intermarried with the defendant George Livers, both of whom are of full age and reside in Frederick County.

(e) The defendant, Emma L. O'Toole, who is an infant, unmarried and resides in the State of New York.

5. That the said Real Estate owned by the said Ann C. O'Toole and by the said Thomas O'Toole, her husband, at the times of their respective deaths, descended to their said children, upon their parents' decease.

6. That the said Real Estate is not susceptible of partition or division among the said parties entitled thereto and cannot be divided without loss and injury to the parties interested therein, and that it is necessary and to the interest and advantage of all the parties entitled thereto that the same be sold and the proceeds thereof divided among them according to their respective rights.

7. The Bill prays for the following relief: 1. That a decree may be passed for the sale of said real estate.

2. That the proceeds of said sale may be distributed among the parties entitled thereto according to their respective rights.

3. For general relief.

4. That process may issue against the resident defendants.

VERBAL CURIOSITIES.

The origin of some words is as peculiar as the subsequent deflection of their meaning is interesting. The word tariff had a queer origin. A promontory called Tarifa, in Southern Spain, juts into the Straits of Gibraltar and commands the entrance into the Mediterranean Sea.

The annual fair in the Isle of Ely was called St. Audrey's fair, and much ordinary but showy lace was sold to the country lasses. St. Audrey's lace soon became proverbial, and from that cause laudry, a corruption of St. Audrey, was established as a common expression to denote not only cheap lace, but any other part of female dress which was more gaudy in appearance than warranted by its quality or value.

The salutation "How do you do?" sounds like an awkward and redundant sentence, and yet its origin was a sensible one. Dow in old English, pronounced do, means "to be able," "to thrive," "to prosper."

"To go on a bender" is supposed to be an Americanism, but that is a mistake. In Allan Ramsay's time "bend" meant a drink, and "to go on a bender" was equivalent to "to go on a drunk."

When, as Americans, we use the word cute in the sense of "clever" or "sharp," we keep within the legitimate, which cannot be said when we use it instead of pretty. "Aint it cute?" has been adopted by the fair sex to an exasperating extent.

"Craft" and "cunning" at one time stood for "skill" and "ability." The word "botch," applied to a bad workman or his work, is from the word "banche," meaning indifferent.

In the restaurant—"See here, waiter, there's a roach on the butter," said a guest at an east side restaurant. "Just chuck him down a little furdler so he can't git away an' I'll tender to his case when I git frowid wid dis gent."

To restore gilding to picture frames, remove all dust with a soft brush, and wash the gilding in warm water in which an onion has been boiled; dry quickly with soft rags.

The Christian Herald recommends to such churches as are suffering from long vacation pastors, a useful little book entitled "What to Do Until the Doctor Comes."

Looking Ahead.

The mayor of Louisville, upon meeting an old negro, drew him aside, and in a voice by no means gentle, thus addressed him: "Random, I am going to have you arrested."

"How come dat?" "Why, for having obtained money under false pretenses."

"I ain't done nothin' like dat, sah; I 'clar' ter goodness I ain't."

"Didn't you come to me yesterday and get a dollar?" "Yes, sah."

"And didn't you say it was to pay the funeral expenses of your son?" "Yes, sah."

"Well, but you trifling scoundrel, I saw your son on the street just now."

"Hah?" "You know what I said?" "Yes, sah; yas, but I didn't tell you de boy wuz dead, did I?"

"Didn't tell me he was dead! You infernal old idiot; did you suppose I thought you were going to bury him alive?"

"No, sah."

"Then what do you mean by saying that you didn't tell me he was dead?"

"Now, jes hol' on, sah; jest wait a minit. Dat boy ain't been in good healf fur er laung time, an', knowin' dat I'd hatter bury him sooner or later, w'y I 'lowed dat I'd better raise de money durin' de busy season, when de folk wuz dat hard pressed. I see mighty kine hearted dis way, sah, monstrous kine hearted, but er man doan git no credit in dis yere worl' o' sin fur bein' kine hearted. An', ergin, I see er man dat doan blebe in puttin' off er thing that he knows is gott'er be done. I knows dat I'll hatter bury dat child putty soon, and yere you come an' wanter punish me fer takin' up de occasion in time."

"You old rascal, that boy is in excellent health."

"Who, dat child? You doan know dat child like I does, sah. Dat boy suffers with the gestion, but its jest as I says, er hones' an' kine hearted man doan git no credit in dis yer sin cessed worl'."

"WHAT'S the matter?" asked a passenger on a train in Maryland as he poked his head out of the window. "Is there a cow on the track?"

"No," replied the conductor. "Then what did you stop for?" "Well, there's a couple of lads with a banjo walking to the next station, and the engineer and fireman thought they'd stop long enough to hear a tune. One of 'em's a hefty dancer. Come out and take a look at them."—Washington Capital.

"WELL, Bobbie, did you enjoy your visit to the museum?" "Yes, mamma."

"Did you remember any of the nice things you saw?" "Oh, yes, I remember lots of them."

"And can you tell me what they were called?" "Yes; most of them were called 'Hands Off.'"

Squire—"I heard your wife was pretty sick last week, deacon, but I hope she's mending rapidly now." Deacon—"Yes, thank'e, she's ketchin' up with her mendin' now; set up till 12 o'clock last night 'n' darned a pile o' stockin's two feet high. She kin mend pretty fast when she gets agoin'."

PUBLIC LOCAL LAW.

CHAPTER 21. AN ACT to authorize the County Commissioners of Frederick County to subscribe to the Capital stock of Turnpike Companies in said County.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, that when ever two-fifths of the capital stock of any turnpike company in Frederick county, chartered and organized from and after the date of this act, shall have been subscribed for, and taken by responsible bona fide stockholders, the County Commissioners of said county are hereby authorized and empowered to subscribe for such portion of the remaining three-fifths of the said capital stock as they, in their discretion, may deem proper, in the name and for the benefit of said county, and shall be entitled to be represented, at all meetings of the stockholders of said company, by the County Commissioners for the time being, or by such person or persons as may be duly authorized by them; provided, said road or roads so subscribed to shall be graded for a width of twenty feet, fourteen of which shall be covered with stone of an average depth of nine inches; provided, also, that in accordance with the provisions of article three section fifty-four, of the constitution, this act shall be published in the newspapers printed in said county for two months before the next election for members of the house of delegates, and shall also be approved by a majority of all the members elected to each house of the General Assembly of Maryland at its next session after said election.

Sec. 2. And be it enacted, That the County Commissioners of the said county are hereby authorized to issue the bonds of the county to the amount of the stock so subscribed, and to negotiate said bonds upon the most favorable terms; provided they shall not be sold for less than par. And the said County Commissioners are authorized to levy upon the assessable property of the county an amount sufficient to pay the annual interest upon said bonds and the principal at maturity.

Sec. 3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect from the date of its passage. Approved April 4, 1888. Sept. 20-1e.
