TIRED MOTHERS.

MAY RILEY SMITH.

A little elbow leans upon your knee, Your tired knee, that has so much to bear;
A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly From underneath a thatch of tangled hair;
Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch Of warm, moist fingers folding yours so tight,
You do not prize this blessing over-much—You almost are too tired to pray tonight!

But it is blessedness! A year ago I did not see it as I do to-day.
We are so dull and thankless, and too slow
To catch the sunshine ere it slips away.
And now it seems surpassing strange to me
That while I wore the badge of motherhood
I did not kiss more oft and tenderly The little child that brought me only good!

And if some night when you sat down to rest
You missed this elbow from your tired knee, This restless, curling head from off your breast, This hissing tongue that chatters constantly!

If from your own the dimpled hand had slipped,
And ne'er would settle in your palm again;
If the white feet into their grave had tripped, I could not blame you for your heartache then!

I wonder so that mothers ever fret At little children clinging to their gown;
Or that the footprints, when the days are wet,
Are ever black enough to make them frown!

If I could find a little muddy boot, Or cap or jacket on my chamber floor, If I could kiss a rosy, restless foot, And hear its patter in my house once more;

If I could mend a broken cart to-day, To-morrow make a kite to reach the sky,
There is no woman in God's world could say She was more blissfully content than I.

But, ah! the dainty pillow next my own
Is never rumbled by a shining head; My singing birdling from the nest is flown—
The little boy I used to kiss is dead!

HIS CHANCE AT LAST.

The Story of a Theatrical Career and its Ending.
By HARRY HOW.

From the Strand Magazine.
Clement and Henry Walford were twin brothers—how like and yet how unlike. In appearance there was everything to lead one to see that they could both lay claim to the same birthday; their faces were identical, their figures the same. Fortune, however, had placed them in totally distinct channels. Their mother, in her day (for she had been dead these twenty years), was an actress of rare ability, and people had crowded the theatres night after night to follow her impressive acting. Both her sons had inherited her talents in no small measure, and two years previous to her death they had launched out in their first struggle to win fresh laurels for the name around which all that was gifted had gathered. Talents, alas! may live and shine, yet they may live and scarcely flicker. To-day these two men were brothers only in name.
The gifts of the one had been recognized by a fickle public, the abilities of the other never even had a thought.

Clement Walford! His name was on everybody's lips. The critics gave him columns in the papers, theatrical managers almost knelt at his feet, and paid eagerly the money he demanded to secure his services; society held open its doors, and the great actor entered at his ease. And Henry? A struggler—nothing more; a disappointed struggler. Clever, but unknown; gifted, but unheard of. His brother's success may have cut him, but it never discouraged him. He labored on, still hopeful. Whilst the popular man was rich in London, the other was hovering on the very edge of poverty. There were times when he had been forced to write to his brother a letter asking for help, but no reply ever came. The poor man's wife had even knocked at the great actor's door; but the response from a servant's lips was that "Mr. Walford was engaged."

And so the brothers lived. The one utterly oblivious to the ties of relationship, the other hoping for recognition and reconciliation at last. Clement Walford's triumph was at hand. Ilitherto Shakespeare's characters had with him remained untouched, but paragraphs in the newspapers had just appeared announcing the fact that it was his intention to appear at an early date as Hamlet. Everybody, from manager to public, was sanguine of a great success; it was the topic of the clubs, the conversation of the critics. Clement Walford himself felt inwardly comfortable and satisfied that failure with him could never be. Success! Success! Success! He harped on that word at night, saw the dream of his life realized as he walked the streets to rehearsal and heard the enthusiasm of the people, and watched them clamoring there, even in the empty theatre, as scene by scene was gone through at rehearsal on the stage.

In all this he was alone with himself. He thought of Clement Walford and of him alone. A brother!
He had none. The other had had the same chances—why did he not take them? If a man, even his own flesh and blood, snapped his fingers at his opportunities, was it for him to put them in his grasp?

The night drew near. The day before the performance had arrived and the last rehearsal had been held.
Clement Walford returned to his rooms. He stood before the gilded mantelpiece and looked into the glass. He started back! He felt giddy. Again he looked into the mirror with straining eye. He had never seen such a deathly pallor on his face before. He smiled at his foolishness. He attempted to reach a chair, but found his feet would scarcely carry him. Make what effort he might his head was dropping on to his breast, he felt his hands trembling and looked at them to see if it was true.

"Excitement—strain—anxiety—nervousness—overdoing it," he cried; "a drink of water—brandy—will set me right. Where's the bell-rope? Ah! there it is," and crawling towards the cord, across the room, he just managed to reach it when he fell to the ground.

When he awoke he lay in bed, the doctor standing by. He lifted his eyes towards those of the doctor.

"Why—why am I here? How long have I been here? Is this—the first night?" he asked.

"You have been here a few hours, that is all," was the doctor's reply.
"Lie quite still—keep your hands in bed, now."

"Thank God! Thank God!" the man said, "I was afraid it was the first night. What's the matter with me? What's the matter with me? Why don't you answer? Don't look at me like that; answer me!"

"You have been doing too much lately—you are not strong."

"Not strong!"

"And nothing but perfect rest will bring you round again," the doctor said. "You have—"

"What? what? Tell me quickly!"

"You have broken a blood vessel!"

The man looked at the doctor for a moment. Then he rose in his bed. His voice was scarcely dis-cernible; it was cold and harsh; it was not the voice of a man whose tone had fascinated all its hearers.
He looked the medical man wildly in the face. He asked quietly at first:

"Do you know what to-morrow night is? No; of course you don't.
But I do. It is the first night of Hamlet, and I shall be there—there, with the house before me, hanging on every word I utter. Do you think this bed will hold me from my triumph, do you think you, or the warning of any man, will prevent me from welcoming the hour of my success? Not strong! you don't know me. You are a stranger to my strength.

Don't speak a word. I shall only ridicule your warning. I tell you, you don't know me. Take your hand away—take it away. What do you say? Rest—rest here, or I must—what! Die? Die! You talk madly. No, no, I shall live!
Live in myself for years, live in the memory of all for ever. After tomorrow night! Give me a drink of water!"

With trembling hands the man refused the aid of the doctor, but lifted the glass to his lips and gulping down the contents. Hour after hour passed! the night had gone, and with the first signs of the approaching day the doctor—who had remained a faithful watcher all through the night—drew aside the window-curtains, and the light streamed in upon the man as he lay in his bed. It lit up the face of a man whose life was fast going.
He looked almost pitifully towards the doctor.

"I shall be there to-night, eh?" he asked. "I mustn't disappoint them, doctor. Let me run through my lines with you. Do! There is my Shakespeare—there, on that table by the window. It was my mother's gift. Bring it to me carefully."

The doctor silently did as he was bid. He knew that he was obeying the wishes of one for whom he could not do much more. When he turned his head he saw that the dying man had raised himself in the bed.

"Turn to the Third Act—the First Scene. I enter. Listen now, and tell me what effect this has upon you. Listen!"

"To be, or not to be—that is the question—Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles, And, by opposing, end them? To die —to sleep—
No more—and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heartache, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to—'tis a consummation Devoutly to be wished. To die—to sleep—
To sleep! perchance to dream; ay, there's the rub—
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come."

"Why do you stare at me? Keep your eyes on the book and not on me."

"For in that sleep of death what dreams may come."

Then the man stopped. He murmured these words yet again and again; then, turning to the doctor, he told him what he well knew—that he was dying.

"Do you know what would be my dream in that long sleep?" he asked wildly and yet plaintively.
"I will tell you. My brother! He would mock at me that I was snapped off in the very moment of my triumph. He would point at me and laugh. I, who had refused to hold out a helping hand to him and exert my influence to better his position. Oh! I couldn't bear that!
Harry, Harry, old fellow, if I could only see you again, if I could only see you again, if I could only ask you to forgive me before it is too late; if I—doctor," he cried suddenly, "I must see my brother Harry! I must see him! You'll find his address in that desk—send for him. Tell him his brother Clem wants to speak to him and do at last what he has always refused.
There, in that desk."

The doctor quietly laid the patient's head upon the pillow. Then he told him that which brought a wild smile of gladness to his pallid face. He laughed at the news.
His brother Harry was below waiting even then. When the doctor saw that the man was dying, he had asked the servants if their master had any relations living. They only knew of one—a brother he never saw, a brother who only a few days before had knocked at the door, and had gone away unseen.

They knew his address, for he had left it. He had come up to London hoping against hope that still the great actor would endeavor to get him an engagement. So the doctor telegraphed to him, and he had only just that moment come.

"Send him to me—now—at once," the dying man said in a voice now weak. "Tell him, before he comes up, that his brother Clem is longing to see him."

The doctor went to the door and called; and when he saw Henry Walford ascending the stairs, he started in surprise. How like these two men were; how wonderfully like. But one, though poverty had lined his story upon his face, looked strong and well, the other man was dying fast. Quietly he entered.

"Harry, old fellow," one said, lifting a hand out of bed with a last strength.

"Clem! Clem!" the other cried, taking the proffered hand and putting the other arm around his neck and lifting his head up. Then the two men kissed each other.

"Harry, old boy, I'm dying! I know it. I shall have missed tonight, shan't I? But I've found you. Come nearer to me and listen! Harry, I've been cruel to you—you forgive me?"

The other clasped his hand.
"No, no; say it! Say, 'I forgive you!'"

"Clem, my brother; I forgive you, Clem," Henry Walford said, through his tears.

"I shan't be able to talk much, so I must say it quickly. A little water—just wet my lips. Thank you—thank you, old fellow. Now, listen earnestly to me. Come very near. Harry, your chance has come at last—and to-night. You can take it in my stead, for I shan't be here. You know the part? Ah!
I thought so—you have played it many times. But mine—mine is a daring plot. There is my fur coat on the back of that chair—put it on. Yes; never mind about letting go my hand—put it on Harry."

Henry Walford did so.

"Yes—yes—it is myself. Go down to the theatre to-night. Walk in at the stage door without saying a word. They will touch their hats to you and let you pass. Go to my room—it is the first on the left.
Make-up—dress—everything is there. Be in readiness—the orchestra will commence, the curtain will rise, and—and—as—on—step on the stage, the house will ring with applause. Your chance—has—come —at—last. Thank God—I—your brother, Clem—can give it to you.
Harry—Harry, old fellow—Harry —hold my hand—I'm—good-bye—put your arms—round me—Harry —Harry—"

The man fell back in his brother's arms—dead!

That night the theatre was packed. The stage doorkeeper touched his hat to the great actor as he passed through without a word.
The prompter's bell rang and the curtain rose. Hamlet entered and the noise was deafening, and when the curtain fell he who played the Prince was called again and again.
On the morrow the newspapers devoted column after column in eulogizing a remarkable performance, "one that would live in the memory of all who had seen it."

Then, when the truth came out, the excitement and curiosity were increased twofold. Clement Walford was ever remembered, Henry Walford from that night was never forgotten. His chance had come at last.

Keeping a Hotel in Jerusalem.
A Philadelphia man keeps the only hotel in Jerusalem. He says he doesn't have many commercial travelers, but he is long on pilgrims nearly every day in the year. It sounds funny to hear the clerk yell: "Front, go and find Mustapha Effendi, and tell him that Colonel Bloodroot, of room 207, wants to be guided to the Pool of Siloam and the Mount of Olives this morning; and be quick about it." Guides are kept who know more about the Bible than Professor Briggs' opponents say he does, and who are ready at a moment's notice to pilot good-paying infidels to any spot, from Dan to Beersheba.
And the discussions around the hotel tables, in which Moses, Jacob, Pharaoh, Paul, John and other figures of sacred history form the chief staples of conversation, are said to resemble very much those of a minister's weekly meeting.

LEPROSY IN PHILADELPHIA.

The people of Philadelphia are having a sensation just now, which throws political frauds and dishonest bank performances into the shade. They have just discovered that a man in the last stages of leprosy has been employed in a confectionary store and also as a cook in a restaurant, and it was only when the disease had progressed so far as to unfit him for labor of any kind that he was himself up and sent to a hospital.

There is something so sickeningly horrible in the idea of this miserable creature's being employed in the preparation of food that one cannot read of it without a shudder even though so prominent a physician as Dr. Taylor assures the public that there is no cause for alarm in the fact of his being employed as a cook, since "the process of cooking would necessarily kill the microbes by which the disease is transmitted." It must be comforting if not pleasant to those who have taken their meals at the establishment in which he did the cooking, to know that the microbes of disease which were served up with their food, were too well cooked to do them any harm, but they can hardly fail to call for vengeance on the villainous restaurateur who would employ a leathorn leper to prepare the food with which he served his customers.

Investigation reveals the fact that this man's condition was known for a long while and even responsible officials were aware of his being associated with other people and also of there being several other cases at large in the city, yet no steps were taken to remove them. A druggist in the neighborhood says he had reported the case to the board of health two years ago but as no action was taken and he did not consider the disease contagious he made no further effort to bring the matter into notice, even though he knew the afflicted creature was engaged at work in the confectionary store.

If this charge be true, Philadelphia needs to be pretty thoroughly shaken up that it may realize its duties and responsibilities. Its record for the past few years would seem to indicate it, as a proper field of operation for the "Home Missionary Societies."

The finance commissioners of Baltimore advise the sale of the Western Maryland Railroad if a satisfactory price and terms can be gotten. Gen. Bryant, the New York bidder, has increased his offer from $1,875,000 to $2,250,000. President Hood has also offered to resume payments to the city if no more offers of sale are entertained. Their indications are that it will be some time before the matter is finally settled, as the city will hardly be willing to sacrifice its holdings in this valuable property. The West Virginia Central is said to have given up the idea of securing the Western Maryland.

If any additional evidence were needed to prove the dangers of promiscuous eating, the cave-in on the Emmitsburg railroad Monday night would surely furnish it. The condition of the wall that gave way had long been known and the necessary material for its repair was got ten ready last fall, yet the delay in having the work done resulted in a mishap on the very eve of the time selected for its beginning, that occasioned much additional labor and expense, besides preventing the passage of four regular trains.

If a committee of the Baltimore County Commissioners could view the public roads in this section in their present condition, it would no doubt modify the views of those gentlemen concerning the roads in Frederick county. We are confident though, that broken time stone strewn over the road to a depth of four feet would remedy the evil except in unusually bad places.

The great reason for the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is found in its positive merit. It cures where other preparations fail.

The Pure Food Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The food adulteration bill as passed the senate provides for the establishment of a food section in the agricultural department to analyze samples of food and drugs offered for sale in any state or territory other than that manufactured in any foreign country. It makes the introduction of adulterated food and drugs a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment, and provides for the seizure and confiscation of the adulterated articles themselves, as well as the punishment by fine or imprisonment of the vendor.

Blaine's Friends More Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Secretary Blaine is considerably better. His fever has almost disappeared, and he is less restless. By direction of his physician no visitors are permitted to see him, and he has not during the last few days been even advised that he had assumed an acute pulse. His friends are confident that he will be able to resume his official duties next week.

The Dying Grand Duke.

LONDON, March 10.—The Grand Duke of Saxe-Coburg is expected to die at any moment. He has been comatose for many days. The duke is the son of the late Prince Ernest Louis, is at his father's bedside, and Queen Victoria is kept informed of her son-in-law's condition.

"I have just recovered from a second attack of the grip this year," says Mr. J. S. Jones, publisher of the Londoner, Mexico, Texas. "In the latter case I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and I think with considerable success, only being in bed a little over two days, against ten days for the first attack. The second attack I was satisfied would have been equally as bad as the first but for the use of this remedy, as I had to go to bed in about six hours after being 'struck' with it, while in the first case I was able to attend to business about two days before getting 'down.' 50 cent bottles for sale by G. D. Eichlerberger Druggist."

FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

Condensed Report of Proceedings in Senate and House.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—In the senate the bill authorizing the postmaster general to credit the late postmaster at Indianapolis, Indiana, with the sum of $2,000 was called up and passed. A bill to consolidate mail matters of the third and fourth classes was placed on the calendar. The senate resumed consideration of the bill to amend the election laws, being addressed by Mr. Gray (Del.) in support of the claims of Clegg, the contestant. The vote resulted in favor of Dubois by 65 to 35 in the house. Mr. Nelson (Iowa) called attention to a special dispatch from Washington printed in the Atlanta Constitution, charging high corruption in the Craig-Stewart election case. He vigorously denounced the author, who he said was the speaker's clerk. The house resumed consideration of the district appropriation bill.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—In the senate the bill making Newark, N. J., a port of immediate entry was passed. Mr. Manderson introduced a bill to provide and punish corporations and associations from making or using scrip or metal tokens of denominations of less than $1 in payment for labor or other debts. Mr. Staudenmayer introduced a bill directing the purchase of silver bullion and the coinage thereof. In the house the speaker announced the appointment of Mr. Hough (Ill.) as Mr. Dingie (Mo.) as directors of the Columbian Institution for the deaf and dumb. Mr. Mott (Pa.) from the committee on appropriations, reported the invalid pension bill (U. S. 414), a bill was passed on the relief of the inhabitants of the town of Teton, Utah. The house then took up the committee of the whole on the private calendar.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—In the house today Mr. Tucker (Vt.) from the committee on election of president, vice president, etc., reported a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment, changing the date for the holding and ending of sessions of senators and representatives from March 4 to Dec. 31; providing that the annual sessions shall begin on the first Monday in January; and further providing that the sessions of the president and vice president shall commence and end on April 30 instead of March 4.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Among the bills introduced in the senate were: By Mr. Peffer, to increase pensions of veterans of 1812 to $25 a month; by Mr. Sawyer, to authorize the establishment of postal telegraphs by Mr. Perkins, for the encouragement of industrial and academic education of Indians. The bill extending the free delivery system to towns of 500 and a postal revenue of $500 was reported from committee. The house spent the day in discussing the resolution of the committee on naming Tuesday, March 22, for the celebration of the Band silver bill. Mr. Bristow's tactics were adopted by the anti. An effort to postpone discussion of the bill until the 15th of March failed. The vote was 129 yeas and 100 nays. The vote on the bill was 129 yeas and 100 nays. The vote on the bill was 129 yeas and 100 nays.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—In the senate Mr. Stanford introduced a bill to fix the duty on opium at $2 per pound by Mr. Teller, to create the California district commission and to regulate the free sale of opium. Bills were passed by the senate: one by Mr. Teller, to create the California district commission and to regulate the free sale of opium. Bills were passed by the senate: one by Mr. Teller, to create the California district commission and to regulate the free sale of opium. Bills were passed by the senate: one by Mr. Teller, to create the California district commission and to regulate the free sale of opium.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—In the senate Mr. Morgan, from the relations committee, reported a bill for the appointment of consuls to the Congo Free state; also a resolution regarding claims against foreign governments by citizens of the United States. A bill was reported authorizing Commander Mahlen, of the navy, to accept a medal presented by the Chilean government. Mr. Culbert introduced a bill to test and try the sentence of appeal, and to provide for establishing 100 schools for that purpose, and to establish a school in the World's Columbian exposition. The pure food bill was taken up and passed without division. In executive session the Behring sea matter was considered at length. The time of the house was consumed in listening to arguments by Messrs. McMillin and Dingley on the free wool bill. On taking his seat, Mr. McMillin received an ovation of applause from his colleagues, including Mr. Dingley's dress the house adjourned.

Harter Catechizes Hill.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Congressman Harter publishes an open letter to Senator David B. Hill in which he urges the senator to state clearly and concisely his views on the Band silver bill, in which he says: "I am led to this because I think the people are entitled to them, and because, having read your public utterances on the general subject, I am unfortunately constrained not to be able to grasp your convictions on it. Aside from this, as a prominent candidate for our nomination at Chicago all Democrats are entitled to your views on this vital question."

The New Interstate Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The president has appointed Judson C. Clements, of Georgia, to be an interstate commerce commissioner, vice Walter L. Bragg, deceased, and William Lindsay, declined. Mr. Clements is 46 years old, and a native of Georgia. He served in the rebel army during the war, and afterward entered the legal profession. He subsequently served both branches of the legislature, and in 1880 was elected to congress, serving in that body ten years. He is one of the most prominent Baptists in Georgia.

Young Mrs. Blaine Prostrated.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., had an attack of heart failure yesterday, and for seven hours she lay between life and death, with three doctors gallantly fighting the grim death. She was unconscious and delirious, and when the crisis occurred even her medical attendants feared that their efforts were unavailing. This stage was safely passed, however, and since that time her respiration has been stronger and her heart action more vigorous. She is still in a critical condition.

The Stricken Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Representatives Springer, Holman and Mills are all reported to be improved, and it is expected that Representatives Holman and Mills will be able to resume their official duties in a few days. Mr. Springer, while his condition is greatly improved, is still a very sick man.

Wants a Monument for Randall.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Mr. Hatch, of Missouri, showed his admiration for the late Samuel J. Randall by introducing a bill in the house appropriating $50,000 for the erection of a statue to his memory in Washington.

Go tell it, ye breezes, from desert to sea. The "Prescription" has triumphed, fair friends, and the world is wiser. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the one principle remedy above all others! Made expressly for women, it is adapted to her special needs, and fulfills every requirement. No condition so critical as to defy it! No emergency so great as to baffle it! As a woman's restorative and regulator, the "Favorite Prescription" is master of the situation. Positively guaranteed to give satisfaction in all cases, or money paid for it returned. The only medicine for women sold in trial.

Deafness Can't be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"The Blood is the Life."

Runs the old saying, and everything that ever makes part of any organ of the body must reach its place through the blood. Therefore, if the blood is purified and kept in good condition by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, it necessarily follows that the benefit of the medicine is imparted to every organ of the body. Can anything be simpler than the method by which this excellent medicine gives good health to all who will try it fairly and patiently?

LATEST PHASE OF THE BEHRING SEA CONTROVERSY.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—At the Capitol the question is beginning to be asked if the guns that were charged for Chile are to be trained on Great Britain. Congress has been slow to take any interest in the Behring sea situation, but it has come now to look upon the matter more seriously. It is evident that, after standing out against Chile as they did, the administration cannot back down before the "ultra" of Great Britain without being discredited.

It is scarcely entirely probable that this country will take measures to protect the seal without a modus vivendi, if Lord Salisbury persists in his refusal to continue the agreement. With-out the continuation of the modus vivendi, the country will be likely to do this, likely that the treaty of arbitration will not be approved by the senate, this will throw the controversy very back to the situation it was in when Lord Salisbury handed this country that England would have us to strict accountability for any seizures of Canadian poachers made.

This government will be brought face to face with this threat, and the indications are that it will be disregarded. It is the feeling of the country in general that the United States will be compelled to send war vessels to aid the marine cutters in protecting the seal. To fail to do this would be apt to discredit the administration. This would seem to indicate a very serious situation, but the general impression among congressmen who are interested in the case is that Lord Salisbury will not carry his policy to a dangerous extreme, and that some sort of a compromise acceptable to this country will be reached.

The president yesterday sent to the senate the correspondence in regard to the Behring sea question, covering the period from April 20, 1891, to date. Of the recent correspondence the most important letters are two from Sir Julian Pauncefote under dates of Feb. 29 and March 7. The reply sent on Tuesday, in his note of Feb. 29 Sir Julian informs Mr. Blaine that Lord Salisbury does not admit, as previously indicated by Mr. Blaine, that the delays have been greater than those of the United States. He says that the British commissioners have reported that there is no danger of a serious diminution of the seals, and therefore the necessity of a modus vivendi is not apparent. In his note of March 7, Mr. Pauncefote presents arguments in support of Lord Salisbury's refusal to accede to another modus vivendi.

In the response sent on Tuesday Assistant Secretary Villard states that the president notices with the deepest regret the indisposition of her majesty's government to agree upon an effective modus for the preservation of the seals in Behring sea pending the settlement of the respective rights of the two governments in those waters and in the fur seal fisheries therein. He calls attention to the fact that the treaty of arbitration awaits only the action of the American senate, and that the judgment of the arbitration tribunal cannot be established until the time to control the conduct of the seals during the present season.

The urgent question, he says, is what does good faith, to say nothing of the international law, require of the parties to the arbitration. Was it even heard before, he asks, that one party to such a controversy, whether a nation or an individual, could appropriate the whole or any part of the income and profits, and thus the best of the contested property, pending the litigation, without accountability?

It is no answer for the trespasser, it is contended, to say that the true owner will have an undisturbed harvest next year. Last year's harvest was his, also, and further, this government has already been advised that Great Britain repudiates all obligations to indemnify the United States for an invasion of its territory or for any injury done to its property by the Canadian sealers. In conclusion, it is stated that this government will honorably abide the judgment of the arbitration tribunal which has been agreed upon, whether the judgment be favorable or unfavorable to the United States, and that it will not seek to avoid a just responsibility for any of its acts which by that judgment are found to be unlawful.

The latter was a justice of the peace for many years, and was the last of the three in the State whose names were tried in this court in 1858.

BLAIR, Md., March 10.—The jury summoned by Charles W. Proctor, acting as coroner, to hold an inquest upon the body of Henry Raab, the engineer who was killed in the accident on the Baltimore and Lehigh railroad, near Little Gunpowder, returned yesterday. Their testimony in the case at this place and rendered a verdict in which they say that Raab remained at his post when the engine fell over, and was thereby killed.

UPPER MARLBORO, Md., March 9.—Word has reached here of an affair between the late Jos. W. Jewell, county commissioner for Prince George's county, and Joseph M. Kenrick, of Piscataway. Kenrick, it is stated, struck Jewell on the head with a heavy cane, felling him to the ground in an insensible condition. The corpse was then carried and extracted fragments of the frontal bone. He is said to have very slight hopes of his patient's recovery.

ROCKVILLE, Md., March 8.—An extra freight train running east side wiped a west bound train from Baltimore at the end of the double track here, killing a brakeman named Testers and a fireman named Buckalls, of the extra east bound train. Engineer Peters, of the west bound train, was slightly injured, also the express messenger. Both engines and tenders were badly damaged. A stock car loaded with cattle was demolished and fourteen heads were killed.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 5.—Messrs. John K. Cowen, Daniel Miller, William Reynolds and E. Stabler, Jr., of the Civil Service Reform association, were before the finance committee to urge a favorable report upon Senator Wirt's civil service bill, which was introduced some time ago into the senate. This bill was made up chiefly by John J. Donahoe, as Mr. Cowen explained, with paste pot and scissors from the federal civil service law and the laws of New York and Massachusetts.

Mr. S. G. Derry of Providence, R. I.

Widely known as proprietor of Derry's Water-proof Harness Oil, tells below of his terrible sufferings from Eczema and his cure by

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

"Gentlemen: Fifteen years ago I had an attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which was followed by eczema or salt rheum, breaking out on my right leg. This humor spread all over my legs, back and arms.

A Foul Mass of Sores, swollen and itching terribly, causing intense pain if the skin was broken by scratching. I could scarcely walk. It is impossible to describe my suffering in those years of agony and torture. I spent

Thousands of Dollars in futile efforts to get well, and was discouraged and ready to give up. I was unable to lie down in bed, had to sit up all the time, and was unable to walk without my crutches. I was in a desperate condition.

I had a friend who was visiting at our house, urged me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I began by taking half a teaspoonful. My stomach was all out of order. But the medicine soon corrected this, and in six weeks I could see change in the condition of the humor which nearly covered my body. It was driven to the surface by the Sarsaparilla, the sores soon healed, and the scales fell off. I was soon able to give up my crutches and walk. I was in a desperate condition.

I had been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for seven months, and since that time, nearly two years, I have worn no bandages, and my legs and arms are sound and well.

The Delight of myself and wife at my recovery it is impossible to tell. To all my business friends in Boston and over the country, I recommend if you are ill, take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA from personal experience. S. G. DERRY, 45 Bradford street, Boston, Mass. If you are ill, take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

EASTON, Md., March 7.—The corpse of an unknown white man, aged about 40 years, was found about a quarter of a mile south of Principio station. There was nothing on the body by which it could be identified. There was a deep cut on the head, and another on the left side.

ELKTON, Md., March 9.—John S. Wirt, attorney for the George P. Whitaker company, which has a large iron mill at Principio Furnace, this county, filed a bill in the circuit court for Cecil county praying that a receiver be appointed to close up the affairs of the company. Another company has been organized to succeed it.

BALTIMORE, March 7.—The body of Pelham W. Shipman, a New York lawyer, who killed himself here in a cab Saturday, is still in this city. A brother arrived yesterday and in the afternoon he telegraphed his father to know whether to take the body to Astoria, the family residence, or to Hartford, Conn., the family burying place.

THERE is no danger from whooping cough when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given. It liquefies the tough, tenacious mucus and aids in its expectoration. It also lessens the severity and frequency of the paroxysms of coughing, and insures a speedy recovery. There is not the least danger in giving it to children or babies, as it contains no injurious substance. 50 cent bottles for sale by C. D. Eichelberger or Druggist.

MR. BARTON BEAN of the Smithsonian Institution says: "The carp is wonderfully abundant in some portions of Western Maryland, notably in the Union Bridge. At this place last summer I saw on the overgrown meadows scores of these fish. Several weighing fifteen pounds each have been caught. The farmers have in after them when the water is low enough and spear them with stable forks."

MR. GEO. D. KAHLER, representing the Merchants Retail Commercial Agency of Chicago, Ill., will be in town tomorrow and next week in the interest of the Agency. From personal experience we are enabled to recommend this Agency as having the best system for collecting we have ever tried, and believe our entire business community would be benefited by the formation of a local branch here, the object being mutual protection against bad creditors and aid in collecting bad bills.

LA GRIPPE is prevented and cured by the timely and persistent use of N. H. Down's Elixir. During the prevalence of La Grippe two years ago, the case of Down's Elixir was enormous, and the cases in which the disease was broken up on the start by its faithful use were numbered by the thousands. the fountain of life, might thus easily be influenced by the ring's medicinal power. They were of the opinion that a ring made from the teeth of a sea horse(?) would cure hemorrhoids, a view of the subject which may interest our medical faculties to-day. Rings were constructed in those ancient days, when death was inflicted more ingeniously than now, which, when broken in the mouth, discharged poison by which either involuntary or voluntary death was secured. I have seen ancient rings known as talismans, certain unknown letters were inscribed and images in gems, and those who wore them were regarded as invulnerable and lucky. The inscriptions and figures related to celestial occurrences, and were connected with the horoscopes and astronomical interpretations of men's destinies.

IN 1703, the first Russian newspaper was published, and so much interest was taken in it that he himself wrote some of the editorials and corrected proofs.
