MARCH DAYS.

The world to-day is a nun in gray
And the wind is her wailing prayer
To God, to give her a soul like May,
Flower-sweet, white and fair.

Still as the lake at even is the air;
The heavens are gloomed; I mark
not anywhere
A hopeful sign hung up by plain or hill;
Only the etched brown trees and barren fields are there.

How like a madman's dream the thought of June!
Shall this warped pipe ere swell with some soft tune
That calls for liquid stops and languorous
skill,
The piper lying prone beneath a Summer
moon?

The mystery
And magic of the Spring!
It seizes on this bleak and sullen thing
Called March, and see!
Bland skies, faint odors as of slumbering
flowers,
Faint bird song in the lowers,
A soft south wind, and, cradled in the wood,

As sweet as womanhood,
As shy as any maiden lured by love,
The dimly-flushed arbutus bloom above
The harsh earth soon will peer,
And April airs be here!

MY SUPERNATURAL AUTOBIOGRAPHY,

IN WHICH ARE RELATED SOME TRUE STORIES OF STRANGE EVENTS.

BY JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

From The Baltimore Sunday News.

The proverb, "Yield an inch and lose an ell," has no better illustration than this supernatural business. Once admit the possibility of seeing anything outside of the physical plane, and there is no logical halting-place for you thenceforth. For the physical senses are all one; they are modifications or refinements of the sense of touch. If, then, you can see a spirit, what is to prevent you from also touching it, hearing it, tasting and smelling it? Nor does it help much to say that it is your spiritual eye that is opened. The impression of sight on the mind is the same; and if of sight, then of the other senses also. The point is, you perceive something; whether with the physical or the metaphysical class of perceptive faculties may be interesting to philosophers, but the results to you are practically the same.

Three young American artists found themselves together in India the other day and went to see the performance of an Indian juggler. There is no limit to what these men seem able to do. This juggler's tools were simple. He was all but naked, and he had a strip of carpet. He stood in an open, level place out of doors, surrounded by a crowd of some 200 people. He spread out his carpet on the ground, made incantations over it; it began to move and act as if something were underneath, and presently out crawled a boy. The juggler now appeared to have a piece of rope in his hand; he coiled and swung it upwards; it caught in empty space and hung dangling down to within a couple of feet of the ground. The boy climbed up the rope and at a certain height disappeared. The juggler called up to him and a dialogue ensued between him and the invisible boy. The invisible boy became sassy, the juggler angry. At length the juggler climbed the rope with a knife between his teeth and vanished like the boy, leaving nothing but the rope dangling down from the infinite. But in a moment down out of the air fell one of the boy's legs, out off close to the body, then the other leg, the arms, the body, and finally the head. Next reappeared the murderous juggler, descending hand under hand. He laid the body and the several limbs in position, made more incantations, covered the body with the carpet; the carpet gradually flattened out, and at the same moment the boy, alive and well, appeared pushing his way through the crowd from the outside.

Many have seen, more have heard of this marvel; it is impossible, of course, and yet all the audience see it. The then American artists made a step further. Two of them made rapid sketches of the performance, at successive stages; the other kept his Kodak camera diligently at work, and took a dozen or more instantaneous negatives. The two sketches had substantially the same results. Then the photographer developed his negatives. They showed the audience, craning their heads forward in attitudes of curiosity, awe and horror; staring upwards, staring downwards, according to the locality of the action. They showed the juggler gesticulating, haranguing, pointing here and there; but they showed no boy, no rope, no knife, no humping up of the carpet, no climbing, no vanishing, no butchered limbs—nothing, in a word, but the naked juggler and the bit of carpet. That was the account the camera gave of the transaction. What, then, are we to say of all the things the audience saw and the two artists sketched. The obvious explanation would be, everybody was hypnotized. But is that explanation final and satisfactory?

An old and dear friend of mine was sitting one night in his study, with the door open into an adjoining room. A student-lamp was on the table beside him; the other room had no light in it, save what came through the door. By and by he became aware that some one was pacing up and down in the further room. No one could have got there except by passing through the study, and no one had passed.

As the figure appeared and reappeared, crossing the space revealed by the open door, my friend noticed something familiar in his gait, in the downward pose of the head, in the hands thrust deep into the pockets; and then, as the man turned, he caught sight of his face. It was his own! The figure was his own doppelganger, or double.

After watching him for several minutes, my friend arose cautiously, and went into the other room, lamp in hand. Nobody was there.

This, of course, was pure hallucination. A man does not hypnotize himself.

Now let us see which of these hypotheses will best solve a little experience of my own.

My wife and I were staying at the country-house of some friends of ours. At 4 o'clock on a certain Sunday afternoon in July I was sitting in the drawing-room by an open window. I had been sitting there ever since we finished luncheon, at 2 o'clock, absorbed in a volume of Emerson's "Conduct of Life." The other persons in the house were my wife and the two grown-up daughters of our hosts. The latter had gone out driving and the servants had a holiday.

The drawing-room where I sat was on the western side of the house and on the ground floor. Beneath my window was a broad flower-bed. On the opposite side of the room was a door leading into the entrance hall; the staircase to the upper floor descended close to the outside of this door, on the left as you went out. The door was wide open, and I was obviously conscious of the voices of the young ladies upstairs talking together in one of the upper rooms.

The upstairs arrangement was as follows: The bedroom occupied by my wife and myself was directly over the drawing-room. On the other side of the passage was the bedroom of the young ladies of the house. The doors of the two rooms were opposite each other. My wife and the two girls were sitting in the latter's room, and the doors of both rooms were open.

Such is the simple summary of the tale. If you have got it clear in your mind, you are ready to hear what happened.

As I sat reading, I heard a light step and the rustle of a dress descending the stairs. "It is not my wife's step," thought I, "it is one of the girls." Half way down the stairs she paused an instant and spoke. What she said I could not distinguish, but I recognized the voice as Lilly's (we will say), and sure enough, the next moment Lilly came into the room.

She came in humming to herself and evidently supposing the room to be empty. She had got to the middle of the floor before she caught sight of me in the window-seat. She gave a slight, startled exclamation and stopped, staring at me.

It is natural to be startled, when you suddenly find you are not alone. But why this fixedness of gaze, and dilatation of the eyes? Surely, Lilly was familiar enough with my outward aspect not to be amazed at detecting me in a place where there was reason to suppose I might be. "What's the matter?" said I.

"How did you get here?" returned Lilly, short of breath, and seeming much disturbed.

"I've been here ever since lunch," I replied; "right in this window."

She paused a moment and then said, "I just met you as I was coming down the stairs. You were going up. You brushed right by me. Why, I spoke to you! You didn't answer, though; you just went right on up."

When I saw that she was in earnest, and was becoming momentarily more agitated, I came to the only rational conclusion possible, namely: That some unauthorized person had got into the house. This person had met her on the stairs; she had supposed it must be myself, and he had profited by her mistake. It was true that the staircase was quite light, there being a window on the landing above, and that the house door below, and that 4 o'clock of a Sunday afternoon was an odd time for a burglar to enter a house visibly occupied by wide-awake people. Nevertheless, Lilly had seen somebody and it was high time to find out who he was and what he was after.

Accordingly, I laid down my book and went upstairs, with Lilly bobbing behind me. But when I reached the upper passage or hall, a new surprise awaited me. My wife and the other daughter of the home were still sitting in the bedroom, and, when they saw me in the hall, they, too, uttered simultaneously an exclamation of astonishment. They, too, demanded to know how I came there. In reply to my questions they said that they had just heard some one go into the bedroom opposite—my wife's and mine. Were they sure it was I? They had not the slightest doubt on the subject. They had seen my face, my dress and my gait. It was I and no one else. How then could I be in two places at once?

It was my conviction that no such self-duplication was possible. But since the mysterious person, whoever he was, had entered our room, and had not come out again; and since there was no means of exit from that room except by that door I was satisfied that the person in question was there; and I followed him in the full expectation of finding myself immediately engaged in a hand to hand conflict with either a burglar, a tramp or a lunatic. With a heroism which I still admire, I crossed the threshold. The room was not large, and I took in every part of it with a glance. There was no living thing in it. There was nobody under the bed, nor in the closet. The windows were shut, but I opened one of them and looked out. If anybody had jumped down, he must (after shutting the window behind him) have jumped into the middle of the flower bed just outside the drawing-room window at which I had been seated. But no traces of such a leap were to be seen.

Here, then, was a well authenticated case of doppel ganger. Had the apparition been seen by Lilly only, it would have passed as a simple but unusually successful instance of hallucination. But it had been seen, a moment after, and quite indisputably, by two other persons, who never entertained so much as a passing doubt as to its identity, until I appeared in flesh and blood. They saw the apparition at the instant that Lilly, having passed it and addressed it on the stairs, had come into the drawing-room and beheld me, in propria persona, seated reading Emerson in the window.

How to account for this? Was Lilly's spiritual sight opened? If so is it not singular that the spiritual sight of the other two ladies should have been opened at the same time? And how came the spirit of a living, and healthy man to be stalking about in that manner? I was not in a trance; I was not even asleep, or sleepy. I was absorbed in my book, and whatever mental or spiritual faculties I possessed were thereto directed. By what right did I become thus divorced from myself?

I have never found out about this, and no one I have asked has been able to enlighten me. Since then, my double has been seen twice; once in New York and once in England; and there have been rumors not fully confirmed of its appearance at other times and places. I am totally destitute of the mediumistic faculty. There is nothing abnormal about me, physically or mentally. I have never felt the worse for the detachment of this shadow, nor has it heralded any misfortune to me or mine. There is no moral to the story, therefore. But that does not make it any the less inexplicable. Of course, if one were a theosophist, one would have much to say about the distinctions of Rupa, Prana, Linga, Shariya, Kama Rupa, Manas, Buddhi and Atma. But I am not a theosophist, though I have given myself a chance to become one; and, besides, words are not explanations.

What a Horse Would Say if He Could Speak.

Don't hitch me to an iron post or railing when the mercury is below freezing. I need the skin on my tongue.

Don't leave me hitched in my stall at night with a big cob right where I must lie down. I am tied and can't select a smooth place.

Don't compel me to eat more salt than I want by mixing it with my oats. I know better than any other animal how much I need.

Don't think because I go free under the whip I don't get tired. You would move up if under the whip.

Don't think because I am a horse that iron weeds and briars won't hurt my hay.

Don't whip me when I frighten along the roads, or I will expect it next time and may be make trouble.

Don't trot me up hill, for I have to carry you and the buggy and myself too. Try it yourself some time. Run up hill with a big load.

Don't keep my stable very dark, for when I go out into the light my eyes are injured, especially if snow be on the ground.

Don't say whoa unless you mean it. Teach me to stop at the word. It may check me if the lines break, and save a runaway and smash up.

Don't make me drink ice cold water, nor put a frosty bit in my mouth. Warm the bit by holding it a half minute against my body.

Don't forget to file my teeth when they get jagged and I cannot chew my food. When I get lean, it is a sign my teeth want filing.

Don't ask me to "back" with blinds on. I am afraid to.

Don't run me down a steep hill, for if anything should give way, I might break your neck.

Don't put on my blind bridle so that it irritates my eye, or so leave my forelock that it will be in my eyes.

Don't be so careless of my harness as to find a great sore on me before you attend to it.

Don't lend me to some blockhead that has less sense than I have.

Don't forget the old book that is a friend of all the oppressed, that says: "A merciful man is merciful to his beast."—Farm Journal.

The work of repairing the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal is rapidly being pushed forward. It is estimated that 1,000 men are at work along the route, and it is expected to have the canal restored as far as Williamsport by May 15, and with good weather the entire route will be completed by July 1. The work of repairing boats has also been begun. Mertens & Co., at Cumberland, are working a large force of men. Besides repair work, contracts have been given out for new boats. The outlook is said to be promising for an active trade.—Sun.

An atrocious murder was committed in Cecil county early on Monday morning by burglars who had entered the residence of J. Mr. Ausherman has sold his farm of sixty acres, about two miles southwest of Middletown, to singleton E. Ramsburg for $100 per acre. Elder Ausherman will immediately begin the erection of a dwelling and other buildings on the land.

Read the list of properties for sale by The North End Real Estate Agency, which appears in another column. If you don't see any to suit you write them, telling what you want, and no doubt they will be able to secure the same for you.

INCREASE the appetite by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They cause the stomach, liver and bowels to perform their functions properly, do not debilitate, by excessive stimulation, and are not irritating in their action. As an after-dinner pill they are unequalled.

MR. E. L. FRIZELL's huckster team had a lively run out the west end of town yesterday morning. The horses which were left standing unhitched in front of the Emmit House, suddenly started off in a dead run towards Waynesboro. The huckster wagon got a lively shaking up but nothing was broken.

Train Wreckers.

An attempt was made on Saturday morning to wreck the train on the Western Extension of the W. M. R. R. due here at 9.13. Near the old Maria furnace a tie was placed across the track and a little further on an immense stone. These obstructions were put around a curve where they could not be seen until the train would be nearly upon them, and where it would be difficult to stop, owing to the grade. At that point there is a high embankment and if the train had struck the obstructions serious results would have followed. Fortunately the track walker discovered the obstructions in time to warn the train and avoid the accident.

Suspicion is directed toward a certain person and the matter has been placed in the hands of the police. In the meantime precautions are being taken to prevent a recurrence of a like attempt.—Gettysburg Star and Sentinel.

The Spring Medicine.

The popularity which Hood's Sarsaparilla has gained as a spring medicine is wonderful. It possesses just those elements of health-giving, blood-purifying and appetite-restoring which everybody seems to need at this season. Do not continue in a dull, tired, unsatisfactory condition when you may be so much benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood and makes the weak strong.

Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. S. Gitt, of New Oxford, celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage on March 31st, at the residence of their daughter, Mrs. F. G. Stark, in Hanover. The event was one of much enjoyment to all present, a number of friends and acquaintances of the venerable couple being present from various parts of the State, to express their congratulations and good wishes. In early life Mr. Gitt was engaged in the printing business but for the past 40 years has devoted most of his time to civil engineering, having surveyed 44 railroads. In all these years he has not lost his interest in Newspapers and has been the industrious correspondent of a considerable number.

Owing to the presence of the gripe in the West their trip to that section has been delayed, but they hope soon to visit their daughter, Mrs. Wm. Smyser, at Topeka, Kansas, where they had planned to have their wedding celebration.—Compiler.

DEATH OF MRS. EUGENE L. ROWE.

"There's nothing terrible in death! 'Tis but to lay our robes away, And sleep at night, without a breath, To break again the ties of clay."

The death of Mrs. Eugene L. Rowe was such a quiet peaceful passing away, from the pain and suffering of that world to the rest and peace of that home where sorrow is unknown, that the loving friends who watched so anxiously beside her, could scarcely tell when breathing ceased and the freed spirit left its earthly tenement.

Mrs. Rowe was the youngest daughter of Dr. James W. Eichelberger, Sr., of Emmitsburg, and spent her entire life in this, her native place.

Her life and character from early childhood were marked by a devotion to duty and an active energy in the promotion of everything calculated to benefit her friends or the church to which she belonged as well as the general good of all who came within her influence.

She had been a devoted member of the Lutheran church from early youth and never wearied of work in its behalf.

She was possessed of marked musical ability and for years acted as organist of the church as well as leader of the choir.

For more than two years Mrs. Rowe had been an invalid, at times suffering intensely, but her active interest in her church, her household and the welfare of her friends was unflinching throughout and when, surrounded by husband, father, sisters and brothers she calmly closed her eyes on all things earthly, their sorrowing hearts could but feel that she had indeed entered into rest.

Mrs. Rowe leaves a husband, an aged father, two sisters and two brothers to mourn her loss, which will also be deeply felt by a large circle of friends as well as by the church for whose interests she always worked so faithfully.

Mrs. Rowe's funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at one o'clock, from the Lutheran Church.

Large Edition.

The issue of the CHRONICLE this week is 2,600 copies, which being rather heavy for our facilities, was printed at the office of the Daily and Weekly Mail, at Hagerstown. While we are fully aware that such an edition is seldom if ever reached by any Frederick county newspaper, the same has been gotten out without disturbing the even tenor of our business, everything being done at home, as usual, except the presswork for which as we wanted a first class job, we went to a strictly first class printing office, and the readers can be the judges as to the same. We also thank those connected with the work in the Mail office for their promptness and careful execution of the same.

Success-fal Dairying.

Mrs. Wm. J. Gilson of "Cedar Grove" farm near town sent us the following statement of the proceeds of their dairy for the past year, being the product of thirteen cows and two heifers from April 1st, 1890 to April 1st, 1891. Amount of butter churned, 3,016 lbs.; Amount of butter sold, 2,716 lbs. Net proceeds from amount sold $655.09.

Mrs. Gilson has our thanks for a print of her delicious creamer butter, which is surely very fine. With a statement like the above before them, who can say that dairy farming can not be made to pay if conducted rightly.

A Good Move.

The people of Emmitsburg district are organizing a league to secure tax reforms. The league, as its purpose is understood, will seek to make mortgages, corporations, trusts, syndicates, combines and individuals pay an equal and proper share of taxes.

The above from a recent issue of the Baltimore Sun, we trust is correct, and the projectors will have our hearty support. We regret, however, that the meetings have not been reported for the columns of the CHRONICLE, and hope that hereafter we may have a chance to secure the same.

To the West via B. and O. R. R.

The B. and O. is the only line running solid vestibule trains from Wilmington and Baltimore to Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis. Parties desiring to visit the West or to locate there permanently would do well before purchasing their tickets to communicate with D. D. Courtney, Traveling Passenger Agent, B. & O. R. R., Reading, Pa., or D. R. R., Baltimore.

The Presbyterian congregations at Taneytown and Piney Creek, have extended a call to Rev. Pedro Riecco, until recently a student at Princeton Theological Seminary. The call, it is understood, has been accepted.

Corporation Election.

The election for burgess and commissioners of Emmitsburg occurs on Monday, May the 4th. Now is the time for those favoring permanent improvements to do their best work. Don't postpone the nominations until Saturday night preceding the election as has so often been the case.

List of Letters.

The following letters remain in the Post Office, Emmitsburg, Md., April 13, 1891. Persons calling will please say advertised, otherwise they may not receive them:

His 400th Visit.

Dr. Geo. S. Fouke, dentist, of Westminster, will make his 400th visit to Emmitsburg, next Wednesday, April 22nd. For forty years Dr. Fouke has been making professional visits to our town at regular intervals, and he has many warm friends here. Call to see him promptly on either Wednesday or Thursday.

Last Saturday Mr. John D. Keilholz of Rocky Ridge drove to town and stopped in front of I. S. Annan & Bro's Store, leaving the horses unhitched, when a sudden clap of thunder scared them and caused a runaway. The horses wheeled around and ran down the pike to the railroad station where they were stopped. The only damage done was the breaking of the wagon tongue.

Real Estate Sold.

The Warehouse Property at Mechanicstown was sold on Monday to Mr. George W. Stocksford for $5,200, including an exchange of other real estate. This sale was effected through the North End Real Estate Agency, Emmitsburg and Mechanicstown. If you have property to sell place the same in the hands of this Agency and it is sure to go.

Mr. S. D. McGinnis recently of Fremont, Neb., rented the Black Mill property near Graceham and took possession of it on the 1st. Mr. Mc. thinks there is no State like Maryland.

Lutheran Communion.

The Holy Communion was administered to about three hundred persons at the Lutheran Church last Sunday morning and twenty members were received into the Church; fifteen by confirmation, three by certificate, one by baptism and one by renewal of profession of faith. This service was to have been held on Easter, but the heavy snow at that time caused it to be postponed until Sunday last. Next Sunday, the 19th inst., the Lutheran Church will be closed, morning and evening, owing to the absence of the pastor, Rev. Luther DeYoe.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT ITEMS.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT.—The good citizens of this community have reason to rejoice in the fact that Mr. Valentine Gilbert has, for the present at least, abandoned his idea of making Baltimore his residence. He last week moved into the house leased of Dr. I. N. Snively, situated about equal distance between the Summit and Monterey Springs. Mr. Gilbert is an old-time resident and one of the solid men of this section who could not well be spared. Besides being an enterprising and an entertaining gentleman, Mr. Gilbert's presence in the neighborhood will have a restraining effect upon certain cantankerous individuals who at brief intervals manifest a disposition to get into the bit and out of the traces.

Colonel Andrew J. McGonigle, U. S. A., Major Randolph Norwood, U. S. A., Hon. David McConaghy, Gettysburg, and Mrs. Martin Hawley, of Baltimore, were registered at the Clermont last Monday.

The Century Magazine, which for quite a period has enjoyed an enviable reputation for veracity, appears to have made a bad break during the present year. The "Talleyrand Memoirs" have been, both here and in Europe, pronounced fictitious. Captain Bourke's paper, "General Crook in the Indian Country," is conspicuous for its lack of truth, and Mr. W. R. Holloway—private Secretary to Gov. Morton, of Indiana, during the War—in speaking of the Camp Morton paper in the April number of the Century is quoted as saying: "Every material statement in the article is false."

Alumni Banquet.

Matters relating to the banquet of the Alumni Association of Mt. St. Mary's College, to be held at the Metropolitan Hotel, New York, on April 20th, are progressing very satisfactorily. The committee reports that Hon. Chauncey Depew has positively accepted an invitation to be present and will respond to the toast "The Influence of American Collegians." Rev. P. L. Duffy, of Charleston, S. C., will respond to the toast "The Old Mountain," and Hon. Edward J. Dunphy to "The Ladies." There will be a large number present, as the tickets are being taken rapidly. The Cardinal, owing to his intended southern trip, has sent his regrets.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

Wheat was bringing $1.05 at the station last Friday; corn 68 cents. Our farmers were busy plowing for oats last week. None has been sowed as yet.

Mr. Samuel Grove, of near Littlestown, with his son and daughter, are visiting this place.

Mr. Sunheimer, cattle dealer of Baltimore, has been in our country every week for some time past.

Mrs. F. Shully, of near Fairfield, is visiting at Fountain Dale, the guest of her niece, Mrs. D. B. Martin.

Mrs. Joanna White, an aged lady who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Reed, is very ill with the gripe.

Mrs. Hetty Baker, of this place has been away from home for several weeks, helping her neighbors to move. However she is well.

Don't forget the excursion from Fairfield to Baltimore, on the 23d of April. Train will leave Fairfield at 7:03 a. m., and returning leave Hillen Station, Baltimore, at 6:55 p. m.

Mr. Brockley, of Hanover, took Mr. Samuel Grove's twenty head of fat cattle last Tuesday. They were "daisies." Mr. Clark Marshall also sent his cattle away the same day.

Mr. J. N. Sepler, who conducts the Virginia Mills, is doing a good business. He makes good flour and has plenty of sawing to do. By the way, Jimmy is a pretty nice fellow.

While on the streets of Fairfield the other day your correspondent heard the people say, "he is coming," and to his inquiry as to who was coming? was the reply, "yes, he is coming, Mr. M. C. Dotterer, of Emmitsburg, who drives that blooded, spirited grey in the bread wagon. He always brings such good bread, pretzels, rolls, &c." Mr. Dotterer sold a loaf of graham bread to a man and then drove out to the station. On his return the man had eaten the whole loaf and told him to bring him some more the next time he came up. That man is evidently a good eater.

Protect Your Health.

Cold and moisture combined have a torporing effect upon the bodily organs, and the digestive and secretory processes are apt to be more tardily performed in winter than in the fall. The same is true, also, of the excretory functions. The bowels are often sluggish, and the pores of the skin throw off but little waste matter at this season. The system, therefore, requires opening up a little, and also purifying and regulating, and the safest, surest and most thorough and alternative that can be used for these purposes is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Persons who wish to escape the rheumatic twinges, the dyspeptic agonies, the painful disturbances of the bowels, the bilious attacks, and the nervous visitations, so common at this time of the year, will do well to reinforce their systems with this renowned vegetable stomachic in conjunction. It improves the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cheers the spirits, and renovates the whole physique.

DIED.

ROWE.—Entered into rest at fifteen minutes before nine o'clock, on Wednesday evening, April 15, 1891, in Emmitsburg, Mrs. Anna Margaret E. Rowe, beloved wife of Eugene L. Rowe, Esq., and youngest daughter of Dr. J. W. Eichelberger, Sr.

When The Face

Is constantly covered with eruptions, the need of a blood-purifier is plainly indicated. Washes and external applications are of no avail. The poison must be thoroughly eliminated from the system by stimulating the action of the liver and kidneys, which organs have become sluggish and inoperative, thereby throwing upon the skin, the untoward work of cleansing the system of its impurities. What is needed is Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best of blood medicines.

THE IDIOT'S DEVOTION.

On a glorious Summer night, as the harvest moon shed its radiance over lake and meadow and woodland and threw around the fine old mansion of the Berkley family, near the "Hawk's Nest"—that grand pillar of rock 1,000 feet high—a weird grandeur, the young and haughty mistress of the house paced up and down her apartment with hurried, anxious and restless step.

"It drives me mad," she said stamping the floor with rage. "I fear I am losing my senses; and to think that I should be devoured by jealousy, and all caused by one who was born to be my slave—who would never have been anything better than a servant were it not for my kindness and condescension! The torture is too great to be borne!" she continued, burying her face in her hands.

"My humiliation is complete. If Leonard really loves her, then death would be sweet to me, as life in such circumstances can give me nothing but bitterness?"

Conclusive sobs burst upon her in a torrent. They shook her frame, and for once this proud spirited woman gave her embittered feelings full vent.

The crimson velvet curtain which screened the open window was gently drawn aside while yet Lucy Berkeley recited her anguish and her fears.

A strange man who had heard all she said entered her room from the balcony, and stood uncovered before her. Small in stature, with long hairy, powerful arms, and an unshapely body, he gazed at the lady with a look of miserable vacancy. This was a harmless idiot, who had grown up amongst the servants of the establishment, and was allowed to roam about the house with almost unlimited freedom.

He had been discovered in Mrs. Berkeley's garden, when only a couple of years old and had well-nigh perished there of cold and hunger.

Naturally charitable, Lucy Berkeley took compassion on the hapless unfortunate, and gave orders that he should be brought up by the gardener's wife.

No one ever claimed the boy. Nor was the slightest clever obtained as to who he was or where he came from—He was simply a pauper whom nobody owned.

As he grew up Rufus—for such he was called by accident—it became very apparent, was the merest idiot. He could be taught no letters, yet he made himself useful in more ways than one in the house and garden.

Of one sentiment only did he seem capable, and that was to idolize Lucy Berkeley. To her he devoted himself entirely, as a dog does to his master. A kind word from her would send him into fits of glee for hours. He had not intelligence enough to anticipate her wishes, but it gave him positive delight to execute her orders.

This devotion touched the heart of the sensitive Miss Berkeley, the more that she was often disgusted with the mercenary objects and motives of her dependants.

His appearance, however, created now a sudden feeling of surprise. Hatred, rage and grief were upon his face unmistakably, but most curiously expressed.

Rufus stood silently before her for a moment, not daring to approach until she spoke.

"What is the matter, Rufus? I wish to be alone," she said.

For all answer he approached her and hissed rather than spoke, "Come! see! She is with him!" And the idiot boy pointed to the open window and drew aside the curtain, so that Miss Berkeley might pass through to the balcony. The words of the simpleton aroused her curiosity. She cast a searching glance over the gardens which surrounded the house and in a moment the object of his hate became apparent. The clear moonlight showed her two figures walking arm in arm through a distant avenue shaded by the fine old trees.

her! She is bad! She makes you weep!"

Miss Berkeley did not answer, but her gaze remained fixed on the faithless pair who were coquetting in the garden. They seemed absorbed in each other, and were engaged in earnest conversation.

"You would be happy if she was far away, where he could never see her again!" hissed Rufus.

"Yes, if it were possible," said Miss Berkeley, half to herself. Then in a louder tone: "But if he loves her, he would follow her to the end of the earth. How false and treacherous he is! Does he think my pride can brook this?"

Then turning to the idiot, she said, in a tone of command, waving him off with her hand. "Leave me now, Rufus, and see no one comes near me again this evening."

The flames of dark, burning jealousy were fanned into a blaze within the disappointed woman's heart, and she was in tears for some hours upon the couch in her boudoir.

The next morning, as the gardener of the Berkley family made his usual rounds in the gardens and plantations, he saw lying upon a grassy bank the lifeless form of Clara Martin.

There she lay, stiff and cold in death.

A curiously shaped dagger was lying beside her. It was of foreign workmanship, and was apparently the weapon with which the deed had been committed.

A shudder ran through the gardener; his face grew white as that of the dead girl near him when he recognized the weapon as one he had seen in Miss Berkeley's cabinet of curiosities.

How came it there?

It was the last day of a celebrated trila in York, and crowds flocked to hear the decision which might condemn the heiress of one of the proudest families to dark, dreary, lifelong imprisonment, perhaps to death. Few dared to hope that her innocence would be proved, for circumstantial evidence of the strongest character pointed to Lucy Berkeley as guilty of killing her ill-fated companion.

One alone stood by her, and from the first testified his belief in her innocence. It was the lover whom she believed false and faithless. Great was her joy in her trouble to hear from Leonard that he never loved any one but her, and that his attentions to Clara arose from the fact that he discovered that he and she were long separated cousins and joint heirs to a large property, of which they had been deprived by fraud. His long conversations with her were on this subject, and he thought it safest to keep their discovery a secret until they could both proceed against the uncle who had been robbing them with some chance of success.

But neither the wealth nor influence Lucy's friends brought to bear could turn public sentiment in her favor. Her jealousy of Clara had been known. She had used harsh and angry words to the young girl, and these had been overheard. She was the only person who could have any interest in Clara's death, and a dagger belonging to her had been the instrument of the crime. Then no one could tell where Miss Berkeley had spent the previous night. She had not taken her usual place in the household, and she had not been on her bed that night, as it was proved to have been untouched in the morning.

Strangely enough, too, the idiot had disappeared, and not the smallest clue to his whereabouts could be obtained.

Leonard Dacre searched up and down the country road for him, because he conceived the strange theory, that it was this deformed, unhappy being who was the real criminal. He had put forward this theory, but few would even listen patiently to it. By the majority it was looked upon as frivolous nonsense; and many thought Miss Berkeley had put the lad out of the way to create suspicion regarding him.

Just before the case was submitted to the jury, however, and while everything pointed to the guilt of the prisoner at the bar, Leonard Dacre's appearance at the door of the court dragging after him the idiot created a thrill among the eager spectators. A buzz of excitement agitated every one, including the venerable judge and the members of the jury.

The dwarf looked around him half frightened yet defiant. When his eye rested on the dark-robed figure of his mistress in the dock, he uttered a low whine of delight, and dragging himself from the grasp of his captor, he darted towards Miss Berkeley, and crouched at her feet.

"I killed her! I killed her!" the idiot said. "I did it with your dagger. She was bad. I did not wish to see you cry."

Great was the astonishment of the by-standers and tremulous the furore created by this unexpected confession.

The judge then extracted from the dwarf, in broken sentences and disconnected fragments, the story of the deed.

All showed him to be guilty of the crime, and that his motive was devotion to his mistress.

Miss Berkeley was at once released; but she was seldom seen afterwards in society. A "still, small voice" within her told her that her unwarranted and unreasonable jealousy had led to the disaster. Her life was therefore a life-long act of repentance, and for miles around her mansion the poor, the sad and the suffering always found in her a generous and princely benefactor.

The idiot was kept in restraint for a while and then sent abroad.

Uses for Old Paper.

Most housekeepers know how invaluable newspapers are for packing away the winter clothing, the printing ink acting as a defiance to the stoutest moth, some house-wives think, as successfully as camphor or tar paper. For this reason newspapers are invaluable under the carpet, laid over the regular carpet paper. The most valuable quality of newspapers in the kitchen, however, is their ability to keep out the air. It is well known that

The big, brightly-lighted room interested her. So did the people at the tables. While the son was engaged in the somewhat perplexing task of selecting the supper the old lady talked amiably with the waiter. She told him that she hoped Landlord Astor and Miss Allen were pretty well. The waiter explained that Mr. Allen was the landlord, whereas the old lady expressed polite surprise. When the waiter had gone with the order she devoted a few moments to studying the chandeliers. They represent

"I wonder," she said, "how under the sun Miss Allen ever gets up there to snuff 'em."

"Snuff what?" asked her son.

"Why, them candles; they're so high up."

The young man did not answer. The old lady again gazed at the chandeliers reflectively. "They ain't no need of all that light," she said. "Miss Allen must be a powerful wasteful woman."

Her son was apparently a man of few words. Her criticism was unnoticed.

Presently the waiter brought the bread and the plates, and what the old lady evidently thought was a superabundance of knives and forks. She greeted him pleasantly. "Back again, hey?" she said. "You're pretty quick. But, Horace," she added to her son, "you ordered something more than bread, didn't you?"

"It will be here shortly," put in the waiter with a polite bow. The old lady gave him a sweet smile. "I'm pretty hungry," she said.

Several of the diners had overheard her observations. Some of them were hard-faced business men. They didn't laugh at her. They only regarded her with lively interest. She smoothed out the tablecloth carefully, and inspected the silver, evidently with approval.

The waiter brought the meal and gave the old lady close attention, which pleased her immensely. She smiled on him and asked after the health of his family. As she rose from the table she said to him: "Tell Miss Allen I'd like to have her recipe for that snow puddin', but I'm in a hurry."

The waiter bowed and said gravely that he would do so. And as the old lady passed out of the door one of the diners raised a glass of wine and exclaimed: "The old lady—God bless her!"

Lay it aside—her work—no more she sits. By open window in the western sun, Thinking of this and that beloved one In silence now she knits.

Lay it aside; the needles in their place. No more she welcomes at the cottage door; The coming of her children home once more With sweet and cheerful face.

Lay it aside; her work is done, and well; A generous, sympathetic, Christian life; A faithful mother and a noble wife; Her influence who can tell?

Lay it aside—say not her work is done; No deed of love or goodness ever dies, But in the lives of others multiplies; Say it is just begun!

THE OLD LADY, GOD BLESS HER! Astor House Extravaganza in Candles Aroused Her Attention. From the New York Times.

A dear old lady from the country sat with her son, also from the country, in the big dining room of the Astor House a few evenings ago. Men who have come to New York from the country, if they had seen her, would have been reminded of their grandmothers. Her face was kindly and there was just a little color in it. She wasn't very tall and her figure was comfortable. She wore a shawl. Her bonnet was a little one, and in the front of it was some white lace. Her gown was of bombazine and of somewhat ancient cut.

The big, brightly-lighted room interested her. So did the people at the tables. While the son was engaged in the somewhat perplexing task of selecting the supper the old lady talked amiably with the waiter. N. O. 5803 EQUITY. In the Circuit Court for Frederick county, sitting in Equity.

MARCH TERM, 1891. John T. Gelwicks, Plaintiff, against Frederick C. O. Siess and Margaret Siess his wife, and William Heagy and Virginia Heagy his wife, Defendants.

The Bill in this case is filed to procure a decree for the sale of certain Real Estate in Frederick county, of which Daniel Siess, deceased, died seized, and that the proceeds of said sale may be distributed among the parties entitled thereto according to their respective rights.

The Bill states: 1. That Daniel Siess, late of Frederick county, deceased, was in his lifetime and at the time of his death seized and possessed of certain Real Estate, situated in Frederick county, which said Real Estate is a part of that conveyed to said Daniel Siess in his lifetime by Jacob Siess and others, a certified copy of which is filed with the Bill marked Exhibit A, and for a fuller description of which the plaintiff prays leave to file a survey thereof hereafter in the further progress of the said cause.

2. That the said Daniel Siess, died intestate or about the twenty-eighth day of June in the year Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-six.

3. That the said Daniel Siess left surviving him a widow, Barbara Siess, who died on or about the twelfth day of March in the year Eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, and the following children and heirs-at-law: (a) Mary Ann Elizabeth Dotterer, a daughter, who is of full age, now a widow and residing in Washington county.

(b) The defendant Frederick C. O. Siess married to the defendant Margaret Siess, both of whom are of full age and reside in Frederick county.

(c) The defendant Virginia Heagy intermarried with the defendant William Heagy, both of whom are of full age and reside in Adams county in the State of Pennsylvania.

4. That the said Real Estate owned by the said Daniel Siess at the time of his death descended to his said children upon their father's decease.

5. That the interest of one of said children and heirs-at-law, the said Mary Ann Elizabeth Dotterer, is now held and owned by the plaintiff, as will appear from a certified copy of the Deed thereof filed with the Bill as part thereof marked Exhibit B.

6. That the said Real Estate is not susceptible of partition or division among the said parties entitled thereto, and cannot be divided without loss and injury to the parties interested therein, and that it is necessary and to the interest and advantage of all the parties entitled thereto, that the same be sold and the proceeds thereof divided among them according to their respective rights.

7. The Bill prays for the following relief: 1. That a decree may be passed for the sale of said Real Estate.

2. That the proceeds of said sale may be distributed among the parties entitled thereto according to their respective rights.

3. For general relief.

4. That process may issue against the resident defendants.
