EN ESPAGNE.

I built a palace, white and high, With sweeping purple tapestried; No dusty highway ran thereby, But guarded alleys to it led; And shaven laws about were spread, Where bird and moth danced daintily.

So gracious were its portals wide, So light and fair the turrets stood, No flaw mine eager eye espied, I fashioned it, and called it good; And lavished on its solitude All garnishings of pomp and pride.

That was in olden summer time— The winter-wind is howling now, My Palace has passed out of time— The sword is only sheathed snow. Its hangings with the dead leaves blow: There comes an end to mortal prime.

THE WATCHMAN'S BOY

Jep's father was night watchman at No. 2 breaker, and in the screen room of the same breaker Jep himself was employed as a slate picker. But the breaker had been idle for three weeks on account of the strike, and Jep had had no work. No one knew when the strike would end. Meddlesome and hot headed persons were stirring up strife between employer and employes, and every one feared trouble. At such a time the post of night watchman was one of danger as well as of responsibility. But Jep's father neither feared the one nor shirked the other.

Yet this August evening, as he stood in the doorway of his cottage, dinner pail in hand, ready to start for the scene of his nightly task, there were murmurs on his lips. They were not brought there by fear, but by a sense of the long night of loneliness that lay before him. Jep rose quickly from his seat on the doorstep.

"Let me go with you, father," he said. "I'd like to go."

The man looked down on him in astonishment.

"Why, lad?" he exclaimed, "what are ye thinkin' of? Wat'd ye be doin' wi' yours'lf at night?"

"Doin' w'at ye do, father," replied Jep, stoutly.

Jep's father stood for a moment in thought. It was evident that the proposition did not strike him unpleasantly.

"Well," he said at last, "I like the sound o' it. Here, mother!" he shouted, turning in the doorway. "Put a bit of dinner in ma pail for Jep. He goes w' me the night."

Jep's mother hurried to the door in astonishment.

"What's that?" she exclaimed; "Jep goes w' you?"

"Aye! Jep goes w' me."

"Well, who ever heard the like?"

"I want to go, mother," said Jep; "I—"

"Come! come!" interrupted the man good naturedly, "tha's no time to lose. I'll see that no harm comes till 'm."

So it came about that Jep went that night with his father. It was a good half mile to the breaker, and it was quite dark when they reached their destination.

When the dinner pail was hung up and the lantern lighted they made the tour of the breaker, man and boy together. This took a long time, for the building was a very large one and had many wings. Outside it had begun to rain and it was very dark, so dark that the outlines of the massive structure could not be distinguished against the blackness of the sky.

When they were seated in the engine room Jep said:

"It's a bad night to watch, ain't it father?"

"Why?" asked his father.

"Well, it's so dark an' rainy, you know."

"An' w'at has that to do w' it?"

"Oh, it's a good night to hide," replied Jep, looking anxiously off into the dark corners of the engine room. "A man might jump out from somewhere an' you never see him until he was onto you."

"So he might any nightan' there was an object in it."

"Well you know they've threatened to burn the breaker, an' they!"

"Ah, now! Don't be scarin' yourself; an' don't be talkin' trash. Nobody'll fire the breaker, I warrant ye, an' nobody'll be botherin' us w' this in ma pocket," and he placed his hand significantly on the butt of his large revolver.

From somewhere in the great building came a dull noise as of pounding, followed by a slight rattle, and then all was still.

"What was that?" asked Jep in a whisper.

"Oh, no man knows what the noises be. I hear 'em every night. No harm comes o' 'em."

He picked up his lantern nevertheless, and they went up into the screen room and looked about, but finding nothing out of place they soon came back again.

Later on Jep grew sleepy.

"Lay down on the bench an' s'at your eyes an' go to sleep like a man," said Jep's father, "an' don't be noddin' your head off."

Within five minutes from the time Jep laid his head on the rudo pillow he was fast asleep.

An hour later he was awakened by a noise. It sounded as men were scuffling just outside the door and as if some one was trying to shout.

Jep raised himself to his elbow and looked across the room. The lantern was still standing on the engineer's stool, but his father was nowhere in sight.

He was just about to get down from the bench when the outer door of the engine room was opened and two men entered. They were strangers to Jep and they looked rough and desperate.

"He'll keep a still tongue in his head for awhile," said one of them.

"Did ye kill him, Jerry?" asked the other.

"If I didn't he'll not wake soon. Give me the lantern and we'll go fix the pump man."

He seized the lantern and started out of the door. But his companion did not follow him.

"Come on!" he continued, turning back; "are ye goin'?"

"No!" replied the other. "I'm not. He knows me. I'd be a fool to show myself to him."

"Stay where you are then. I'll settle him alone," and the man and the lantern vanished into the darkness and storm.

Jep saw and heard it all. He knew from their words that the ruffian had assaulted his father and left him unconscious, perhaps dead, and that the pumpman was about to be similarly treated. If they should discover him there was no doubt but that he would share the fate of the other two.

Suddenly it occurred to him that if he was to escape now was the opportunity, while the room was in darkness, before the man should return with the lantern, before the breaker should be set on fire, an act which these men doubtless had in contemplation.

Slipping from the bench he felt his way carefully to the machinery of the engine, climbed cautiously over the big shaft and keeping his hand on the bed plate crawled along beside it till he reached the starting bar. He knew that straight ahead of this and up two steps was the door that led to the screen room.

So far the sound of his progress had been hushed by the noise of the beating storm outside. If now he could reach the screen room unheard he would be safe. The man in the doorway was not twenty feet away. The outline of his figure was dimly discernible in the darkness.

Jep rose to his feet, held his hands out before him and moved cautiously forward. The next moment he came in contact with the stool on which the lantern had stood, tipped it over, stumbled over it and fell heavily to the floor.

The man in the doorway started, turned and looked back into the room, but in the darkness could see nothing.

"Hello!" he shouted, "who's there?"

For answer Jep scrambled to his feet and groped his way, regardless of noise, to the steps.

But the man did not attempt to follow him. He turned instead to the open door and called to his companion:

"Jerry! hello, Jerry! Come back w' the lantern, quick!"

But Jep, having reached the steps, climbed up to them, opened the door and the next moment was ascending the longer flight of steps that led to the screen room.

Down in the engine room he heard the two men moving about, apparently in the search of him. He knew that they would follow him, and he felt that in some way he must make his escape from them. Without considering where the course would lead to, he dropped to his knees, and with one hand on the iron sheathed shute he began climbing alongside of it up the long slope of the screen room.

The two men having finished their hasty tour of the engine room were already on the first steps of the flight which the boy had just ascended. Jep heard them and knew that he must make haste. Coming to the lower screen he felt his way along under it till he reached the outside wall of the breaker; then rising again to his feet and placing his hands against the wall, he walked up the narrow cleft passage that led to the dump room at the head just as the lantern, in the hands of his pursuers, flashed its light across the dust laden timbers of the screen room.

"Whoever it was he must 'a' come this way," said the leader.

"Ye're sure ye didn't imagine it Jack?" questioned the other.

"There!" he exclaimed, suddenly stopping, "did ye hear that?"

It was a noise like the sound of a slamming door, coming from somewhere above them in the breaker. Both men hurried across the shutes to the passage through which Jep had just disappeared and began to ascend it.

The noise they had heard was indeed that of a slamming door, the handle of which had inadvertently slipped from Jep's grasp as he closed it behind him on his way to the head of the breaker. A new scheme of escape had come into his mind. It was simply to cross the mouth of the shaft and pass out by the car tracks to the trestling and thence to the hills, whence came the mine cars with their loads.

With this end in view he crawled up by the dump shute bars to the weigh platform, and thence to the carriage-way of the shaft. It was easy enough now to follow the rails of the mine car track. But it was well for him to be sure that the horizontal gates were covering the mouth of the shaft; otherwise he might go stumbling into the pit and plunge down 100 feet to the bottom of the mine.

So he felt his way very cautiously, and finding the gate in place stepped on it with a light foot, realizing that nothing save these hard wood slats lay between him and instant death. Once across the opening he moved on more rapidly through the head house and out on to the trestling.

He was in the open air now, with the storm beating on him; under his feet a network of timbers a hundred feet in height; off to the left a faint glow in the sky reflecting the lights of the town; everywhere else complete, impenetrable darkness. He knew there was a handrail running along by the side of the track for the safety of men and mules. He felt for it, grasped it and touching it as he went he made still greater haste. He almost ran.

Suddenly he stopped, with a new fear striking in upon his heart. He remembered that the company had taken advantage of the cessation of work at the mines to build a new trestle here at the breaker. He knew that it was not yet completed, and that over the new part there was only a line of narrow planks laid on the bents for men to walk on. He thought he must be near that portion now. Indeed, the next step might bring him to the end of the platform; another might plunge him into the depths.

He pushed his foot cautiously forward; it needed but a space of three feet to verify this fear. From that point on there was only the narrow path of plank above the dizzy height, a path which none but builders and sailors would have dared to venture on in the broad light of day.

But Jep had no time to hesitate. His pursuers were even now crossing on the gate that covered the mouth of the shaft. They had marked his progress and were not upon his track. The limit of their lantern flashed out and revealed him to their eyes.

"There he is!" cried the foremost.

"D'ye mind 'im? A bit of a brat nor worth chasin', but I'll have 'im now if it takes the life o' me!"

"It's a pretty run he's give us anyway," panted the other. "Catch 'im, Jerry; give it to 'im. Drop 'im over the trestle!"

The man with the lantern sprang forward, while Jep, desperate with fear, dropped to his knees and crawled out upon the narrow plank, grasping the edges of it firmly as he went, lighted dimly for a moment on his perilous way by the lantern's rays, the footsteps of the foremost ruffian sounding at his heels in quick pursuit.

But it was only for a moment. Then behind him, there was a cry of horror, under him something crashing heavily down among the forest of timbers, around him impenetrable darkness again. In the eagerness of swift pursuit the man had failed to see that his path was at an end; he had rushed off into space and had gone plunging through the open trestle to his death.

But Jep did not know what had happened. The cry only sent wilder fear into his heart and nerved him to greater effort.

Finally he came to the end of the plank walk. Before him his hands touched nothing. He almost lost his balance, and recoiled in sudden terror from the edge of the black abyss. But he imagined that the men were still following him. He thought he heard them crawling on the plank almost at his heels. In his wild dread of them anything was better than capture.

He turned quickly in his tracks and let himself down at the edge of the plank, swinging by his hands. How far below him lay the solid earth was he did not know; he hardly stopped to think. The fear of those whom he believed to be above him led him into desperate chances.

He dropped. But less than six feet below him lay the solid earth, and he was not harmed. The shock of surprise weakened him, though, and for a minute he lay quite still.

Somewhere above him he heard an angry voice and the noise of heavy footsteps, and still fearful he rose to his feet and began to grope his way down the hill along the base timbers of the trestling.

Soon he saw a light coming up toward him. It was carried by the pump man, who had heard Jerry's cry of distress and had come out to investigate.

"Why, Jep," he cried, as the rays from his lantern flashed into the boy's white face, "what alls ye, Jep? an' where's the father?"

In a few words Jep told his story, and then they both hurried back to the breaker. Just outside the door of the engine room they found Jep's father, bound and gagged, and cruelly, though not fatally beaten, and they helped him inside out of the storm, restored him to consciousness, and then Jep, taking the pumpman's lantern, went to the nearest cottage for help.

Afterward they found the fallen ruffian lying across the sill of a trestle, bent quite dead. His companion, afraid to go forward and unable to return through the dark wilderness of the breaker, was captured, tried, convicted of participating in the assault and sent to prison.—HOMER GREENE in New York World.

LABOR TROUBLES.

The fight between labor and capital is assuming such widespread proportions that it is worse than folly to shut our eyes to the danger with which our social structure is threatened at this time.

The following, which we take from the Scientific American of August 20th, presents the true relations between employer and employe, in such a clear, common sense manner, that no fair-minded reader can fail to appreciate the position and we can but feel that if the newspapers of the country, which are without doubt, leaders of public opinion, were to give utterance to such teaching as this article conveys, the influence of rabid anarchism would very soon become entirely inoperative.

The laws of this country are the fairest, the most reasonable and the most just laws that history has known. The principles which they embody are those which have been recognized as fair and just by all civilized nations in all ages, by the best and ablest men in those nations, and also by the great religious leaders and organizations of the world. The welfare of the state and the welfare of the state are the two chief interests of all just laws and of all good government. These two interests are cared for in this country more carefully and intelligently than they have been or are in any other. This is proved by the fact that to get an anarchist to have to import him ready made. The sunshine of our laws and customs is too genial for their breeding here. It is also proved by the fact that hundreds of thousands, yes millions of men, since we became a nation, have under our laws developed their lives from a low beginning in ignorance, poverty and obscurity into intelligence, usefulness and prosperity. It is not under laws that such things can be done.

It is only reasonable, therefore, that labor organizations should be urged not only to obey the laws of the land, but to teach their adherents that to obey these laws is their first and most important duty. The weakness of these organizations has been, and is today, that they claim—not in words, perhaps, but in acts—that the organization of wage workers into unions gives them certain "rights" not before possessed. The leaders of labor unions can engage in no better work than to teach their followers that whatever claim of "rights" cannot be enforced under the law is not right, and must be abandoned. If this had been done by labor union leaders, the twelve men who were recently shot to death at Homestead would be alive today, and the red smear of murder would not appear on so many pages of the history of labor unions.

One of the facts which organized labor would do well to understand is that under the laws of this country a man may work for whom he pleases and for any price that may be agreed on between him and his employer, and that the employer may at any time cease to employ him and hire some one else in his place. Employers and employers have wisely equated rights in these matters. Another fact equally important is that the law will punish the man who, by physical force, prevents another from working. To do so is a lawless act, and that it is done by or for the benefit of organized labor makes no difference. The law does not take cognizance of organized labor any more than it does of red-haired or temperance, or Catholic or Protestant labor. And not only the law of the land, but also the sentiment of right-thinking people everywhere makes it an evil and an inexcusable act to prevent the man who needs work and wants to work from doing so. How much sympathy for labor is there in the sentiment which beats a man black and blue when he applies for the work the wages of which his hungry family needs—because he does not belong to a union? What sort of charity would that be which would refuse help to a starving child unless it was enrolled in some Sunday school mission class?

Another point to be learned by combinations of labor is that they can not claim from the law the same recognition which it gives to employes until they become equally responsible before the law. As it is now the employer can be compelled to make good any violation of contract with his employes. But if his employes, acting through a labor union, sign a contract to-day and break it, greatly to his pecuniary injury, to-morrow, he has no redress. This has recently happened at Pittsburgh, where several hundred employes, after signing an agreement to work, broke their agreement without any lawful reason, leaving the works idle. In such a case the employer has no remedy. The labor union consists of being "recognized" as a lawful and many unlawful means to secure recognition, and yet has nothing of that responsibility before the law upon which, only, can one business concern recognize another. When the law compels labor unions to become pecuniarily responsible for their actions, some phases of the labor question will be settled. Employers will prefer to deal with a responsible organization rather than with individuals.—Railway Master Meahane.

Bandits Make a Good Haul.
VAN BUREN, Ark., Aug. 25.—James S. Wilson, agent of the Kansas and Arkansas Railway, railroad at Nowata, Indian Territory, a station 140 miles west of here, resigned a few days ago, intending to take a trip to San Francisco. Traveling Auditor Wright and Traveling Passenger Agent Johnson came to Nowata to see the books. They were engaged in that work when three bandits entered and covered them with their revolvers. Wilson was then compelled to open the safe, and while two of the desperadoes held Wright, Johnson and Wilson at the safe into a sack. About $1,500 in cash was secured.

THE CHOLERA SPREADING.
And Our Government Officials Are Taking Precautionary Measures.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The state department has been advised by the consul of the United States at Hamburg, Germany, that it has been officially announced that cholera exists at that place. Consul Oscar Williams, at Havana, reports an epidemic of Asiatic cholera at that place, with many deaths, and advises an inspection of the fast liner La Touraine, due here Saturday next. These facts have been promptly communicated to the health officers at Staten Island, and every precaution will be taken in this matter, especially in view of the fact that the epidemic has now reached two of the most important ports in Europe with which the United States has any communication.

ANTWERP, Aug. 25.—For some little time past there have been a number of suspicious cases of sickness in this city, but the authorities have steadily maintained that the disease was not the dreaded Asiatic cholera. No later than Tuesday it was officially announced that there was not a single case of Asiatic cholera in Belgium, the suspicious cases being simply cholera nostras. This statement received its falsification yesterday, at least so far as Antwerp is concerned. The leading physicians of Antwerp now declare that the disease is true Asiatic cholera.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The treasury department is taking active measures to prevent the spreading of cholera to this country. The secretary issued orders yesterday for steamers bound for Baltimore from Hamburg and Bremen to be stopped for inspection at Cape Charles. Late yesterday afternoon there was a conference between Secretary Foster and Dr. A. W. Gleason, in charge of the Marine Hospital Bureau, to determine upon a policy which will render all the American ports safer from the importation of the disease.

Blown Up by Dynamite.
PITTSBURG, Aug. 25.—A car loaded with ingots was blown up with dynamite or some other high explosive on a side track of the Allegheny Valley railroad at Thirty-fourth street yesterday. The car was assigned to the Carnegie's third street mill. Fortunately there was no one within a hundred feet of the car when it was blown up and the fragments which were scattered in every direction did no injury.

IRON HALL MUDDLE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 25.—James F. Fahey, the retired capitalist who on Tuesday evening was appointed receiver of the Iron Hall, qualified yesterday in the sum of $1,000,000. After Mr. Fahey had qualified his attorneys asked the court to direct the various branches of the Iron Hall to send in their reserve funds. The court was on the point of issuing this order when his attention was called to the fact that the reporters were taking these things down. He stood the reporters up in a line and ordered them to destroy their books and say nothing about the court's action. The court then went into private consultation with the attorneys and presumably issued the desired order. The Indianapolis News, however, gives a full account of the court's action in spite of the court's order that its reporters would be held in contempt. It is claimed that the judge's action is illegal, as courts are responsible to the public.

Supreme Cashier Davis was ordered to assign to Receiver Fahey of all the funds in the custody of the different branches of the local order of the Iron Hall. All branches complying with the order will be accounted in good standing. When the reporters sought to come to the court, they were told by the court that it was not for publication and that he would make its publication and discussion a case of contempt and punish as such any violation.

The court issued three orders in the case, the first empowering the receiver to accept all mail directed to officers of the order, and the second directing the branches through the country to assign all funds in their possession to the receiver.

The third, the one of most interest to the members, decided that all the active branches and the members thereof at the date of filing the complaint, July 29, shall have and receive their full and entire liabilities to the supreme sitting, including assessment No. 180, or who shall pay these assessments and other liabilities to their several branches before Oct. 10, 1892, and which branches, through their proper officers, shall fully account for and pay over to the receiver and also pay over to the receiver all reserve funds and accumulations, or in case the reserve funds have been invested, then assign the securities to the receiver by Oct. 10, shall be entitled to a share in the funds now or hereafter coming into the hands of the receiver for distribution.

Hanging branch last night appointed a committee to raise a fund to pay the expenses of the order. Supreme Justice Somers left the city Tuesday night, going to Chicago and thence to Philadelphia, where he resides. Regarding the report that Somers had been shot to death at Homestead it could be found at his home in Philadelphia whenever he was wanted.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 25.—At the suit of Charles S. Ware, a Camden member of the Iron Hall, Chancellor Wood yesterday granted a rule to show cause why a receiver for the Iron Hall moneys in New Jersey should not be appointed, and a temporary injunction restraining the transfer of any of the funds. The rule is made returnable next Tuesday, at Trenton, when a receiver will, in all probability, be appointed. There are ten branches of the Iron Hall in Camden, four of which are known as "Sisterhood branches," the membership being composed entirely of females. The total membership of the ten branches is about 1,500, and their reserve funds will aggregate $35,000. The receivership proceeding instituted by Mr. Ware is for the purpose of retaining these funds in New Jersey, and preventing the Indianapolis receiver from getting the money. A mass meeting of the Camden members of the order is to be held to take concerted action towards protecting their interests. Many individual members of the order have already retained Judge Carrow to prosecute their claims.

OAKLAND, Md., Aug. 25.—The members of Local Branch, No. 85, Order of the Iron Hall, have applied to the circuit court for Garrett county for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the reserve fund in possession of the branch, and for an injunction to restrain the officers from sending any of the funds out of the state, or paying even any further assessments to the supreme sitting.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 25.—Judge Dennis appointed Charles J. Weiner and Joseph C. France receivers for the Order of the Iron Hall. The supreme officers of the order, who reside in Baltimore, and were made party defendants in the bill, brought by Attorney Weiner, came into court and gave their consent to the appointment of receivers. Then Judge Dennis made the appointments.

Wilson, agent of the Kansas and Arkansas Railway, railroad at Nowata, Indian Territory, a station 140 miles west of here, resigned a few days ago, intending to take a trip to San Francisco. Traveling Auditor Wright and Traveling Passenger Agent Johnson came to Nowata to see the books. They were engaged in that work when three bandits entered and covered them with their revolvers. Wilson was then compelled to open the safe, and while two of the desperadoes held Wright, Johnson and Wilson at the safe into a sack. About $1,500 in cash was secured.

THE CHOLERA SPREADING.
And Our Government Officials Are Taking Precautionary Measures.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The state department has been advised by the consul of the United States at Hamburg, Germany, that it has been officially announced that cholera exists at that place. Consul Oscar Williams, at Havana, reports an epidemic of Asiatic cholera at that place, with many deaths, and advises an inspection of the fast liner La Touraine, due here Saturday next. These facts have been promptly communicated to the health officers at Staten Island, and every precaution will be taken in this matter, especially in view of the fact that the epidemic has now reached two of the most important ports in Europe with which the United States has any communication.

ANTWERP, Aug. 25.—For some little time past there have been a number of suspicious cases of sickness in this city, but the authorities have steadily maintained that the disease was not the dreaded Asiatic cholera. No later than Tuesday it was officially announced that there was not a single case of Asiatic cholera in Belgium, the suspicious cases being simply cholera nostras. This statement received its falsification yesterday, at least so far as Antwerp is concerned. The leading physicians of Antwerp now declare that the disease is true Asiatic cholera.

THE STRIKE ENDED.

BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—A four hour conference was held last night between Grand Master Sweeney and Grand Master Wilkinson, Grand Master Sargent and Grand Chief Clark. After leaving the conference Grand Master Sweeney and Local Master Morarity, of the switchmen, called together the members that conducted the strike, and it was reported that at 11 o'clock a statement would be ready. As early as 10:30 there was a camp of newspaper men on the fourth floor of the Genesee hotel, before the door of which the grand master's chief during his stay in Buffalo. Shortly before 11 o'clock the door was opened and the waiting throng entered. The statement of the end of the strike made verbally by the grand master, was in substance as follows:

"The duly authorized committee have declared the strike off at midnight, and I have sanctioned their decision. Five hundred and fifteen switchmen cannot cope with twenty big railway corporations and 8,000 militia, and succeed. We have made a strong fight and have lost."

Asked if he had anything to say in regard to the failure of other organizations to come to the aid of the switchmen, Sweeney replied, "Let them speak for themselves. I have nothing further to say."

As other questions were about to be asked Mr. Sweeney a member of the committee with whom the grand master had been consulting created a small sized sensation by saying: "I want to say right here that the brakemen, trainmen and firemen refused to give us any help. That's why we were defeated."

The committee tried to keep him quiet, but he had his say. When asked to give his views on the possibility that the present strike may lead to a renewal of the Federation of Railway Employes, Mr. Sweeney declined to say anything further. In this respect he followed the lead of other executives, who, when asked the same question, simply answered that the future was discussed.

As soon as the news began to spread over the city, which it did very rapidly, in spite of the storm, there was general rejoicing. The immediate withdrawal of the troops is not expected, as it will take more or less time for a complete restoration of quiet and the cessation of the guerrilla like attacks to which non-union men and soldiers have been subjected.

TENNESSEE'S FIGHTING MINERS.
A Messenger Who Claims to Have Seen Twenty-eight Dead Bodies of the Twenty-second regiment, were arraigned before Judge Green in the supreme court chambers yesterday on the charge of riot and using violence and inflicting injury upon another person, with a view of compelling such person to abstain from doing an act which such person had a legal right to do. Judge Green, upon request of the Lehigh Valley attorneys, postponed the examination until Sept. 2, and fixed bail at $1,000 each. The accused are at the State hospital in a dangerous condition. If peritonitis, or some other complication does not set in he may recover. Charles Gable, the non-union switchman who was so brutally beaten by the strikers, is in a critical condition. He is injured internally.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 25.—Absolute peace reigns throughout Coal Creek valley. Yesterday, but for the movements of the soldiers, the village that for nearly a week has been the scene of a fierce conflict was a quiet as a New England town.

Five men had died today from out of the ranks of those who have supported the law—three of them soldiers and two civilians who marched forth at the call of the government.

Eleven miners are numbered as dead, though all the bodies, save one, have been spirited away to mountain fastnesses by their late companions, who follow Indiana methods of warfare in this as well as in other ways.

The following extract from a letter written by J. A. Starbuck, of Yorktown, Iowa, speaks for itself: "Two years ago, in harvest time, a young man came in my store and said he had been binding wheat during the forenoon, and was so bad with diarrhoea and colic pains, that he would have to lay off unless he could get relief. I took a bottle of your diarrhoea remedy from the shelf; gave him a dose; sold him the bottle, and told him I would give the money back if it did no good. He came in next morning and said the single dose did its work so well, that he not only kept up his place binding during the afternoon, but had worked all night, and had the price of the dose I gave him been three dollars, it would have been cheap. I will further say, keep on with your good work. You cannot recommend your medicine too highly. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is one of the greatest medicines of the age; it cannot be beat. Wishing you much success and prosperity which you richly deserve, I remain, truly, your friend." For sale by C. D. Eichelberger.

At Wild Cherry Springs and Died. Ex-county commissioner Henry Keller, living near Myersville, lost two valuable cows by death on Friday last. In clearing out fence rows on his farm a lot of wild cherry sprouts were cut down. These were eaten later in the day by the cows. The animals were taken sick almost immediately and two of them died in a very short time. A third cow was very much affected also, but recovered. This animal has a habit of sucking herself and it is thought she did so after eating the sprouts, and that her own milk served as an antidote against their poisonous effects. It is said that these sprouts only have a bad effect upon cattle after they become withered. —News.

The Temptation. To go out of doors in rough weather is not strong, but we are, many of us, compelled to face rough weather frequently. Diseases which arise from a chill are peculiar to no season of the year. This is true, therefore there should be in the closet of every household—a what? Not an unmedicated stimulant, absolutely devoid of anything but an excitant action, but a tonic combining, in the effective form of an invigorant and an alterative, the quality of defense against the complications which it promptly cures. It has three or four properties that no other article of its class possesses. Not only does it relieve the complaints which it promptly cures, it fortifies the system against the bad effects of changes of temperature, fatigue and too often shown in the daily form of "la grippe." It is a radical change in the weakened condition of a system peculiarly liable to be attacked by it, and it tends to provide against the danger resulting from an impoverished condition of the system and a disordered state of the liver or bowels.

Evangelical Lutheran Synod. The Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church for this district will meet in Frederick city October 4th. The territory embraced in the synodical district is the state of Maryland, District of Columbia, portions of Virginia, West Virginia, and a few churches in Pennsylvania.

Pure and Wholesome Quality. Commends to public approval the California liquid laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs. It is pleasant to the taste and by acting gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels to cleanse the system effectually, it promotes the health and comfort of all who use it, and with millions it is the best and only remedy.

Chief Judge Levin T. H. Irving, of the first judicial circuit and a member of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, died at his residence in Princess Anne, Md., on Wednesday, aged 64 years. Some time ago he suffered a stroke while on his way to Cambridge to attend to his judicial business in Dorchester county, which terminated in his death.

On Tuesday evening, Maurice Wilhide, an apprentice of Mr. J. Henry Stokes, in this place, filled his pipe with a mixture of tobacco and a cat rifle cartridge. After enjoying the smoke for several minutes the cartridge exploded, emptying the pipe of its contents. Mr. Wilhide was not injured in any way, although his dark complexion was changed to the color of snow.

The Presbyterian Sunday School held a picnic on Thursday in Mr. John M. Bell's Grove, a short distance west of this place. It was largely attended and all present seemed to enjoy themselves. A special feature of the day's sports was a game of base ball played between the old and young people, which became very exciting before the game ended. The score was 5 to 13 in favor of the small boys.

Look Out for Them! A gang of men are reported to be traveling about the country making contracts for painting roofs. If they offer to paint yours for five dollars, or any price, don't fail to ask them how much the paint will cost before you close the contract. It is in the price of paint where the fraud exists. Patronize your home workmen and you will not need to take up with these traveling frauds. —Examiner.

A New Fence. The consistory of Apples Church, near Graecheim, have appointed Mr. Bolter and Mr. Lewis Troxell to receive contributions for the purpose of erecting a new and substantial post and rail fence around the burial ground of that church, as the fence which now encloses the cemetery is very old, rotten, broken down and insufficient to keep stock from trespassing thereon. The movement should receive the hearty support of all persons who have relatives and friends buried there.

The Point of View embraces "The Critical Value of Popularity," "The Gallery in Politics," "The Artist as a Dogmatist," "Residence in the District" and the "American Treatment of Woman."

Golden Wedding. On Thursday Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, residing about four miles south of this place, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, by having a reunion of all their children and many of their friends were also present. The well known hospitality of the host and hostess was greatly enjoyed by all who gathered at the old homestead to extend their congratulations to the aged couple.

Burglary at Littlestown. S. H. Webber's hardware store in Littlestown was burglariously entered Sunday night. Mr. Webber has a burglar's alarm on his store, which called him when the thief entered the store, and Mr. Webber hastened to answer, arriving in the store in time to see the burglar, who made his escape before he could be identified. The thief had not time to carry anything away with him. —Hanover Citizen.

John Ridge Dead. John Ridge, the young boy who fell under the wheels and had his left leg crushed while attempting to jump on a moving freight train at Edgemont, on Wednesday last, died Thursday at the Maryland University Hospital, Baltimore. He was taken to the city immediately after the accident, accompanied by his brother, where it was found necessary to amputate the leg at the hip. The boy died soon afterward from the effect of the shock. —Mail.

What Stronger Proof. Is needed of the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla than the hundreds of letters continually coming in telling of marvelous cures it has effected after all other remedies have failed? Truly, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses peculiar curative power unknown to other medicines.

Hood's Pills cure Constipation by restoring the peristaltic action of the alimentary canal. They are the best family cathartic.

Some men were engaged in removing a decayed pile of saw dust from Swoll's saw mill in Blair's Valley, near Clearspring, a few days ago and a well-known ex-sheriff of that vicinity is authority for the statement that a multitude of snakes of varying sizes were nestled in the pile. Every one was ruthlessly killed and a careful count showed sixty-four copper and seventeen house snakes, and there is no telling how many were away from home. —Herald and Torch Light.

"An Ounce of Prevention is Worth a Pound of Cure." We would warn our readers of the necessity of strict sanitary precautions at this season of the year, when cool nights, following the extreme heat of the day, almost invariably produce sickness. It is very important that the utmost cleanliness be maintained, that all decaying fruits, vegetables and other offensive matter be removed and that no conditions be allowed to remain, either inside or around the dwellings, which can favor the introduction or spread of disease.

Accidents. George Keible was out gunning on Saturday. In getting over a fence he got his left foot into a post hole, spraining his ankle and breaking one of the small bones. Dr. J. B. Scott rendered the necessary surgical attention.

On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. John A. Poist, of McSherrystown, was seriously burned about the head and face. She was starting a fire in a range, and had just applied the match, when an explosion of gas blew flames into her face, as she leaned over the range. She extinguished the fire at once with her hands, burning them also. Her eyes are painfully burned, but it is hoped the sight will not be affected. —Star and Scimitar.

Perils of Modern Life. Contacts with electric wires, railroad accidents, broken car and elevator cables, explosions of steam, natural gas and chemicals, poisons in adulterated food and drink, are a few; but all these dangers combined do not kill as rapidly as slow and sure Consumption. The death rate, however, from Consumption, is being yearly cut down since Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., has given to the world his celebrated "Golden Medical Discovery," a cure for Consumption and Throat and Lung troubles that lead to Consumption, if taken in time and given a fair trial. The time to cure Consumption (which is really nothing more than Lung-rot) is in the first stages. A cough generally sounds the alarm, and you should take the "Discovery" at once. There is a time when it is too late.

In the Far West. In a letter from Mr. Frank M. Clegg, dated at New Rockford, N. D., Aug. 17, the writer requests us to remember him to all his friends in Emmitsburg and give them his best wishes. As Frank's friends include nearly everyone, we take the liberty of publishing the following information contained in his letter: "I have just returned from a ride over the prairies on horseback, with two cow boys for companions. This is the home of the Gopher, the Badger and the Prairie Dog, and of the latter we saw thousands. The wheat is nearly ready for harvest and the crop is fine. Farmers are selling last year's wheat for 24 cents a bushel and loading it on cars. I expect to run an engine during the threshing season. An engineer is paid $4 a day and board here, and there is lots of other work to be had at fair wages. New Rockford is a new town of about 500 inhabitants, among whom are people from nearly every State in the Union. We had a blizzard last night and hail stones fell as large as shell barks. The way the wind blew was terrible."

PARENTS who have young children will be interested in the experience of Mr. Alex. Moir, a prominent druggist at Britt, Iowa. He says: "During the summer of 1882, my little girl, two years of age, was taken seriously ill with summer complaint—so common to children of that age. After being treated by a physician and getting no better, I took from my shelves a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. She felt relieved after the first dose, and in three days was entirely well." For sale by C. D. Eichelberger.

A Store Robbed. Sometime during Thursday night a thief or thieves entered the hardware store of the Messrs. A. G. Quinn & Co., and stole about $200 worth of pocket-knives, pistols, chisels, etc. The thieves entered the building by the back way by cutting out a pane of glass and then raising the window. As no one was in the store at the time, nothing was known of the robbery until Friday morning. There is no clue to the robbers, but with the goods they have taken, if they are not careful, they will get caught. —Frederick News.

Death of Ex-Governor E. L. Love. Ex-Governor Enoch Louis Love died in St. Mary's Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., on Tuesday night. He had been suffering for a long time from gonorrhea of the bladder, which became so acute about two months ago as to force him from all business cares, and he went to the Hospital to have an operation performed on last Thursday, from the shock of which he never recovered. Mr. Love was born in this county in 1820. When thirteen years old he was sent to Clongowas Wood College, near Dublin, Ireland, and completed his education at a college in Lancashire, England. In 1850 he was nominated by the democrats and elected Governor of Maryland. His remains were taken to Frederick city on Wednesday for burial.

They Were Unsuccessful. Early last Saturday morning an unsuccessful attempt was made to rob the clothing store of Messrs. Rowe Bros., in this place. The thieves endeavored to gain an entrance to the store through a window in the rear end of the building, but from some cause, were scared away and did not succeed. In the morning a lot of tools belonging to Mr. Harry Smith, a large chisel and two straps were found at the window where they had been working. The same night and evidently the same parties, entered the barn of Mr. Joseph K. Hays, at the west end of town, and stole six grain sacks, cut the lines from a set of harness and also cut the curtains off of his wagon, preparatory to their visit to the clothing store. There is no clue to the thieves.

Accident Narrowly Averted. As the B. & O. passenger train that leaves this city at 6:30 o'clock in the morning, was nearing Stonebraker's Station, this side of Weyerton, Tuesday, an old man was seen hastening up the track signaling the train to stop. This act saved a wreck, for upon a bridge a short distance ahead was a horse with its feet fastened in between the cross ties. The animal had evidently wandered along the track, making an effort to cross the bridge. The trainmen, with other assistance, got the horse loose and led it off the bridge. The owner of the animal could not be found.

The grade is very steep at that point on the B. & O. and had no one warned the train of its danger a serious wreck would very likely have followed. —Hagerstown Mail.

Treble and Bass. "Twinkle, twinkle, little star, How I wonder what you are." In treble sweet piped little Grace, "Cattarrh, cattarrh, cattarrh, cattarrh, What a horrid pest you are?" Growned pap papa in lowest bass.

When papa reads this, he will learn how to get rid of the pest. By its mild, healing, antiseptic, and cleansing properties, Dr. Sage's Cattarrh Remedy cures the worst cases. This infallible remedy does not, like the poisons, irritate the snuffs, "creams" and strong caustic solutions with which the public have been so long humbugged, simply palliate for a short time, or drive the disease to the lungs. It produces a perfect and permanent cure of the worst cases of Chronic Cattarrh. "Cold in the Head" cured with a few applications. Cattarrhal Headache relieved and cured as if by magic. It removes offensive breath, loss or impairment of the sense of taste, smell or hearing, watering or weakness of the eyes, and impaired memory, when resulting from cattarrh. Only 50 cents, by druggists.

Children Bitten by a Mad Dog. Two children in Carroll county have been bitten by a dog that is supposed to have been suffering with hydrophobia. The animal was a small pet dog that belonged to Mr. Samuel Zepp, near Snyderburg, and one of the children bitten was Mr. Zepp's thirteen-year-old grandson, the son of Mrs. Sarah Yingling, of Westminster. The other is a five-year-old son of Mr. Daniel Sellers, Mrs. Yingling and her boy were at Mr. Zepp's on Friday evening, and the lad was bitten on the toe by the dog at that time. On Saturday the dog was morose, and refused to eat.

Apprehensive that hydrophobia was developing, Mr. Zepp tied him up, but loosed him Sunday morning, as he then was, apparently, unaffected. The premises the animal left the premises and went to the neighboring residence of Mr. Daniel Sellers. There he attacked and bit two of Mr. Sellers' dogs, following them into the kitchen, where he was seized by Mr. Sellers' little boy, who tried to throw him out. In the struggle the child was bitten in the arm. From Mr. Sellers' dog went to Mr. Henry Zimmerman's, in the same neighborhood, where he bites several dogs, cats and pigs, and attacked the chickens. A gunshot terminated his career and prevented further mischief. Steps are being taken to have Mrs. Yingling's son treated by the Pasteur method, and Mr. Sellers will probably pursue the same course with his child. —American.

The excursion on last Saturday to Harper's Ferry proved to be a large one. About 1,200 were thought to be on the train. You correspondent went along and nowhere along the road between this place and Harper's Ferry did he see better corn than at Fairfield. It seemed driver in Virginia than here and the grass and corn were withered. After reaching Harper's Ferry we took a walk up on Bolivar Heights where we had a fine view of Maryland Heights. We then went down along the Shenandoah River to the Ferry, which is built on rocks. One could see ledges of rocks as high as mountains. The Potomac and Shenandoah rivers are very low.

MARYLAND MATTERS. FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 24.—The sugar corn crop in Frederick county this year, owing to the effects of the prevailing drought, will not, it is believed, amount to more than about half of an average yield.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Aug. 21.—The peach season in Washington county has opened in earnest, and in a few days the shipments will be heavy. Up to this time much of the fruit has been of an inferior quality, but the finer grades are now ripening and will be in market before long.

BLAIR, Md., Aug. 22.—Mr. William R. Glass, aged 68 years, was killed by a flash of lightning, in the presence of his wife, while standing in the doorway of his barn. The bolt set fire to the barn, and it was burned to the ground, together with a lot of wheat, hay and farm utensils.

WESTMINSTER, Md., Aug. 19.—A factory for the manufacture of fine furniture will be started here as soon as a suitable building can be erected. The machine shops are also an assured success, as a large amount of stock has been taken. These two industries will give employment to a number of men.
