DR. FAHRNEY'S TEETHING SYRUP

It is safe to give to babies a few days old, and its good effects in ordinary doses, are seen in children five and six years old.

There is nothing in the drug market that gives more universal satisfaction than Teething Syrup. Thousands of physicians are prescribing it daily. An over dose is not dangerous—it will prevent cholera infantum if used in time—no better soothing syrup made—many testimonials give proof of these words—all dealers sell it for 25 cts. Sample bottle sent on receipt of 10 cents.

Made only by Drs. D. FAHRNEY & SON, HAGERSTOWN, Md.

STOP. LOOK.

I have just received a large lot of PURE ALL RYE WHISKEYS for harvest and medicinal purposes, distilled by the well-known William Foust, of Glen Rock, York county, Pa., whose distillery was established in 1836. This Whiskey has no equal and is absolutely pure. Doctors recommend it as the best for medicinal purposes. Have high and low prices. Give me a call before buying elsewhere and be convinced.

INSIGHT

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

On the river of life, as I float along,
I see with the spirit's sight
That many a noxious weed of wrong
Has root in a seed of right.
For evil is good that has gone astray,
And sorrow is only blindness,
And the world is always under the sway
Of a changeless law of kindness.

The commonest error a truth can make
Is shunting its sweet voice hoarse,
And sin is only the soul's mistake
In misdirecting its force.
And love, the fairest of all fair things
That ever to men descended,
Grows rank with nettles and poisonous things
Unless it is watched and tended.

There could not be anything better
Than this
Old world in the way it began,
And though some matters have gone
Amis
From the great original plan;
And however dark the skies may appear,
And however souls may blunder,
I tell you it all will work out clear,
For good lies over and under.

The Mammoth Cave of Indiana.

BY H. C. HOVEY.

Rummaging lately among the rare and curious books in the library of Colonel Durrett, I found proof that while Gen. W. H. Harrison was territorial governor he visited, in 1806, a remarkable excavation which he styled "The Mammoth Cave of Indiana." Later in the same year was discovered its famous and only rival, "The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky." But the Hoosier cave has plainly the prior right to the unique title, only it is now too late to make the assertion except as a matter of curious interest. The earliest published account appears in Martin's "Sketches of Louisville and its Environs" (1819), under the heading "The Mammoth Cave of Indiana." In Flint's Geography (1831), it is called the "Epsom Salts Cave," and in legal enactments in 1843 it is designated "The Indiana Salt-peter Cave," a name now given to a smaller cave near by. The name "Wyandot Cave" does not seem to have been adopted until about 1848, being taken from the adjacent Wyandot River, now known as the Blue River. At an early day the ground was pre-empted by Dr. B. Adams, who had salt-peter works here from 1812 to 1819, when, by his failure to pay the purchase money, it reverted to the United States. It was bought in 1820 by Mr. Henry P. Rothrock, who at a later date perfected his title, and by whose will it becomes, under certain conditions, the heritage of Mr. Frank Rothrock, his favorite grandson.

Frank Rothrock, with a commendable desire to know as much as possible about his prospective domain, recently organized an exploring party, including with himself three other sturdy lads named Ben Hains, Henry McClintick and Ira Rainbolt. What they style, in their narration placed at my disposal, "the unexplored regions," are not properly such, having been visited in 1860 by Messrs Andrew and Washington Rothrock, together with two men named Miller and Langsdale. Miller gave out at a place called for that reason Miller's Reach. Andrew stopped at a spot known as Andrew's Retreat. Washington Rothrock and Mr. Langsdale went as far as Langsdale's Basin. But such are the difficulties and perils of the labyrinth that no one has ventured there since, until now, nor has any previous description of the region been published.

The general plan of the cave resembles a gigantic letter K, including the main cave and the north and south arms. Twelve hours are required to traverse the sixteen miles ordinarily on exhibition. The so-called "unexplored regions" are at least seven miles additional. They are entered from a place called the Ice House, because the gypsum-coated blocks of limestone resemble so many masses of ice. This is near the termination of the northern arm. The boys dived under a ledge but two feet above the floor, and burrowed through what resembled a great snow bank, though really a mass of sparkling crystals. In fifteen minutes they came to the Round Room, out from which ran several short branches, each ending in a mud bank. But through an orifice eight feet overhead, they entered a sort of second story, or in other words a cross cave. For it should be understood that Wyandot Cave, instead of being a single excavation, is made up of numerous different caverns connected with each other by large or small openings. Going northward over cliffs, through crevices, and sliding along sharp ridges, the boys halted on the edge of a pit, which contrived to cross by a kind of natural bridge, and went 300 yards further, finding many outpockets and other ornate forms of alabaster. In a circular room, 10 feet high and 60 wide, were remarkably fine helictites, as well as straight stalactites. Their explorations in this direction came to an end at a deep pit, beyond which it seemed impossible for them to go without appliances with which they were not furnished at the time.

On a subsequent trip they took along a rude ladder made from a cedar tree, the trunk of which was about three inches in diameter, the ladders being cut at a convenient length for climbing. This they dragged in by a rope as far as the Round Room, and used it as an easy means of gaining the "second story," where they left it with one end sticking through the hole in the floor, to play an important part in their subsequent adventures.

Wriggling through an orifice, yet above them, and through narrow crevices in a rocky pile, they emerged into still a third story above the Round Room, where the floor sloped up to the roof on every side. Thence, pursuing a remarkable winding passage, about five feet wide, twenty-five feet high, and a mile long, the walls of which were coated with pure white alabaster, they came to a modification of the labyrinth, a section of which would resemble an hour glass. They were now directly under the main cave. Shortly they came to a long, sharp-edged rock, filling entirely the passage for fifty feet, along which they had to stride as if on horseback. This was "Rode Rock, No. 1." Then there was good walking for 200 yards, that took them to a small orifice opening into yet another cross cave, called the Wild Cat Avenue, a large, low room, with a very muddy floor, on perhaps as low a level as any other spot in the whole cave. Beyond it is Maggie's Grotto, about thirty feet wide. From this they made their way again into the main avenue they had left for this transverse cave, and which bears the name of the Little Giant Avenue.

And now they met with a novel difficulty, for the floor was cut by a series of pits that could be crossed only by bracing themselves against the opposite walls. Coming to a pit too wide to be managed in this way, the boys climbed to the top of the passage, and striding the chasm for half an hour, they finally descended from a rocky shelf to a beautiful stream flowing between snowy banks, called the Marble Rivulet. Along its banks grew many spongoidal forms, with slender necks, but that the explorers found too tough to be broken off by anything at hand. Ascending the Marble Hill they enjoyed a smooth sandy floor for 600 feet, where they walked between creamy walls, curving in and out in rounded lines. Then came a tiresome crawl, varied occasionally by the cavern's suddenly folding in upon itself in such a manner as to compel the poor boys to lie sideways and drag themselves around the sharpest kind of "devil's elbows," as they called them. Striding Rode Rock, No. 2, they came to Langsdale's Basin, a small pool in a room ten feet in diameter. This pool is very shallow and its bottom covered with a fine, yellow sediment. Imagine their emotions on seeing written there by the finger, and seeming as fresh as if inscribed yesterday, the names of Rothrock and Langsdale, written in 1860, long before those now gazing on the inscriptions were born. What a proof of absolutely unchanged conditions for a whole generation! Of course the boys wrote their own names alongside to await the advent of future visitors.

By an opening through the left hand wall, and down a steep clay bank, they next entered a spacious cave, distinct from those they had been exploring. Taking its right hand branch, they crawled over a floor resembling frozen waves coated with bluish slime, while the roof, instead of rock, was crumbling clay, by which they feared that they might be buried alive unless they were careful. On reaching a cross trench whose slimy walls threatened to allow no escape for those who should get within their grasp, they were disgusted, and turned back, although tempted to search for the locality of an invisible cascade whose mournful music filled the air.

By this time it was o'clock A. M., the stock of candles was getting low, and the boys were weary. They had made so many crooks and turns as to over-tax their memory, and they decided to go out as rapidly as possible. They made a few mistakes that were easily rectified, and all went smoothly enough until, beyond the Marble Rivulet, they began to work their tedious way through the top of the great hour glass crevice already referred to, supporting themselves by their elbows and knees. They thought themselves near Maggie's Grotto, and spent an hour at a half hunting the opening into it, not aware that they had really passed far above and beyond it. On they went painfully and by a most dangerous path, if a way could be called a path where their feet never touched ground for 400 yards. Presently the passage shrank to a width of six inches, and they could neither go forward nor backward nor upward. Accordingly they tried going downward, with the terrible certainty, however, that, in their exhausted condition, they could never climb up again. Plainly they were lost, and that in a part of the cave where no mortal had ever been before, and where no rescue party would ever find them. The walls closed in so fast around them that in their frantic efforts to descend the rift their coats were torn from their backs. Reaching at length a hard clay floor, they soon entered a low room, the floor of which was stone. Still impressed that their way of deliverance lay through some upward passage, they tested every opening, but in vain.

At four A. M. the boys had but one candle apiece, and were many miles from the safe outer world. Round and round they went, examining the walls of their prison house. Finally, in sheer desperation, they tried a pit that led them down to a lower room, from whose floor protruded, to their great surprise, the tip of their cedar ladder. They were in the "second story" of the round room, and two miles nearer the mouth of the cave than they had thought. In five minutes more they were creeping through to the Ice House, whence, husbanding their candles, they hurried down the Northern Arm, and emerged from the cave at 6 A. M., just in time for an early breakfast, for which their long fast gave them a keen appetite. Like brave explorers they announce their intention of taking the same trip again, with a better equipment, rope ladders, plenty of food, and a large supply of candles, in hope of reaching regions far beyond those already visited.—Scientific American.

Whooping Cough.

Common thyme, which was recommended in whooping cough three or four years ago by Dr. S. B. Johnson, is regarded by Dr. Neovius, who writes a paper on the subject in a Finnish medical journal, as almost worthy the title of specific. During an epidemic of whooping cough he had ample opportunities of observing its effects, and he came to the conclusion that if it is given early and constantly it invariably cuts short the disease in a fortnight, the symptoms generally vanishing in two or three days. They are, he finds, liable to return if the thyme is not regularly taken for at least two weeks. Regarding the dose, he advises that a larger quantity than Dr. Johnson prescribed be taken. He gives from one ounce and a half to six ounces per diem combined with a little marsh-mallow sirup. He never saw an undesirable effect produced, except slight diarrhoea. It is important that the drug should be used quite fresh.—Lancet.

The Bible on Theatre-going.

Some one has reminded Bishop Cox, of Buffalo, that the Bible does not anywhere condemn bicycling by women, and the prelate has been obliged to admit that, as far as bicycles are concerned, the Bible is behind the age—which reminds us of an occasion when Ex-Chief Justice Drake, of the Court of Claims, addressing a meeting of the Washington City Presbytery against theatre-going, and being asked where the Bible condemned it, answered that, of course, theatres were not mentioned in the Bible, a remark which brought up the Rev. Dr. Sunderland, of the First Church, like a shot, but in his suavest manner, with: "I beg the Judge's pardon, but we read in the book of the Acts of the Apostles that St. Paul went to the theatre at Ephesus." The Judge was floored.—Washington Post.

Do Pearls Get Ill?

"Did you know that pearls get sick?" said a well-known Atlanta jeweler recently. "They do, and, like babies, they require a change of climate when their health is bad or else they crumble or die. I knew of a case once where a lady went into a jeweler's with a magnificent set of pearls that were losing their lustre and beginning to look dead. 'These pearls are sick,' said the jeweler, upon examining them, 'and unless you take or send them to a decidedly different climate at once they will become worthless.' They were sent off, and within a month were as bright and pretty again as they had ever been."—Atlanta Constitution.

A PARVENU, one John Johnson, to establish a sort of literary character, had bought a lot of books, among them a copy of a rare old dictionary. It was somewhat out of repair and he took it to the binder's. When finished he noticed that the words "Johnson's Dictionary" had been stamped by the tradesman on the back. The parvenu fell into a furious passion and demanded:

"Why didn't you put the full name on, 'John Johnson's Dictionary'?"

Not Afraid.

"The grand secret of success is not to be afraid of work," said the exhorter at the Breakfast Association.

"I'm not afraid of it," remarked an attentive listener, who was a great traveler, "in fact I despise and loathe it."

SOMEONE asked an old lady about a sermon—"Could you remember it?" "Remember it? No, the minister couldn't remember it himself. He had to have it written down."

Made Plain.

"Why, formerly your loaves were twice this big, baker. What's the reason for it?"

"Very simple, madam. We've begun using less dough."

MONEY AND ESTATES AWAITING DISTRIBUTION AMONG ABSENT HEIRS.

IT is an undoubted, interesting, and important fact, that, during recent years, the number of properties and sums of money awaiting distribution among missing heirs and legatees are rapidly on the increase. Recognizing this fact I have for some years past engaged to a limited extent in the investigation of such matters, in which I have had great success. I therefore offer my services to those who believe that they are entitled to participate in the distribution of money or estates. All Correspondence Confidential. No charge unless successful. The pleasant flavor, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative and if the father or mother be costive or bilious the most gratifying results follow its use, so that it is the best family remedy known and every family should have a bottle.

Mr. JOHN A. HORSNER gave us a luscious pear one evening this week. It was the finest we ever tasted, and came from a tree in his yard that was so heavily laden that it required a number of props to keep it from breaking down. He has taken them all off, so its no use to hunt them up boys.

Crown Stock Food will make cows produce more and richer milk.

The rain of Tuesday night was very heavy in the vicinity of Harney and Taneytown. A huckster from the former place who ships his marketing from Taneytown every week, was unable to get to that place on Wednesday morning and was obliged to make his shipment from Emmitsburg.

The motto of the proprietors of Dr. Henry Baxter's Mandrake Bitters is, "the greatest good to the greatest number," and so sell a large bottle of a valuable remedy for the small price of 25 cents, and warrant every bottle to give satisfaction or money refunded. For sale by James A. Elder, Emmitsburg, Md., and A. C. Musselman, Fairfield, Pa.

Sunday School Festival. A festival will be held at Moritz's School House on Saturday afternoon and evening, August 22, for the benefit of the Sunday school at that place. The Harney Cornet Band will be present to enliven the occasion.

Bad Fall. On Saturday morning, while coming out of the field on a load of oats, Miss Annie Redding, daughter of Commissioner Joseph Redding, was thrown off by a sudden lurch of the wagon and sustained severe injuries to the spine and right shoulder, confining her to bed. Dr. Walter H. O'Neal, who is in attendance, considers the injuries serious.—Compiler.

S. N. McNAIR, P. M. "Don't Care to Eat."

It is with the greatest confidence that Hood's Sarsaparilla is recommended for loss of appetite, indigestion, sick headache, and similar troubles. This medicine gently tones the stomach, assists digestion, and makes one feel "real hungry." Persons in delicate health, after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a few days, find themselves longing for and eating the plainest food with unexpected relish.

Death of Mrs. Adam Koogle. Mrs. Adam Koogle, one of the oldest and best known residents of the Middletown Valley, and mother-in-law of Mr. G. C. Rhoderick, editor and proprietor of the Valley Register, died at her home, one mile west of Middletown on the 23rd of July, from tumor of the abdomen, aged 82 years. She leaves a husband who is 84 years old, and seven children, three sons and four daughters.

Large Snake Captured. Daniel Deardorff and John Lohman, of this place, had a desperate encounter with a rattlesnake eleven feet long on Thursday last at the Old Forge, which when first attached by the men showed signs of giving battle and while they were securing a number of heavy pieces of timber to make sure of his snakeship it got away, but was captured after a chase for half a mile.—Waynesboro Gazette.

ATTENTION is called to the adv. of John M. Stouter's brick and tile works, which appears in this issue. Mr. Stouter has improved machinery for the manufacture of both these important articles and persons in need of either cannot do better than by purchasing of him. Besides the saving in labor and cost of draining land by the use of these tiles, they will be found excellent for cellar drains. This we know from experience, having replaced an old brick drain that was a constant bother and expense with Stouter's tiles, we secured a perfect drain service at an exceedingly low cost. Give them a trial and you'll never regret it.

The collector is authorized to kill all dogs on which the tax is not paid within sixty days from the 5th inst.

The Emmitsburg Railroad will run a special train next Thursday evening to meet the excursion train from Pen-Mar, provided they have twenty-five passengers. Excursionists will be taken on the regular 8:20 train in the morning.

A Good Yield. Mr. Wm. Null has just tested the yield of his grain for this season with satisfactory results. From 6 acres of corn ground he threshed 162 bushels or an average yield of 27 bushels. From 3 1/2 acres of rye on corn ground he got 93 bushels, or at the rate of over 26 bushels per acre. This is no ordinary yield and should make farmers feel that the old time crops are coming around again.

Concert at the Opera House.

Last night Prof. Koehenbach, and the Lansing Family with lit'e Guy Hoppe gave a concert at the Opera House, and those who allowed the oppressive weather, the threatening clouds or any other cause to keep them away, missed a musical treat of no ordinary character.

The programme consisted of sixteen pieces, six vocal and ten instrumental, all of which were tastefully selected and exquisitely rendered. The solos by Misses Genevieve and Rose Lansing were very sweet, the choruses too exceedingly attractive and little Guy's cornet solo, given by request, was quite taking, but the selections by the orchestra received the heartiest applause and were doubtless most enjoyed by all.

Prof. Koehenbach and his able assistants must be highly gratified at their success; and our town has reason to feel proud of such musical ability in its midst, and should prove their appreciation of home talent by turning out in even larger numbers when there is such another opportunity presented for a delightful evening.
