A LOST STITCH.

Grandma sat busily knitting away A trim little stocking, all scarlet and gray, Katy stood leaning on grandma's knee, Anxiously waiting and watching to see How quickly the pretty stripes could grow,
With grandma's fingers a-flying so.

All at once, in a round of gray,
The busy needles ceased their play.
"Dear me!" said grandma. "I can't tell which,
But somewhere here I have dropped a stitch;
And I can not see, it has grown so late,
To pick it up; so we must wait Till the lamps come in." Down Katy went Moved by a sudden kind intent; Down in the firelight on the floor, Searching the hearth-rug o'er and o'er.

"What are you looking for, my child?"
Mamma questioned and slyly smiled.

Soberly answered the little wick:
"I'm trying to find my grandma's stitch!"

A NEEDED REVIVAL.

The Wisdom and Duty of Personal Abstinence from All Kinds of Intoxicating Beverages.

There is urgent present need of more effective teaching among the masses concerning the use of intoxicants. The increase in the production and consumption especially of fermented liquors in the last quarter of a century is startling. The quarterly report of the chief of the United States Bureau of Statistics, of the Treasury Department, for the three months ending March 31, 1889, Colonel W. F. Switzer, being then the official head of the Bureau, states that there were consumed in the United States during the year 1888, of malt liquors, 767, 587,056 gallons; of distilled spirits, 75,845,352 gallons; and of wines, 36,335,068 gallons—a grand total of all kinds, of 879,767,476 gallons of liquors. This is about 14.30 gallons per capita of the entire population of the country. Deducting abstainers, it indicates a still larger per capita consumption of liquors by those who do drink. The large majority of drinkers, moderate and immoderate, are men. As under our form of government men, at the polls and in halls of legislation, determine legal methods for the regulation, or prohibition, of the sale of intoxicants, it is a matter of the utmost importance that a majority at least of the men be won over to the ranks of the abstainers who will intelligently and conscientiously refrain from their use. Men who are wont to use intoxicants, even occasionally in moderate quantities, will not generally be inclined, either as voters, legislators or executive officers, to do much to stop their manufacture and sale.

In the minds of many, otherwise intelligent people there lingers the conviction that in reality, if not "abused," alcoholic liquors, especially fermented liquors, may be taken without injury in health, and in sickness, with essential benefit.
In Europe, especially in Great Britain, and to some extent now on the continent, eminent medical men are doing much to dispel this illusion by teaching with the authority of enlightened science that in health they may and should be wholly dis-pensated with, and in sickness that they are useful only in a limited sphere and when prescribed with scientific accuracy. Somewhat singularly, on this side of the Atlantic, where the earnest Temperance agitation years ago originated, it has now relatively less support and encouragement from eminent and leading members of the medical profession than abroad. The Temperance reform, in its educational and preventive aspect, greatly needs in this era more help from the medical profession, whose representatives are accepted by the people generally as the true exponents of the lessons of science concerning alcoholic beverages, as in other matters pertaining to health and physical economy.

One grand pioneer in American scientific alcoholic investigation survives still to render most valuable service, Dr. N. S. Davis, of Chicago, the father and founder of the great American Medical Association. In a recent pamphlet, published by the National Temperance Society, he discusses, from the scientific point of view, with marked ability and with the authority of an expert of large experience and observation, the influence of alcohol on the human system, especially as used in beer and wine, and he declares unqualifiedly that "there is no greater or more destructive error existing in the public mind than the belief that the use of fermented and distilled drinks does no harm so long as they do not intoxicate." He further declares that the oft-repeated popular phrase: "It is not the temperate use, but the abuse of alcoholic drinks that does harm," embodies "the error which helps to rob more than 100,000 persons of from five to twenty years of life each in the United States, through the gradual development of chronic structural diseases induced by the daily use of beer, ale, wine or distilled spirits in quantities so moderate as at no time to produce intoxication." He maintains that a popular error but little less mischievous is the opinion widely prevalent, that the substitution of beer and wine for distilled spirits promotes Temperance and lessens the evil effects of alcohol on the health and morals of those who use them. His pamphlet is replete with most valuable instruction on the alcohol question, both for the medical profession and the general public. We know of nothing more absolutely conclusive in behalf of total abstinence.—Ee.

Not many things in the life of a boy seem more important to him than his first getting into trousers.
It is to be doubted, indeed, if he is likely to find much in his after life that will give a joy so keen and unmixed; and when Master Jamie, having reached the mature age of "most five," as he put it, was given his first pair of knickerbockers, the whole family were naturally called upon to rejoice with him.

It was after his first transports of delight were over, and he was able to speak of the great event with calmness, that Jamie came to his mother, and, after parading up and down before her two or three times, said in a tone of perfect satisfaction:
"O mamma, pants make me feel so like somebody! Don't I look real grown up, mamma?"

His mother smilingly told him that he certainly did, and that she could not feel that he was her baby any more.

"Didn't it make you feel grown up, mamma," Jamie began, "when you—"

He stopped short. It had evidently come to his mind that his mother had never known this deep delight which so filled his soul.
He looked at her a moment, an expression of the deepest pity coming over his face, and then he took her hand in both of his and laid it against his cheek.

"Poor mamma!" he said, softly.
"Poor mamma! If you'd been my little girl, I'd have let you wear pants just the same as if you'd been a boy."

Economical.

A Dutchman who had fallen in arrears in his business affairs was sufficiently honest to wish to pay his creditors a full one hundred cents on the dollar. He therefore determined to cut off all superfluous expenses, and concluded to begin this commendable reform by shaving himself instead of patronizing a barber. The necessary equipments were purchased and he went to work.

He succeeded in covering one side of his face with lather and with gashes, when his wife announced breakfast. By the time his toilet was complete he was scarred like a veteran, and bankrupt both as to time and temper.

As he entered the dining-room he remarked sententiously to his wife:

"Py cracious, id don't pays ven use up all dot time, and soab, und pashence, und shed all doze blood and stigin plashter, shoost to mase

Ghosts.

You don't believe in ghosts! no, no one does to hear them talk, and I used to say the same until after the experience I am going to tell you now, which I think is enough to make any one believe and fear them.

One night about midnight we were awakened in the house by an awful noise that sounded like somebody pounding up against the floor with a muffled club. The house was a one story one and no cellar under it, and so low to the ground that no person could possibly get under, let alone have room to give such sounding raps. Having heard so many stories of ghosts and goblins all my life, I speedily came to the conclusion that this was of such order; and I thought I had better go into mother's room and take care of her, and just as I stepped into the room, right under my feet, came the knock again. Of course I jumped as though I was going up in my assentation robes. There were the whole family, consisting of the mother and four children. The father died the year before and my older brother was away from home, which left a rather timid set of us.
We got close together in breathless silence waiting, yet dreading to hear it again; and each time it was more terrible than before, and between the times the silence was painful. In one of these tomb-like pauses my oldest sister whispered in awe-struck voice, "That is the first supernatural sound I ever heard." I was too young to understand, but her solemn manner and the "big word" impressed me greatly. I was shaking with fear and apprehension, yet my natural gallantry impelled me, and love for my family asserted itself, and feeling that it was do or die, I nerved myself to action; raised a window that opened right against our neighbor's house, and making a funnel of my hands, I shouted in a voice so loud and terrible as to frighten us all worse than ever, "Mr. Markham, come over."

It had the desired effect. In a short time he came rushing in, thinking some of us were sick. But when he heard the story from the pale, trembling lips of one and another, and it was immediately confirmed by another sounding thump, his face, naturally of an unhealthy hue, grew so livid, and in contrast with his very black hair, beard and eyes, looked so unearthly that it sent us all into a very frenzy of terror. So that if daylight had not come soon to relieve the great suspense, we must have died in it. But it got lighter now each moment and we became correspondingly braver, especially as the ghost knocks grew fainter and farther between. Finally we armed ourselves with a broom and a stout cane, and what courage we could, and Mr. Markham and I started out, but just as we crossed the door-sill, came the awfullest scrambling, scratching noise, entirely different from any that we had yet heard. We paused, we looked into each other's faces, again blanching with fear; but again my sister's solemn tones "Haste, oh men, it is trying now to get away!" Out we rushed to the pursuit, and as we saw nothing and thought it had gone, we even dared to get down on our hands and knees and look right under the house, at the very spot. There we saw to our amazement, the ghost of our dear old pet dog. He had just breathed his last.

Some one had evidently poisoned him and his fits of pain had caused the occasional thumps (of his head) against the floor. His death struggle was the last scrambling noise of the ghost getting away.

Lion and Bear.

Last season I was out with a couple of friends on the Pacific coast enjoying a vacation. One day we found ourselves in the little town of San Raphael, in Lower California. At the hotel where we stopped we found that the villagers had been suffering a great deal by the depredations of the panthers. Game, such as deer and smaller animals, their usual prey, had been very scarce, and to make up for it the pigs and cows of the residents had to suffer.

This was just what we were looking for, and the next day found us out in the Series on a hunt for the depredators. During the day I got separated from the other boys and wandered around for about five hours without finding a trace of anything. I was about to give the chase up and return for supper, and had selected a sort of natural path down the mountains, when I heard a muffled growl and the breaking of a heavy body through the brush in front of me.

I recognized the growl to be that of the cinnamon bear, and knew by the way he uttered it that he was in trouble and was mad. He was coming right towards me and I had just time to conceal myself behind a tree to one side of the pathway when he burst into sight. His eyes were staring and his tongue was hanging out and the froth flew from side to side as he bounded over the ground. I no sooner saw him than I heard the most horrible scream imaginable. It was not such a one as a person would utter when about to suffer some sudden terrible calamity, but more a cry of rage and madness.

The bear no sooner heard it than he seemed to lose all hope. He bounded past me some little distance and then turned on his haunches and prepared as if waiting an attack. He had no sooner got himself into position than something darted past me with the quickness of flash of chain lightning uttering as it went something that sounded like the spit of an angry cat. I could hardly turn my head when the congar, for such as it proved to be, had struck the bear, and all I could see was a confusion of flying fur and a bewildering maze of rapidly flying and powerful paws.

The lion had buried its teeth in the bears throat, and before he could move a paw in self defense had literally torn him into shreds with its powerful, sharp claws. The whole thing had happened so quickly that I had scarce time to catch my breath when the fight was over, and the bear dead and the lion gone.

The bear's ribs were torn assun-der and one of the sharp claws had cut his heart in two. His intestines were threads and the grass and brush for ten feet around were covered with hair and blood. I think the American lion is the quickest thing on earth.—Kansas

The Head and the Brain.

Dr. Starr, of London, says that it is impossible to draw any conclusion from the size or shape of the head as to the extent or surface of the brain, and so as to the mental capacity. It is absurd to judge of the brain surface by either the size of the head or the extent of the superficial irregular surface which is covered by the skull, without

FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1890.

A SURPRISE TO THE PUBLIC.

Judge Stewart of the Criminal Court has sustained the demurrer to the indictment against Stevenson Archer and decided that the State Treasurer is not included in the meaning of the statute which says:

"Any person holding office in this State, who shall fraudulently embezzle or appropriate to his own use money, funds or evidences of debt which he is by law bound to pay over, account for or deliver to the treasurer of this State, or to any person by law authorized to receive the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction thereof be sentenced to the penitentiary for not less than 18 months nor more than 8 years."

The learned lawyers, Carter and Gans, argued that as the law required State officials to account to the treasurer for the money, bonds, &c., for which they were responsible, and was silent regarding the treasurer's responsibility in the way of rendering accounts to any person or power in the State, he could not be prosecuted for failing to do so, and the ruling of the eminent jurist, before whom the case was argued left Mr. Archer's accusers without "a leg to stand on" as far as the present prosecution is concerned, whilst the astonished public learns to its dismay that the State treasurer is a "law unto himself."

The fact of Mr. Archer's dishonesty is not questioned, no effort is made to prove that the charges against him are false, or, in other words, that he did not deliberately appropriate the funds of the State to his own use, but we are simply told that the law for the protection of the people's money, does not reach his case.

Why a man in high position, who deliberately steals thousands of dollars, is not as much a thief as the one who robs a stage coach or the miserable loafer who steals a piece of meat from the butcher, and should not be subjected to the punishment which there is no hesitation in meting out to the common offender, is a mystery which the uninitiated would like to have explained.

The commandment "Thou shalt not steal," makes no exceptions, and the higher the position from which a man stoops to crime, the greater the punishment he deserves.

That the wording of the law, under which Mr. Archer was indicted, is defective, there is no doubt, and the sooner it is changed the better, but in the mean time, is the man who has taken advantage of its inefficiency to defraud the State, to go unpunished?

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. ANOTHER GAME OF BASE BALL.

MT. ST. MARY'S College Nine again Victorious.—The combined team of the New Windsor and the Western Maryland Colleges Defeated.—Score 13 to 7.—McKenna's Marvellous Catch.

Despite the very threatening weather a large crowd of people from the surrounding country assembled last Saturday afternoon on the College ball field to witness the second regular match game of the season which took place between Mt. St. Mary's College nine, and the combined team of the New Windsor College and the Western Maryland College of Westminster, Md. The material of the visiting nine was taken from the best ball players of these two Colleges; who, according to agreement, unite this year in playing outside teams.

Just before the time appointed for the game a heavy shower descended and it was feared the contest would have to be postponed. But the rain was of short duration, and although the grass was considerably dampened, yet, upon consultation of the managers it was decided to use the diamond.

As will be noticed by the official score which is published below, there were a number of errors on both sides, but considering the state of the field and the slippery condition of the ball, it is surprising the number of errors was not greater.

During the first innings the game was almost one sided, but from that time both sides played splendidly, the game closing with a score of 13 to 7 in favor of the home team.

Just before the game began Mr. Henry W. Anderson, the manager of the Mountain nine, called for three cheers for the donor of the two handsome foul flags which beautified the field. Three cheers were heartily given by all the students, after which the game immediately began. Time 2:10.

THE GAME.

From the start the Mt. St. Mary's boys made a specialty of batting. In the first inning they ran up 5 runs. Here is how it was done: Brady made a base hit and stole second and third; Sullivan got first on balls, and McKenna's safe drive sent Brady home. Sullivan came home on Coad's liner towards first, and Hines by a beautiful two-bagger to left allowed Mack and Coad to cross the plate. Hart and Kelly both struck out, but Hines got a run to his credit on Madden's hit to third which was badly fumbled. Cavanagh ended the inning by striking out. For the visitors Enns got his base on balls, and by clever base stealing and a wild pitch made a unit in the score of the New Windsor's.

In the second inning Brady's men rolled up two runs. Brady made a base hit which Coad made capital of by his long hit to centre giving Brady another run. Hines advanced Coad by a clean base hit which the joosie Graham missed, and Coad, while the catcher was sporting with a fumbled ball planted his foot on the rubber plate. Hines was left on second, as Hart struck to Enns and was out on first. The combination team was whitewashed in their second appearance at the bat. Hadley after reaching first wished to pay a personal visit to Sullivan, but at that time Sully was not receiving, and the umpire said, "He's out." Humorous Graham's wit had no effect on Brady, as the latter allowed the comedian to take a seat on the bench reserved for the visiting team. Mace, though built by nature to be a great runner had no chance to show his gifts of nature as Mercury did, since he died of strikes in the batter's box, leaving Stuckell on second to mourn his loss.

In the next inning, Kelly sent the ball scurrying to short, reached second on a wild throw to first, and third on a passed ball. Madden's sacrifice to second sent the sprinter to the spot which all hold so dear—home, sweet home. One run. The great amateur batter, J. Enns, reached first on a pretty drive over short and moved to second on a passed ball. His brother H. Enns, White and Robley struck out and J. Enns only one base away.

In the fourth inning the blue and whites left units and entered the tens. Their runs corresponded with the number of the inning—4. Sully's high fly to first reached mother earth after making a very short stop on White's fingers. McKenna got first on a hot grounder to short that seemed to whistle "Annie Rooney" on its way. Hines, ever to the rescue, sent Mack and Sullivan home. Hart, by timely base stealing reached the players' bench on Kelly's sacrifice to first. Madden and Cavanagh both tapped the ball to the pitcher and retired on first. The Westminster batters did little to roll up the score. Watson struck to Brady and the ready pitcher made the right angle of the ball's course direct to first. Hadley and mace tried to cool the air by fanning out. No runs.

In the fifth inning Sullivan made the only run for Mt. St. Mary's. His scaring fly to right field placed him on first; second was reached on Mack's fly to left, third on a neat steal and home on Coad's sacrifice. Fortune now smiled on the visitors. Four balls were called on Brady and H. Enns went to first. On Brady's wild throw he reached third and scored on a passed ball. White after getting first on balls, thought to do a little travelling, but his journey ended at second. Robley went to Kelly on balls and tripped to second on Hines' error. White brunted the ball to Brady, but in the latter's eagerness to shut off Robley at home, he threw a little wild and Robley scored. In the excitement White went to second and covered the bases on a wild throw to Madden. The inning closed by Hadley being declared out, he having been struck by a batted ball of jocular Graham. Throughout this inning Graham did some characteristic work worthy of De Wolf Hopper. During his coaching he made references to all the great questions of the day and showed that he was an avant from Home rule to the opening of the Harlem River ship canal. He was loyal to mankind in general and his parents in particular, as he frequently called upon "Papa" and "Mamma."

In the sixth inning Jupiter Pluvius had something to say about the game. He did not interfere with the work of the umpire; that part was admirably attended to by the masterly umpire, Conner. But he had his say as to the playing. In this round the home team was shut out, but the ball seeming to lose its centre of gravity, went on non-descript trips around the field, greatly to the pleasure of the New Windsor and Westminster men. Madden's error of miffing a fly allowed J. Enns to get to first, and he reached home on H. Enns's paralytic to deep left. Hart's wild throw, due to the little bog in left fieldlet Enns score. Robley ousted the ball to Brady, and as on a previous occasion Brady's throw home allowed White to score. Hadley finally struck out leaving Watson and Robley on base. The result out of this—thanks to mathematical love—was 4 runs.

The seventh inning saw Brady and Cavanagh strike out and Sullivan thrown out at first. Graham also struck out and a muffed third strike on Stuckell sent the batter to first. Mace now stepped to the bat and sent the ball skywards. His descent was at short centre, but McKenna by a catch that would honor the record of an O'Rourke captured the sphere in its downward course. This magnificent catch was certainly the feature of the game, as Mack caught the ball with one hand after having slipped on his knees. Enthusiastic applause greeted this great piece of base ball work.

The two last innings were short, and the game remained unchanged. Sharp fielding on the part of the visitors and Brady's skill for the home team quickly rendered null the efforts of the batters.

Base Ball Accident.

Whilst practicing on the college diamond this afternoon, Mr. P. J. Brady, the famous pitcher of the Mt. St. Mary's College base ball nine, sustained a compound fracture of his left thumb. At the time the accident occurred Mr. Brady was running after a high fly ball, which struck his thumb with the combined force of the ball and his running. The thumb was broken about midway between the first and second joints, driving the two joints together, the broken bone protruding fully a quarter of an inch through the flesh. Although the fracture has been reduced, Mr. Brady is suffering considerable pain from it, which he endures heroically.

Two beautiful foul flags were recently donated to the college nine by an admiring friend of the Maryland champions. The flags are made of white silk, upon which are neatly worked in large blue letters the name of the team, "Mt. St. Mary's." From the top of each staff which is tipped with gold, are gracefully suspended blue and white silk streamers. Altogether the flags present a handsome appearance and form an attractive ornament for the ball field.

No organizations in the United States have multiplied more rapidly in the past ten years than the sick-benefit, funeral-aid, death-benefit, and other kindred societies.

As they are generally confined to those who are in the humbler walks of life, the good they have done is incalculable, carrying substantial aid to thousands of stricken families and inspiring those who are fortunate enough in being members with a courage which might not exist in their hearts without them.

The members of these organizations will be glad to learn that Hon. Robert P. Porter, Superintendent of the Eleventh Census, will endeavor to secure the statistics of the noble work these associations are doing, and it is safe to say that no other branch of the census will be more interesting.

The material will be divided and two new churches erected on the site of the present one. The Reformed congregation was organized in 1763, but the date of the formation of the Lutheran congregation is not definitely known, the records being destroyed with the Westminster church in the fire of 1883. Some of the oldest and most substantial families of the county are among the members.

Col. J. B. Batchelder, the Government Historian of the Gettysburg Battle, has extended an invitation to each member of Congress, and outlined what will be done: The excursion train to leave Washington at 9 a. m., via Baltimore and Potomac and Western Maryland Roads to Gettysburg. To economize time lunch will be served on the cars. Five explanatory lectures will be given by Col. Batchelder at as many pivotal points of the field, and in the evening the Congressional party will take the cars for the Blue Mountain House, which will be opened for the exclusive use of the party. Next afternoon the excursionists will return to the capital by way of Hagerstown and the Antietam battlefield, the latter to be visited if time permits.—Compiler.

Prevention of Sickness.

The great Herb Pad of Old Aunt Rachel has been made and used by her and her friends over 50 years. Orders come from all over the country from friends and patients so she could not fill them all. She would never allow anyone to make them, or to see what were put in until now. She is over 85 years of age and has now imparted the secret to her son. The bouquet of the herbs and tincture arising from the pad before the face rid the air you breathe from the poisonous gases that cause disease. It makes the lungs healthy and strong, and the blood thoroughly purified with the improved air. Orders filled by Mail upon receipt of $2.00. Address: Aunt Rachel Pad Co., Passaic, N. J.

The Harney correspondent of the Westminster Sentinel says: "The greatest curiosity in this vicinity, at present is a man who builds bake ovens out of clay, which he tempers by driving hogs around in it."

SUNKEN eyes, a pallid complexion, and disfiguring eruptions, indicate that there is something wrong within. Expel the lurking foe to health, by purifying the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Cures Erysipelas, Eczema, Salt-Rheum, Pimples, and Blisters.

Desirable Investment.

The attention of our readers is called to the adv. headed "public sale of bonds," which appears in another column. These bonds will run for twenty years, but are redeemable at any time after ten years. They bear interest at the rate of six per cent. payable annually, and are exempt from county and municipal taxation. We know of no better investment at this time in fact of none as good. It beats a six per cent. mortgage even, as there is no recording to pay.

Don't Go Off Before you are Ready.

Particularly on a long journey. Be fully prepared. You cannot be, permit us to say, unless you are accompanied with the traveler's and tourist's safe medicine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, most genial of appetizers, acclimatizers and promoters of digestion. Against sea sickness, nausea, cramps and colic, begotten of badly cooked or unwholesome food and brackish water, nervousness, increased by travel, chronic biliousness and constipation, the Bitters is a sovereign preventive. It imparts a relish for food not altogether to your taste, and prevents it from disagreeing with you. Never was there such a capital thing for the unfortunate dyspeptic who stands in dread of the best cooked meal. Stomachic trouble caused by ill prepared viands aboard ship, on steamboats, and rations hastily bolted at railway restaurants, is soon remedied by the Bitters, which gives relief also to rheumatism, kidney troubles and insomnia.

A Pastor's Intended Resignation.

Last Sunday morning Rev. Wm. Simonton D. D., who for the past seven years has been pastor of the Presbyterian churches at Emmitsburg, Taneytown and Piney Creek, announced his intention of resigning his charge next fall. We have not heard of any action's having been taken in the matter, but are well aware, that a host of warm friends will regret to learn of the intention of Dr. Simonton to sever his connection with the congregation he has served so faithfully, and hope some arrangement will yet be made which will obviate the necessity for the removal of the Dr. and his highly esteemed family from Emmitsburg.

DEATH OF JOHN M. KRAUTH, ESQ.

John M. Krauth, Esq., district attorney of Adams county, Secretary of the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association, and for several years past editor of the Star and Sentinel, died at his residence in Gettysburg last Saturday, after an illness which confined him to the house since last January. The Compiler says:

Mr. Krauth was a son of the lamented first President of Pennsylvania College, Rev. Dr. C. P. Krauth, and was born in the old college building on the 3d of March, 1846. When a student, he joined the College company of the Emergency Regiment, (26th, Col. Jennings), and after its discharge enlisted in the U. S. Signal Corps, serving until the close of the war. He was admitted to the Bar November 18, 1867; was appointed Postmaster at Gettysburg in 1877, serving eight years; and was elected District Attorney in 1885, and re-elected in 1888. On the death of D. A. Buchler, Esq., in 1888, he became editor of the Star and Sentinel, and filled the position very acceptably to its patrons up to within a short time of his death. He served as Secretary to the Battlefield Memorial Association for ten years, exhibiting extraordinary efficiency in the place. He was also Secretary to the board of Trustees of Pennsylvania College for a number of years, and held the office of President of the local Building Association ever since Dr. Fahnestock's removal to the west. He was a member of the War Department of the House at Washington under Clerk McPherson in the winter of 1874-5. He also served as a School Director in his former several terms.

A meeting of the bar was held on Saturday afternoon, D. McConaughy, Esq., presiding, with W. C. Sheely, Esq., secretary. The president stated the object of the meeting, after which Hon. D. Wills moved that a committee be appointed to adopt suitable resolutions, and referred it, in eloquent terms to Mr. Krauth's many good qualities of head and heart and of his different public services. He was followed by Mr. J. C. Neely, Mr. Swope, Mr. McSherry, Mr. Benner, Mr. Dunne, Mr. McCaughy, Mr. Hill, Mr. Quimby, Mr. Weaver and Mr. Scott, all of whom spoke in highest terms of praise for the dead and deepest sorrow for those left behind, so near and dear to him.

The funeral took place Monday afternoon from the residence of the deceased, at Baltimore street. Rev. Dr. McKnight opened the solemn services with the reading of a portion of scripture, Rev. Dr. Hay delivered a fitting address, and Rev. Dr. Dunmire closed with prayer.

Deceased was aged 44 years 2 months and 7 days. He leaves a wife and two young daughters, with his mother and a sister, to mourn a loss which the afflicted alone may estimate.

CHORAL UNION ENTERTAINMENT.

An Elaborate Programme Successfully Carried Out, to the Delight of a Large and Appreciative Audience.

The musical Entertainment given by the Emmitsburg Choral Union at the Opera House last evening was the best and most successful ever given by that popular organization. Rain in the morning and threatening clouds during the afternoon, caused a little uneasiness among the members of the Union, but when the sun came forth bright and warm about four o'clock their spirits revived, and the faces of prominent members betokened satisfaction and determination.

As soon as the doors were opened, there was a rush for the best seats in the Opera House, all the reserved seats having previously been sold, and from that time until the spacious hall, which seats about three hundred with ease, was crowded to its utmost capacity, the audience kept crowding in.

Precisely at the hour appointed the doors were locked and the performance opened with a piano duet, Overture to Zampa, (F. Herold), which was performed in an exquisite manner by Mrs. R. L. Annan and Mrs. J. Kay Wrigley, bringing forth an enthusiastic burst of applause. This seemed to fill the other performers with renewed energy, proving as it did that the large audience was also an appreciative one. Then followed a chorus, "Flow on, Oh! River," (C. C. Case.) Next—"Chrysanthemum," a male quartette, (G. F. Root,) by Dr. J. W. Eichelberger, Jr., Maj. O. A. Horner, Messrs. Chas. R. Hoke and Paul Motter. The striking feature of this piece was the leading part by Dr. Eichelberger, which being admirably suited to his clear voice, was rendered with the ease and precision of a professional. The Chorus, "Fairies' Song," from Midsummer Night's Dream, was a grand success and remarkable for the strength with which the difficult parts were sustained. "Saved from the Storm," (Barri) vocal solo, by Mrs. J. Kay Wrigley, was rendered in Mrs. W's. usual easy and perfect manner, and was well received by the audience. This selection was happily chosen, being so well adapted to her strong contralto voice. The Chorus "Hail to Thee Liberty," from "Semiramide," was the crowning piece of the evening, and was rendered with exquisite expression. This piece is one that admits of a full exercise of the lung powers of the performers at times, and again requires their utmost exertions in the line of soft melody. The accompaniment in this piece was played by Mrs. R. L. Annan on the piano, Prof. Kochenbach on the violin and Mr. O. E. Horner on the cornet. The Quartette by Messrs. Minnie Hoke, Anna Annan, Messrs. Jos. E. Hoke and E. M. Kerschner, "Katy Did and Katy Didn't," (C. Jarvis) brought down the house, and was enthusiastically enjoyed. At this stage of the performance an intermission of about ten minutes was given during which the young ladies arranged their costumes for the Water Drill. The second part of the programme opened with a violin solo by Prof. Kochenbach, "Yankee Doodle with Variations," (H. Viestump), with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Annan. This performance was exquisite, and the skill displayed by the Professor in handling the difficult parts, added to his fame as an unusually fine violinist. Then followed the Water Drill, which was given by sixteen young ladies dressed by fours in white, pink, blue and yellow. We deeply regret not having the ability to describe this part of the performance in the manner it should be, but the precision with which the several difficult and intricate figures were performed was remarkable, marching first by ones, then by twos, and again by fours. At one time they would be moving as it were in opposite directions and before the onlooker was aware of the change, would appear in ranks of two or fours at the front of the stage. The prettiest movements were made by the entire number marching single file in a circle, around the stage, the circle gradually getting smaller until one part was intertwined within the other like a watch spring, and suddenly changing until moving in opposite directions, then all coming out together and marching by twos to the front of the stage, where they divided, one side turning to the left, the other to the right, then changing sides by a diagonal movement, passing between each other with the utmost precision. Next they appeared by twos forming an arch with uplifted waters through which those in the rear marched by twos and passed off the stage. The drill was applauded loudly during its execution when unusually striking movements were made, and an encore brought the ladies back, and the drill was repeated. The credit for this part of the performance is largely due to Mrs. Seton under whose direction and management it was gotten up, and in which she was ably assisted by the participants, especially Miss Mattie Simonton, who led the march. After the drill "Night's Shade No Longer," (Rossini) quietude and chorus, was rendered with piano and organ accompaniment, Mrs. Annan presiding at the organ and Miss Ethel McNair at the piano, the quartette part being sung by Mrs. J. K. Wrigley, Miss Maria Helman, Maj. O. A. Horner, Messrs. Jos. E. Hoke and Paul Motter. Next on the programme was a song by a member of Choral, this was rendered by Mr. Chas. R. Hoke, dressed in woman's attire, and singing "I'm Dying for Some One to Love Me," representing a girl in her teens anxious for a beau. This was well received and a second appearance was demanded. "Old Folks at Home" was then rendered as a solo and chorus, with Mrs. Wrigley as soloist. This good old piece needs no further comment than that it was well rendered. "Dreams of Long Ago," (J. W. Stewart) a male octette appeared next, and was finely rendered by Maj. O. A. Horner, Messrs. Frank Lawrence, Jos. E. Hoke, Dr. J. W. Eichelberger, Jr., Messrs. Chas. R. Hoke, Albert Moore, E. M. Kerschner and Paul Motter. The performance concluded with the chorus, "Zion Awake," a Grand Cannon by Sir Michael Costa, and although an unusually difficult piece of music it was exquisitely rendered, and the audience seemed to be held spell-bound for a few moments after the close, and were slow to leave their seats, seeming as it were, to be looking for more.

The success of the performance is due to the untiring efforts of the Conductor of the Choral, Dr. J. Kay Wrigley, under whose management the musical programme was arranged and rendered. The voluntary services of Prof. Kochenbach were highly appreciated by the Choral as well as the audience, and the Prof. has the thanks of the organization, as has also Mr. O. E. Horner for his Cornet performance. Mrs. Annan won for herself new encomiums by the manner in which she rendered the accompaniments, and Miss Ethel McNair comes in for a share of praise in this line, her performance, which was both accurate and in full sympathy with the singers, being her first public appearance in that role. To enlarge upon the merits of the different vocalists would occupy more space than we have at our command at this late hour.

Last but not least, the concert was a grand success financially, the amount realized not only being enough to pay off the remainder due on their organ, but leaving a nice balance in the treasury.

The manner in which the audience conducted themselves was a great gratification to the performers, and shows that the concerts of the Choral are attended by that desirable class of people, who, while they appreciate good work and show their appreciation in a proper manner, avoid boisterous and noisy proceedings.

That the Choral and audience may meet again in the near future is heartily wished on both sides.

"Snide" Circus.

Givens' Circus exhibited here last Friday, and was well attended. Most of the people who attended concluded that the performance was fairly good as far as it went. The baloon ascension which was to have taken place in the afternoon failed to come off. Taken all in all it was a genuine "snide" show. A number of persons were relieved of their superfluous cash, by the gamblers who accompanied the show.

To Prevent the Adulteration of Food.

The act of the legislature of Maryland passed at the late session to prevent the adulteration of articles of food empowers the State board of health to see that the law is duly executed. Dr. C. W. Chancellor, the secretary and executive officer of the board, is now making the necessary investigations with the view of enforcing the provisions of the statute. A circular has been issued calling upon the people for information leading to the detection of those who may offer for sale any kind of diseased, corrupted or unwholesome provisions, such as poultry, game, fish, or preparations of flesh, fruits, vegetables, bread, flour, meal, milk, or other things intended for human food. The law imposes the penalty for violations of the law of imprisonment in jail for a year or fine of $500, or both. The executive officer promises to treat all communications in confidence, since in all prosecutions the board's action will be so directly responsible that no inconvenience can result to the informant. The law is considered by the board as a health measure, and the secretary promises that "its administration will be based upon effectual co-operation with the people, especially honest producers and tradesmen." Information is desired in regard to adulterations of milk, condensed or uncondensed, butter, and as to all spurious materials sold as dairy butter; liquors, including beer, wine, whisky or other beverages; sugar, coffee, tea, &c.; soda and its salts; baking powders; confections containing terra alba or other earthy and mineral or metallic substances; also in regard to unwholesome food, prepared for sale, all diseased, corrupted or unwholesome meat, poultry, fish, game, fruits, vegetables, &c.; also as to any diseased, unsound, bruised or halfstarved animal intended for the food of man, or the sale or preparation for sale of sausages, puddings, soups, &c., made of the flesh or blood of any unsound, corrupt or diseased animal.

The Many

Remarkable cures of Catarrh effected by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla are conclusive proofs that this Balthusian and dangerous disease is one of the blood, needing only this searching and powerful alternative to thoroughly eradicate it.

"I have suffered for years from catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. None of the remedies I took afforded me any relief, until I used Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I began to take this medicine last spring, and am now entirely free from that disgusting disease. My appetite has returned, and I am once more strong and healthy."—Susan L. W. Cook, 99 Albany street, Boston Highlands, Boston, Mass.

"My son—now fifteen years of age—was troubled for a long time with catarrh, in its worst form, through the effects of which his blood became poisoned. About a year ago he began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla, has taken seven bottles of it, and is now entirely well."—D. P. Korr, Big Spring, Ohio.

"I was cured of a long-standing catarrh by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—James J. Dougher, Company C, 13th Infantry, Fort Wingate, N. M.
