TREASURE.

"What I spent, that I had; what I kept, that I lost; what I gave, that I have."—Old Egyptian.
Every coin of earthly treasure We have lavished upon earth For our simple worldly pleasure, May be reckoned something worth; For the spending was not losing, Though the purchase were but small; It was perished with the using; We have had it—that is all.

All the gold we leave behind us When we turn to dust again, (Though our avarice may blind us) We have gathered quite in vain; Since we neither can direct it, By the winds of fortune tossed, Nor in other worlds expect it; What we hoarded—we have lost.

But each merciful oblivion (Seed of pity wisely sown) Which we gave in self negation, We may safely call our own. Thus of treasure freely given, For the future we may hoard, For the angels keep in heaven, What is lent unto the Lord.

IN NORTHERN WILDS

I was one of ten, five boys and five girls. My father, a clergyman of the English church, was grateful to Providence for having filled his quiver with ten, but I think that in reality he was more grateful they were not eleven. The problem of his life, the worry of attempting to solve which helped to bring him to his grave, was how to provide a living for us all. As he died before a single one of us was provided for, he might have saved himself much anxiety.

I was not the eldest of the family, but the second son. The oldest had been sent to one of the universities, and had followed the very glorious but unpeppery profession of his father, without a "living" and without definite hope of obtaining one. I was intended for the Indian civil service; possibly the vicereignty, but the examiners at Burlington house failed to recognize my fitness for such great possibilities, therefore I determined to emigrate, and a friend of my mother's hearing of my determination secured for me, by personal interest, a berth in the Hudson's Bay company. I was duly engaged and signed a document as long as a deed of transfer, by which I bound myself to serve the company, even to the extent of defending their property with my life.

I sailed to Montreal and presenting my credentials there was soon informed that my services would be required at a post in the far north in charge of one John McIvor. There was also intrusted to my care a pair of fowls, Plymouth Rocks, with the request that I would deliver them safely into the hands of Mr. McIvor. I mention this fact seeing that these fowls played an important part in the events which I am about to relate.

On my arrival at my destination, after sleeping about forty nights under canvas, I was glad of the comfort which reigned at Fort Trial, due chiefly to the domestic energy of Mrs. McIvor, a bright, pleasant little woman, who seemed out of place in the heart of this "great lone land."

Mr. McIvor was Scotch, as his name would imply, a rough and ready man, with a heart of steel, but which on occasion could be as soft as a woman's. After reading the dispatches which I handed him he said:

"Weel, young mon, I dinna see what the likes o' you can do in a country like this. Had na ye better gae back before it is too late?" "I won't go back, sir, unless you send me back," I answered.

"Ah, weel; boy, stay where you are. It's no always the coarsest twine that stands the biggest strain."

So I entered into my duties without another discouraging word from Mr. McIvor, who, though a perfect martinet in the matter of duty, was kindness itself in the privacy of his own house. There were two other clerks beside myself, who stayed there only during the summer, but who in the fall took charge of small trading establishments, outposts as they are called, returning to Fort Trial after the winter's hunt was over.

Like most young Englishmen I had formed my ideas of Indians on a Fenimore Cooper basis, but the noble redman fell far short of my ideal. I found him to be a selfish, ungrateful, treacherous savage, whose power for evil was luckily curtailed by his cowardice. I do not say that there are no good points in an Indian's character; we find good points in the character of a dog or a horse, but we do not set the horse or dog on a pedestal and proclaim him all that is perfect; rather we keep clear of his heels and teeth respectively until we know something of the brute's idiosyncrasies. One has to do the same with Indians. Be thoroughly on your guard until you have proved that they can be trusted, and don't trust them then. Mr. McIvor had the most supreme contempt for them—a contempt which he never tried to hide. He used to say:

"They are cowards, arrant cowards, and are afraid o' you, e'en like a dog."

It was not long after my arrival that I had a sort of adventure which gave great sport to the other clerks, and even Mr. McIvor himself would occasionally make joking allusions to it.

There was a river running about 100 yards from the store; it was deep and fairly swift. One day as I was working in the store I heard a scream which appeared to come from the river. I ran out and down to the bank, from where I saw an old woman struggling in the water; she had been fishing and her canoe had upset. There were about a dozen Indians looking on, but they only laughed and made not the slightest movement toward helping her. Indians, as a rule, are cruel to the old. They look upon them as incumbrances from which they are not sorry if an accident relieves them. I saw that this poor old thing was in distress and likely to be drowned, so I jumped into the river and swam out to her assistance, not before, however, relieving my mind by abusing soundly the men who would cheerfully have let her sink before their eyes. It was no difficult task to bring the poor old thing ashore, and when I had done so the poor creature followed me as I walked toward the house, crying in earnest tones:

"Meegwitch! meegwitch!" meaning "Thank you, thank you." But I found this very annoying, for the Indians all laughed at me in my wet clothes and at the old woman, whose clothes were also wet and very thin, as she clung to me, with her incessant "Meegwitch, meegwitch."

The chaff that I suffered from my companions was merciless. I was dubbed "The Knight Errant," "The Heroic Preserver," etc., until I grew sick of it; but to have lost my temper would only have made it worse, so I suffered in silence, and to aggravate my suffering the old woman thought it her duty to present me with every extra large fish that she caught, or if her son-in-law threw her a beaver tail or a moose nose, or any other delicacy especially prized by Indians, they were sure to find their way to my room, and each demonstration of the kind only added to the fun. After a time I began to pick up the Indian language, and as I always had a sneaking regard for the old woman, I often made use of her assistance in acquiring it. In fact we became fast friends, I cementing the friendship by gifts of a little flour, sugar or tea.

I received less chaffing in the winter, for the other clerks had long since taken their departure for their respective outposts, and I was left sole occupant of the clerks' quarters, or "clerks' house," as it was called.

It was coming on to the end of March when an event occurred which made me glad that I had pulled the old woman out of the river and treated her with some consideration, if not kindness. The two fowls which I had brought safely to their destination had fairly survived the rigor of the winter. In fact Mrs. McIvor announced one day at dinner that she had found one egg which the hen had laid. But shortly afterward there was consternation in that household. The two fowls had been found dead, and an Indian dog was quietly making a meal off one of them. The hole whereby he had effected an entrance was stopped up before he could escape, and Mr. McIvor, using his revolver, had the satisfaction of shooting the brute and pitching his body down on the frozen river.

Now it happened that this dog belonged to Match-ee-nine, an old Indian claiming to be chief of the band, and who had the reputation of being a conjuror and a cannibal, in consequence of which the Indians all feared him and obeyed him.

He came into the store that evening and spoke to Mr. McIvor thus: "You pay me for my dog."

"How much?" asked Mr. McIvor. "Twenty weeg," The Hudson Bay company use at inland posts a standard for value, the name differing in different localities. A weeg equals about fifty cents.

"All right," said McIvor, "I will pay you for your dog if you pay me for my fowls."

"How much?" asked Mr. McIvor. "Twenty weeg." The Indian saw that he was caught, and walked out with a muttered "Kish," meaning, "Hold on, we shall see." Next evening he again came to the store, and said: "There are bad people about; I have seen a wendigo. You pay me for my dog." (Wendigo: a spirit, a ghost, giant, something uncanny.) "Get the wendigo to pay you," said Mr. McIvor, laughing, and again the man slunk off. Mr. McIvor knew the Indian nature well, and he said to me:

"That old fellow is up to some devilment. That's what they always do when they want to do an evil trick themselves; pretend that some one else is going to do it. We had better keep a watch on the place; he might set fire to it."

We watched that night, but nothing unusual occurred. After dinner next day, as I was endeavoring to recuperate a bit from night watching by a short snooze, I became aware of a presence, and opening my eyes saw my old woman standing over me, with her finger on her lips to enjoin silence. When she saw that I was awake she whispered hurriedly:

"Run! Indians going to kill trader, kill all white people in the store. Match-ee-nine keep trader's wife. You good to old woman. Run!"

And the old woman, casting an anxious look at the door, hobbled away as fast as she could.

I did run, but it was to Mr. McIvor, who was at that moment walking down to the store with his wife.

I breathlessly related to Mr. McIvor as nearly as I could remember the words of the old woman. "There's something in it," he said, "and we must be prepared for them. Let us look for our guns. The loons mean business."

His wife, who had heard all, looked frightened, and he turned to her saying:

"Which is it, Maggie? Wi' us, or at the house?"

"With you, John, till the death," she answered boldly.

He gave her a look of admiration and affection, and hastily rose to collect and load our arms.

But we were too late; while we were talking in the office the store had silently filled with Indians, their faces sinister and threatening as they stood ranged up against the high counter. So intent had we been on the discussion that we had not heard the soft tread of their moccasined feet, and there we stood, fairly caught, face to face with death.

It is hard to remember what passed through my mind at that moment. I think that my feelings were more those of indignation than of fear. It vexed me to think of death at the hands of those brutes, an inglorious death, of which but a passing notice might appear in some newspaper, or what was more likely, no notice at all, for the Hudson's Bay company have never cared to publish abroad such little mishaps as these. How different, I thought, would it have been if I were in the army. Then if I had to die my name would be mentioned with pride by my family as well as with regret, and possibly my portrait might appear in The Illustrated London News. So dear to humanity is the praise it receives when no longer alive to hear it, when the pleasure of the praise is but in the anticipation alone.

I watched Mr. McIvor with a certain amount of curiosity, not unmixed with hope, to see what he would do. He did not hesitate a moment, but drawing his wife to his side and putting his arm around her waist he said:

"You have come, I believe, to kill me?"

"Yes," answered Match-ee-nine, "to kill you as you killed my dog." "All right," answered Mr. McIvor coolly; "but surely we may as well take a smoke before you kill."

Whether the Indians were swayed by the force of a superior will, or whether they were themselves glad to put off a tragedy which they had pledged themselves to perform, I cannot say; but they cheerfully complied with the request, and each producing his pipe leisurely filled it and commenced to smoke, as if they had come there for nothing else. In the meanwhile Mr. McIvor had quietly drawn toward him a small keg of gunpowder containing about twenty-five pounds. He deftly removed the head; then taking a candle and lighting it with the same match with which he lit his pipe he thrust it down into the powder to within two inches of the flame. So quietly had he done this that the Indians, who were at the moment engaged in lighting their pipes, did not notice it. It was a solemn kind of a smoke. Not another word was spoken on either side. The only thing that woke the dead silence was the occasional "puff, puff" of a pipe that would not draw. I watched the candle with a kind of fascination and saw an inch burn away. I was fearful lest a spark should drop from it, and thus rob us of our full two inches of life; but the candle burned steadily on.

There was but half an inch left. I remember that I wondered if the plover had begun to make their nests in the marshes at home; if my brother Charley had come home for the Easter holidays, and if he would know where the migle thrush always built her nest in the big elm tree; but my reveries were broken by a movement among the Indians and a muttered "non-gom," meaning now.

Match-ee-nine arose and with him all the rest of the Indians, with their guns in their hands. Mr. McIvor, who was watching them, made a movement toward the candle in the gunpowder. The movement attracted the attention of the Indians, and they now for the first time comprehended the situation. A minute later there was not an Indian in the store. They had gone out as silently and suddenly as they had come in, leaving us in sole possession, but with the candle burning dangerously near the powder. Mr. McIvor now carefully approached the keg, and with a steady hand raised the candle from its dangerous candlestick. Not one moment to soon, for scarcely had he lifted it clear off the keg when the few grains of powder which had adhered to it came in contact with the flame and were ignited; but we were saved.

The sudden revulsion of feeling took the strength completely out of my legs, and I sat down helplessly on a box, until the voice of Mr. McIvor ordering me to shut the door and lock it recalled me to my senses. Mrs. McIvor clasped her husband around the neck and kissed him passionately. He was not unmoved for the moment; but sat

Mr. Gladstone's Translation of the Ode is also presented. Herbert Laws Webb furnishes "With a Cable Expedition" and "The City House in the West" by Jno. W. Root, is a profusely illustrated paper. "Jerry," the intensely interesting continued story begun in the June number has reached the second part, without as yet revealing its author.

"From Port to Port with the White Squadron," by Rufus Fairchild Zogbaum, is the second of Mr. Zogbaum's articles on his recent cruise. The second paper by N. S. Shaler on "Nature and Man in America," "Fray Bento's Bell," by Charles Paul MacKie, "The Lake Country of New England," by Newman Smyth, "Sand-Waves at Hellenopolis," by John R. Spears, "The Private School for Girls," by Mrs. Sylvanus Reed, together with a choice selection of poetry and closing with "The Point of View" makes this number particularly interesting.

For a mild cathartic and efficient tonic, use Baxter's Mandrake Bitters. Every bottle warranted. For sale by James A. Elder, Emmitsburg, and A. C. Musselman, Fairfield, Pa.

The Frederick Manufacturing and Development Company has already sold in Frederick over a hundred thousand dollars' worth of its stock, and is negotiating with a number of enterprises to locate their plants there.

By its mild, soothing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of nasal catarrh, also "cold in the head," coryza, and catarrhal headaches. 40 cents, by druggists.

Gone in for Repairs.

The engine of the Emmitsburg Railroad was taken to the W. M. shops at Union Bridge, on Friday night, where it will be thoroughly overhauled and repaired. Engine No. 5, of the Western Maryland is being used in its place.

The Ladies Delighted.

The pleasant effect and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels.

Factories are Coming.

Mr. M. V. Richards, General Land and Immigration Agent of the B. & O. R. R., was here yesterday making arrangements for the location of a large shoe factory and a very large agricultural works, which will no doubt be brought here, so we are informed.—Frederick News.

The sealed proposals for furnishing the necessary equipments for twenty-two polling rooms, use of Frederick county, in accordance with an Act of Assembly, 1890, chapter 538, section 160, were opened at the office of the County Commissioners on Saturday, when the contract was awarded to William Roussey, of Baltimore.

"Don't Care to Eat."

It is with the greatest confidence that Hood's Sarsaparilla is recommended for loss of appetite, indigestion, sick headache, and similar troubles. This medicine gently tones the stomach, assists digestion, and makes one "real hungry." Persons in delicate health, after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a few days, find themselves longing for and eating the plainest food with unexpected relish.

Greek Gravel.

The Emmitsburg road from Gettysburg to Greencastle is smoother and better than we ever before saw it; but the other end, all the way to Emmitsburg, is rougher and worse than we remember. Reason: on this end creek gravel is liberally used, whilst the other end gets none. The argument is perfect, and there is no appeal—except to creek gravel.—Compiler.

A Severe Blow.

On Friday last, Clarence, son of Mr. Albert Foreman of this place, who is employed at John Root & Sons' canning house received a blow on the bridge of the nose from a rapidly revolving iron crank attached to the big crane that is used for swinging the heavy crates. The crank slipped from his hands and the blow rendered him insensible; he fell across a steam pipe and severely burned his arm. Nothing serious will result nor will his nose likely be disfigured.—Clarion.

WANTED.—An active man to canvass this section of the county for the sale of a popular household article. Salary paid. Address, W. F. CHILTON, Frederick, Md. Sept 5-8t

Real Estate Transfers.

The following transfers of real estate have taken place in this county, as recorded in the Clerk's office during the past week:

Biser, 1 acre, 2 rods and 28 perches, $25.63.

Beauty Without Paint.

"What makes my skin so dark and muddy? My cheeks were once so smooth and ruddy! I use the best cosmetics made." "Is that a lovely maiden said." "That's not the cure, my charming Miss." The doctor said—"remember this: If you your skin would keep from taint, Discard the powder and the paint." "The proper thing for all such ills Is this," remarked the man of pills: "Enrich the blood and make it pure—In this you'll find the only cure." Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do this without fail. It has no equal. All druggists.

THOUSANDS walk the earth to-day who would be sleeping in its bosom but for the timely use of Down's Elixir. For sale by James A. Elder, Emmitsburg, and A. C. Musselman, Fairfield, Pa.

The Hagerstown fair, the largest in this section of the country, will be held from October the 14th to the 17th, inclusive. Twenty-five races are down for the four days, in addition to exhibitions by the Myrtle Peak combination. See adv.

The Game Law.

According to the new game laws, partridges, pheasants and rabbits may be killed within the limits of Frederick county between November 1 and January 1, for home consumption alone, but snaring and looping pheasants and partridges is prohibited.

To eradicate the poisons which produce fever and ague, take Ayer's Ague Cure. It cures without leaving any injurious effect upon the system, and is the only medicine in existence which may be considered an absolute antidote for malaria.

A TRACTION engine and separator belonging to McClellan Reed fell through the bridge which spans the rail race at Hollywood Paper Mill the other day and was damaged to the extent of about $100 or $150. Mr. Reed will sue the township to recover damages.—Keystone Gazette.

The scholastic course at St. Joseph's Academy, was resumed on September 6, the pupils being fifty in number. Several have come from Alabama, Texas, Massachusetts, Ohio, etc. The class of candidates for graduation is unusually large. A new feature of the Institution is the offer of a gold medal, for proficiency in Mathematics, by Mr. Malloy. Improvements have been made in several of the departments, and additions to the apparatus, notably, fine Geographical and Physiological charts. There is every prospect that the Academy will fully sustain its well-earned reputation for thoroughness in scientific teaching and in training young ladies for Christian and refined society.

Skipped With The Money.

One William Stetelmeyer was entrusted with a check for $202.20, belonging to Mr. Jas. H. Delander, to take to Frederick to have cashed on Friday last. Stetelmeyer got the money and disappeared, nothing having been heard from him since. He was a pal of the half-breed Calanan, lately committed to the penitentiary. Mr. Delander had this money to settle with his gillies and can ill afford to lose the money, besides inconveniencing his workmen; he is a very worthy man and Stetelmeyer had better never get into those people's hands.—Clarion.

Put on the Brakes.

If you find you are going down hill in point of health. Failing strength, impaired digestion and assimilation are the marks of decline. Check these and other indications of premature decay with the grand vitalizer and restraining tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Beginning at the fountain head, the stomach, the Bitters remedies its inefficiency, corrects its errors, and sets it vigorously at work. The digestive organ is thus enabled to thoroughly separate from the food its nutritive principles, which the blood assimilating is enriched. This is the system nourished, and being nourished strengthened, the power to resist wear, a regular habit is also established, and the various functions move once more in their natural and healthful groove. The Bitters, moreover, is a specific for and preventive of malarial complaints, rheumatism, biliousness and kidney troubles.

The fund to erect a monument over the remains of Dr. Higbee, late superintendent of public institution, amounts to $3,346.00. A life-size bust of that gentleman will be placed in the department of public instruction at Harrisburg, and a monument will be placed over his remains in the Emmitsburg cemetery.—Ez.

NEW RULES FOR VOTERS.

Regulations Sent Out by the Secretary of State.

The Secretary of State, as required by the act of General Assembly of 1890, has issued a series of instructions to voters, which will be posted at the different polling places as a guide. They are printed on cardboard, and read as follows:

1. Any person desiring to vote must enter the voting-room and give his name, and residence, if requested, to one of the ballot clerks. If his name is found upon the list of registered voters he must enter the space inside the rail. A ballot clerk shall then give him one ticket, to be marked with initials of the clerk before being given to the voter.

2. After receiving the ballot the voter must retire alone to one of the voting compartments and prepare his ballot by making in the margin a cross-mark (X) opposite the name or emblem of a party, as a vote for all the group of candidates of that party whose names he shall not erase, or make such cross-mark (X) opposite the name of the candidate, or candidates, of his choice for each office to be filled in a blank space provided, and make a cross-mark (X) opposite thereto. If the election be upon a question submitted to the vote of the people, the voter shall indicate his choice by making in the margin a cross-mark (X) opposite the answer or vote he desires to give. A stamp, with a cross-mark (X) thereon, will be provided for the use of the voter. In marking his ballot a voter can use or copy any unofficial sample ballot to assist him in preparing his official ballot, but the sample ballot used must not be of the color or quality of paper of the official ballot, and the voter must make and deposit his ballot without undue delay. Before leaving the compartment the voter must fold his ballot without displaying the X marks, or in the same way as when given; he shall then hand the folded ballot to the judges of election. As soon as his vote is taken he must leave the polling room, and cannot again enter the enclosed space.

3. A voter must not go into any compartment occupied by another, or overlook or converse with any other while engaged in a compartment, nor can he occupy it for more than five minutes if others are waiting.

4. No person shall take or remove any ballot from the polling place before the close of the polls. If a voter spoils a ballot he may obtain others from the ballot clerks, one at a time, not exceeding three in all, upon returning each spoiled one.

5. A voter who is blind, or one who cannot read, or from physical disability is unable to mark his ballot, may apply to the two ballot clerks to assist him in marking the same. A voter of foreign birth who cannot speak English is allowed to bring to the rail one person who speaks English to assist the voter in properly stating and spelling his name and in establishing his residence, and to aid him in correctly understanding questions.

6. A voter must not mark more names than there are persons to be elected; if he does, the ballot will not be counted.

7. Any voter who shall allow his ballot to be seen, with an apparent intention of letting it be known how he is to vote, or who places any distinguishing mark thereon, or any person who shall attempt to interfere with any voter inside the enclosed space, shall be fined not less than $5 or more than $100.

Glass ballot-boxes will be used. All ballots to be used at the election will be printed and distributed at public expense, each ballot to contain the names of all the candidates who have been duly nominated. The names of candidates nominated by each political party shall be grouped together in parallel columns on the ballot and headed by the name of the political party by which the candidates comprising the group were placed in nomination. When a party emblem or device has been added it shall be printed to the left or above the name of the party preceding the party group. There shall be left at the end of the list of candidates for each different office as many blank spaces as there are officers to be voted for, in which the voter may insert in writing or otherwise the name of any person not printed on the ballot for whom he may desire to vote as a candidate for such office.

The Secretary of State is required to prepare and transmit to the supervisors of election, at least thirty days before the first election, sample printed forms of ballots, and also to transmit the cards of instruction mentioned in the foregoing. A record of the number of ballots printed and furnished for each polling-place shall be kept and preserved by the supervisors of election, and the records shall be retained for six months. In order to assist voters, the law requires that, at least four days prior to the day of election, there shall be conspicuously posted in one or more public places in each precinct sample copies of the ballots to be used. The cards of instruction and specimen ballots will also be conspicuously posted about the polling-place on election day.

Shot in the Hand.

Bennet Elder, brakeman on the Emmitsburg railroad received a painful wound in his hand by the accidental discharge of a revolver last Friday. It seems that Bennet was cleaning the car windows at the time, when John Seton came in, and noticing the revolver in a closet, called Bennet's attention to the fact that it was badly rusted, remarking that it was a shame to leave it in that condition. Seton then took the revolver, which is a 44 caliber "Ball Dog," and after examining it said it was so badly rusted he couldn't cock it. Bennet then took it, and almost instantly it was discharged, the bullet passing through his left hand, at the joint of the middle finger. Bennet says "it was all over so quick that he doesn't know how it happened." Dr. R. L. Annan dressed the wound which is getting along nicely.

denly he burst out laughing, and said in his broadest Scotch:

"Did ye see the look o' the auld diel when he caught sight o' the candle? the pouter, Maggie?" But Maggie did not hear him; she had fainted, and the man who had been cheerfully looking death in face for the last half hour now became as frightened as a child when he saw his wife in a fainting fit. "Will she come around, dy'e think?" he asked in a tone of intense anxiety. There was no need to answer him, for Mrs. McVior answered the question herself by sitting up and bursting into tears.

For some time afterward we lived prepared for a siege, but the Indians never made sign againt of attempting to injure us; in fact they became mighty civil, and in the spring, when communication by water had been re-established, we had no difficulty in securing friend Match-ee-ninie, who was safely transported to the far west, where he soon pined away and died. Of the old woman who had done us such service I could gather but little information. I never saw her again; she had completely disappeared. It was whispered that Match-ee-ninie, having found out that she had warned us, quietly made away with her, so that practically she gave her life for mine. Can it therefore be wondered at that I prize her memory, especially as in her I have found through long experience the one solitary exception to the treacherous ingratitude of the North American Indians?

Shortly after these events Mr. McVior received charge of a district on the borders of civilization. Nothing would do but that I should accompany him to his new charge, and so favorably did he report of me to headquarters that I rose rapidly in the service, and ere many years had passed was in charge of a district of my own.—C. C. CARP, Buffalo Express.

A Terraced Mountain.

During the recent visit of Jesse R. Grant and Chas. J. Whipple to Sonora, Mexico, they were much struck with the sight of a terraced mountain. It was located about fifty miles southwest of Magdalena. The mountain is circular in form, about three-quarters of a mile in diameter and terraced from base to peak. The height of the terrace is from ten to twelve feet, and in many places is built of solid masonry. At many other places it is cut out of the solid rock. The roadway is from fifteen to twenty feet in width starting at the base of the mountain and coiling itself spiral-like to the peak of the mountain, which is not less than 1,200 feet higher than the base of the mountain. The post of the construction and cutting out of the solid rock of this terraced road must have been enormous, and the remarkable features of this wonder is the state of its preservation. Here and there masonry has yielded to the crumbling influences of time, but these are exceptions.

At the base of this terraced mountain is a mighty rock, which has the appearance of having been hewn out of a solid rock, and weighs 100 tons or more. It is placed at the mouth of what appears to be the entrance to this terraced mountain. Here another quarry is suggested. Does this door to the mountain open the way to mineral treasure or to the shrine of ancient religious devotees? Again, does the terraced road which coils itself to the peak of the mountain lead to the shrine of the ancient vestal virgin who kept eternal watch on the sacred fire which was never suffered to die?

One thing is certain, there is a wide field for those near at home who wander far into Egypt and Persia to study the mysteries of the hidden past.—Tucson Sun.

A Beer Palace for the World's Fair.

One of the big features of the World's fair will be furnished by Milwaukee, provided the plans now being talked of are carried out. It will be a beer palace, modeled somewhat after the corn palace of Sioux City and the ice palace of St. Paul. The imposing structure will be built entirely of beer kegs, casks, bottles and other appurtenances of the beer industry. The plan is to have all the Milwaukee brewers contribute to the affair. Inside this immense structure there will be a number of interesting exhibits.

AFTER RATTLESNAKES.

Two Young Men Hunt Them for Their Oil. W. Frank Gaul and Frank L'Hommedieu, two young men who have their habitat in Somerset, Pa., had been told that rattlesnake oil was worth $2 an ounce. They bought two double-barreled shotguns and a can of headlight oil, with appropriate cartridges loaded with No. 8 shot.

The morning was auspicious and the oak woods were full of gray squirrels. The two Franks had agreed to make their devoir among the squirrels and then let slip the dogs of war on the "rattlers." The acorns are fast ripening and the laziest gunner among the hills of Somerset needs only plenty of patience and abundant cartridges and the long-tailed rodents fall an easy prey to the adventurous gunner. By high noon the two gunners had bagged fifteen gray squirrels, and hanging their game on a hickory limb they started, armed with the tin can containing headlight oil, for the den of the rattlesnakes.

One mile from the beautiful town of Somerset, among the foothills, the granite formation affords a congenial home for the rattlesnake. Here they bask in the sunshine and fall an easy prey to the adventurous seeker after rattlesnake oil.

Cautiously approaching the shelving rock L'Hommedieu discovered half a dozen rattlers sound asleep in the sun. It took only a few moments to cut a long stick from a hickory tree, forked at the end and heavy at the other. With the fork end down each rattlesnake was pinned to the earth and held there by L'Hommedieu while Gaul dispatched the snake with a large bowie-knife he carried in his belt. The six snakes were soon hors du combat.

Gaul proposed, as an easy method to rout out the snakes, that the headlight oil should be poured down the crevices leading to the nesting-place of the rattlesnakes.

At an inviting point in the rock L'Hommedieu poured out the contents of the oil can and lightning a box of matches, sent them down where the rattlesnakes dwelt.

There was an instant commotion down in the rattlesnakes' den. The blazing oil fired, scorched the rattlers, who, writhing in pain, struck out for the surface of the earth. Here Gaul dispatched the snakes, catching them by the neck with his forked stick as they appeared on the burning rock like a soul writhing in pain.

Twenty-five snakes were killed in less time than it takes to tell the story. The odor was sickening, and L'Hommedieu was so affected by the smell of the burning snakes that he took to his bed on reaching his home in Somerset, and has since been under a doctor's care.

The first thing the young man did after killing the snakes as they were driven out from their rocky fastnesses was to cut off their heads and string them up to a convenient rock and catch the oil in the now empty headlight can. Out of the entire capture, after saving the rattles, Gaul and L'Hommedieu realized nearly a quart of essential oil, and they received from a Somerset druggist the sum of $50 for less than a quart of rattlesnake oil, with the promise of a like sum for every quart of oil brought to his store before next Christmas.

Eminent physicians allege that the oil of rattlesnakes cures rheumatism, lumbago, cramps and all pains of a sciotic nature.—Philadelphia Times.

Origin of Leprosy.

"There is much ignorance respecting leprosy, and a great deal of nonsense talked about it," said Dr. Charles A. Morris, a Wisconsin Board of Health official. "The popular belief is that it is confined to the Chinese, or comes from the flowery kingdom," he continued. "This is absolutely false. It is as old as history, and, though dying out, is still found in many places. It appeared in this country in sixteenth century, among the French settlers of what is now Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Maine and Lower Eastern Canada, and has been there ever since. There are two lazaretos still in operation in this vast district. There must have been a leprosy strain in this old French blood, or else there must have been a number of undeveloped lepers from the Lazaretto districts of France, among the emigrants who came over here to settle the Bourbon fiefs in the new world, because, wherever they have gone since their coming here, the disease has appeared, although in sporadic cases. Thus it has been found among the 'cujuns' of Southern Louisiana, the 'kanucks' of Maine and New Hampshire and the French communities of Toronto and West Canada.

"The next appearance of the disease, as far as races are concerned, was among the Scandinavian immigrants, especially those from the marshy districts of Denmark and the sterile northern provinces of Sweden and Norway. It will probably astonish most people to learn that, next to the Sandwich Islands, these two Norse kingdoms have more leprosy to the square mile than any other county on the face of the globe.

"Out in a certain part of the West we have a very large proportion of Scandinavians to the population, and of the cases of leprosy found thus far, every one has belonged to that nationality.

"The Sandwich Islander, the African coast native and Brazilians are likewise afflicted. The first-named, the Hawaiian, has the malady in its worst form; the second, in its mildest, and the last occupies a happy or unhappy medium.

"The diseases in Brazil seem to occur chiefly where there has been an intermingling of the three races—white, red and black. Down there it is divided into two kinds—white leprosy and black leprosy. The former is slow and lethargic, while the latter acts with the rapidity and certainty of a malignant cancer.

"Latest in time and least numerous is Chinese leprosy, which is like the so-called 'white' variety of the Amazon. Despite the exaggerations of Chinese, it has never amounted to anything in this country as compared with that of other races.

"The number of cases stands in about the following ratio: French Canadian, 10; Scandinavian, 43; African, 4; unclassified, 22; Sandwich Islanders, 1; Chinese, 1; Brazilian, 1. As to the danger from the disease, it is practically nothing.

"The malady is contagious in a certain sense. That is to say, if you eat, drink and sleep with a leper for a long time, anywhere from six months to a year, you may contract the disease yourself or you may not. The chances of catching it under these special conditions are not one in a hundred of the hundreds of physicians, nurses and attendants in this country and Canada who have treated patients of this class, not one has fallen a victim. The malady seems a disorder of the blood, when the latter has reached its most impoverished condition. It is hereditary, and usually destroys the family in which it runs after some three or four generations. If the race does not become extinct in that period the disease reappears, and apparently for good. There is no reason for apprehension in regard to its spread. The chances of a person having it are less than being struck by lightning, and a hundred times less than having pneumonia or consumption."

A FRENCH scientist, Victor Mennier, has calculated, after careful inquiries, that American dentists insert about $450,000 worth of gold annually into the teeth of their customers. The Scientific American says that, making allowances for the increase of population, in less than a hundred years American cemeteries will contain a larger amount of gold than now exists in France.

We might boast of our native cyclones, but unfortunately they leave nothing to blow about.

The idea of utilizing electricity for canal boat propulsion is now assuming practical shape. A boat containing an electric motor of special design has been constructed, and the current will be supplied by trolleys, as in the overhead system now so extensively used for street railways.

JAMES MOSSEY, a veteran of the war, died a few days ago at Nebraska City. A few years ago he applied for a pension on account of a wound he received at Fort Donelson. His application was rejected, as no mark or wound could be found on his head, where he claimed to have been shot. After his death a post-mortem was held and a large buckshot was found imbedded in his brain.

Scratching Matches on the Sky.

It was evening, and a little Brooklyn boy stood at a window with his face flattened against the pane. He was watching a slowly gathering storm, Distended, ominous looking wind clouds and thunder heads went bowling through space, while lightning flashes illumined the murky aqueous back ground. For some time the electrical broadsides continued, but still the little boy was an interested spectator. Darkness settled upon the scene, but only to make the lightning more vivid by contrast. The little boy's mother entered the room. Finding him intently gazing out of the window she asked:—

"Well, Willie, what do you see?"

At that instant there was a vivid flash of lightning, quickly followed by a loud clap of thunder.

"Oh, mamma!" Willie exclaimed, "as if he had solved a difficult problem after long study, 'I dees Dod is getting ready to light his lamps, 'cause He's scratching matches on the sky.'"

It was such a pretty conceit that his mother did not have the heart to disabuse his mind of the idea, and for some little time he was permitted to fancy that the stars were God's means of illuminating the heavens, and that lightning was the result of his striking matches.

Another little fellow, walking along the street with his sister one day met a sprinkling cart. It was the first he had ever seen.

"What do you think of that George?"

"Why," he replied, "I fink dat's one of Dod's rain wagons."

And when his sister laughed the little man felt hurt and burst into a storm of tears.
