DR. FAHRNEY'S

TEETHING SYRUP

It is safe to give to babies a few days old, and its good effects in ordinary doses, are seen in children five and six years old.

There is nothing in the drug market that gives more universal satisfaction than Teething Syrup. Thousands of physicians are prescribing it daily. An over dose is not dangerous—it will prevent cholera infantum if used in time—no better soothing syrup made—many testimonials give proof of these words—all dealers sell it for 25 cts. Sample bottle sent on receipt of 10 cents.

Made only by DR. FAHRNEY & SON, HAGERSTOWN, MD.

STOP. LOOK.

I have just received a large lot of PURE ALL RYE WHISKEYS for harvest and medicinal purposes, distilled by the well-known William Foust, at Glen Rock, York county, Pa., whose distillery was established in 1836. This Whiskey has no equal and is absolutely pure. Doctors recommend it as the best for medicinal purposes. Have high and low prices. Give me a call before buying elsewhere and be convinced.

LIFE'S PROBLEMS.

BY HATTIE R. WHEELER.

If life's problems we could solve,
Day by day;
If the things our minds revolve
In dismay,
With the sad things so perplexing,
And life's lessons oft so vexing,
Could but be, unto us, made plain;
Life then would lose its greater gain,
Oh! we say.

We lament the darkened skies,
Night by night;
And we watch the great sun rise
With delight;

While we oft' night's gloom regretting,
Spend its hours in idle fretting;
But for all our fret and worry,
E'er knew you the sun to hurry
To our sight?

Let us of sweet patience learn,
You and I:
We'll find truths for which we yearn,
By and by;

For the loving God will guide us
To the knowledge now denied us;
And when we've left earth's tears and fears,
'Twill not be left us through Heaven's years
To ask—Why?

WINKIE'S WEDDING.

BY SARA E. ROSE.

It was Winklereid Wendall's wedding day. Everybody knew that he was to be married that morning in St. John's church. Likewise everybody was pleased; for both Winklereid and Della Deplaine were quite popular; therefore there was no demurring, unless it was among the young men, who felt it a little because they would be unable to waylay Winklereid between the church and the depot and make him properly celebrate.

The bride's toilet is generally considered a far more important item at a fashionable wedding than the bridegroom's, but in this case it was different.

Not that Winklereid indulged in anything especially fancy upon this occasion. His suit was the conventional black, but, like Samson, the point where he came out strong was his hair.

When at length he was arrayed he looked himself over in his dressing glass and voted the reflection perfect, all but the hair; that was too long.

"It will have to be cut," he decided. "The barber is only across the street. I'll run over this minute."

"You'll have to hurry, then," put in his sister Belle, who was trotting in and out of his room in her stylish bridesmaid's costume.

"The carriages are coming, and it lacks but half an hour of the appointed time."

"I'll get there, never fear," cried Winklereid, slipping on an old coat and hat and making a rush for the barber's, where, fortunately, he found the artist unengaged.

"Cut my hair quick!" he cried, breathlessly.

Clippers smiled a little slyly and set his machine so that the stubble on all parts of Winklereid's head was less than the thousandth part of an inch in length when he sprang before the glass to admire himself.

Worse than all, the pure white cuticle which covered Winklereid's skull was several shades whiter than that which was spread over his features.

"You son of Africa!" shouted Winklereid, in a rage, "what did you cut my hair like that for?"

"You ordered me to cut it to the quick, sah," replied Clippers, showing his ivory. "I couldn't cut it any closer without I'd skinned your skull, sah."

Winklereid couldn't wait to kill him just then, but with an "I'll see you later" feeling in his breast he made for the street, where he encountered one of his friends on the way to the wedding.

"Got your hair cut?" he asked, with a grin.

"It's none of your business if I have," retorted Winklereid.

Belle had just entered one of the carriages to be driven to the bride's residence, as he reached the door.

"Well, now, I rather think you've got your hair cut," she said, and laughed outright.

"I've got a right to get my hair cut for all of you, I guess," he retorted, savagely.

Winklereid's pet bantam was standing upon the walk as he hastened up to the steps.

He kicked at her angrily. She sprang agilely aside. "Got your hair cut! Got your hair cut!" she cackled, shrilly.

Winklereid made a dive at his pet pullet, intending to devote enough time to her to divest her of plumage at the very least, but his foot slipped upon a bit of ice and he fell and struck his face upon the corner of a step and almost drove his nasal organ up into his brain.

He audibly groaned as he picked himself up, and the driver of the waiting carriage responded with a hoarse laugh.

Winklereid gained the hall, triple-bolted the door, and climbed the stairs, leaving a trail of blood behind him.

Ten valuable minutes were spent in bathing his injured proboscis, ten more in changing his stained linen, and readjusting his wedding garments.

Winklereid then looked into the glass and nearly fainted.

A veritable comic valentine stood before him.

His nose was larger than all the rest of his head, with the real old bruiser tinge to it.

His head was as white and shining as that of a white marble statue.

"I can't leave this room in ten days," he muttered.

But a few seconds' reflection showed him that he must not desert Della at the very altar.

He hustled into his outer coat and pulled his hat, thief fashion, low down over his eyes, ran downstairs, gave a few directions to the driver, and started.

He intended to stop at a celebrated hair dresser's and purchase a wig.

He found his man eager for a customer.

"I want you to fit a black, curly wig upon my head at once," cried Winklereid, throwing shame to the winds. "I am Winklereid Wendall—this is my wedding day—I am ten minutes behind time now."

"Not the bridegroom of the St. John's church wedding?"

"Yes, hurry up, I entreat you."

"What price do you wish to pay?"

"I don't care a penny, only get it here sometime."

The hairdresser stepped to a side door, gave a few directions to some one, and then returned and requested Winklereid to be seated, while he covered his wedding garments with a large, white linen sheet.

He then went into the other room and a young lady came out with a half dozen wigs in boxes.

She bit her lips at sight of Winklereid's nose, and almost laughed when he said irritably:

"I want one with long hair, so that the edges of it cannot be seen so plainly."

"Very well," she returned, and began to fit an elegant ladies' coiffure, with black curly bangs in front and a long Greek knot behind, upon Winklereid's head.

"There, you look lovely in that," she said. "The price is one hundred dollars."

"Umph!" ejaculated Winklereid, tearing the sheet from about him and laying a one hundred note on the counter.

He then clapped on his hat and started.

"Stop! Stop!" cried the young lady, shrilly.

The clatter of the carriage wheels upon the pavement was all the reply which she received.

"Merciful goodness!" exclaimed the girl, almost fainting from consternation. "That was a man, and I thought it was a woman, who had been fighting with her husband."

Winklereid proceeded swiftly to the church which was crowded.

"Why, Wendall!" exclaimed one of the ushers who met him at the door.

"What are you glaring at me for? There are no flies on me," exclaimed Winklereid, throwing off his hat and overcoat, and starting at once for the altar where the clergyman was waiting.

To say that this spirited entrance created a sensation is not putting it too strongly.

When he turned towards the bride, who, leaning upon her father's arm, and surrounded by six beautiful girls, was coming up the aisle, every pair of eyes in the audience was turned towards him, and every mouth which was not stuffed with a handkerchief was audibly smiling.

Mr. Deplaine stopped within a few feet of the bridegroom and stared.

"That is not the man," he ejaculated.

"What's that you say?" crisply retorted Winklereid. "Don't be a fool."

"This—this person is inebriated," continued Mr. Deplaine.

"Send for an officer quick!"

"Oh! oh!" ejaculated Della, timidly. "Where is Winklereid?"

"Why, I am Winklereid, Della, don't you know me?" wailed Winklereid.

"Why, can it possibly be you?" whimpered the bride. "What is the matter with your face, and what have you got your hair done up for?"

Winklereid put his hand to the back of his head, and for the first time discovered the Greek knot.

He seized it fiercely, and shook out the long hair of which it was composed, and then tore the wig by force from his head.

Old Deplaine grew purple in the face.

"Drunk, by Jove!" he said, and started himself for a policeman.

His departure was the signal for an uproar. Everybody laughed—may, they shouted, and the young men stamped and whistled.

The shocked clergyman recovered his senses and escorted the bride and her maidens into the little sitting-room behind the church.

Tom Hawkins, who was Winklereid's best friend, and who acted as usher, hustled Winklereid in after them.

Then there was an explanation. "I understand it all," sobbed Della, when Winklereid had stopped talking. "But papa is so angry that he will never let us be married now."

"Let's be married right here, before he gets back," suggested Winklereid.

They acted upon the suggestion, and when Mr. Deplaine came into the front door with the officer, the bridal party stepped out of the side door into the carriage, and away upon their wedding trip.

Mr. Deplaine was obliged to subsist but it will be a long time before Winklereid's wedding will be forgotten.—Arkansas Traveler.

Seeing and Knowing.

An eminent Lord Chief Justice, who was trying a right-of-way case, had before him a witness—an old farmer—who was proceeding to tell the jury that he had "known the path for sixty years, and my feyther told I as he heered my grand-feyther say—"

"Stop!" said the Judge; "we can't have any hearsay evidence here!"

"Not!" exclaimed Farmer Giles. "Then how dost know who thy feyther was 'cept by hearsay?"

After the laughter had subsided the Judge said: "In courts of law we can only be guided with what you have seen with your eyes, and nothing more nor less."

"Oh, that be blowed for a tale!" replied the farmer. "I ha' got a bile on the back of my neck and I never seed 'un, but I be prepared to swear that he's there, daung 'un!"

This second triumph on the part of the witness set in a torrent of hearsay evidence about the footpath which obtained weight with the jury, albeit the Judge told them it was not testimony of any value, and the farmer's party won.—Montreal Star.

Cure for Ivy Poisoning.

Bathe the parts affected with sweet spirits of nitre. If the blisters are broken so that the nitre be allowed to penetrate the cuticle, more than a single application is rarely necessary, and even where it is only applied to the surface of the skin three or four times a day, there is rarely a trace of the poison left next morning.—Hall's Jour. Health.

An Alarming Condition.

Walter Besant in the Philadelphia Weekly Times says: The census shows that there are in England nearly a million more women than men. This excess threatens in every country where there are great towns to increase more and more. I say in every country of great towns, because it is only in towns that women find work, and because the fact that places are given to women causes this excess.

Here follows an aspect of the case which does not seem to present itself to everybody. Nature, to go back to the beginning, gave to women the great function of maternity, and to man that of work. This was so far recognized up to a very recent period that no woman did any work unless they were obliged to do so from the poverty of their circumstances or from the absence of brothers to keep them. In the lower middle class, for instance, within the memory of man, the unmarried women were maintained by the men. That meant that all the places, berths, situations, etc., were filled by men. All this is changed. Women of every class are pressing into work of all kinds. Every post given to a woman turns out a man. Therefore, what happens? The number of places are limited. If there are 120,000 clerkships in London, and one-fifth of those are given to women, there are 24,000 clerks turned a drift. What are they to do? They go abroad; they are absorbed in America and the colonies. In the American towns the same thing is done. What becomes of the men? They go West, I suppose. But a time will come when the colonies will no longer want our men, and the West will no longer want any immigrants. What will happen then, we cannot say. Meantime the rage for work among women is daily and rapidly increasing the long roll of the lone and loveless ones; they pay a frightfully heavy price for their independence, and unfortunately the country pays a heavy price as well.

Uncle Sam's Land.

At the close of the revolutionary war, when our independence was acknowledged, the treaty of peace made with Great Britain ceded to America territory to the extent of 815,615 square miles. Since then other territory has been added as follows: Louisiana, purchased from France in 1803, 930,938 square miles; Florida, from Spain, in 1821, 59,268 square miles; Texas, annexed in 1845, 337,504 square miles; Oregon, by a treaty in 1846, 380,425 square miles; California, conquered from Mexico in 1847-8, 649,702 square miles; Arizona, acquired from Mexico in 1854, 27,500 square miles; Alaska, purchased from Russia in 1867, 577,590 square miles. This gives a total of 3,678,392 square miles of territory now embraced in the United States, being about four-ninths of all North America, and more than one-fifth of the entire land surface of the globe.

Save Your Lawn Grass.

Cut the lawn grass often and cure it like ordinary hay and store it in the barns for the use of the hens in winter. When wanted, pour boiling water over it in a tub at night, and feed it the next morning. By sprinkling a little bran and meal over it, the hens will relish it highly.—American Farmer.

TEACHER: "When the wise men came to the king what did they say?"

Boy: "They said: 'O king, live forever!'"

Teacher: "Quite right; and what then?"

Boy: "And immediately the king lived forever."

A LARGE proportion of the vice and crime in this country comes from abroad.

Out of 60,000 prisoners, according to the census of 1880, about 13,000 were of foreign birth, though the foreign-born population was only a little over an eighth of the whole at that time.

Although the hunting season is a good way off, applications for trespass notices are already being received at this office. It is to be regretted that our farmers are compelled to limit the operations of the sportsmen, and many of the latter feel themselves aggrieved at the action of the land owners, but when we look at the matter in an unprejudiced light, the farmer is beyond doubt justified.

EX-PRESIDENT JULES GREVY OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC DEAD

PARIS, Sept. 10.—M. Francois Jules P. Grevy, ex-president of the French republic, died yesterday. He had been for four days suffering from a severe attack of congestion of the lungs which was the immediate cause of his death.

M. Grevy was born at Montons-Yandry in the Jura mountains, in 1813. He went to Paris when only 15 years of age, and was studying law there when the revolution of 1830 broke out. He joined the insurgents and fought with them until Charles X. fled from France.

He then returned to the study of law and was graduated with honor and admitted to the bar. He made himself particularly conspicuous by his chivalrous defense of those who were accused of holding liberal opinions during the regime of Louis Philippe.

In 1848 he again came to the front and won respect by his moderate though strong liberal opinions. He was elected to the house of deputies and was chosen vice president of that body.

He then returned to the study of law and was graduated with honor and admitted to the bar. He made himself particularly conspicuous by his chivalrous defense of those who were accused of holding liberal opinions during the regime of Louis Philippe.

J. SLOAT FASSET NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR OF N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The republican convention was an enthusiastic and noisy assemblage. The cheering began when J. Sloat Fasset, the new collector of the port of New York made his way up the aisle to take his seat upon the Chemung delegation, and was continued at intervals whenever the names of favorites were mentioned.

It was 4:20 p. m. when the convention reassembled for the real work of the day. The committee on permanent organization reported the name of Hon. James M. Varnum as permanent chairman. Mr. Varnum in accepting the nomination, addressed the convention at length.

The committee on resolutions not being ready to report nominations were declared to be in order. Pending the presentation of candidates a letter was read from Andrew D. White withdrawing his name from the consideration of the convention. The name of J. Sloat Fasset was then presented by Senator O'Connor of Kings county.

The platform commends the Harrison administration, the protection of the agreement of the treasury department and Blaine's diplomacy. The protective tariff is praised and the extension of reciprocal trade relations urged.

THE TRADES CONGRESS.

A Conditional Eight Hour Law Is Passed After Long Discussion. LONDON, Sept. 10.—In the trades union congress a serious uproar was caused by a remark of Mr. Mawdsley, a cotton spinner, who, alluding to what he called the flowery language used by some of the delegates, said that the flowery words of spies would not solve the labor problem, though "they might gain the applause of ignorant mobs."

The scene that followed was of the most exciting character, and some of the delegates showed a disposition to do personal violence to Mawdsley, the cries of "withdraw" were deafening, and the uproar did not cease until Mawdsley withdrew his remark and apologized. He was then permitted to proceed.

The proceedings up to the present have disclosed that among the new trade unions and newer members of the old unions there is a predominant opinion of feeling which shows that they are deeply imbued with socialism and kindred doctrines.

By a vote of 242 to 156 a motion to the effect that a bill regarding the hours of labor ought to be of a permissive or optional character was carried after long discussion.

The amendment proposed to the eight hour international law recommendation in substance is that the eight hour law, when passed, shall not be enforced without the consent of two-thirds of the organized members of the trade concerned.

Secretary Proctor Accepts. WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 10.—The Massachusetts Prohibition state convention unanimously placed in nomination the following ticket: For governor, Charles H. In Memoriam.

GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN. In memory of Mrs. Martha Kooztz, formerly of Emmitsburg, who died September 4th, 1890.

By HER DAUGHTER EMMA.

Hurt by a Nail.

Wm. Webb, aged 14 years, a son of Mr. Frank Webb of Waynesboro, formerly of this place, was seriously injured last Wednesday by falling on a wire nail at the Frick works where he is employed. The nail penetrated the fleshy part of his hip to the depth of two inches.

Confirmed.

The favorable impression produced on the first appearance of the agreeable liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs a few years ago has been more than confirmed by the pleasant experience of all who have used it, and the success of the proprietors and manufacturers the California Fig Syrup Company.

Improvements.

M. E. Adelsberger & Son have had a new porch and steps put in front of their stove and tinware establishment. It is a very great improvement and being made of solid oak, will be a lasting one. Jos. Florence did the work. A new stone pavement has been laid along the Green street side of St. Joseph's church cemetery.

Fine Cattle Sold.

Messrs. W. H. Biggs and M. J. Eichelberger returned home to Rocky Ridge on Saturday evening, after a three weeks trip south. They started out with Messrs. Biggs & Bro's. celebrated herd of Holstein-Friesian Cattle to attend a number of fairs, and succeeded in selling the entire herd. The last were disposed of at Parkersburg, W. Va.

Grand Fair.

During the week beginning Sept. 21st the Mt. St. Mary's Catholic Benevolent Association will hold a grand fair at their hall near the College. Religious Notices.

The Holy Communion will be administered in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning. Services will be held tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the Rev. Peter Rioseco, of Taneytown will preach the preparatory sermon.

Rev. E. J. Wolf, D. D., of the Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, will preach in the Lutheran church on Sunday morning and evening.

Leg Broken.

George Shorb, a thirteen-year-old son of Mr. Daniel Shorb, residing near Bridgeport, had his leg broken at the ankle by a horse falling with him on Tuesday. He was riding the horse in a walk, directly behind a buggy, on the road between Taneytown and Bruceville, when the accident occurred, and the horse fell so suddenly that he is unable to say exactly how it happened, but thinks the animal caught his foot in one of the buggy wheels. Dr. Weaver of Taneytown reduced the fracture and the boy is doing well.

Excursion to Washington.

As previously announced in these columns, an excursion will be run to Washington next Thursday, the 17th inst., under the auspices of Arthur Post, No. 41, G. A. R., and Massasoit Tribe No. 41, I. O. R. M. of this place. The schedule has been arranged to give the visitors nine hours in Washington, and considering the delightful season, we don't hesitate to recommend this excursion to all who want to spend a pleasant day viewing the many interesting sights at the National Capital.

Bitten by a Copperhead.

Fleet McClain, a twelve-year-old son of Mr. William McClain, who lives on the old Wilson property at the foot of the Mountain, was bitten by a Copperhead snake last week. He had been at Christ Miller's a little higher up the mountain than his home, and noticing the cattle getting out of bounds, started through a piece of woods to head them off, and the snake struck him as he was running. Antidotes were quickly administered and he is able to be about again, although still suffering some from the wound. The reptile was not captured.

Our Public Schools.

Are the main-stay of our republic. In them are being cultivated the minds which are to be our future law-makers and leaders in every walk of life. How essential it is that these minds should be united to strong, healthy bodies. So many children suffer from impurities and poisons in the blood that it is a wonder that they ever grow up to be men and women. Many parents cannot find words strong enough to express their gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla for its good effect upon their children. Scrofula, salt rheum and other diseases of the blood are effectually and permanently cured by this excellent medicine and the whole being is given strength to resist attacks of disease.

My-terious Disappearances.

Considerable excitement prevails in the eastern section of this district over the mysterious disappearance of Mr. J. Newton Coshun, a farmer residing near Bridgeport, who left home Saturday morning, as the family supposed to go to Taneytown. Later in the day he was seen going in the opposite direction and a man answering his description was noticed in the neighborhood of Green Mount. Further than this no trace of him has been discovered and his family and friends are necessarily alarmed about him. When he left home he wore his working clothes and was in his shirt sleeves. His family relations are represented to have been very happy and the only possible reason that can be assigned for his disappearance is that he has been brooding over some financial troubles, and fears are entertained lest these may have affected his mind. It is further stated that he will realize more than enough from his untended crops to meet all of his obligations.

The Boss Garden.

Mr. Lewis M. Gelwick got some sweet corn seed from the Agricultural Department at Washington last spring, and having planted the same in his garden, experimented by cutting off a number of the leaves to make room for his tomato vines. The pruning was done while the corn was in blossom, and the blossoms dropping into the forks from which the leaves were cut, started shoots, on each of which appears a perfect good-sized ear of corn. A stock left at this office contains four of these sprouts with a perfectly formed ear on each one. Mr. Gelwick's garden throughout is a curiosity and he justly deserves the title of the boss gardener. He can raise a greater variety of vegetables and more of them in a limited space than any person we ever knew. There he has tomato and pumpkin vines as carefully trained and trimmed as grapes in a vineyard, saving all the space possible and forcing the entire strength into the fruit. Last week he pulled two tomatoes weighing 7 1/2 lbs. which grew on a single fork of one vine. He also has a fancy for sunflowers and has stalks in his garden fifteen feet high.

A Mystery.

How the human system ever recovers from the bad effects of the numerous medicines often literally poured into it for the supposed relief of dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism and other ailments, is a mystery. The mischief done by bad medicines is scarcely less than that caused by disease. If they who are weak, bilious, dyspeptic, constipated or rheumatic, would often be guided by the experience of invalids who have thoroughly tested Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, they would in every instance obtain the speediest and most reliable relief. This medicine is a searching and at the same time a thoroughly safe remedy, derived from vegetable sources, and possessing, in consequence of its basis of pure spirits, the property of being as safe as it is to be found in the very local bottles and stimulants often resorted to by the debilitated, dyspeptic and languid.

No farmer or dairyman can afford to be without Crown Stock Food. It is a boon to breeders of all domestic animals.

MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE NEWS.

Another Scholastic Year Auspiciously Begun—Retreat Closed—A Visit from Cardinal Gibbons.

The scholastic year of '91-2 opened very auspiciously on Monday morning. There was an unusually large number of students in attendance. The study hall tastefully and beautifully decorated and furnished with entirely new desks, etc., was the object of admiration to all visitors. Many who have seen it, pronounce it the most beautiful and the most comfortable study hall in the country. The Seminars' Retreat, which was conducted during the previous week by Rev. F. Gleason, S. J., closed Wednesday morning.

His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons arrived at the College Wednesday evening and was enthusiastically received by the clergy and students, with the ringing of bells and illuminations. On Thursday and Friday mornings he conferred holy orders on several students of the Seminary. Their names will appear next week.

From present appearances this year promises to be one of the most prosperous in the history of the College.

SABILLASVILLE ITEMS.

Mr. Isaac Miller who was stricken with paralysis recently is yet in a critical condition. Mr. Wm. Wilson and wife and Mrs. Susan Barrack of Altoona, Pa., are visiting friends, this place.

Misses Estella Hose and Carrie Miller, and Mrs. Etta Jamison of Baltimore, are the guests of Mr. Wm. Miller. Leslie, son of Mr. Luther Brown fell from a wagon last Thursday evening and was rendered unconscious for some time.

Rev. J. R. Lewis of Rieglesville, Pa., has accepted the call extended to him, as pastor of Sabillasville charge Reformed church. Mr. Lewis has located at Highfield at which place he will probably remain until spring.

Mrs. Martha Harr, an aged and highly respected resident of this vicinity, died at her home on last Friday morning. Mrs. Harr was in the 83d year of her age. Interment was made in Reformed cemetery on Sunday at 10 o'clock, Rev. J. R. Lewis officiating.

Last Monday Mr. Lewis Crawford was taken suddenly ill at his place of business. He was discovered by his brother in an unconscious state and carried at once to his residence. Through the careful attention of his physician and friends, Mr. Crawford is able to return to his business again.

MOTTER'S STATION ITEMS.

Miss Emma Rosensteel is visiting in Baltimore. Mr. J. C. Rosensteel was in Baltimore Wednesday. Mrs. A. C. Shorb of Littlestown, is visiting her son Mr. J. B. Shorb.

Miss Rose Weaver attended the picnic at Rocky Ridge given by Father White to the children of St. Euphemia's school.

Messrs. I. M. Fisher & Co., are still kept busy mostly on ordered work. They turned out a very fine all finished surry this week.

Miss Blanche Hobbs gave a dance at her home on Tuesday evening, which was largely attended. We join the guests in thanking Miss Hobbs for a delightful time.

We understand that a gentleman living East of the Station, is on the watch for a young man from here who visited his daughter Sunday night. The horse took it into his head not to wait after a certain hour for his driver and walked off with the hitching post. He was met on the road and his ownership being established by the post he was returned. We think the trouble can be satisfactorily adjusted by replacing the post.

Lost in the Fog. Even old hunters, who have roamed the plains and mountains until they are familiar with every foot of the ground, are liable under peculiar circumstances to become bewildered.

But more troublesome than such an attack is the coming of a fog. In a few minutes the peaks and headlands, the guides by which the traveller lays his course, are obscured and the sun is hidden.

One morning, though there was every indication that a fog might roll down by noon, they started for a hunt. Several deer fell to their rifles, when the sun came running, and exclaimed: "Father, the fog is coming. We must leave the deer; the sun is hidden and we have not a compass. Hurry!"

They started on a run, but had not gone far before day was turned into night, and objects at two rods distance were obscured. The son, a ranchman, familiar with the mountains, stopped, leaned on his rifle and said:

"Father, we are in a bad fix. All depends on my keeping my head level. Please don't give me any counsel, or object to anything I say or do. It will only confuse me, and then we shall be lost. I will do my best."

"Before I take up silence," answered the father, "let me say this: We are now on the ascent; by keeping up as long as it continues, we must come to some hilltop, which is our only chance for an outlook if the fog should break a little."

"It is a good thought, and may save us," replied the son, leading the way up into clearer ground, and then to the summit. It was barely noon, but the fog made it as dark as night. Even from the summit there was no outlook.

"I will climb that fir; perhaps I can see from above," said the son. He went up sixty feet, no outlook. "May I speak, my son?"

"Yes, for I am all at sea." "Well, just beyond the top of the fir is the faintest show of more light than elsewhere. If so, that is the sun, and that is the south, for it is noon."

"Then," said the son pointing his finger, "that is east, and there is our camp. Don't lose the direction, for I can't keep it up here."

He came down and took the direction. By keeping near objects directly ahead and moving carefully from one to another, the two men came within an hour to a black cattle-house standing at his stake, his body dripping with the rain-like mist.

"Father, it's Jack," exclaimed his son, as the horse gave a faint neigh; "we are safe home! God bless you! You didn't bother me today."

Two other men of the company were lost that day in the fog, and wandered off west instead of going east. They were out all night, and were set right by some Indians. They had to travel forty miles to reach the cabin.—Youths Companion.

How to Stop Bleeding. If a man is wounded so that blood flows, that flow is either regular, or by jets or spurts. If it flows regularly, a vein has been wounded, and a string should be bound tightly around below the wounded part, that is, beyond it from the heart. If the blood comes out by leaps or jets, an artery has been severed, and the person may bleed to death in a few minutes; to prevent which apply the cord above the wound, that is, between the wound and the heart. In case a string or cord is not at hand, tie the two opposite corners of a handkerchief around the limb, put a stick between and turn around until the handkerchief is twisted sufficiently tight to stop bleeding, and keep it so until a physician can be had.

Curious Cacti in Washington

Most strange and grotesque of the plants at the Botanic Garden are the cacti. They would seem to have been created by nature in a freakish and irresponsible mood. One might imagine them to properly belong to some other world than this, only half alive, as they seem and assuming such extraordinary and absurd forms. Certain naturalists have imagined that they must be relics of a vegetation belonging to a period long prior to the development of the plant life familiar to the present generation.

The larger forms, some towering to fifty feet in height, the other individuals weighing a ton or more, plentifully adorn the Mexican landscape, which in many parts obtains an aspect extremely weird from these astonishing growths. That country, in fact, contains three-fourths of the entire number of varieties known. Nature provides the cacti with spines in order to save them from being eaten by animals. Horses are very fond of them, and will frequently devour them after kicking off the prickly surface with their hoofs.

There are few known plants which afford such beautiful examples of symmetrical structure as the "mammillaria" group of cacti, many of which resemble exquisite pieces of mechanism finished with utmost minuteness and accuracy. Others might be imagined to have undergone a kind of crystallization, their whole surface being frosted over in geometrical patterns.

It is from a species of cactus that cochineal is obtained, and for the purpose of gathering from it the insects so valuable in commerce, great estates are planted with it in the West Indies, Algeria, the Canary Islands and India. The plants are set in rows, trimmed to the height of four or five feet. In August or September of each year is the season for what is called the "sowing," when the field hands attach to the cacti, by means of thorns, leaves covered with female bugs, which are thus left, in order that they may produce their young. The latter quickly swarm over the plants, from which they are removed four months later with blunt knives. This process is a tedious one, 70,000 being required to make a pound. Finally the insects are killed by immersion in boiling water and dried in the sun, that being the condition in which they are exported.

One of the most surprising curiosities in this branch of the animal kingdom is the "Old Man cactus," which derives its name from the silvery white hairs that cover the upper part of the stem, giving it a peculiar resemblance to the hoary head of an aged man. The hairs are in reality soft, weak spines. When the plant is grown in the house it is best accommodated in a glass case, inasmuch as dust will otherwise render the hairs dingy, and impart to the old gentleman a very disreputable appearance.—Globe Democrat.

Antiquity of the Electric Light. Those who suppose the electric light to be a production of the present decade will be able to correct their apprehension of the subject after reading the following item: From the Scientific American, December 9, 1848.

"NEW ELECTRICAL LIGHT. 'The inventors of a new electrical light, exhibited at the Western Literary Institution, Leicester Square, London, on its recent reopening under the new auspices, expect, it is said, to apply it generally to shop and street illumination, and they state that while the conveying will cost no more than gas, the expense of illumination will be one-twelfth the price of the latter light. The current of electricity in passing the two pieces of charcoal which form the poles of the circuit, and are excluded from all access of air, gives, in this case, it is said, an intense and beautiful white light, with the effect of daylight to a much greater extent than the lime does, and having this advantage, that it is sustained and continuous. If Messrs. Strate & Petrie can thus produce a steady and sustained light they have accomplished what has hitherto been the sole preventive to the substitution of galvanism for gas. The Mechanics' Magazine states that this one light completely eclipsed ten gas lights and an oxyhydrogen. The gas companies had better look out. The dissatisfaction of the public with their mismanagement may have begotten a rival destined to eclipse many more than merely ten of their gas lights."

A RECIPE.

BY ANNA M. PRATT.

Take energy and patience, And mix them well together, With plenty of good nature That laughs in cloudy weather.

Add earnestness of purpose In everything you plan, And much determination To do the best you can.

Do this with conscientious care, And I think that you'll confess You've never found a better rule For making true success.

—Golden Days.

The difficulty in this cold world is that too many fellows want to stand with their backs to the fire.

MANY persons admire the bouquet of fine wines, but most any kind of liquor will make the nose gay, if you use enough of it.

The Reason Why.

The reason why a fly is generally monarch absolute of a bald head is because there is no hair apparent.

"How old is your boy?" "He's old enough now not to be old enough to know that he don't know some thing that he'll know when he's a little older.

A SOLUTION of olive oil and camphor is claimed to be efficacious for hay fever. Prepare it by gently warming some olive oil and a small lump of camphor together for several hours. Apply it by oiling the inside of the nostrils.

What Three Days' Work Will Do.

Edward Atkinson, the statistician, is credited with having shown distinctly that one man's work in Minnesota for one day produces the flour which one man would consume in a year; that another man's work for one day carries it to the market, and that a third man's work for one day puts it into bread and on the table. That is to say, three days' work of one man is enough to produce the bread which one man eats in a year.

It is something a little strange in the history of language — that the word science which is derived from a latin word which means to know, should be employed to indicate things of which men absolutely know nothing. Yet are they who claim to be scientific most exacting in demanding that nothing shall be accepted as true, which cannot be proven by facts. In many instances the facts are well enough — but that they establish theories which are founded on them is an unwarranted declaration. Wonderfully few of the many propositions presented by scientific men are established beyond controversy.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. mar 6-ly

Where Wheat is Grown.

The United States ranks as the first wheat growing country in the world, with an annual production of 450,000,000 to 525,000,000 bushels, but what country comes in second? Most people would probably say Russia, but the Philadelphia Ledger shows that the answer would be wrong. It will astonish many to be told that France takes rank next after the United States, with a crop of from 300,000,000 to 325,000,000 bushels. India comes in third, with 250,000,000 bushels; Russia fourth, with 210,000,000 bushels; while Austro-Hungary produces about 140,000,000, Italy and Spain about 125,000,000 bushels each. Germany considerably less than 100,000,000 bushels and Great Britain and Ireland from 65,000,000 to 85,000,000 bushels.
