THE OLD YEAR'S BLESSING.

BY ADELAIDE A. PROCTOR.

I am fading from you, but one draweth near Called the angel-guardian of the coming year.

If my gifts and graces coldly you forget, Let the New Year's Angel bless and crown them yet.

For we work together; he and I are one;
Let him end and perfect all I leave undone.

I brought Good Desires, though as yet but seeds;
Let the New Year make them blossom into Deeds.

I brought Joy to brighten many happy days;
Let the New Year's Angel turn it into Praise.

If I gave you Sickness, if I brought you Care, Let him make one Patience and the other Prayer.

Where I brought you Sorrow, through his care at length
It may rise triumphant into future Strength.

If I brought you Plenty, all wealth's bounteous charms, Shall not the new Angel turn them into Aims?

I gave health and leisure, skill to dream and plan;
Let him make them nobler,—work for God and man.

If I broke your Idols, showed you they were dust, Let him turn the Knowledge into heavenly Trust.

If I brought Temptation, let Sin die away Into boundless Pity for all hearts that stray.

If your list of Errors dark and long appears,
Let this new-born Monarch melt them into Tears.

May you hold this Angel dearer than the last,—
So I bless his Future, while he crowns my Past.

The Shrine of Drahomira.

A LEGEND OF BOHEMIA.

BY MONA CAIRD.

From the Philadelphia Weekly Times.

In the Middle Ages Bohemia was a wild land of mountains and forests, where no one dared to venture out of his house or beyond the walls of his town without carrying arms.

In the heart of this romantic country nestled the quiet old town of Eger, the scene of Wallenstein's rebellion and of his treacherous murder. The Egerland is now a wide stretch of fertile plain, encir-led by a line of blue mountains, a little retired world, where even to this day the customs of ancestors dating far back into history continue to regulate the lives of the simple inhabitants. The houses of the peasant farmers are all built on one immemorial pattern; their inmates wear the same style of garments, unvarying even to a button; they sleep in gaily-painted four-post bedsteads, carefully contained round, and quaff vast potations of beer out of big tin or earthenware flagons. The Egerlanders stand apart from their neighbors as absolutely as if miles of sea girded their little territory instead of a circuit of hills. Once inside this line of enchantment the traveler finds himself half constrained to take life on medieval terms, so potent is the Old World atmosphere, so strange the charm of the quaint superstitions and childlike worship of the people.

In this plain, dotted by many shrines, there is one in particular which stands at the foot of a hill crowned by a large church, whose strange Byzantine-looking cupola of zinc or copper painted red, can be seen for miles across the plain. It is presided over by a bright blue virgin, whose cerulean eyes had been tinted with the same paint that stained her robe, slightly diluted. On the shrine grateful pilgrims have hung up numerous quaint thank offerings, from having been preserved from illness or accident. It was raised on this spot five centuries ago by a Baron Zwaptolik, one of the great Bohemian nobles, in thanksgiving for the rescue of his only daughter from the murderous assault of a robber chieftain, whose powerful band was at that time infesting the district.

Drahomira, dark of hair and swift of foot, with her brilliant brown eyes and rich complexion, was one of the wealthiest heiresses in the kingdom, and her hand had been eagerly sought by the sons of the neighboring nobles, not only for her beauty but for her riches.

Among these aspirants was one who had long loved her with faithful devotion, in spite of the cold and scornful treatment which either coquetry or aversion appeared to inspire in her. The only consolation of the young Count Vladislav was the fact that Drahomira behaved to her other suitors in exactly the same manner. She had no wish to leave the home where she was idolized by her indulgent old father, who since her mother's death had lavished all his affections upon their only child.

"If I married it would be all gain for my lord and all loss for me," she used to say with her brilliant smile; "I pray you, good knight, pay your court to some unhappy maiden, who, in becoming your wife, may reach something better than her present state, since she cannot achieve a worse!"

Vladislav would watch the selfwilled lady moving among the brilliant company, gracious and smiling, yet ever ready to hold at a distance the most persistent of aspirants.

This firmness of character makes her subsequent conduct appear all the more incomprehensible. The first hint of a change of demeanor occurred about the time of a very strange event which created a stir throughout all Bohemia. One of the daughters of a great seigneur had, on the very eve of her wedding, disappeared from her home, and though search had been made far and wide, no trace of her could be found. The expectant bridegroom had also vanished. People were talking about this incident all around, and their blood was chilled with a presage of coming evil.

"A jealous and disappointed suitor must have carried her off," said one.

"An enemy of the bridegroom has taken them both away, and is keeping them prisoners," another suggested, and so on ran the surmises. Drahomira, usually so bold and fearless, was white to the lips, and she started if any one spoke suddenly to her.

"Beloved and gracious lady," said Vladislav; "fear nothing. No evil shall befall you while I am by your side. Had I but the right to be always your protector what unspeakable joy would be mine." At these words, to everybody's dismay, Drahomira swooned.

When at last she opened her eyes, she turned instinctively towards the great window, and a look of terror came into them which startled everyone. She had seen for less than a second the face of a man with dark hair and eyes staring straight into the room. The next instant the face had gone and only the surging forest was to be seen from the deep-set windows.

II.

Drahomira was as full of life as usual during that evening. Her gayety would have seemed wild and feverish to any one who knew what she had seen. Vladislav looked gloomy. The Baron's daughter avoided him and he thought she made herself needlessly agreeable to a jackanapes in a crimson doublet, who followed her everywhere. To Vladislav's

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

What does this greeting mean? It passes glibly from mouth to mouth as every New Year draws upon the earth and no one stops to ask if the Old Year, whose history is now finished, brought to any life the fulfillment of all that is included in the friendly greeting which we hear and repeat so thoughtlessly at the close of every weary year.

As the Old Year slowly moves to its place in the dim corridors of the past, do we not feel as though all the disasters and disappointments to which we were subjected whilst travelling with him towards eternity must drop from our lives when his work is ended and the last echo of his retreating footsteps has been lost in the ringing shout of welcome to his successor?

The "Glad New Year" comes to every one of us, unclouded by sorrow and unshaded by sin and we accept him as a harbinger of better things for the future, unmindful of the mystery in which our lives are hid and of the hopes and disappointments with which the record of every year is filled.

We doubt, if any could be found, to whom the year just closing brought what was looked and hoped for at the beginning; yet 1891 has been full to overflowing with all the blessings which peace, plenty and prosperity can bring.

Though blighted homes and shattered fortunes, though sickness, death and crime throw their shadows over many parts of its history, its brightness is preeminent, and marks it, in our land at least as one of unexampled prosperity.

May its successor bring health and prosperity as well as strength to bear our burdens bravely. May he have more of good than evil to record of all of us, as each day's history closes, whilst we journey with him towards the setting sun, then will this, in reality, be a Happy New Year to all who greet its advent.

The Kittanning, Pa., Union Free Press advocates the appointment of Joseph Buffington, Esq., of that place to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Judge Reed in the United States Court in that district. The Free Press says:

Among the applicants for the position are ex-Judge Fetterman, of Allegheny; John M. Greer, of Butler; W. D. Wallace, of Lawrence, and Jos. Buffington, of our own county.

So far in the contest it is generally conceded that the able applicant from this county has the lead in the race. Mr. Buffington is recognized as one of the most able jurists in Pennsylvania and his practice extends throughout nearly every county in the Western part of the State. The marked success which has followed him in bringing to a successful issue the greater part of the cases intrusted to his care has gained for him a reputation that will live in the memory of the people long after he has departed from this life.

The appointment of Mr. Buffington will meet with the general approval of the people in this district of the United States Court and it is generally acknowledged that he is the best suited man for the position among all the applicants, who hold him in the highest respect and esteem. If Mr. Buffington secures the appointment, which is almost certain, he will prove an honor to his native county and we can all feel a just pride in his appointment.

Mr. Buffington is well known here, and his many friends in Emmitsburg would be much pleased to hear of his appointment to the responsible position of a judgeship in the United States District Court. Mr. Buffington's wife is a daughter of Rev. Dr. Simonton of this place.

AN EX-CABINET OFFICIAL.

Sudden Death of Grant's Postmaster General at Elkton, Md.

ELKTON, Md., Dec. 24.—Hon. John A. J. THE CHILEAN SITUATION.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The changes in the situation of the Chilean affair are kaleidoscopic and instantaneous in their nature, and go from one extreme to another. None could be more radically different than this sentiment about state war and navy building yards from that of yesterday. Then was all bustle, and the feeling was decidedly pugnacious. The departments were comparatively deserted, and look as though the possibility of war is very remote. A dispatch from the navy department is hint that the cause of the sudden subsidence of war talk was due to the fact that congress could not be depended on for supplying the necessary funds, to carry on a campaign against Chile. What authority there is for this statement was not stated. It seemed to be in the air, but was more substantial than mere wind.

Sentiment in the state department crossed the projected expectation of things to the influence of the English in Chile. It is said that the Chilean authorities would be told plainly that England would not suffer them to jeopardize the interests of its subjects in Chile, and that the territory of Peru, as a conflict with the United States certainly would do, and that therefore an amicable understanding must be reached with this government. In this connection, the visit of Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister, to Mr. Blaine, which immediately preceded the lengthy conference between the secretary and Minister Montt Monday, is regarded as significant. The cabinet meeting yesterday at which all the members were present, except Secretary Elihu, was unusually large, and it is understood that Chilean affairs formed the principal topic of discussion. If any change of policy or view occurred in the high cabinet, it was not made known. A prominent army officer who served on the staff of one of the great generals in the rebellion, and has a personal knowledge of South America, gained from his travels and service on that continent, talks about the situation freely. His opinions are deserving of consideration on account of his extended military experience and his familiarity with the country. "In this matter as to the Chilean or war," he said, "from what I know of the people I think it is out of the question to expect an apology from them, and they are just spoiling for a fight. Of course the army would take a prominent part in case of war, as it would not be thought advisable to have a force for land operations."

"The only parts of Chile are Valparaiso and Iquique. Peru would be only too glad of an opportunity to ally herself with any strong nation against Chile, and her ports might be available to us. Iquique itself was taken from Peru by the Chileans, and she would be eager to enter into a fight, which would at least give her a reason for her lost territory. The talk about Chile being a difficult country for military operations is a mistake. It does not compare with our western states in that respect. All of the necessary supplies would be right at hand. All we would have to do would be to capture them. It would be just like fighting the Mexicans, only further away. As far as the personnel of the two forces is concerned, there would be no comparison. Our officers are infinitely superior to the Chileans in every requirement for modern warfare. Their training is far ahead. The Chileans might be good in a rough and tumble fight, but for scientific operations they would be nowhere."

Chile's President Installed.
SANTIAGO, Dec. 28.—The amnesty bill has been passed. Many Balmacedistas have been sent aboard the gunboat Magellanes, owing to the attempts of the president to create disorder. Sixty thousand Chileans witnessed the proclamation of Admiral Montt as president. There were only 1,000 troops to keep order along the route of the procession, a distance of five miles. Admiral Montt took the oath of office in the hall of congress in the presence of a brilliant gathering of officials. All foreign ministers were present except Minister Egan. United States representative, General W. W. Russell, presided at the cathedral, where he was received by the archbishop and bishops, and the "Te Deum" was sung. Salvoes of artillery greeted the various ceremonies. Perfect order was maintained.

A THEATER HORROR.

Ten People Crushed and Strangled to Death in a Fire Panic.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—A frightful panic occurred Saturday night in the Royal theater, at Gaietyland, resulting in the loss of a number of lives. A fire broke out in a room at the rear of the theater, and the whole population was engaged in making the places of amusement are usually crowded on Saturday nights.

A boy who was smoking accidentally dropped a burning match on the people below him. The match set fire to some of the theatrical furniture, exactly what is not yet known, but at any rate the slight blaze communicated to a partition. A woman noticed the fire and shrieked that the theater was burning. At once the audience, which had been all attention to the play, was aroused, and not comprehending the exact danger, made a sudden and simultaneous rush to escape.

The strong, hearty men from iron works and mills showed no pity for the weaker sex. If a woman or child fell beneath the strain, she or it was at once crushed under the feet of the men. Men climbed on each other's heads and sought to tread over the squirming mass of humanity to safety. Women pleaded for their little ones, holding them above their heads as far as arms could reach, and the women's shrieks and cries being squeezed out of them, were saved in several instances by being grasped in the strong hands of men able to hold them with one arm above the crowd.

Down the main staircase the multitude struggled and pushed. The janitor, Porter, had rushed to open the door at the foot of the stairs. The solid crowd fell on him like an immense Krupp hammer, crushing the life out of his body, which was flattened to the door. Down with him went the eight or ten at the head of the mass, and they, too, had the lives stamped out of them.

Two men thinking they had no other way of escape leaped from the windows into the street, and were severely injured. Many slid down into the pit by the support of the balcony.

When the theater was finally emptied and the panic over, it was found that ten were dead and that many others were injured, and were otherwise seriously injured.

The fire itself, which had given occasion to the horror, was a slight affair.

accident on Tuesday. He was hauling a four-horse load of lumber from Springer's saw mill, and while coming down a steep hill the brake lever broke and threw him head foremost to the ground. Regaining his feet quickly, he caught the saddle horse by the bridle and forced him back with a sudden jerk, breaking the breast chain.
Notwithstanding all these disadvantages he succeeded in stopping the team without further breakage.

"Away! Away! There is danger here!
A terrible phantom is bending near!
With no human look, with no human breath,
He stands beside thee—the hunter—
Death!"

If there is one disease more than another that comes like the unbidden guest at a banquet, it is Catarrh. Insistently it steals upon you, "with no human breath," it gradually, like the octopus, winds its coils about you and crushes you. But there is a medicine, called Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, that can tear you away from the monster, and turn the scythes' point of the reaper.
The makers of this wonderful remedy offer, in good faith, a standing reward of $500 for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head.

Not excelled by any high-priced liniment, Salvation Oil, twenty-five cents a bottle.

P. T. BARNES thought that he had got the nineteenth century boom in Jumbo, but he forgot the great excitement and hope soon to be able to move with his family from "Springfield," the residence of Mr. Humrichouse, to his own home in Hagerstown, which has recently been improved.

Hon. Louis E. McConas was able, on Saturday to come down stairs for the first time during his severe illness. He is now rapidly recovering his strength and hopes soon to be able to move with his family from "Springfield," the resi-
home in Hagerstown, which has recently been improved.

Joseph Shadle was shot and almost instantly killed by officer, Elmer O. Crouse in Littlestown last Thursday night, and his brother Frank Shadle was also wounded in the arm by a ball from the officer's revolver. The unfortunate affair was the outgrowth of an attack upon the officer, who attempted to arrest Jos. Shadle on a warrant from the bargess. Officer Crouse surrendered himself to the authorities and was released on $5,000 bail for his appearance at the next term of the circuit court.
The officers of the town council, becoming his bondsmen, A coroner jury rendered a verdict that Shadle was shot by the officer in self-defence while in the discharge of his duty.

Frightful Shipwrecks.

Staunch ships strike and founder, the fierce winds and mountainous waves sweep bold mariners' hearts of oak to shipwreck and to death, yet not prevent the unbridled landsmen from risking his life on the stormy Atlantic in the role of tourist or commercial traveler. But the shall reach his destination safely well scarcely have escaped some of the qualms of sea sickness, unless he takes with him Hosetter's Stomach Bitters, that infallible specific for nausea. Bad water on long trips are a threat to the voyage but this may be avoided in a great measure by the use of the Bitters. It cleanses the bowels and liver by the Bitters.
Against the profligate effects of malaria, bad digestion, indigestion, and all other ailments.
It cures, moreover, rheumatism and kidney twenty-five cents in a bottle of Salvation Oil. It kills pain!

When we reflect that so many human beings die of Consumption we must come to the conclusion that everybody should be provided with Dr. Bull's friend.

LETTER FROM ST. JOSEPH, MO.

A Former Resident Furnishes an Interesting Account of the Doings of Old Emmitsburg.

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 23.—I am sure this letter needs no apology for your paper has always exhibited a genuine interest in the welfare and happiness of the Maryland boys who have left the old homestead to seek fortune and fame in distant portions of the country. Myriamland has sent many of her sons as emigrants and pioneers to perform their part in the development of the mighty west. And I may say with a pardonable pride that they have risen in many cases to eminence, honor and wealth.
Mr. Lester, the Chicago millionaire merchant, was a native of the little burg near Monterey, which bears his name.
So was Henry L. Yesler, of Tacoma, now over four score years of age and probably the wealthiest man in the new State of Washington.

In the ecclesiastical world our little hamlet has won pre-eminence and national renown. As Virginia is said to be Mother of Presidents, so may Mt. St.
Mary's be said to be the Mother of the Catholic Priesthood. Bishops, Archbishops and even Cardinals have won their way in classic precincts and shady groves, and drank deep draughts of knowledge from its Pierian springs. It is the alma mater of Archbishop Hughes, of Cardinals McCloskey and Gibbons, and many lesser but shining lights of the Roman Church. The mention of Cardinal McCloskey recalls to memory that of his namesake, Rev.
John McCloskey, who for so many years was vice-president of this famous school of learning—and whose deeds of charity, love and mercy will live forever as a grand memory in the hearts and homes of his people. To the worldly he was a veritable Apollo—the incarnation of manly beauty and dignity—while in the grace and charm of his manners, in polished address and in knights of love and honor. The joyous Cavaliers, worthy the proudest days of romance and chivalry. Who does not remember, who ever saw him, his superb figure on horseback and his striking resemblance to the "Father of his Country" as the artist portrays him.

But pardon the digression. And now back to the subject upon which the joyous season of "Peace on earth, good will to men" our hearts and memories revert to the "Old Folks" at home and the friends of our boyhood. Though absent in form they are present in recollection, and will be glad to learn the latest news of the little hamlet of the Maryland Colony in St. Joseph.

First there is C. A. Taney, who has had a very successful business career in this city. He has one of the finest retail stores, in fact the leading one in the city of its kind, the famous Hong Kong & Co., on Edmund St. His business is increasing so fast and his capital enlarging to such an extent that he is about to embark in the jobbing trade.
From a sewing machine peddler to an importing merchant is a pretty rapid rise, and he has made it in a big way.
His success has not spoiled Clifford.
He is the same bright, cheerful, genial, handsome "Cliff," a general favorite with all the boys and to whom we all yield the palm as the Chesterfield of the Maryland Colony.

Then there is the trio of Waddles boys, Sam, Howard and Charlie, and commercial travelers for the great house of Tootle, Hosea & Co. These three brothers form a great combination.
Howard and Charlie travel in Kansas territory, and Smith in Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and California. These boys are all making a mighty big mark in the business world, and are already on the high road of prosperity and wealth. Smith Waddles stands at the head of the procession. He is an ideal salesman. His tact, genial ways, kindness of heart, and the wants of his trade, his generosity, wit and bonhomie make him a thrice welcome visitor wherever he goes. His seductive influence is equally effective upon the rural merchant whether he be a German or Frenchman, Englishman or Jew or Indian. He is a "daisy" and no mistake. He bears a great resemblance to Pete McDevitt in one trait at least—he could not officiate as hired mourner at a funeral because he could not keep from laughing at the funeral services.

Then there is Jolly, gay and reluctant Pete McDevitt, the son of his father and a chip of the old block for all the world. He is light-hearted and free and merry as a lark all the day long.
He is a real "Rosy O'Moore." Though Pete may have a tear in his eye—there's a smile on his lip. If his purse was equal to his generosity he would be the richest man in St. Joseph. Well do I remember when he came here with a fortune of about $25.00, and no capital but his own industry and honesty.
He is now the wholesale house of Brittain, Smith & Co., and is rapidly rising in promotion.

Eugene Sweeney is one of the firm of Van Natta, Lynde & Co., wholesale druggists, and Paul has a responsible position with the C. D. Smith Drug Co.
Both of the wholesale drug houses here were founded by two good townsmen C. D. and Samuel I. Smith.

Joe Martin has been for years with the John DeCline Plating Mill Co.
Will and Eugene are both locomotive engineers. The latter is at Lima, Ohio.

"Tip" Wise, who is known to the older residents, is living in Leavenworth, Kansas, and traveling for a house here.

Chas. Guthrie is still a popular knight of the grip for Van Natta, Lynde & Co.
Billy Gilson is a faithful employee of Tootle, Hosea & Co.

Harry Troxell is one of the best bricklayers in the city. Win. Troxell is a successful commercial tourist for Robert Douglass' quonsetware house, and Richard and Frank Stein hold responsible positions in the Union Pacific and Terminal Railroad offices.

W. S. Guthrie is the owner of the big Empire Storage Co., and is doing well.
His extensive real estate is well placed with their western home. His son Charlie is becoming quite a famous singer and won high praise before a select and fashionable audience at Kansas City.

And so I might continue the list, but it would perhaps make this letter too long. I cannot close however, without alluding to your own name which is quite numerous here as in Emmitsburg.
W. D. B. Motter is President of the Terminal Railroad Co. His brother Lon is with Nave, McCon & Co., the big grocery house. Col. John is one of the best known and most enterprising men in the city. Joshua Motter is a partner in Tootle, Hosea & Co., and one of the brightest and most solid business men in this city. His son Sam a splendid specimen of physical manhood and brilliant talents, is here on his vacation from Yale, where he stands high in a class of over 700.

Wishing all the good people of Emmitsburg a joyous and joyous New Year, and many kind wishes for their prosperity, I am truly yours, Geo. P. Rowe.
