THE SONG OF THE FARM.

The poppies that peep from the wheat at morn,
With pearls of the night dew glittering still,
The shadows that race o'er the waving corn
And the shy little runnel down under the hill,
The hoary old orchard whose trees are bent,
And the clover-fields where the honey-bees swarm,
Cry, "Come to the cradle of calm content:
Come see Mother Nature at home on a farm!"

"Here are billows of meadow whose waves are so sweet
They perfume the air; here are mountains of hay;
Here are little winds lost upon oceans of wheat,
And butterflies shipwrecked in holly-hock spray;
Here is peace in the air and a smile in the sky,
And never a fear of deception or harm,
From the care and the woes of a city life
To old Mother Nature, who lives on a farm!"

And so the old song from the cherry-tree tops
And arbor where Bacchus might gather a treat,
From old-fashioned sparrows that live in a cove
And not in the dirt of an ill-smelling street,
From the bees and the kine and the sentinel cry
Of the cock, whose shrill clarion bodes no alarm,
Ring out to the city folk ever and aye:
"Come back to Dame Nature; she lives on a farm!"

In A Car With Death.

A Traveling Man's Strange and Startling Adventure.

From the Philadelphia Weekly Times.

Reynolds, Ind., is an insignificant little station at the intersection of the Monon and the Wabash Railroads, and is frequented only by such travelers as are obliged to make connection with the South. The train from Monticello brought me to the place at 7 o'clock, and I discovered to my dismay that there was no connection with Louisville till midnight. I used some expressive language, then submitting to the inevitable, I lit a cigar and waited. The night was bleak and frosty. The only passenger at the station besides myself was an unattractive woman, who sat shivering in one corner of the dreary waiting room.

"Can you tell me," she asked presently, "when the next train leaves for Lafayette?"

"At midnight," I answered. "I am waiting for the same train."

"Thank you." And the lady drew her cloak about her and relapsed into silence.

"It is rather disagreeable for a lady to travel by so late a train," I remarked.

"It is my usual bad luck," she replied drearily. She spoke with averted eyes and a subdued voice, interspersing her remarks with profound sighs.

"We have still a long time to wait," I said, by way of making myself agreeable.

"What does it matter? Have we not eternity before us?"

She settled back in her seat and took no further notice of me.

"Are you going to Lafayette on pleasure?" I asked after awhile.

"Pleasure for me? You don't know what you say?" There was a world of sorrow in her sigh. "I am going to visit my uncle, Dr. Joseph Stacey. Do you know him? I have been ill and am going to spend a few weeks with him to recuperate."

I cannot conscientiously affirm that I enjoyed the lady's society. By 9 o'clock my companion, weary with her long wait, fell asleep in her chair, and I, having finished my cigar, followed her example. I was awakened by the rough hand of the freight agent. "You want to catch the midnight train, do you not?" he cried.

"Certainly," I answered rubbing my eyes.

"Well, you'll have to run. She is almost at the crossing now, and only stops for half a minute. Hurry, or you'll be left!"

The lady was awake by this time, and seizing both our satchels in one hand, I grasped my companion's arm with the other, and hurried down the track, to where the big engine was puffing.

In spite of our haste we reached the locomotive just as it was starting again. We hastily boarded the first car. I lifted my charge on the steps and swung myself aboard after her. By this time the train was moving at a dangerous speed. We were safe, but it dawned upon me that we were not on a passenger coach, but upon an express car of some sort. In the uncertain darkness of a moonless night I observed a desperate looking tramp sitting on the steps on the opposite side, evidently stealing a ride. He glared at me savagely and sprang to his feet, fearing, perhaps, that I was some official who had come to dislodge him.

The car we entered was pitch dark, very cold and damp, and exhaled a curious deathly odor. The lady clung to me in alarm.

"Where do you think we are?" she asked, excitedly.

"I'm sure I don't know," I replied, with an attempt at jocularly. "Judging by the odor, I am inclined to think that we are in a traveling charnel house."

The lady trembled so violently that I felt sorry for my senseless remark.

"God protect me!" she gasped. "I wish we were at home."

Something of the lady's intense excitement communicated itself to me.

"Kindly let go of my arm and I will strike a light."

She released me, and while I was searching for my match box she took a few steps forward with outstretched hands. Suddenly she uttered a piercing shriek and threw herself upon my breast. She almost bore me to the ground.

"It is a corpse—his corpse," she gasped, with a moan. "He is lying there and I have touched him. Look! He is rising and coming towards me! Don't let him get at me!"

She shrieked as though she were on the rack, and held on to me with a grasp which made any movement on my part impossible.

"Come," I said trying to pacify her; "you are exciting yourself needlessly. I see nothing at all. Let me strike a light, and we will examine the contents of the car."

I extricated myself and struck a match against the wall. Its bluish light cast a fitful glare over the scene, and revealed upon a box what appeared to be a nude and bleeding corpse. I confess I was startled. The woman stared at it with distended eyes, while her forces seemed to expend themselves in one despairing cry. I could feel by her utter helplessness as she fell into my arms that she had fainted. The flickering match was extinguished and darkness enveloped us. To my dismay, I saw a pair of gleaming eyes peer at me through the door. It was the tramp, who, hearing the unwonted commotion could no longer restrain his curiosity to see what was going on. His sudden and unexpected appearance (for I had quite forgotten him) did not reassure me. Before me lay a bleeding cadaver, behind me crouched a desperate tramp and in my arms reclined a crazy female, limp and powerless. For aught I knew the corpse belonged to some unfortunate traveler, who like myself had accidentally entered this fatal car and had been murdered and robbed by this very tramp who now held regard over me. The thought filled me with horror. I had no weapon with me and the train was speeding along at a terrific rate, making it impossible for me to obtain assistance in case of an assault.

Depositing the body upon the damp floor I struck another match. Its rays fell upon a conductor's lantern which hung suspended from the well. I seized it with feverish haste and lit its wick. The light was faint, but very welcome. It threw its rays into the recesses of the car. Then a sight met my eyes which made me smile in spite of my previous terror. The car was full of corpses, perhaps fifty of them, but they failed to inspire me with fear, for they were nothing more than the remains of beeves and calves. I had entered one of Armour's meat cars, and the carcasses before me were no doubt being conveyed to some Southern market.

With a sigh of relief at the happy solution of the mystery I picked my way to the rear door, but found it locked and I was a prisoner. The woman was by this time regaining consciousness and I ran to her assistance.

"How are you now?" I asked.

She gazed at me in a stupid way and her eyes slowly wandered around the car. Suddenly they rested upon the carcass of a calf and with a maniac shout she began to rave.

"Martin, my husband," she cried wildly. "They have murdered you and brought home your bleeding body."

She hid her face in her hands and sobbed so passionately that I could scarcely restrain my own tears from flowing. I endeavored to soothe her, but she no sooner heard my voice than her madness assumed a new phase.

"You here?" she shouted in frenzy; "Why you are his murderer! I will have revenge! I will strangle you as you did him!"

She advanced towards me with such a look of hatred that I instinctively shrank towards the wall. Then before I was aware of her purpose, before I could make an effort to defend myself, she sprang upon me, and encircled me with her long and willowy arms. Good God, what a strength that woman displayed. In her arms I was powerless as a child.

"Let me go!" I answered, struggling to free myself. "You are mistaken; I never harmed your husband."

"Ha, ha," she laughed shrilly, clutching me with one hand by the throat while the other still pinioned my arms, rendering them useless. "You are his slayer! You have mangled him! Go and join him in the grave!"

I was strangling. The maniac was not only choking me to death, but was also beating my head against the wall of the car and I felt my forces ebbing beneath her rigorous treatment. Suddenly the bloated and weatherbeaten features of the tramp again peered in at the door. He was a welcome apparition now. He appeared a savior sent down from heaven.

"Help me!" I gasped. "She is murdering me!"

With an oath he threw himself upon the maniac, and, clasping her hands, managed to tear her from me. She shrieked and foamed in her impotent frenzy. It took our combined efforts to bear her to the floor and keep her from inflicting injury upon herself. The next hour passed drearily. We held the woman by her head and feet to the floor. I related to my wondering rescuer all the circumstances connected with my brief and unfortunate acquaintance with the woman.

The train made its first stop at Lafayette, where I at once sought the conductor and related my adventures. He was not a little surprised at the drama which had been enacted almost beneath his eyes. We secured a carriage and conveyed the still raving woman to the county hospital. Next morning I looked up Dr. Stacey, the relative of whom the woman had spoken. He heard my story with surprise and sorrow.

"Poor Sally," he muttered, as he rolled along to the hospital; "her's is a sad story. You see, sir, misfortune has turned her head, which, by the way, never was strong. Last month they brought home her husband a bleeding corpse. He had fallen from a scaffold. Since then she has been unbalanced. I suppose the touch and sight of the carcasses coupled with the excitement or traveling, were too much for her nerves. I am sorry, sir, that you had such a terrible time of it."

"Don't mention it," I replied. "It is not worth speaking about." But I instinctively put my hand to my throat, where I fancied I still felt the grip of her clammy fingers.

Next day the woman was committed to an asylum, dangerously and hopelessly insane.

DIAMONDS.

"Diamonds are rather plentiful now-a-days," began Richard Burlsett, the veteran jeweler, who is registered at the Laclede, "but like really great men there are very few ones. We all know of the Koh-i-noor, the whilom treasure of the Kahn of Persia. And again the great orange diamond, now in possession of the German Emperor, but the largest diamonds are not always finest. Sometimes a large diamond fails to sparkle properly, lacks radiance and color. Such a stone upon being divided will often make several brilliant and valuable small diamonds, whose aggregate value would be more than the great colorless original. In the early dawn of civilization diamonds were the cause of more crime than even gold or silver. They have been swallowed for safe keeping, frequently causing death.

"Murder after murder can be traced to one or the other of these great diamonds as the primal cause. Some dire state intrigues and plots have had a diamond for the centre or nucleus. One of the finest diamonds in the world was found not long since in the Brazilian sands. It came in a novel form. A small quartz rock was found, about the size and shape of an egg, lying in the sands along the bank of the Amazon, in Brazil. This was carried home by a Brazilian peasant, who was attracted by its odd shape and light weight. For some time it lay in his home with a number of other geological specimens, a mere curiosity. Happening one day in handling it to drop it on a stone block it burst open and lay in halves on the block. The hollow interior that gave the light weight to the stone was filled with blood-red sand. In this sand lay the diamond, a sparkling stone of the rarest quality. The stone was later sold to a diamond merchant and left the finder exceedingly wealthy. It is safe to say that the next egg-shaped stone found in that section will not long remain unbroken, and now that the quality and value of a diamond so formed is well known the next finder will realize a fortune out of it most certainly."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Winter Suggestion.

There is but one flower more beautiful than the morning glory on the outside of the bay window, and that is a morning glory trained up on the inside of the window, and in full bloom while the winter storms are raging and the thermometer is below zero. They can be grown with very little trouble.

JUSTICE LAMAR'S DEATH.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 24.—Justice Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar died here at 8:50 o'clock last evening. It is a terrible shock to the community. His death was sudden in the extreme, for, although he has been ailing for some time, Justice Lamar appeared to be gradually gaining in health. He came from Washington to

L. Q. C. LAMAR.

Macon about a month ago and has been visiting at the residence of Mr. W. H. Virgin, his son-in-law, in Vinoville, a suburb of this city. Avidity factors was the direct cause of Justice Lamar's death, and is given by the physicians as being the chief complication in the case. Justice Lamar came into the city late yesterday afternoon, and called at the office of Colonel H. B. Park, where he conversed pleasantly on general topics. He was accompanied by Dr. Llewellyn on his return to the residence of Mr. W. H. Virgin. At that time and during all the afternoon he was in good spirits, and at dinner, at 5:50 last evening, he seemed to have a good appetite. Dr. Llewellyn left the house about 8 o'clock, and a few minutes later the justice was seized with violent pains in the heart and died at the hour mentioned.

Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar was born in Putnam county, Ga., Sept. 1, 1825, and after his father's death was taken to Oxford, Miss., where he received a part of his education. He graduated at Morey college, Georgia, in 1845; studied law in Macon, and was admitted to the bar in 1847. In 1849 he returned to Oxford, Miss., and for a year held a professorship in the University of Mississippi. He resigned and resumed the practice of law in Covington, Ga. He was elected to the legislature in 1853, and in 1854 again returned to Mississippi and settled on his plantation in Lafayette, being shortly afterwards elected to congress as a Democrat. He served from 1857 until 1860, when he resigned to take a seat in the secession convention of his native state. He cast his fortunes with the "Lost Cause" and left the army with the rank of colonel, after having shared in many engagements. He became again a professor in the University of Mississippi, and again took a seat in the house of representatives. In March, 1857, he was elected to the United States senate. March 5, 1858, President Cleveland appointed Mr. Lamar secretary of the interior and afterwards elevated him to a seat on the supreme bench.

Terrible Disaster in Illinois.
ALTON, Ill., Jan. 24.—Nine persons killed outright, twelve fatally injured and nearly a hundred more or less seriously hurt, is the appalling result of a series of accidents at Alton Junction. An open switch on the Big Four main track was the cause of the disaster. The southwest car limited ran into the freight train standing on the siding, and Engineer Wahr Ross, of the limited, instantly killed. The wreck took fire, and while a great crowd was watching the spectacle an oil tank car exploded with terrific force, enveloping the spectators in a sheet of burning oil. Eight of them were instantly killed, fifteen have since died, and scores were frightfully burned, a dozen of whom at least will die. Switchman Gratian, whose negligence, it is alleged, caused the disaster, denies the charge, but says the switch was tampered with.

Two Killed, Two Fatally Hurt.
PATRICK, N. J., Jan. 25.—A sleigh, with a party of six, returning home to Passaic City, was struck by an Erie railroad locomotive at the Monroe street crossing in Passaic half an hour after midnight, and the occupants thrown in all directions. Mamie Ryan, 23 years old, was killed instantly, and Maggie Eplian, aged 20, so badly injured that she died a few hours later. Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, the divorced wife of a schoolmaster on West street, New York, and John Moore (colored), driver of the sleigh, were fatally injured.

Proposed New Stars for the Flag.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The Republican caucus yesterday afternoon decided, by a majority vote, to take favorable action upon the admission of the territories of Oklahoma, Utah and New Mexico, but left Arizona out in the cold. This result was not obtained until after a prolonged discussion. Definite action, however, will probably be delayed until the next session of congress.

Mr. Blaine's Condition.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—No encouraging reports, even as to temporary gaining of strength, are received from Mr. Blaine's physicians or family, and the impression is everywhere becoming more emphatic that each day now finds him in some respects not so well as on the previous day.

Another Royal Wedding.
VIENNA, Jan. 25.—The marriage of Archduchess Margaret Sophie and Duke Albrecht of Wurttemberg was solemnized yesterday in the Church of the Hofrath. Cardinal Grucha, archbishop of Vienna, officiated. The wedding was one of great brilliancy.

Indiana Wants the Fair Open.

In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

German's Cholera Visitation.
BERLIN, Jan. 25.—Five fresh cases of cholera and two deaths were reported at the Nielsen Institute last evening. Professor Pettenhofer says the development and progress of the disease at Nielsen are of the greatest significance.

Mexican Bandits Captured.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Two leaders of the bandits who have caused so much trouble along the Mexican border have been captured. They are Francisco Barrios and Francisco Gonzalez, leaders in the San Ignacio raid.

OVER A HUNDRED KILLED.

VIENNA, Jan. 25.—Eighty miners were killed and scores were injured in an explosion in the Fortschritt mine near Dux, Bohemia, as the shifts were changing. A cage full of miners had been lowered half way down the shaft when the ground trembled, a loud rumbling report was heard, and the cable attaching to the cage gave such a lurch that the lowering machinery broke. A rush of air and dust from the pit's mouth, the sound of crashing timbers and the cries of the men in the cage gave warning to the men about of the extent of the disaster. Help was summoned, the machinery was repaired after a delay of half an hour and the cage was raised. Ten of the occupants had been killed and the yards of the mine had suffered fractures from which they cannot recover. Five, who had broken limbs and internal injuries, will live. They had been half suffocated by the gas rising in the shaft, and said that no man could live below.

An hour later the superintendent of the mine and five miners from the night shift went down in the cage. They were unable to go more than a hundred yards from the shaft in the gallery, but they found fourteen dead bodies.

The men who had been brought up from the bottom said that a few minutes after the explosion they had heard cries and groans from the mouth of the gallery above the men who were entombed by the explosion.

Another rescue party went down at once and after three hours had been carried back to the shaft unconscious, penetrated to the entrance of the gallery. The entrance was completely blocked by the wreckage of the works, and a rescue party could see several dead bodies on the other side of the timbers, but were unable to get at them, and returned to the top empty handed. It is believed that all the men in the gallery were suffocated or killed by the shock of the explosion.

When the extent of the disaster began to become evident the women of the dead men's families attempted to mob the mine officers, accusing them of carelessness in the management of the mine and of indifference as to the fate of their husbands and brothers below. The mine officials sent to Dux for police, and three companies of soldiers are camped in the fields around the pit's mouth.

VIENNA, Jan. 25.—All hope of rescuing alive the men who were entombed by the explosion of the mine at Dux, Bohemia, has been abandoned. An investigation of the list of employees reveals the fact that 130 men lost their lives in the disaster.

TO CARVE THE PENSION LIST

Some Radical Reductions Proposed by a House Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The sub-committee of the appropriation committee of the house has completed the consideration of the pension bill. Some radical legislation is proposed in the bill looking to the reduction of the pension list. One provision is that no person living abroad shall receive a pension unless actually disabled.

Another is that no person capable of earning a living, or whose income from any source is equal to $800 per year, shall receive a pension under the dependent person act. Still another provides that no soldier's widow who was married to the soldier after 1870 shall receive a widow's pension. A commission is provided to sit during the recess to examine the pension roll with the view of eliminating improperly allowed pensions.

The bill also does away with pension agencies throughout the country, and provides for payment of pensions by checks directly from the treasury department, abolishes examinations of applicants by surgeons, and provides for the appointment of 150 special examiners to hereafter make examinations.

PHILLIPS BROOKS DEAD.

The Eminent Episcopalian Bishop a Victim of Diphtheria.

BOSTON, Jan. 23.—Bishop Phillips Brooks died here yesterday. Up to last Thursday he had been in the best of spirits. Thursday morning he contracted a slight cold, which, however, caused no alarm. Dr. Beach, the family physician called during the day and gave him some medicine, advising him, more as a precautionary measure, to keep his room, and to remain in doors until the trouble had disappeared. Everything progressed well until Sunday, when diphtherial symptoms necessitated the calling of Dr. Beach. The latter evening found no cause for serious alarm, and left, promising to call later in the night.

On Sunday evening he became suddenly worse, and toward midnight his mind began to wander, and he said to his faithful nurse, Katie Hogan: "Katie, you can go. I shall not need you any more. I am going home from now that time he sank rapidly until the end of his life.

Phillips Brooks was born in Boston on Dec. 13, 1835, and his early education was obtained at home and in the public schools of that city. He entered Harvard college when 19 years old, and graduated in 1855. He then became a assistant teacher in the Boston Latin school, but soon resigned to study for the ministry. After graduating from the Protestant Episcopal seminary at Alexandria, Va., he began work in his native city in the Church of the Advent, Philadelphia, where he remained for three years. In 1859 he accepted the pastorate of Trinity church, Boston.

Often he was called to other pulpits, but no offer could tempt him from his allegiance to Trinity. He received the Plummer professorship at Harvard in 1881, and a few years later declined the assistant bishopric of Pennsylvania, to which he was chosen in 1888. The opposition which was excited by his nomination to the bishopric of Massachusetts is so recent that it is scarcely necessary to recall the details of it at this time. Fortunately it was not strong enough to prevent his consecration, and, although death has removed him in the prime of his career, he has been bishop long enough to prove that the anxieties of his opponents were groundless.

MORE CABINET GUESSES.

Bayard, Carlisle, Lamont and Harrity Slated for Places.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 25.—President-elect Cleveland and ex-Secretary of State Thomas F. Bayard, spent several hours yesterday at cabinet making at the Cleveland coliseum.

It is said to be settled that Mr. Bayard is to have the state portfolio again, and that Senator Carlisle will be the secretary of the treasury. The only other member thus far known to have been selected for Mr. Cleveland's cabinet is Mr. Lamont, who, it is claimed, is booked for secretary of the navy. From a most reliable source comes the information that National Chairman William F. Harrity, of Pennsylvania, has been selected to be tendered the postmaster generalship. Mr. Carlisle, who was expected here last night to assist Mr. Cleveland, did not arrive. Mr. Cleveland has not determined what steps to take in regard to Mr. Lamont's funeral.

The cattle have been killed, and the only articles of food left in the stores are beans and molasses. The crews of the imprisoned boats have been living on bread and butter.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 25.—John R. English died last evening at his home in this city, aged about 64 years. Kidney disease was the cause of death. English was a familiar figure at all old time prize fights, and was known to the "bruisers" of his day from the lakes to the Gulf. It was in his saloon that the loiterers there, at one time the terror of Baltimore, received their baptism of "Plug Uglies." He was acquitted after trial in Philadelphia in 1858 of the murder of "Cockey" McIntyre, leader of the Moyamensing firemen, during a fight with the latter.

It was immediately concluded that a large owl had perched on the chimney top. Noah Davis, of Pen Yan, N. Y., who is visiting the family, proceeded ashore and fired at the owl, which immediately on the explosion a man, who was sitting astride of the roof, hugging the chimney, relaxed his hold and rolled from the roof to an adjoining shed to the ground. BEST FLOWERS FOR A SICKROOM. The best flowers for a sickroom are growing flowers, but cut flowers are more often obtainable. As to these latter they should first of all be fresh. They quickly decay, and then they communicate to the water in which they are placed vegetable juices which undergo putrefactive fermentation and render the air impure. Bright colored flowers are desirable.—Boston Globe.

Dr. C. D. EICHELBERGER, the Druggist, gives ten reasons why Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best:

- 1. It will cure a severe cold in less time than any other treatment.
2. It does not suppress a cough or cold; but loosens and relieves it.
3. It relieves the lungs, which is of great importance in treating a cold.
4. It is the only remedy that will cause the expulsion of mucus from the air cells of the lungs.
5. It renders the mucous less tenacious and easier to expectorate.
6. If freely used as soon as the first symptoms appear, it will cure a severe cold in a single day.
7. It will prevent croup and avert all danger and anxiety arising from that dreadful disease.
8. It has cured thousands of cases of croup, and careful inquiry fails to discover a single case in which it has ever failed.
9. It does not contain opium, chloroform, or any other injurious substance. There is not the least danger in giving it to children.
10. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts in perfect harmony with nature and aids nature in relieving the lungs, and freeing the system of morbid matter, accumulated by cause of the cold. 50 cents per bottle.

All of One Mind Politically. Mr. M. L. Warrenfeltz, who is teaching the public school at Fink's school house, about 2 1/2 miles southwest of this place, has thirty-four pupils, 14 girls and 20 boys. A singular fact in connection with this item is that the teacher and every one of his pupils are of republican proclivities. It is doubted if there is another school in the county in which the same unanimity exists.—Valley Register.

Frozen to Death. John Snyder, a deaf mute, who claimed Lancaster county as his home, was found dead in the road near East Berlin, on Wednesday morning. He was under the influence of liquor the night before, and had fallen in a small ditch from which he was unable to extricate himself. The thumb and forefinger of his left hand were chewed and his mouth was bloody. Nearly $100 in silver were found in his pockets, and a pint bottle, half full of whiskey, lay near the body. Dr. Miller, of Aldottstown, coroner, held an inquest, the verdict being that Snyder froze to death while drunk.—Star and Sentinel.

In Olden Times. People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Cold Weather. It may be interesting to the readers of the CHRONICLE who have heard so many comments on the recent cold weather to know that the cold weather of the winter of 1873 was more severe than this has been so far and extended over a longer period. Snow fell that winter to the depth of 18 to 26 inches early in January and the sleighing was enjoyed all through that month and to the latter part of February. On the morning of January 30, 1873, the thermometer in and around Emmitsburg dropped to 22° below zero, and as late as February 24th was down to 2° below zero. These facts are taken from the diary of one of our citizens, written at the time.

Negligence. The frost in the ground has raised the pavement in front of the Firemen's hall on Gettysburg street, several inches high in the middle. What has been the real cause of the pavement raising, we are unable to say, but it is possible that the water pipe running into the hall froze and burst, and is the cause of the trouble. The pavement is much higher than the lower part of the doors and they cannot be opened. The town commissioners, or at least some of them, have been notified in regard to the matter, and as yet they have taken no steps to right the wrong. This is an important matter and should have received prompt attention. Should an alarm of fire be given, it would be impossible to take the apparatus from the room without breaking the doors, and surely it would be better to have the pavement fixed than to have the doors broken, which would incur a double expense.

An Enemy Baffled. There is an enemy with whom thousands are familiar all their lives, because they are born with a tendency to biliousness. With this enemy they are constantly battling with ineffective weapons. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will baffle it. Mero purgatives will not reform a disordered condition of the liver indicated, not by constipation alone, but also by sick headache, yellowness of the skin and eye balls, nausea, lured tongue and uneasiness, more particularly upon pressure on the right side, upon and below the short ribs. Avoid drastic purgatives which grip and weaken the intestines, and substitute this mild, natural and pleasant cathartic which likewise relieves indigestion, and kidney complaints, rheumatism and nervousness. As a laxative of the bowels, it is less but effective, it improves appetite, sleep and the ability to digest, and possesses the additional advantage of a standard tonic.

ROCKY RIDGE ITEMS.

We are happy to welcome among our visitors, Mr. Harry N. Black, formerly with Mr. Robert Campbell, of Frederick city, but having accepted a position with O. Neill & Co., of Baltimore, made a short visit among his many friends here. We extend our wishes for his success.

Mr. W. M. Barrick and wife, of Frederick, are spending a few days at his parental home, near Rocky Ridge, having disposed of his store in Frederick, and intending to locate in Washington, D. C., where he and his brother, R. E. Barrick, proposes engaging in the coffee business, No. 7 and 9, Second St., near the Capitol, at which place, they will be glad to receive any of their friends and acquaintances.

Miss Cain, of Washington, D. C., is the guest of her cousins, the Misses Black.

Sunday the 15th inst., was a clear, cold, wintry day. Sleighting being excellent, afforded our people a pleasant way of traveling; hence our country church was well filled. Rev. J. H. Barb, at 10 a. m. entered the pulpit, and gave us one of his sound doctrinal sermons from the text recorded in Numbers, chapter 16, explaining the incidents recorded from the first to the thirty-first verse.

Officers for the ensuing year at the Lutheran Church here were installed at our last meeting: Mr. George Krise, Elder; Mr. B. Wood and Mr. Clarence Ott, Deacons.

The Lutheran Aid Society, of Rocky Ridge, held a meeting on Sunday evening, January 15th. The members took part in the brief readings, singing, and quite a number of well chosen recitations by the younger members. Those present enjoyed the services, and spoke of it in a manner that indicated that they were benefited.

A very interesting object was recently shown us, while visiting at Mr. Geo. W. Barrick's, near this place, which was a carrier Pigeon. About the first of September an unpleasant odor was perceived around the hearth in the house, which quickly passed away and no investigation was made, until house cleaning time. The first of November, a pigeon was found in the chimney, which had been dead for some time. It was a beautiful large one. The body was grey, the neck and wings tipped with black, and both wings marked with red, or rather a royal purple color. Under the wing many of the feathers were marked as follows: "S. Wallace, No. 114, D Street, North Washington." The silver band on the leg contained the following: "No. 249 and 92, W. F." Truly it met a sad fate. What could have been the message it was conveying is unknown, and was it homeward bound when it received a wound and then dropped down the chimney, or had the poor bird become exhausted and fell, are points unknown.

The Sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered at Mt. Tabor Lutheran church next Sabbath, at 10 a. m. Preparatory services next Saturday, at 2 p. m.

Cataract in the Head. Is undoubtedly a disease of the blood, and as such only a reliable blood purifier can effect a perfect cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier, and it has cured many very severe cases of catarrh. It gives an appetite and builds up the whole system.

Hood's PILLS act especially upon the liver rousing it from torpidity to its natural duties, cures constipation and assist digestion.

Sleigh Ride and Runaway. Through the kindness of Messrs. Charles L. Long and Jacob Smith, the well known liverymen of this place, the CHRONICLE force was given a pleasant sleigh ride on last Saturday afternoon, in a large sled drawn by four fine horses and the ribbons were manipulated by the well known driver, Mr. Long, and by the way, it was his first attempt to swing four-in-hand. We were driven through the streets and out the west end of town, and around by the mountain road. Up to this time nothing of any note had happened, and soon we were on our homeward journey, when suddenly the horses came to a standstill, and the driver asked if he could cross that icy place in the road, a short distance in front of us. Every-body replied in the affirmative and the horses were started. We crossed the icy place in safety, but as the driver endeavored to keep the horses off of the ice as much as possible, got off the main road and the front runner on the sled fell into an ugly rut, but was pulled out, when suddenly both of the runners on the right side, fell into two ugly holes. The driver was thrown from his seat, among the horses and rolled out into the gutter, whilst Mr. Moose who was sitting with him fell out on the other side of the road. He was soon on his feet again, and exclaimed "there they go! Whoa!" The lead horses had torn loose from the tongue and were going up the road in a dead run, when finally they stopped, a short distance from where the accident happened. They were brought back, the sled was placed in the road, the lead horses were fastened to the tongue again and in a few minutes we were on our way to Emmitsburg, congratulating ourselves that neither the men nor the horses received any injury. We thank these gentlemen for their kindness and assure them that the ride was greatly enjoyed.

Serlin's Magazine for February has a number of illustrated articles on unusually interesting bits of foreign lands. Dr. Henry van Dyke writes an unconventional travel sketch, with the title "From Venice to the Gross-Vandiger." From a far different outlook, Mr. and Mrs. Blashfield describe "Florence and the Florentine artist" with pen and pencil—the pictures of Mr. Blashfield giving the artistic atmosphere of that most suggestive city. From the point of view of the decorator, Frederic Crowninshield concludes his impressions of modern Rome, with illustrations of its unique beauties. Alfred Jerome Weston gives the color and spirit of Tangier in his sketch entitled, "From Spanish Light to Moorish Shadows." Another paper by the late Marguis de Chambrun (whose pen picture of Lincoln was conspicuous in the January number), gives his vivid "Personal Recollections of Charles Sumner." A feature of the article is an account of Mr. Sumner's broaching his plan for Reconstruction to Mr. Lincoln and the discussion which ensued. The account of the closing year of Mr. Sumner's life is told with great simplicity and pathos, and the whole paper is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the personality of the great man who was so oft a misunderstood. In fiction this issue is particularly rich, containing three complete short stories and the second instalment of Mrs. Bennett's charming serial. T. R. Sullivan contributes a story of sentiment, entitled "To Her." Octave Thanet has the sixth and last of her group of "Stories of a Western Town," this one being the love-story of Harry Louisa, who has appeared from time to time in the other sketches. The readers of this group of stories will be glad to know that, with Mr. Frost's admirable illustrations, they are soon to be published in book form. Lloyd Osbourne (joint author with Mr. Stevenson of "The Wrecker") contributes a vigorous military sketch entitled "How the Battle was Lost."

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE NEWS.

Examinations began this week. The graduates were called up Tuesday morning and finished Friday morning. The examinations of the entire school will be completed by Tuesday evening.

In the early part of the week coasting was excellent. A party of five made a fool-hardy attempt to go down the hill on a rudely constructed "bob" and they met with a rather severe accident.

Four of the five, who made up the crowd, had to be carried to the infirmary, where they are still confined. They will be out in a few days. The warm weather of this week has destroyed the track.

The second session begins next Wednesday. The students always look upon that day, as the beginning of the "home-stretch."

DEATH OF MR. JOSEPH LINGG. Communicated. On last Sunday, the 22nd, inst., death came to the relief of Mr. Joseph Lingg, eldest son of Mr. Michael Lingg, of this place. For three years and a half the deceased had been troubled with a disease which baffled the medical skill of this place. As late as last summer, when life was yet dear to him, and clinging to the hope that he might yet meet with some one who could bring about his recovery, he entered St. Agnes' Hospital, Baltimore, where he remained for some time under the care of the physicians in attendance. But when he returned home in the fall his condition was not improved. He gradually grew weaker, until even his clothing overburdened him. The physicians at the Hospital pronounced his disease sugar diabetes. He was buried from St. Joseph's Catholic church, with Requiem High Mass, on Tuesday, at 9:30 a. m., Rev. H. F. White, C. M., officiating. The deceased has many relatives and warm friends to mourn his loss, but cherish the hope that he is now enjoying the happy reward for his long suffering in this life. C. N. B.

A LUNCH IN PARIS.

Mrs. Chester's Remarkable Experience While Abroad.

M. R. M'VICKAR.

"Interesting adventures have not been numerous in my existence," Mrs. Chester remarked from the corner of the sofa, placing a large, soft cushion behind her and crossing her feet comfortably; "but I can tell you one that happened only last summer and which I think is somewhat out of the ordinary run. We were in Paris at the time. One morning I went alone to my bankers in the Rue — and drew some money for my sister. As I came out I recognized Mr. Fairman, who was passing. I bowed, and he immediately joined me, asking if I would allow him to accompany me to my destination, whatever that might be. I had known Arthur Fairman slightly for a number of years, and probably would never have become better acquainted with him had we not met in a foreign land. There seems to be a fraternal feeling between Americans abroad that in many cases would not exist at home.

"At any rate, I gave him the desired permission, and we strolled along, enjoying the life and gaiety so peculiar to the Paris boulevards. At the Maison D—, where I had expected him to leave me, he remarked that he would be glad to wait while I tried on several hats. Must I confess that I was pluming myself upon having made something of a conquest of a formerly indifferent acquaintance? His patience was angelic, for after three-quarters of an hour he greeted me in the same amiable manner, and asked me to lunch with him at the Cafe Cambon. Charming man! I reflected a moment, then accepted, as I knew returning home would mean a solitary meal—at the best a hurried, unsatisfying repast.

"As it was, I had an extremely pleasant time. We secured a table in one of the windows, and Mr. Fairman almost immediately inquired if I had ever been to Russia. I think this was our principal topic of conversation. I was surprised to find him such a traveled, cultivated man and so interesting a talker. The lunch was excellent, also the company, and when he bade me adieu at the hotel I am sure it was with sincere regret on both sides, particularly as he was about leaving Paris for London, and our renewed acquaintance would have to be suspended until we met in New York.

"My sister returned from a shopping expedition later in the afternoon, and I gave her a graphic account of how I spent the morning, concluding, 'And here is the money you wanted,' my hand gliding into my pocket. It was empty! My purse had disappeared without a tear in the material to mark its exit. I had not taken it out after leaving the bankers; of that I was almost certain; therefore my pocket must have been picked on route. I remembered a crowd of people in the Rue Daunou, which jammed the narrow sidewalks, but Mr. Fairman had been behind me the entire way. Could he help me, I wondered? My sister advised me to write to him at once.

"Perhaps we could stop him before he left the city. I looked at the clock; it was striking 4. 'He leaves at 6,' I murmured hopefully. 'I will send for him immediately.' Then, remembering: 'But I don't know his address. Is it not provoking? I went over to the window and gazed absently out. I had been watching passers by for some time, feeling deeply depressed, when suddenly I caught sight of Mr. Fairman hurrying along on the opposite side. What luck! Without a word of explanation to my sister, I ran to the door, down the staircase and into the street.

"In a few seconds I had overtaken him, and, while trying to regain my breath, managed to tell him of my loss. He was most sympathetic and much distressed over the occurrence.

"I am mortified at not having been able to take better care of you," he kept repeating apologetically; "you cannot imagine how badly I feel. However, I will go to the police station and report the theft on my way to the depot, so that your interests will be well looked after when I am gone."

book and its contents, after which he excused himself, as he said he must return to his apartments before going to the train. In spite of his kindly interest, as is usual in such cases, the money was never heard of again.

"A few days ago," Mrs. Chester continued, drawing a long breath and sitting more erect, "I met Mr. Fairman on Fifth avenue and stopped to speak to him. 'How have you been since I saw you last summer in Paris?' I exclaimed cordially. He shook my hand rather mechanically, I thought, and seemed somewhat puzzled. 'Do you know,' I went on, 'we never found any trace of that money that was stolen? And I added, laughing, 'We almost accused you of petty larceny.'

"Mr. Fairman's face wore an extraordinary expression. 'Paris? Petty larceny?' he stammered, looking blankly at me; 'but my dear Mrs. Chester, I have not been abroad for three years!'

"For a moment there was a dead silence, each gazing at the other. 'Not been abroad?' I gasped unbelievably. 'But I saw you; I lunched with you.'

"I can prove an alibi whenever you please," Mr. Fairman replied seriously. 'I spent August and September with my sister Carrie in Newport.'

"Then the truth flashed over me. The small differences I had not noticed before became only too clear now. The clever duplicate had traded on his mistaken identity, and had calmly lunched me and rifled my pocket to pay for the spree. Well, it was a good lunch, but it cost me 1,000 francs."—Harper's Weekly.

"Well, sir, what part of America were you born in, McGinnis?" "Oh, yer honor, right strat in the town iv Philadelphia, sur, and sorry I'm for leaving it."

"Tell me, now, what State Philadelphia is in?" "Oh, be dad, it is the Stat' yer honor manes 'tis Tim, looking rather confused."
