The Coward Jockey.

A Tale of an English Race-Course—The Work of a Telegram.

A jockey's heart ought to be hard and callous—if he has feeling like other men he will always be getting into trouble. My wife had been dead about eight years at the time I am going to write about, and I only had one child. I held a very good position as jockey to Lord Kinder's stable, with as much riding as I could well get through, so I don't know what possessed me that I should make such a fool of myself over that boy. Goodness knows I had enough to think about without troubling my head with such a young whip-snapper as that. But there it was—I was as fond of him as I knew how to be, and I was never so happy as when sitting in my little drawing room with his curly head resting on my shoulder. He would sit there by the hours together, as pleased as Punch, telling me all sorts of yarns and explaining all about the boyish scrapes he was for ever getting into. Let's see, he would be about 9 years old then—a tiny little chap he was, but as sharp as a needle, and he had already had

THE EXAMPLE OF THE WESTERN UNION FIRE.

The burning of the Western Union Telegraph Building in New York on Friday morning last was a terrible example of the danger inseparably connected with the use of the electric wires, and proves the utter inability to guard against serious and unexpected accidents. That no lives were lost, in the sudden firing of a huge building, nine or ten stories high, filled with a network of the deadly wires, is almost miraculous, and whilst it proved the skill and heroism of the members of the fire department, it also proved the fearful danger to which human life is exposed in the effort to annihilate time and space by the use of the subtle fluid, which in spite of all precautions will burst loose at times from the controlling power of poor shortsighted man.

The office of The Associate Press being located in the building, the dissemination of general news, which is in a great measure dependent on the systematic working of the association, was of course materially interfered with, by the conflagration, which not only destroyed the machinery with which their work is carried on, but also the numberless despatches which had been received from different parts of the world, and were ready to be transmitted through its agency to the expectant crowds who wait and watch for news.

The wonderful progress of the world during the nineteenth century in everything that can add to comfort, luxury and intellectual enjoyment, whilst cause for congratulation, must yet be to the thoughtful mind suggestive of danger, for the impetus with which we are propelled, gives us no time to think of danger ahead, much less to guard against it, whilst these startling calamities, when they do occur only shock us for a moment, and are forgotten in the triumph we feel in the rapidity with which every vestige of them is obliterated.

DISSATISFACTION AT THE RESULT OF THE CENSUS.

The Census of 1890 will no doubt be one noted for its inaccuracy. For some time before the census enumerators began their work, the people all over the country were complaining about the questions which they would be required to answer, but the comments of the press, aided by prominent citizens had the effect of modifying this objection, to a certain extent. Now that the returns as estimated by the supervisors are beginning to come in, nearly all the towns and cities in the country are complaining about the incorrect rating they have received. They want a new census taken and in some cases propose to have the work done at the hands of the municipal authorities. In Frederick, that enterprising newspaper, the Daily News, proposes to undertake the work, according to the plans used in the city of London, where a census is taken in one night, by leaving a blank at each house in city, with the request that the same be filled, and which is called for next day.

Could it be possible that the unfavorable talk in regard to the census, had the effect of making many persons withhold information from the enumerator, or to shun him? No doubt all of the disappointed ones had over-estimated the growth of their various cities and towns, but in some instances the difference is too great to be correct. In the case of Frederick, for instance, it is undoubtedly impossible that the population should have decreased between 700 and 800 since 1880, and besides that, the city has just been waking up within the past few years, and should by all means show an increase.

In the case of Emmitsburg's showing, our people are satisfied to take matters as they come, and don't seem at all disposed to object to the returns, which give a population of 1,495 against 847 in 1880. That this increase of 648 is out of all reason, no one will deny, but we will be compelled to submit to the inevitable and allow the returns to be thus recorded. Ten years hence we may expect a howl from this quarter.

A package containing $3,000 in bank notes, consigned to the care of the United States Express Company mysteriously disappeared in transit over the Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western Railroad last week.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

PHILADELPHIA Chinamen say Boston has more opium victims than San Francisco.

THE peculiar enervating effect of summer weather is driven off by flood's Sarsaparilla, which "makes the weak strong."

A NEW YORK woman was recently awakened by the cries of her two-months-old child, and found a rat gnawing its head.

A TRUNK containing parts of a woman's body was discovered among a lot of baggage at Union Station, St. Louis, last Friday.

DR. PETERS, the German explorer, who was at one time reported killed by savages in the interior of Africa, has arrived at Zanzibar.

THE cottage at Saratoga, N. Y., occupied jointly by Vice-President Morton and his partner with their wives, was robbed of $10,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry on Thursday.

SOME of the cattle out on the farms on the Scottville pike in Tennessee are going blind from some unknown cause. Many believe it is the intense heat. The eyes first turn pale, and in the course of a day or so lose their sight completely.

THE upper stories of the Western Union Telegraph Company's building in New York, was burned Friday morning and telegraph business was greatly interfered with. The fire was caused by an electric light wire crossing the telegraph wires.

A DOCK hand at Fall River, Mass., laid down on the wharf and fell asleep. The hot sun beat in to his face, totally destroying the sight of both eyes. In groping about the place when he awoke he fell into a ship and was badly cut and bruised.

ALL through New Mexico, Arizona, some parts of Colorado, and also in Old Mexico, no rain has fallen for months, and thousands upon thousands of range cattle are lying dead in the parched valleys, and thousands more are dying for want of grass and water.

WEARY, worn and discouraged, Heartsick and hopeless and sad; Longing for help and comfort

When none can be had,— describes the condition of those persons who are said to be "going down hill," or "going into a decline." There is an indescribable weakness of the system, a general lack of vitality. They cannot tell what the matter is with them. They only know that they feel miserable in mind and body. They are gloomy and despondent. They have tried this and that remedy prescribed by their friends or the doctors. They have failed to receive any benefit from them. They reach the conclusion that there is no help for them and that they must die. Now the fact is that the trouble originates, in nine cases out of ten, in impure blood. There is poisonous, effete matter in it that ought to be got rid of. But how can this be done? Simply by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which acts on the blood and various organs of the body in such a way that the man or woman using it seems to be made over,—reconstructed. It is guaranteed to benefit or cure all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be refunded.

TO AVOID SUNSTROKE.

A Few Practical Hints That Should Be Remembered.

To avoid sunstroke, exercise in excessively hot weather should be very moderate; the clothing should be thin and loose, and an abundance of cold water should be drunk. Workmen and soldiers should understand that as soon as they cease to perspire when working or marching in the hot sun they are in danger of sunstroke, and they should drink water freely and copiously, to afford matter for cutaneous transpiration; keep the skin and clothing wet with water. Impending sunstroke may often be averted off by these simple measures. Besides the cessation of perspiration, the pupils are apt to be contracted and there is a frequency of micturition. If there is marked exhaustion, with a weak pulse, resulting from the cold water application, we should administer stimulants. The free use of water, however, both externally and internally, by those exposed to the direct rays of the sun is the best preventive of sunstroke; and laborers and soldiers and others who adopt this measure, washing their hands and faces as well as drinking copiously of water every time they come within reach of it, will generally enjoy perfect immunity from sunstroke. Straw hats should be worn, ventilated at the top and the crown of the hat filled with green leaves or wet sponge. It is better to wear thin flannel shirts in order not to check perspiration. We may expose ourselves for a long time in the hot sun and work or sleep in a heated room and enjoy perfect immunity from sunstroke if we keep our skin and clothing wet with water.

Infernal Ingenuity

Could scarcely devise more exasperating tortures than those of which you are the evidence in the face of a rheumatic or neuralgic sufferer. The agonies are the consequence of not checking a rheumatic or neuralgic attack at the outset. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been found by skillful medical practitioners to possess not only remedial, but defensive efficacy, where those diseases exist, or a tendency to them is exhibited. Surely this pleasant but safe botanical medicine, is better than the poisons often employed, but most unsafe, not only in curing, but in inducing the disease. The blood is depurated thoroughly from the rheumatic virus, and the nervous system is relieved from the most ultimate and direful throes by this benign, saving medicine, which likewise exhibits marked efficacy in malaria, kidney complaints, dyspepsia, constipation and liver complaint.

Rich Deposits.

The mining of lead ore in the vicinity of Johnsville, this county, continues, and the parties developing the mines are greatly encouraged with the prospects. The specimens of ore already mined, upon analysis, show seventy per cent. of lead, and it is believed that this percentage will be maintained. One day last week Mr. H. C. Turnbull and a party of about twenty persons from Baltimore, visited the mines, and were much pleased with what they saw. The company working the mines has a capital of $20,000, and it expects rich returns for the investment.

Excursions to Historic Battlefields.

A series of special excursions to the Battlefields of Cedar Creek, (Middle-town), Winchester and Harper's Ferry, under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic are announced for July 23, Aug. 20, Sept. 15, and October 16, 1890, affording a rare opportunity to visit the Historic Ground where the contending hosts struggled for victory.

Tickets for these excursions will be sold from all ticket stations on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad east of the Ohio River at one fare for the round trip on July 22 and 23, Aug. 19 and 20, Sept. 15 and 16, and Oct. 15 and 16, 1890, valid for return journey ten days including day of sale.

For the accommodation of those desiring to visit the Battlefields of Antietam and Gettysburg, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company will place on sale excursion tickets at one fare for the round trip to these points at Harper's Ferry and Weverton, to be sold July 23 to 31st inclusive, good to return until August 1st inclusive. August 20 to 28 inclusive good to return until August 29th inclusive. September 16 to 24 inclusive good to return until September 25 inclusive. October 16 to 24 inclusive good to return until October 25th inclusive, for rates and time of trains call on or address Agents B. & O. Railroad.

How Diphtheria is Spread by Corpses.

From the Baltimore Sun.

I noticed in the Sun some days ago a dispatch from Belair which stated that several deaths from malignant diphtheria had occurred in the family of Mr. Arthur Thomas, at Prospect, Harford county. These deaths had not been reported to the health authorities by the attending physician, as required by the law of 1890, chapter 622, but acting on the Sun's report I at once instituted inquiries as to the extent and cause of the malady, and have obtained the following facts from Dr. J. C. Butler, county health officer, which, if published, may serve as a warning that will prevent similar misfortunes to other families.

About the middle of last June a grandchild of Mr. Arthur Thomas, of Prospect, Harford county, Md., died in Wilmington, Del., of throat disease. The attending physician, it is stated, refused to give a certificate upon which the body could be removed, but another physician was found who certified that the child died from "lung trouble," and upon this the body was received and transported on the 17th of June by the railroad company into this State. Mr. Thomas and his daughter, aged 18 years, attended the corpse. On June 18th, after arriving at home, the coffin, an ordinary casket, was opened and the remains viewed by the family, who were thus exposed to the contagion of the disease. Two days after the daughter, who with her father had accompanied the corpse from Wilmington to Prospect, was taken sick with diphtheria and died on the 23d of the month. The same day, viz., the 23d of June, another daughter, aged 11 years, came down with the disease and died on the 30th of the month. In the meantime a third daughter, sickened and died on the 6th of July. On the 5th of July the son, Robert, was taken sick and died three days after with malignant diphtheria. This is quite similar to an occurrence which took place at Zanesville, Ohio, last spring, where many deaths resulted from exposure to a corpse brought from Chicago, and of another where a child died March, 1890, in Montgomery county, Michigan, of diphtheria, was certified by attending physicians to be "not dangerous to the public health," and was conveyed to Lapeer county, Michigan, where just one week from the day the coffin was opened and the remains viewed a person who was exposed died with the disease, and many others would probably have been exposed except for the action of the local or county health officer, who warned the neighbors of the danger, and ordered the coffin to be closed and the corpse buried. Such cases show the importance of notice being given promptly to the health authorities of all deaths from contagious or infectious diseases, so that every necessary precaution may be taken to prevent the spread of such diseases. They also emphasize the crime of any misrepresentation being made in a death certificate, and of railroad companies transporting bodies dead of a malignant or dangerous disease.

C. W. CHANCELLOR, M. D., Secretary Maryland State Board of Health.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness, caused by catarrh, that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT ITEMS.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT.—For the past week the weather has been trying to atone for its previous hot temper; its gracious, tranquil mood has been remarked by all, and that it failed to vent its rath in this vicinity during its recent exhibition of fury, is a matter fully appreciated. The days have been beautiful and the nights superb. The piazzas of the Clermont House and the porches of Monterey are daily and nightly thronged with the happy occupants of these favorable resorts. The Park House has its full complement of guests, and "Master's ponies" are in constant demand. When it is understood that Buena Vista is again under the management of its old-time popular owner, Mr. Valentine Gilbert, one may readily account for the large number of guests there domiciled. Mr. Gilbert's reputation as a host is an enviable one, and the beautiful board which he spreads for his guests cannot be excelled either in quantity or quality.

Capt. Randolph Norwood, U. S. A., (retired) is now occupying his summer cottage, and Captain John Clem, A. Q. M. U. S. A., will soon erect a set of summer quarters on his lot adjoining Norwood's. Genl. Page and Colonel Taylor of Norfolk, Va., are again in their pretty summer residences and J. Ross French, Ensign, U. S. N., and family are installed in the cottage rented for the season.

Mr. Edward L. Keyes, formerly lieutenant U. S. A., has prepared a set of charges and specifications against Brig. Gen. R. C. Drum, U. S. A., (retired) which will be forwarded to the War Department this week. The charges, "Conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," and the first specification alleges that when referred to by the Senate Committee on military affairs for the military history of Lt. E. L. Keyes, he (Drum) furnished said committee with a grossly false and skillfully drawn statement of the lieutenant's career; and that this was done with the intent to deceive and mislead the committee in the action taken upon the Bill then pending for the restoration to the service of Keyes. The names of many prominent army officers appear for the prosecution, and among the documentary evidence is a letter from a well known Washington attorney who, in writing to Keyes of Drum's action, says: "Now, I have no doubt that Gen. Drum sent wrong and misleading information as to your military history; which is a little trick the Adjutant General's office plays in such cases."

Now if this be true and the Adjutant General's office has been in the habit of resorting to such "tricks"—or rather to such scandalous deception, it would seem that the sooner a stop were put to it the better it would be for the "high tone and morale of the army" which the Adjutant General's office is so proverbial for harping upon. That General Drum furnished a false report to the committee is a fact incapable of contradiction; whether it were done intentionally or not remains to be seen.

S. A. Parker—well known to the shaving fraternity of Emmitsburg—has assumed charge of the Monterey-tourist department for the season. Parker's parlors have an air of elegance seldom met with outside of a city, and those who have responded to his cry of "next," can bear witness to the dexterity with which he guides the razor and manipulates the shears.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's was just as good; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other."

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Miss ELLA A. GORE, of Terrace Street, Boston.

I. M. FISHER, Mortgagee.

THE following is an extract from a real composition written by a small school boy in New Jersey. The subject given by the teacher was the extensive one of "Man." Here's what the small boy wrote: "Man is a wonderful animal. He has eyes, ears and mouth. His ears are most for catching cold in and having the earache. The nose is to get sniffls with. A man's body is split half way up, and he walks on the split ends."

Cure is Cure

However it may be effected; but unjust prejudices often prevents people from trying a proprietary medicine, until other remedies prove unavailing.

J. H. Ritchie, Commission Agent, Kingston, Australia, writes: "For years a confirmed sceptic as to the merits of proprietary medicines, I was at last converted by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For months a bottle of this medicine, of which I had come into possession through the kindness of a friend, remained unopened in my closet, till one night I was seized with a violent cold accompanied by a racking cough. Having none of my usual remedies at hand, I thought of the Cherry Pectoral, and determined to give it a trial. The result was truly magical. Relief came almost instantly, and after repeating the dose, certainly not more than half a dozen times, I found myself thoroughly cured. Subsequently my daughter was cured of a severe cough by the use of the Cherry Pectoral. I recommend this preparation to all sufferers from throat and lung troubles."

For croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma, and consumption the best remedy is Festival.

A Festival will be held at Moritz's School House on Saturday afternoon and evening August 2nd for the benefit of the Union Sunday School. The Harney Cornet Band will be in attendance in full uniform. All are invited.
COMMUNITTEE.

Our Population.

According to the returns forwarded by Dr. Wm. H. Perkins, census supervisor for the district in which Frederick County is included, the population of Emmitsburg is 1,495, a gain of 646 since 1880. The census of 1880 gave the town a population of 847, an increase of 141 over that of 1870.

A New Thing For The Chest.

It is a disinfectant of the air in front of the face before it is breathed, and a curative of throat and lung complaints. It is the Aunt Rachel Medicated Herb Pad, to be worn on the breast. This Aunt Rachel is one of the oldest living twins known, being 85 years old. Address the Herb Pad Co., Passaic, N. J.

Maryland Coat of Arms on D. and O. Car.
Vice-President Lord, of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, says that in a few days the company will have on its through route from Washington to New York the best constructed and most elegantly finished cars of any road in the country. A passenger, combination and equipment train will be ready for inspection and service at Camden depot early next week. The new cars will be substituted for those of the Jersey Central and Reading Roads now in use on the Baltimore and Ohio route, so that a uniform style of coaches will supersede the variety now seen. The new cars were built at the Pullman shops. They are painted blue, with the Maryland coat of arms and other decorations on the outside.—Data, Sun.

Real Estate Transfers.

The following transfers of real estate have taken place in this county, as recorded in the Clerk's office during the past week:

Charles W. Johnson and wife to Mahlon L. Rice, 10 acres, 3 rods and 25 perches of land, $708.09. Susan A. Wenner and husband to Jacob H. Fry, lot in Berlin, $100. Ezra Brown to Josh Wyant, several tracts of land, $543. J. Nicholas Zimmerman and wife to Columbus A. Zimmerman, life estate in lot, &c., in Frederick, $350. Francis T. Lakin and wife to Lewis Blank, 2 acres of land $50. Eli H. Rockwell, trustee, to Warner Dempsey, 2 acres of land, $125. Wm. P. Mautsby, Jr., trustee, to Joseph A. Williamson, 12 acres and 39 perches, $250.

Going to Hagerstown.

In renewing his subscription to the Chronicle, Mr. John G. Hess, of the Hess Manufacturing Co., Westminster, says that he is going to move the works to Hagerstown on the 1st of September, having accepted an offer made him by the Land and Improvement Co., at that place. Their proposition is that they deed him a parcel of land on the B. & O. railroad in fee simple and erect two buildings thereon, one two-stories high, 120 x 60 feet, and the other one-story, 100x60 feet, run a railroad switch to the shops and give him a building lot in the city, all free. Mr. Hess knows how to run the coach business, and we hope he will make a good thing out of it. The celebrated Hess Road Carts, of which John is the inventor, are known almost over the whole country, and the demand for them has become too large to be met by the capacity of the works at Westminster.

A Ridiculous Question.

"Do you enjoy good health?" asked Brown of his friend Jones. The reply of Jones was short, sharp and to the point. "Why of course I do, what fool doesn't?" Everybody enjoys good health when he has it. But some people do not have it to enjoy. Sick headache, biliousness, constipation, dizziness, liver, and a host of ills, real and imaginary, and their heritage. Thousands of persons cure and prevent these distressing complaints by taking Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Small, sugar-coated and easy to take; one a dose.

INTERESTING LETTER.

Mr. Jos. S. Gitt, tells of his recent trip to this place, and throws a little light on the Railroad scheme.

EDITOR CHRONICLE:—It was a source of much gratification that I had the pleasure of visiting Emmitsburg the other week, and meet old friends of former years. I was more than pleased to see the many improvements—some of the finest buildings in the county are located there. It shows enterprise to see such buildings, a bank, water brought from the mountain to every family that desires it, a fountain, of the finest to be found anywhere, in the center of the public square, sending forth its cooling sprays these hot days.

I must not forget the railroad commenced in 1870, another source of convenience to all. I noticed that part of the old rails are still in use, about half the road has been re-laid with steel rails, and ballasted, and an extension to Gettysburg or Round Top is being agitated. I cannot conceive that there would be any serious difficulty in the way, and that a satisfactory line can be obtained—a practical one, from what knowledge I have of the country intervening between the two points, and no objectionable grades. The estimated cost I could give, but this, however, could be considered only as an approximation. This I may do in another letter I propose giving, with matters of interest in the course of a few weeks.

There can be no doubt whatever that the onward progress of events, outworking through the instrumentality of an energetic, enterprising people, must at no distant day absolutely force the necessity of extending this road from the present terminus to Gettysburg. I think that I could prove it if I had the time just now—conclusively and unanswerably that the enterprise would be a paying one.

I hope that every business man, that every one who is interested in the prosperity of your road and town, will think the matter over, and then act, act now.

There is no excuse, the road can and must be built if you mean to keep pace with the march of the time; if you mean to develop the best resources which a bounteous Providence has placed within your reach; if you mean to live up to that enterprise and that energy which a free country and a free State demands of you; the road must be built. If gentlemen wish to remain "old fogies" all their lives; to do nothing for themselves, nor for their children, who are to come after them; to have Emmitsburg remain a "one-horse town," then discourage the extension of the road, express doubts as to its success, and act energetically in what Dickens calls, "the way not to do it."

But this class of men are not so numerous among you as they used to be; and I hope that the number will grow beautifully less every year. You want enterprise, and enterprising men among you; and nothing will so effectually bring them to you as the building of the extension. Less than $150,000 will build the road. I would again earnestly invite the citizens of Emmitsburg and Frederick county to think of these matters seriously and earnestly. If they will only do this, I am satisfied that they will soon act.

I cannot close this article so hastily thrown together, without a few remarks in reference to the Emmitsburg Chronicle, started by my old friend Samuel Motter, eleven years ago, and which has just entered upon its 12th year, and is now conducted by his widow, Mrs. C. M. Motter. Mr. Motter, who died a few years ago, was a forcible writer, and made the Chronicle a number one paper, highly prized by all who have the pleasure of reading it. It is independent in politics, a representative of the educational interest of the town and the surrounding country, and every family in the town and neighborhood should patronize it, not only by becoming subscribers but also advertisers. The editor gives to his patrons a newsy, neat and pure journal that is well worthy their support, and is to be congratulated on the success that has attended the enterprise.

Rev. H. F. White, C. M., has returned from his summer vacation.

Henry Stokes, Esq., made a visit to Mechanicstown on Tuesday.

Mr. John Solsam of Greengarden made a visit at Mr. Wm. B. Ogle's.

Mr. E. R. Zimmerman attended the meeting of the School Commissioners at Frederick yesterday.

"Uncle" Peter Brown (colored) of Westminster, made a visit among his friends here this week.

Rev. James Neek, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who officiated for Rev. H. F. White during his absence, returned home on Tuesday. Fr. Neek is a native of this vicinity and has many warm friends here.

Mr. Russell P. Johnston, of Turin, Iowa, made a visit among his old friends here. We were pleased to find him the same jolly fellow as before he left here, three years ago, and also to learn that he is pleased and contented, both with his position and his western home.

Why It Is Popular?

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

THE CENSUS FRAUD.

Dr. Perkins' Badly Mixed up Figures—All Wrong.

Dr. Wm. H. Perkins, of Hancock, Washington county, who was the census supervisor for the Third Census District of Maryland, which included the whole of the Sixth Congressional District and Carroll county, of the Second; all of the Fifth Congressional except the parts in Baltimore city and Baltimore county, has sent his completed returns to Superintendent Robert P. Porter, at Washington. Dr. Perkins said his men did very careful and prompt work, and it was rather remarkable that some of them, who were not fifty miles from the Capital of the United States, were thirty miles from a telegraph station. Superintendent Porter has complimented Dr. Perkins very highly for being the first to forward his completed returns. In a few instances his enumerators met with some objections to answer the questions, but Dr. Perkins judiciously managed to avoid a single legal prosecution in his territory. The aggregate results may be slightly modified in some of the counties by the official recount in Washington. His results are as follows:

Sixth Congressional District—All-County, 41,362; Frederick, 40,000; (correct figures make it about 55,000); Garrett, 13,897; Montgomery, 26,501; Washington, 40,012, total, 170,781.

Fifth Congressional District (except Baltimore city and Baltimore county)—Anne Arundel county, 32,673; Calvert, 8,901; Charles, 14,401; Howard, 15,588; Prince George, 25,790; St. Mary's, 15,857; total, 113,200.

Carroll county—31,883.

Total supervisor's district, 315,864.

Population of Principal Towns—Annapolis (exclusive of Naval Academy), 6,904; Cumberland, 12,007; Oakland, 1,079; Frederick, 7,925; (correct figures make it about 10,500); Westminster (including Western Maryland College), 2,930; Ellicott City, 1,263; Rockville, 1,198; Hagerstown, 10,172; Lonaconing, 4,595; Barton, 1,850; Westernport, 1,533; Frostburg, 3,627; Williamsport, 1,273; Sharpsburg, 1,163; Hancock, 784; Boonsboro', 772; Emmitsburg, 1,495; Brunswick, 630; Mechanicstown, 1,096; Middletown, 662; Liberty, 589; Union Bridge, 749; Taneytown, 554.—Frederick News.

Re-union at Pen-Mar.

The Reformed Re-union at Pen-Mar next Thursday promises to be a very successful affair. The fare from here will be 75 cts. for the round trip, and excursionists will leave on the regular trains at 8.20 A. M., making close connection at Rocky Ridge with the special from Frederick.

From the Star and Sentinel.

Mr. Noah Shelly, in Franklin township, has 40 acres in flax growing finely. The seed only is utilized, and amounts to more than a crop of oats.

On Saturday last while workmen were digging sand at the Sand bank on the old brick yard lane East of Cemetery Hill, they unearthed the body of a soldier. The buttons found indicate that he was a rebel.

Mother's Station Items.

Mrs. Dorsey is visiting her daughter Mrs. Gilbert near Rocky Ridge.

Mr. Ferd Hahn has returned to his home at Pikesville. He has been sick.

Work was commenced this week on the three-story addition to I. M. Fisher & Co's, coach shops.

Messrs. J. C. Rosensteel, Geo. Marble, John Wagaman, Tide Knobe, Bern Welly and E. A. Shorb went on the excursion to Bay Ridge last Saturday.

Afraid of an Oil Storage House.

Property owners residing in the vicinity of the land near the Cumberland Valley railroad station in Hagerstown, recently acquired by the Standard Oil Company for the purpose of erecting a storage house for oils, are alarmed at the prospect of such a structure near the railroad; and it is said, they will importune the city council to prevent the company from carrying out their project, which they consider highly dangerous.—Herald and Torch Light.

Death of Wm. B. Morrison.

Mr. William B. Morrison, a well known farmer of this vicinity, died at his residence about three miles southeast of town, on Saturday morning, after a long and severe illness. Mr. Morrison was one of the most successful farmers in the neighborhood. He leaves a large family of grown children. His funeral took place Monday afternoon from the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Wm. Simonton, D. D., officiating, and his remains were interred in the Presbyterian Cemetery.

Church Re-dedication.

The work of remodeling and repairing the Tom's Creek M. E. Church has been completed, and services will be held on Sunday as follows: Love Feast at 9 A. M., preaching and dedication service at 10 A. M., evening service at 7.30 P. M. Rev. W. A. Koontz, of Reisterstown, will assist at the services and preach in the morning at 10 o'clock. The repairs and improvements to the edifice have converted it into a very neat and pretty church of modern style and convenience, and the total cost was only $555.00.

The Pipe Line.

The Standard Oil Company's pipe line seems to be an assured thing. Its agents have been securing releases from farmers in Franklin county over whose land the line runs. The release calls for a six or eight inch pipe to be laid at a depth of three feet. It contains a clause in which the company agrees to pay all damages to soil or crops which may result from leakage, etc.

It is said work will be begun in the fall. Pumps will be placed at intervals along the line to force the oil through the pipes and over the hills. A large number of men will be employed when work commences.—Ex.

Navy Yard Appointments.

Through the influence of Congressman McComas, Messrs. William A. Fraley and Albert S. Rowe, of this place, have been appointed to positions in the U. S. Navy Yard at Washington. They were ordered to report for work and left on Tuesday. These men are both practical machinists and their work will be at that branch of the business, with pay at present of $3.04 a day. We heartily congratulate them on receiving the appointment, and understand that the same gives general satisfaction here.

Mr. Fraley returned home last evening, and will return shortly when his job is ready for him. Mr. Rowe went to work at once in the steam-fitting department.

Serious Accident.

While gunning last Friday morning, Mr. Oliver E. Horner, of this place, met with an accident which narrowly escaped being fatal. It company with Mr. Wm. Ulrich, he was hunting woodcock in Gilson's bottom, and had stopped along the fence to watch a party of seiners in the creek, and in getting down his gun was in some way discharged, the entire contents of one barrel taking effect in his left wrist and side, just below the heart. The powder burned his flesh and clothes very badly, even his suspender being burned in two. After the accident he walked across two fields, to Mr. Peter Bollinger's, from where he was brought to his home here in a buggy, and is now on a fair way to recovery. Dr. J. K. Wrigley has the case in charge.

What if I had attained the summit of my ambition? What if I had won my first Derby?—he was dead. What if I had reached the crowning point of my career? What if I had arrived at that which I had looked forward to as the consummation of happiness?—my little boy was dead. What if I was the hero of the day? What if I was hailed as a public idol?—my boy was dead.

Somebody (I suppose it was Morrison) came forward and put the rein on the colt and led him back to the unsaddling enclosure. The crowd made a lane for us to pass through, and the shouts and cheers were deafening.

"Hurrah for Dick Painter?" "Well rode, Dick!" "Good old Roderick!" "Never saw such a finish in my life!" "Here's your good health, old boy!" and all that sort of thing.

Nearly everybody seemed to have backed the favorite, and in their delight at winning their money the people forgot how they had jeered and hooted at me a few minutes previously.

I think most of the gentlemen in the jockey enclosure must have heard something of my trouble, for as I rode in there was almost a dead silence and I saw many pitying and sympathetic faces turned toward me. One or two of them told me I had ridden a good race, but they must have thought me piggy and sulky, for I paid no attention to what they said.

I took off the saddle and, like one in a dream, went into the weighing room and got into the chair. I was passed "All right," and Morrison took the saddle from me. Then I found Lord Kinder standing by my side. He put out his hand, which I took.

"Thank you," he said simply, and I heard him add under his breath, "Poor chap, what can I say to him?"

I went into the dressing room and took off the brilliant new jacket I had ridden in and hastily got into my ordinary clothes.

Lord Kinder was close to the door when I came out—I am certain he had been waiting for me—and he walked with me to the back of the stand, where I got into a fly.

He shut the door, and after telling the driver to look sharp, turned to go. But before he had gone half a dozen yards he came back and put his head through the open window. There was a mist over his eyes and his voice was low and husky;

"It's—it's a rough world, Richard," he said; "the little lad is better off where he is."

And the next moment he was mixed up with the shouting, swearing crowd, and was elbowing his way back to the stand.

I was in plenty of time for the first special to London bridge, and I got there at about a quarter to 4. A great many people recognized me and showed great surprise at seeing me go home so early, but I replied shortly that I wasn't well, and for the most part they didn't bother me further.

I got a cab across to Liverpool street, and was disgusted to find that I had nearly forty minutes to wait for a train at Newmarket. I went into the refreshment room and ordered some dinner; but when it came it choked me and I had to leave it.

I don't know whether it was really a show train, or whether it was only my impatience, but the journey to Cambridge seemed interminable. I had to change there, but luckily I hadn't very long to wait for a train to take me on. The station-master came up and spoke to me, and congratulated me on my success; but when the train came in I left him abruptly and got into an empty carriage.

In another half hour I was at Newmarket, and I fancied I could detect the looks of pity with which every one regarded me.

I jumped into a fly and threw myself back so that no one should see me. Every house we passed—every stone—brought back memories of the child and I groaned as I asked myself miserably what I had to live for now. My wife had been dead for more than eight years and now my little boy, all that I had to care for—all the sunshine of my life—he, too, was taken from me.

It seemed so cruel. I could have given up anything in the world but him. And only yesterday day I had his arms round my neck—only yesterday his soft cheeks were rubbing against my rough whiskers. Only yesterday! And now.

I had nobody to comfort me in my misery. I was all alone in the world. I must bear it as best I could.

The fly pulled up at the gate, and the man got down and tried to open it; but they hadn't expected me back so soon, and it was locked. So I dismissed him, and, going through the side door, walked up to the house.

But before I had gone twenty yards I saw something which made me stop short. I saw something which brought great beads of perspiration out on my forehead, and which made my heart stop beating. My God! Was I mad—was it a dream—was it a nightmare?

Who was this flying down the path to meet me? Who was this springing on my shoulder and flinging his arms round my neck?

It was my boy. My boy—alive, in all health and strength!

"Hurrah, dad!" he shouted in the glad voice I knew so well. "Three cheers for Roderick! I've won three shillings and sixpence. I was certain sure he'd win."

The shock was so sudden, the revulsion of feeling was almost too much for me. I staggered forward and nearly fell. My heart was thumping wildly against my chest and everything reeled before my eyes. I leaned against a tree a minute or two, holding my boy tight in my arms, and tried to realize the delicious happiness that had come upon me.

"How funny you look, father," he said. "Are you ill—perhaps you've got a stomachache? I'm glad you've come back. You said it wouldn't be till Friday evening. Shall you have to go away again tomorrow?"

Without answering I carried him into the house, and it was not until I had gulped down a glass of brandy that I managed to speak.

"How—how about the accident, Bertie?" I said, hoarsely. Weren't you hurt?"

"What accident, dad?"

"What accident! Wasn't there a horrible accident on the railroad this morning and weren't you nearly killed?"

"A railway accident?" he exclaimed, excitedly. "Oh, I wish I had been there! Whereabouts was it, dad? I've never seen a fire and I've never seen a railway accident, and I'd give anything to see one. I suppose it would be too late to go now—it would be all over by this time?"

What did it mean? I sat there for some minutes with the boy on my knee—I was happier than I had ever been in my life before and I was loath to move. Then I rang the bell for the housekeeper and asked her whether she had heard anything of this accident, but neither she nor any of the other servants had heard a whisper of it. I sent a message down to Mr. Heavens, the stationmaster, but his reply was that no accident of any sort had, to his knowledge, occurred that day.

What did the telegram mean? Who had sent it? It was clearly a cruel and deliberate hoax and I puzzled my brain to try and discover its object. Suddenly an idea flashed across me and the more I thought about it the more certain I became that I had hit upon the solution to the mystery.

The telegram was sent to me by some one who had an interest in Roderick losing the Derby. The sender, knowing my blind, womanish affection for the child, relied upon the news so upsetting me as to render me utterly helpless on the colt. He relied, in short, on my riding just such a race for the Derby as I had, in fact, ridden for the less important Trial plate before it. He probably meant me to receive it just before the big race—in which case his foul end would certainly have been attained—and it was only a slight miscalculation of time which had rendered the scheme abortive.

The devilish cruelty of this blackguard plot never troubled him, but I am one of those who believe that such things invariably bring their own curse with them.

One of the first things I did was to telegraph to Lord Kinder. He had been so exceptionally nice to me that I knew how pleased he would be to hear the glad news. The message I sent was as follows: "Found my boy safe and well. Telegram cruel hoax. Return to Epsom in the morning."

I jumped into a fly and threw myself back so that no one should see me. Every house we passed—every stone—brought back memories of the child and I groaned as I asked myself miserably what I had to live for now. My wife had been dead for more than eight years and now my little boy, all that I had to care for—all the sunshine of my life—he, too, was taken from me.

It seemed so cruel. I could have given up anything in the world but him. And only yesterday

I took this down myself to the Post Office and asked them what sort of a man it was who had handed in the message in the morning containing the flimsy lie.

"I should know him again," the clerk said decisively; "but I have never seen him before, and I don't think he can be living in the town. He told me your housekeeper had asked him to hand it in."

It was just as I expected, and I had no longer any doubt in my mind on the subject.

As I walked up to my front door I met a porter coming down the path, and he told me he had just been up to leave a parcel which had been placed in charge of the guard of one of the specials from town.

I was rather surprised and wondered what it could be. I took it into the dining room and hastily cutting the string, got off the lid of the box. Then I saw the contents; and what I saw made me put my hands to my eyes and sink into a chair.

It was a very curious sensation that I felt, and I dare say the anxiety and misery which I had gone through made me feel more touched than I otherwise should have been. I did what I don't think I had done for the last twenty years—when I took my hands away from my eyes I found they were wet.

A beautiful white cross lay in the box—all the flowers fresh and pure—and on the top was a gentleman's visiting card.

Before I looked at it I knew whose it was. Nobody but Lord Kinder would have had the rudeness or the delicacy to think of it.

Just then the little boy came into the room (the little boy for whose dead body that cross was meant, now radiant and joyous with all the exuberant spirits of childhood), and as he usually did, he made straight for my knee. I don't pretend to be a religious man, but as he sat there, with his dear little head resting on my shoulder, I am not ashamed to own that I tried to say some sort of disjointed prayer. The thing that I loved more than anything else in the world had been given back to me from the dead, and—and you can't blame me for feeling grateful.

Suddenly his eyes rested on the cross.

"Oh, dad, have you bought that for mother's grave? Let us go and put it on. What dear, beautiful, lovely flowers!"

So in a few minutes we went up to the cemetery and laid on the grave of the mother the cross which had been intended for the child. And the little lad never knew who had sent that cross, or for what purpose it had been bought.

As we returned down the High street I was pressed by a great number of people—including Lord Warton and Mr. Horace Searle—to go and spend the evening with them, but I thought I would sooner be quiet; and Bertie and I enjoyed ourselves in our own way alone together.

Next morning I went back to Epsom by the first train, and drove straight to the house where Lord Kinder was staying. He had had my telegram and he greeted me with an uproarious cheer and insisted on my drinking a bottle of champagne with him.

He filled a glass to the brim and held it high in the air.

"Here's long life and endless prosperity to young Bertie Painter. May he turn out as good a jockey in the saddle and as good a man out of it as his father before him."

He tossed it off to the last drop and put the glass down on the table. And then his boisterous manner suddenly changed. He turned to me and looked me straight in the face.

"There has been some devil at work in this business," he said, and his eyes flashed. "I swear, as there is a sun in the heavens, I will find out who sent that telegram."

Ay, and he did find it out. It was a cruel blackguard piece of work; but it is a long story, and I'll tell you about it another time. London Society.

ENDURANCE is more valuable than cleverness. It is the patient, steady plodders who gain and keep fortunes.

WHY is old ocean so apt to lash himself into fury? Because he is so often crossed.

The best illustration of mingled hope and fear is a lazy man looking for work.
