TO MR. AND MRS. COCHEL ON THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING DAY.

[The following poem was written by Miss Alice M. Sealbrook, of this vicinity, now a teacher in the Indian School at Carlisle, Pa. It was read by her at the Golden Wedding Celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cochel, in Greenford, Ohio, on the third inst., and which was noticed in these columns last week.]

A half a century of years Have passed since that March night, When, without trembling, without fears, You pledged in marriage rite Your loving hearts and honest hands Fortune more fair than gold or lands.

Your vows of faith that then you made Were kept in deed and truth, True love, for you could never fade, But brighter grew from youth;
So side by side you worked in love, Blessed by the Father from above.

Five noble sons, a daughter fair, He gave into your keeping;
"Take these, for me to train and care, A harvest for my reaping."
And nobly has the charge He made Been kept by you, on whom 'twas laid.

So day by day the years rolled on,
Each bringing joy and grief;
Each fraught with sunshine and with gloom, Burdens and sweet relief.
But clouded was your sky, or clear,
Your love and faith but grew more dear.

And now your friends from East and West,
From North and South, are here, Within your home awhile to rest,
And share your welcome cheer,
And as they crowd around, they say, This is your Golden Wedding Day.

We wish for you that many more Be to this fifty given Each one a step up to the door
That opens into heaven.
God's loving hand still leads you on As in the years gone by He's done, And comfort you as Time rolls on,
Until you dwell with Him at Home.

SAVED BY A SHOVEL.

HENRY O. JACKSON.

It was a wild January night,
The snow was flying thick and fast,
And the wind went whistling round The corners of the old Mason farmhouse, rattling the blinds and doors in a way which seemed to say, "Let me in, or I'll break through." Indeed, it carried out its seeming threat, for bang! went one of the blinds against the side of the house causing the occupants of the room, a group of boys and girls, to exclaim, "What's that?"

"Don't be alarmed, children; it's only one of the blinds blown down," said Mr. Mason, who entered the room at that moment.
"I'll soon fix it up again," and he put on his cap and mitts and went out in the storm.

It had been Gracie Mason's birthday, and she had invited some of her friends to spend the day with her. The party had intended to break up before dark; but by noon snow began to fall heavily, and now a regular blizzard was raging without, so that it was impossible for the younger ones who lived at a distance to get home. Motherly Mrs. Mason would not let them attempt to face the storm, but insisted on their remaining over night, or until some one came for them.
They were now gathered around the old-fashioned hearth,—which is so uncommon, in our modern farm-houses—playing games, and roasting chestnuts and apples by wholesale.

"How! but it's an awful night out," exclaimed Mr. Mason, returning with a log of wood to replenish the fire.
After poking the hot coals, and placing the log in his satisfaction, he drew up his arm-chair and seated himself amongst the juveniles.
"Ten cents to the one that will tell me what this is the skin of," he said, pointing to a worn, grayish hide at his feet.

"Fox!" "Deer!" "Polecat!"
"Wolf!" "Dog!" chimed in each one eagerly.

"Teddy has it," said Mr. Mason, drawing a dime from his pocket and handing it to him. "It's a wolf-skin, or rather was one originally, but it's so old and worn, I don't wonder you were not able to guess better."

"Did you shoot the wolf, Uncle John?" asked the winner of the prize.
"No; but I killed his mate, and a tough time I had doing it, too.
I've the scar on my leg yet, where he bit me."

"How?" "Where?" "When
was it?" questioned two or three of the now interested group.
"Well, I'll tell you about it right from the beginning," said Mr. Masson, thrusting his hands in his pockets. "It was just such a stormy night-as this, some twenty years or more ago, that I was sitting in this very room reading, or rather dozing over a newspaper. The winter was very severe that year; in fact, it stormed almost every day through the months of January and February.

"We were having a good deal of sickness in the house. Mother had been ailing all winter, but she thought doctors were a humbug, and doctored herself with thoroughwort and other herbs, but with very little effect, for she seemed steadily to grow worse. Father, too, was troubled with chronic rheumatism and did not 'get around' much all that winter. I was taking it easy here, as I was saying, when my father entered the room. 'John, said he, 'your mother has been taken with one of those bad spells again, and I'm going for the doctor, whether she likes it or not. Hitch Prince to the cutter and I'll start before the roads get entirely blocked up.'

"All right, father, said I, 'I'll hitch up and go, instead, for you mustn't go out to-night with your rheumatism.'" Father made no objection; in fact, I knew he wanted me to go; but he was a man who would not ask a favor if he could possibly do what he wanted himself. So I drank a cup of hot coffee, and prepared myself for the twelve-mile drive to Sussex, which was then the nearest point where medical assistance could be had.

"You had better take the shovel with you, John, for you'll need it if it keeps on drifting like this," said father, as I left the house to go down to the barn. 'And go by the old wood road, for it's not likely to be drifted' as much as the other,' he called from the doorway.

"Well, I harnessed Prince, our best road-horse, to the cutter, or light box-sleigh, and started. My!
but what a night that was,—snowing, blowing, and drifting terrifically.

"I took father's advice and went by the old wood road, which branched off about three miles above the main road. Traces of it can still be seen where it used to run, but the country through which it passed has long since been settled, and the woods thinned and cleared out. The roads were all very rough then, and were mostly skirted by woods. This branch road wound for three miles through quite an extensive forest, and cut off an angle of a mile or so in going to Sussex; but it was used very little, on account of its being rougher and more hilly than the other roads.

never seen one, however, nor heard of any one being injured by them hereabouts; and I knew that wolves are too cowardly to attack any one unless they are in a pack, or literally starving to death. But as the noise of these brutes grew nearer and nearer I must say I became a little nervous, for I thought a pack of them were after me. Prince was nervous, too, and kept increasing his speed until he was going at quite a good rate, considering the depth of the snow.

"I had probably traveled about one-third of the branch road, when their savage noise became so near that I turned round, just in time to see three dusky shadows bound out from the woods into the road, about fifty rods back of me. I instantly realized that these hungry brutes meant business, and that they would soon be upon me; so I lashed Prince into a run, although he was already sweating and foaming through his exertion and excitement. But I immediately saw that it was useless for me to try and out-race them, and that I must do something else to defend myself.

"The bloodthirsty animals were now within thirty yards of me. I could see their eyes glisten, and they were frothing at the mouth like mad dogs.

"Thinking to keep them back for a time, I threw out my robe.
Two of the ravenous creatures stopped to devour it, but the third kept on pursuing me. In a second or so he was right at the back of the sleigh, and I saw that in another instant he would be right in the box, if I did not do something to prevent him.

"I threw the reins over the dashboard and grabbed my shovel, which was the only weapon I had,
and, standing in front of the seat with my back to the horse, I determined to knock the persistent brute down the moment he came within my reach. He did make a spring, and actually caught hold of the back of the sleigh with his forefeet. I raised the shovel and aimed a blow at his head, but being behind the seat I could hardly reach far enough, and only succeeded in hitting him with the very end of it, which only aggravated him the more, but made him lose his hold on the box. Prince, meanwhile, had kept up his speed, and was going through a very narrow part of the road which was drifted badly.

"All of a sudden, 'bump!' went the sleigh against a stump, and the first thing I knew I found myself in a huge drift, from which I had barely time to extricate myself before I felt the sharp teeth of the wolf in my leg just above the ankle.
'Ugh! it makes me shudder even now, and I can almost feel the dreadful sensation which then crept through me. I thought everything was over with me, but I still had hold of the shovel. With all my might I swung it around and hit the wolf a blow with the solid part of it this time, right between the eyes. The blow stunned the animal and made him let go my leg, and before he had time to revive I cleft his skull with two more sturdy blows.

"Hardly had I done this when I heard the howling of the other two wolves. I made sure they were after me again, and not wishing to have any more hand-to-hand encounters, I clambered into the branches of a low scrub-oak, a few yards distant. When they came up and found that I was out of their reach, the carnivorous brutes smelled the carcass of their dead companion, and set to work to devour it.

"As I sat in the tree I ripped open the seam of my trousers-leg, and bound up the wound the wolf had made as best I could with my neckerchief. It bled profusely but did not pain me then, perhaps because I was benumbed with the cold.

"I made up my mind that I should have to remain in the tree for at least an hour and a half, if I waited until father came to my assistance, as I knew he would as soon as Prince reached home without me. But I had not been there more than ten or fifteen minutes before I heard the tinkling of sleigh-bells, and soon discerned some one coming toward me. I surmised in a minute that it must be the doctor, and I was right. I called out to him to be on the alert, and when he came near the wolves they did not seem to know whether to leave their horrid feast and start for the woods, or to try their teeth on him.

Not being half satisfied, and being disturbed, they concluded to do the latter and bolted for the doctor.
But he had heard me call, for he instantly whipped out a revolver and fired twice at the nearest one, which rolled over in the snow fatally wounded. The other savage brute now turned and fled, the doctor letting off two charges at him as he disappeared in the woods.

"Well, that ended my adventure, children. I have always been very thankful that the weather was such as it was that night, for if it had not been snowing and drifting I would not have taken the shovel with me, and nothing in the world could have saved my life if I had not had it when I was thrown out of the sleigh.

"I got down from the tree and continued home with the doctor.
Stopping at the first farm-house we came to, he burnt my wound with caustic, and bandaged it up. He told me that he had started from Sussex about fifteen or twenty minutes after I left, intending to take advantage of my tracks.

"We met father about a mile from home. He had started out to search for me after Prince got back, as I thought he would do.
'This is the skin of the wolf the doctor shot; the one I killed was torn too badly to be of any use.

"I carried a revolver with me for over ten years after that, but I never had a chance to fire it at a wolf."

Not Much Difference.

I have been thinking how little difference there is between chickens and their owners.

You like a comfortable house to sleep in, and a comfortable place to sit in.

So do they! see that they have them.

You like water to drink.

So do they! and they do not like dirty stale water any better than you do.

You like exercise and something to occupy your mind.

So do they! keep them scratching.

You are willing to pay for all the comforts you enjoy.

So are they! and they will pay royally for them. The more comforts, the more pay.

You like a variety of food, "variety is the spice of life."

So do they! don't feed them one thing all the time, they like some "spice of life" as well as you do.—

"Richard" criticized.

"Frederick Wargie never plays 'Richard,'" said Mr. Keeshin, his advance manager, "that I do not think of a criticism of the play which I once overheard in a Baltimore cafe after the performance.
Three young fellows sat at the next table. Said one of them:

"That play was rot. It is perfectly absurd to make a man spend so much time and money so many people for the purpose of getting a kingdom, and then have him offer to trade it off for a horse."

THERE are places in the Atlantic Ocean," the lecturer impressively said, "in which the tallest moungoing to move the ranges?" solemnly asked a tall, dyspeptic looking man, rising up in the back of the hall, and then the janitor put out the lights.

BRING asked whether he should introduce the electric light into his house and works, a capitalist answered: "Not at present. It is a big animal, and its eye sparkles with sufficient brilliancy to light up the universe, but they have not got him tamed yet."

WHAT IS SCROFULA. It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings, which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors," which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death.

Upon awakening on Thursday morning last, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Snovell were distressed at finding that their infant child had died during the night. They had no idea that the child was ailing and are at a loss to account for its sudden demise.—Clarion.

When you step on a loose brick in the sidewalk and an ice-cold stream of muddy slush shoots up to your collar button, don't say naughty words. Smile pleasantly and explain to the grinning people about you that you don't mind little things like that.—Frederick News.

The Voice of the People on Wine.

It is a well known fact that wines above all other liquors are grossly adulterated, but when a pure article is placed on the market and people find it out to be pure, they all with one voice commend it. The Port Grape Wine from the vineyards of Alfred Speer, of Passaic, N. J., has received the unqualified endorsement of the medical faculty and of thousands of invalids who have been won back to health by their use. For sale by druggists.

Horse and Meat Stolen.

On Wednesday night of last week a horse was stolen from the stable of Mr. Hamilton J. Shafer, near Burkittsville, this valley, and the same night the smokehouse of Mr. Lewis H. Bowls, near Broad Run, was broken open and robbed of six large hams and one shoulder. On Thursday morning the horse was found hitched to the fence on the Frederick and Jefferson turnpike, about 14 miles west of Frederick, and was in a jaded condition. There seems to be no doubt that the stolen meat was carried away on Mr. Shafer's horse, and that it went to Frederick.—Valley Register.

To Revise the County Pension List.

General complaint having been made from time to time that large sums of money are being paid out annually by the Frederick County Commissioners for pensions to persons living in the county who are not entitled to them, the Commissioners have finally decided to entirely revise the list.

The following order, issued by the Commissioners, relates to the matter: "It is therefore ordered by the County Commissioners that any resident of Frederick county, who is justly entitled to be pensioned and who desires to be placed upon the list for 1890, must submit his or her application to the Board of Commissioners on or before Thursday, the 10th day of April, 1890, duly signed by not less than 20 tax-paying citizens, any of whom must be willing to make oath either before a magistrate or the Clerk of the Board, that from their certain knowledge such person being in destitute circumstances, is by reason of old age or infirmities unable to support himself or herself, and is therefore justly entitled to be placed upon the bounty of the tax-paying citizens of Frederick county. The amount of said pension to be fixed by the County Commissioners."—News.

Waked Up Effectually.

A lethargic, dormant condition of the liver is hardly to be overcome with drastic cathartics and nauseous choleragogues. A gentler, pleasanter and far more effective means exists of arousing the organ when dormant. This is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, vouchered for by the medical fraternity, tested by the public for many years. A restoration by the biliary organ of its secretory function, with the activity attendant upon health, a return to regularity of the bowels, and a renewal of digestion, are the no less happy and certain results of using the Bitters systematically. Its laxative effect is never painful and drenching, its tendency being to perpetuate regularity than to produce copious action. Malaria, nervousness, debility, kidney troubles and neuralgia it subdues effectually.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY AT THE COLLEGE.

The Students of Mt. St. Mary's College do honor to the memory of the Patron Saint of the Emerald Isle.

MR. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE, March 18.—St. Patrick's Day, ever a welcome visitor at the Mount, was never celebrated with greater festivity than on Monday, March 17, 1890. As usual the day was a general holiday. In the morning there was a fine game of base-ball between the classes of '91 and '92, which was hotly contested. After this the Lowlands and Mountaineers, two elevens of the Mountain Foot-ball Association played a game of foot-ball, resulting in favor of the latter team. Score 8-4.

After dinner the College Brass Band serenaded the Rev. Dr. Allen, who responded in a happy strain, and in return was heartily cheered. About two o'clock, the road leading from the college gate presented its usual St. Patrick's Day appearance. Numerous bands under the leadership of Seminarians were going out walking, each student wearing a large green rosette and a hat decked with the colors of the day. Indian Lookout, The Haunted Ruins, the late Geo. A. Mile's residence and many other places of interest were visited.

In the evening the Third Grand Musical and Dramatic Entertainment was presented under the auspices of the Philomathian Society, before the largest and most enthusiastic assemblage that ever gathered in the College Music Hall. The Hall was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting, and the handsome bronze chandeliers were gracefully entwined with green ribbons and drapery. Directly over the centre of the stage were appropriately blended the Harp of Erin and the Stars and Stripes, the folds of the one overlapping the other; while surmounting all was Ireland's favorite motto, Erin-go-bragh. The play presented was W. R. Floyd's celebrated Drama, Handy Andy. This play is too well known to need any synopsis, suffice to say that it fully merited the numerous encomiums bestowed upon it by an appreciative audience. To make special mention of any particular character would be almost a work of supererogation, for all acquitted themselves admirably. Mr. W. S. Hill, Pittsburg, Pa., as Handy Andy, and Mr. W. F. Cullen, Spruce Creek, Pa., as Oonah Rooney, sustained their respective parts with great effect, and in the 2nd act completely captivated the audience by their singing and dancing. Mr. F. Hugh Lee, Easton, Pa., as Squire Egan, Mr. E. L. Farrell, Blackville, S. C., as Mad. Nance, Mr. W. F. McConnell, Lambertville, N. J., as Fanny Dawson, and Mr. F. D. Confer, East Conemaugh, Pa., as Edward O'Connor, did full justice to these difficult roles. The two former gentlemen especially displayed great histrionic talent. Mr. Edward J. Donohue, Frostburg, Md., who appeared in response to repeated calls gave a clever exhibition of clog-dancing and was heartily applauded.

The musical part of the program consisted of vocal and instrumental solos, and the following selections were ably rendered by the St. Cecilia Orchestra under the leadership of Prof. Kochenbach: "Erminie," Overture, Sullivan; "Anvil," Polka, A. Parlow; "Moore's Centennial," Overture, Williams; "Beautiful Blue Danube Waltzes," Strauss; "Irish Minstrel," Medley, Zimmermann; "Sylbi Mazurka," Loundevour; "German Patrol," Guardmount, Edeberg; "Concentration March," Rollinson; "The Cornet Solo," "Killarney," by Mr. C. J. Donnelly, Latrobe, Pa., was exquisitely rendered. The vocal selections were: The Chapel, by the Amphion Quartette, Messrs. Kochenbach, O'Shaughnessy, Donnelly and Cullen, and Solo, Kathleen Mavourneen by W. F. Cullen, who in response to an encore sang "Not Now but Bye and Bye."

The new scenery and magnificent costumes lately presented by the Faculty aided greatly to the realistic presentation of the Drama. Owing to the slight indisposition of Mr. J. H. M. Slaven, Boston, Mass., who was to have been the orator of the evening, the speech in honor of St. Patrick which is usually delivered on this occasion had to be dispensed with. At the close of the entertainment the Rev. Edward P. Allen, D. D., President of the College Faculty, addressed the students. In the course of his remarks he congratulated the performers and the orchestra on their splendid exhibition and expressed a desire to hear from the gentlemen soon again.

Among the more prominent of the audience were Very Rev. Edward P. Allen, D. D., Rev. J. J. Tierney, Rev. Wm. L. O'Hara, Rev. D. Quinn, all of the College Faculty; Rev. H. F. White, C. M., of Emmitsburg, and the lay professors of the College, besides numerous visitors from Emmitsburg and the surrounding country. Telegrams and letters of regret were received from many distinguished Alumni. The following was the cast of characters: Handy Andy, W. S. Hill; Squire Egan, F. H. Lee; Squire O'Grady, J. P. Seton; Edward O'Connor, F. D. Confer; Mr. Murphy, E. J. Donohue; Dick Dawson, H. W. Anderson; Mr. Farlong, J. T. Rahilly; Simon, J. B. Managhan; Farrell, McQuade, (Foot Pads), F. J. Sullivan, J. J. Mullin; Oonah Rooney, W. F. Cullen; Mad Nance, E. L. Farrell; Fanny Dawson, W. F. McConnell.

Projected Turnpike.

On Saturday last the citizens of Mt. St. Mary's and Motter's met at the latter place to discuss the building of a turnpike from the post office at Mt. St. Mary's to Rocky Ridge, from which point they expect to continue it to intersect the Creagerstown and Woodsboro turnpike. The enterprise was warmly discussed by all, and has every prospect of success. The following gentlemen were appointed on a committee to get estimates of the cost of construction and ascertain as well as possible the amount of stock each individual will subscribe: J. M. Fisher, Wm. H. Biggs, Vincent Sebald, W. R. Troxell, John T. Cretin, Felix Walter and George Giselman. The committee was directed to report to a citizen's meeting to be held at Rocky Ridge for that purpose, on Saturday, March 20th, at 3 p. m. It is thought by experienced constructors that this road can be macadamized at a less cost than almost any other road bed in the county, and the constant use of the road will make the stock a paying investment. Aside from the profits arising from dividends on the capital stock and the convenience afforded, it will largely enhance the value of property along and in the vicinity of the proposed route.

MANUAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

Declaration of an intention in Baltimore which is the first and most successful of its kind in the United States.

Baltimore, March 20, 1890.—To Baltimore belongs the honor of being the first city in the United States, in which a school entirely devoted to manual training has been organized as a part of the public school system.

The new structure, has a frontage of seventy-two feet on Courtland st., with a depth of ninety feet and is four stories high, but adjoins the present property and is connected with the building now in use, by a tower five stories high, which also contains the stairways.

The present building has also been thoroughly renovated and rearranged. This building comprises a number of mechanical departments. The machinery in the machine, chipping, filing and sheet-metal shops, has recently been supplemented by three improved Reed 12 inch swing screw cutting lathes, and a Reed perfected drill press and shaping machine have been added to the plant.

The object of the school is as follows: Instruction and practice in the use of tools, and such instructions as may be deemed necessary in mathematics, drawing and the English branches of a High School course.

In order to gain admission to the Manual Training School the candidate must be at least fourteen years of age and must present sufficient evidence of good moral character.

tions, denominate numbers, and the extraction of the square and cube-root of numbers.

The fee for use of tools, materials and books for students who are not residents of Baltimore is $12.50, per quarter—for those whose parents are residents or citizens of Baltimore the fee has been abolished.

The growth of the school has been beyond the highest expectation of its founders. It was opened on March 5, 1884, with 50 pupils. At the close of the last year there were 510 students on the roll, and there had been 707 in attendance during the school term.

The school is open from 9 A. M., to 3 P. M. In the shop work the classes are divided, part working in wood and part in metal alternating at the end of the half year.

In addition to the classes to which reference has already been made, there is a Post-Graduate Course in Mechanical Engineering, to which young men who have graduated from this school and such others of equal attainments as may desire, can enter.

Lieut. Ford is assisted by a faculty of fourteen instructors, three of whom, Richard Piez of the Academic, Thomas G. Ford of the wood, departments and George M. Gaither of the Sheet Metal shop are graduates of the school.

After the Battle. An ex-Confederate officer relates that at the battle of Fort Donelson, it was decided after a hot fight to withdraw from the fort.

To take pride in being a gentleman at home. To take their mothers into their confidence if they do anything wrong; and above all never lie about anything they have done.

When a successful man returns late in life to the village where he was born, it looks about as small to him as he looked to the villagers when he went away.

It being pretty near election time in Arkansas, I thought I would have a little political joke with an old dandy who was leaning against a cotton bale at the end of the platform, and sauntering down to him I said:

"Well, Uncle, election will soon be here."

"Reckon it will sah," he replied, as he doffed his old hat.

"I suppose you are interested?" "Not in de lekshun, sah."

"How does that happen?" "Well, sah, I've sorter made up my mind to keep 'lar of it."

"For what reason?" "Well dar's Mars Jones. He says I kin wote if I wants to, but he reckons lekshun day will be a good day fur me to hunt 'pussoms ober in the ole co'n'fild. Mo' tracks ober dere dan you kin count in two days."

"Yes."

"An' dar's Mars Williams. He says I kin wote if I wants to, but he reckons fish will bite monstrous heavy down at de bayou dat day. Says he nebber knowed it to fail on lekshun day. His man Joe got fo'teen snickers last lekshun day."

"Yes."

"An' dar's young Tom Baker. He's gwine to stand at the polls all day. He says I can wote if I wants to, but he will be obleeged to ax me some constitutional qeshun, an' if I can't answer 'em I'll be taken up for crime an' lay in de county jail all winter. Says he'll give me fo' bits to grub on stumps dat day, an' fo' bits is better dan three month in jail."

"I see."

"An' dar's Mars Davis who runs de cotton scales. He says I kin wote if I wants to, an' dat nuffin' wold please him better dan to see me walk up to de winder an' call out in a loud voice, but if I don't watch de scales on lekshun day who's gwine far to do it? If dey is carried off how we gwine to weigh cotton?"

"That's true."

"An' dar's my old woman. She says de law gives me de right to wote, an' dat my wote is as good as a white man's; but s'posen a constitutional qeshun jumps up, an' de hull crowd begins shootin'. My 'sperience wid a constitutional qeshun hain't very great, but some how de white folks allus has de most revolvers, an' she shoots de fastest, an' dey allus shoots at de black folks. I've got nuffin' to shoot wid, an' dis rheumatiks is so bad I can't run very fast."

"Sides dat, my ole woman don't want to run de risk of losin' her fo' jobs of washin', an' she says lekshun day is a good day to fix dem hinges on de doahs."

"So you won't participate?" "Only just a little. I'll keep away from de polls all day, an' den come out at night an' help her fur de winnet ticket."

What Boys Should Learn. There are a great many things that boys, while boys, should learn. And if they learn these lessons so well as never to forget them during life, they will prove of incalculable help to them oftentimes when they need help.

Among other things that a boy should learn, an exchange classes the following, to wit:

Not to tease boys or girls smaller than themselves.

Not to take the easiest chair in the room, put it in the pleasantest place, and forget to offer it to the mother when she comes in to sit down.

To treat their mother as politely as if she was a strange lady who did not spend her life in their service.

To be as kind and helpful to their sisters as they expect their sisters to be to them.

To make their friends among good boys.

To take pride in being a gentleman at home.

To take their mothers into their confidence if they do anything wrong; and above all never lie about anything they have done.

To make up their minds not to learn to smoke, chew or drink, remembering that these things cannot be unlearned, and that they are terrible drawbacks to good men, and necessities to bad ones.

When a successful man returns late in life to the village where he was born, it looks about as small to him as he looked to the villagers when he went away.

Postmaster—"The letter is too heavy; it wants another stamp."

Country woman—"Why, that will make it heavier still."
