LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

Aye, laugh and grow fat!
Full often a chat
Proves more potent than potion;
Laughter acts on the heart,
Gives the blood a fresh start
And a vigorous motion.

Yes, laugh and grow fat!
"Care," you know killed the cat—
It will you if you let it;
There's no surer relief
For many a grief
Than to laugh and forget it.

Yes, laugh and grow fat!
Though some sceptic hereat
May scoff, wholesome laughter
Doth body and soul,
Mind and morals control;
They are all better after.

Then laugh and grow fat!
Don't be prim and "ad" that."
Why should features be lengthened?
Just smile till you've heard,
And I pledge you my word
You'll be gladdened and strengthened.

HER FIRST INTERVIEW.

A Newspaper Woman Gives a Novice's Experience.

From the Philadelphia Weekly Times.

It happened a good many years ago, and many conversations and interviews I have taken part in since that time, but years and varied experiences have not been sufficient to efface from my memory every detail of that trying event.

I graduated from the High School in our little city when a trifle over sixteen years of age, and with the glowing ambitions and aspirations of youth I mapped out for myself a brilliant career. First I intended to be a musician, but my accomplishments extended only so far as "Mamma's Waltz," which I could play on the organ, or under stress, on the piano, if I provided myself with a hassock on which to work imaginary pedals, and being told that it would take many years and much money, the latter an almost unknown article in our home, to attain anything like proficiency in music, I decided to try something else. During my early youth I had fallen from a tree, and having my tongue between my teeth upon that mournful occasion, the end of the first mentioned member was cut off. This, of course, precluded the possibility of my becoming a second edition of Jenny Lind, and my friends insisted that my liping was altogether pronounced for a tragedy queen. I spent about twenty minutes one night seriously considering whether or not I should be a nurse. The war being just over, the accounts of the heroism and bravery of the Sanitary Commission nurses almost persuaded me to study for such work.

A REMARKABLE PARROT.

It Takes an Interest in About Everything That Goes on Near By.

Charles F. Kapp owns a parrot which, he says, is the most intelligent biped in the city, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The bird is a magnificent specimen of the South American parrot, with a fine yellow head, rich green plumage, with red tipped wings and gray bill. He answers to the name of Charley. A reporter who called on Mr. Kapp was greeted with "Hello, stranger. Peck-a-boo. I see you. Have you wiped your feet?" spoken in tones almost indistinguishable from the human voice and delivered by the parrot with a knowing wink and cock of the head.

"Take a seat, gentlemen. Charley's glad to see you," continued the bird, and the wonderful specimen of the feathered world continued with a running fire of comment during the whole of the reporter's visit.

Charley is quite a young bird, being only two years old. Mr. Kapp bought him for a trifle about 18 months ago from the steward of a Panama steamer. Since then Mr. Kapp and his wife have reared and trained him and taught him all he knows. Some time ago Kapp was offered $200 for the bird, and knowing that his wife wanted a piano he told her she might sell the parrot and get the piano, but she said she would not part with her feathered pet for two pianos.

When Mr. and Mrs. Kapp sit down to breakfast in the morning, if Charley has not been attended to he will shout: "Ah, there! Charley wants a cup of coffee." "Charley wants a cracker," "Charley wants his cage cleaned." After partaking of his breakfast, coffee and crackers as ordered, he is generally hung out in the morning sun in the front of the house, and there he commences his regular daily exercises by calling all the neighbors by name, and then many of the school children who pass by and whose name he has learned, until he has got quite a little crowd around him.

Then Charley starts in to amuse them by singing all the popular songs of the day, such as "Oh, What a Difference in the Morning," "Little Annie Rooney," "Razzle Dazzle," etc., until his audience goes wild with laughter and excitement, which seems to communicate itself to the bird, who then takes a delight in ordering them all off to school, telling them, "You'll all be late," etc.

The next subjects he works upon in his daily performances are the itinerant peddlers, and his imitations of the various shouts, such as "Rags, sacks and bottles," "Glass put in," and "Strawberries! strawberries!" must be heard to be believed. So must his almost perfect imitations of chickens, cats and dogs, and he calls all three and whistles, mews, barks and talks to them. He will also greet strangers passing by with: "Hello, there! how do you do?" "I see you; you are just my size," "I'll stand you if you don't mind," "I'm going away now; good-bye, by by." Charley, however, never uses bad language, and if any of the precocious youths who listen to his entertainments make any profane remark he will never repeat it, but retort: "Rats; you're a bad boy." "Go on away, you naughty boy."

The parrot once nearly got Mr. Kapp into water. He was taking Charley down town on a Haigis street car, which stopped to admit a stylishly dressed young lady, who was to take her seat in the crowded car, when Charley espied her and immediately sang out: "Chippie, get your hair cut, hair cut, hair cut! Chippie, get your hair cut, hair cut short." The girl flushed with anger and the passengers roared with laughter, but the young lady's brother, who was standing outside on the rear platform, came inside and was about to take summary vengeance on Mr. Kapp, from whom he thought the remarks had come. His anger, however, changed to laughter when he discovered that the offender was only a bird. The big brother returned to the rear platform, Charlie shouting "Rats" after him as he disappeared through the door.

G. T. SMITH.

My family came forward here, however, and when I stoutly asserted that I would be a nurse, I was met with such overwhelming laughter, especially by my elder brothers, who had just returned from the war, that I was willing to drop the subject.

It was then that the literary fever seized me and to become a journalist (an elastic term) was the sole ambition of my life. My opportunity came. A little daily paper was hungrily struggling along in our village and a reporter was needed. The editor, a man far too genial and kindly to be successful, stopping at our house one evening to talk to my brothers about their war experiences, laughingly suggested that I come and be a little "maid of all work" at the office of the Daily Standard. He humorously detailed the work of collecting news, reading and correcting proof, typesetting and making the roller, that I would have to do, but the seed was dropped and from that day until he hired me did I worry him for the position.

He hired me finally to get rid of me, I suppose he thought, and I went to work. Never did mortal work harder. From 7 in the morning until 10 at night did I write and re-write and re-write my tiny articles for that paper. I learned type setting and proof correcting, and the working of the little hand-press we used was a part of my

"Git out of this here yard," she cried, "with yer sneakin' and pryin'." Git out o' here now afore I give ye a sounce. Ya tho't I'd talk to the likes of ya, did ya? But yer fooler ther. Ya'll soon find we'uns hain't to be monkeyed with," and a savage plunge and a wild sweep of the broom convinced me that she meant what she said.

By that time I was thoroughly aroused, and, forgetting the dignity of my position, I took to my heels and, once outside of the gate, I gave her such a tongue-lashing, a thing of which I was then unfortunately capable to an unusual degree, as she probably never received before. But the thought of an interview there, where they evidently understood the injustice of their action toward the school teacher, was not to be entertained.

As may be supposed inquiry resulted in my learning that the president of the board lived at almost the identical place where I had first inquired for my friends, the Holmes.

Back I went to that spot, only to learn that the gentleman was out

VICTIMS OF THE STORM.

Highsville, Mo., April 13.—This cyclone was visited on Tuesday by a terrific wind storm which swept everything before it from the southwest part of the county to the northeast line. Near Page City six deaths have so far been reported. Will Walker, a prosperous young farmer, was at the supper table with his wife and three children when his brick house was blown over, completely burying him and all the children. His wife was extricated herself and with great difficulty released him. They were unable to rescue two of the children, who were smothered in the debris. The child is fearfully mangled. The wife of J. W. Hutchison, an aged farmer in the same neighborhood, was killed, and his house destroyed. May's and her brother were killed outright and their barns utterly wrecked. Further on Captain Todd's barns were demolished and a small negro girl killed on his farm. There are numerous reports and rumors about deaths at Dorset, Waverly, but nothing authentic can be secured. In Lafayette county four persons are reported killed. Several of eight farm houses were totally destroyed. At Rolla ten dwelling houses and barns were blown down. Parker, a hamlet ten miles west of Independence, was almost destroyed. Many houses were completely leveled. The loss of life is believed to be great. At Mayview, several houses were blown down and it is believed several people were killed. The cyclone swept the country northwest of Stanberry. The path of the cyclone was two miles wide. Four farm houses were leveled and other damage done. Several people were killed, among them Mrs. Ward. Her husband and John Shelton were fatally injured. An unknown woman was also crushed to death. Most of the people saw the cyclone coming in time to get in their cyclone clothing. The loss will aggregate thousands of dollars.

Kansas City, Mo., April 13.—Severe storms of wind and rain swept over Kansas and Missouri Tuesday afternoon and night, doing an incalculable amount of damage and causing the loss of many lives. In Kansas the town of Parker was laid waste, nearly every house in the place being destroyed or less wrecked, but no lives were lost and few persons were injured. It was also reported that the towns of Willis, Everest and Powhattan were laid waste, but this proved not to be the case, though considerable damage was done. Near Garnett the houses of Walter Hawley and Henry Dykes were completely demolished, but no one was injured. At Walnut many houses were wrecked and several persons injured. The worst is feared from the surrounding country. At Hiramath a fierce wind crushed in weak store fronts and awnings and threw over outhouses and chimneys. At Powhattan Peter Hoskinson was struck on the head by a flying timber and knocked senseless. At Robinson Owen Polton was instantly killed by lightning. Much stock was killed by the storm, barns were laid low and hay stacks scattered. Fruit trees were broken and twisted, but they had not yet budded, and there is still promise of plenty.

Albany, Tex., April 13.—A terrific wind and hail storm swept over western Texas, laying waste everything in its path. Whole farms, orchards and small grain crops were completely ruined. Not a grain of wheat in the storm's track is left. Granaries, barns, windmills and fences were destroyed. Albany escaped with but slight damage. Many cattle were killed, but no fatalities are reported.

Lincoln, Neb., April 13.—Aside from the partial wrecking of the village of Page in the northwest corner of the State, no great damage resulted from the storm of Tuesday night. Geneva, the county seat of Fillmore county, suffered the partial demolition of one or two buildings, but no one was injured.

Chicago, April 13.—In Illinois a terrific wind, rain and hail storm passed over Rockford, doing much damage in that vicinity. It verged close on a cyclone, breaking windows, tearing up trees and turning over barns and small buildings. At Jacksonville all the streams in the vicinity are out of their banks and bridges are washed away, while fences are floating down stream in confusion. Trees and buildings have also suffered, and many cattle were killed by lightning. In Indiana a terrific wind storm passed over Fort Wayne and did many thousands of dollars worth of damage in the city and vicinity. Twenty iron columns of the Vandallia train sheds were blown down and the stone foundations under the columns and the machinery and boiler rooms of the American Straw Board mills were demolished and Robert Douglass, an employe, was crushed to death in the debris. Other workmen had narrow escapes. The building is a complete wreck.

Detroit, April 13.—A heavy rain storm and tornado struck Ypsilanti, Washteno county, about 7:30 last evening and swept through its centre, leaving destruction in its path. Twelve or fifteen of the principal business blocks were demolished, and others had their roofs torn off and otherwise damaged. Several dwellings were also wrecked. No one was killed, but quite a number were injured.

Wicksburg, Miss., April 13.—Conductor Thomas of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railway, wires here: The entire town of Robinsonville, Coahoma county, was swept away by a cyclone about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The creek will be dragged.

BALTIMORE, APRIL 10.—In the destruction by fire Saturday night of the Baltimore and Annapolis freight depot, George McGreevey, aged 18 years, was burned to death. His funeral took place this afternoon with services in St. Patrick's Catholic church. The firemen of the city attended the funeral in a body.

ELKTON, Md., April 10.—The people hereabouts had scarcely ceased to talk about the recent horrible murders by negroes in Maryland, Dr. Hill and Mr. Bowie, when they are called upon to contemplate and discuss the attempt at robbery and murder by two negroes of Mr. David E. Gatchel, a prominent and well-to-do resident of the neighborhood of this city. Mr. Gatchel was on his way from his home to Rising Sun on Friday night, and when passing through a belt of woods he was stopped by two negroes who demanded his money or his life. He had no money, he said. The negroes once fell upon him, the beating him almost into insensibility, and then pitched him over an embankment and into "the run." Out of this scramble, but he was hurled back again into the water and kept underneath by sticks in the hands of the brutes. Thinking they had drowned him the negroes fled. Mr. Gatchel was able soon, however, to drag himself out of the water and to a neighbor's house. The physician has hopes of his recovery. Now the country roundabout is being scourged by the negroes, who Mr. Gatchel describes, and speedy punishment awaits them if caught. Four negroes were hanged and four others are serving a life sentence for the murder of Dr. Hill. The two murderers of Mr. Bowie have not yet been brought to trial.

Colorless, Emaciated, Helpless
A Complete Cure by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is from Mr. D. M. Jordan, a respected farmer, and one of the most respected citizens of Oscego Co., N. Y.

"Fifteen years ago I had an attack of the gravel, and have since been troubled with my Liver and Kidneys gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. I was badly emaciated and had no more color than a marble statue. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and, though I would try it, before I had finished the first bottle I had gained ten pounds of weight. I had subsided, the color began to return to my face, and I began to feel hungry. After I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat five times a day. I have now fully recovered."

The Spring.

Of all seasons in the year, is the one for making radical changes in regard to health. During the winter, the system becomes to a certain extent clogged with waste and the blood loaded with impurities, owing to lack of exercise, close confinement in poorly ventilated shops and homes, and other causes. This is the cause of the dull, sluggish, tired feeling so general at this season, and which must be overcome, or the health may be entirely broken down. Hood's Sarsaparilla has attained the greatest popularity all over the country as the favorite Spring Medicine. It expels the accumulation of impurities through the bowels, kidneys, liver, lungs and skin, gives to the blood the purity and quality necessary to good health and overcomes that tired feeling.

Preventing Future Misery.

If there is, in this vale of tears, a more prolific source of misery than the rheumatic twinge, we have yet to hear of it. People are born with a tendency to rheumatism, just as they are with one to consumption or to scrofula. Slight causes may develop this. As soon as the agonizing complaint manifests itself, recourse should be had to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks its further inroads and banishes the rheumatic poison from the system. This statement tallies exactly with the testimony of physicians who have employed this fine blood purifier in their private practice. There is also the amplest proof in the general testimony as to the efficacy of the Bitters for malaria, liver complaint, constipation, indigestion, kidney trouble, nervousness and loss of appetite and flesh. After a time, whether followed by a cold or not, the Bitters is useful as a preventive of the initial attack of rheumatism.

Card.

The Plain Truth.

Is good enough for Hood's Sarsaparilla—there is no need of embellishment or sensationalism. Simply what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story of its merit. If you have never realized its benefits a single bottle will convince you it is a good medicine.

A Horse's Exciting Chase.

A valuable horse belonging to Lewis Wolf, Williamsport, was grazing along the Western Maryland Railroad in the vicinity of Kemps Ridge Sunday. Three passing cyclists frightened the animal. It ran half way across the trestle work before its feet fell between the ties. An approaching freight train was flagged until the horse was gotten off the bridge. Its legs were pulled out with the aid of hoarses. There were no sides above the track on the bridge and how the horse got so far across without falling through is a mystery.—Herald and Torch Light.

Last Thursday night, as Benjamin Leckrone was returning to the John Dillon Farm, in the southern suburbs of Hagerstown, he noticed the stable door of the barn open and a man on the inside attempting to loosen a valuable horse. The man was frightened away. The next night about 11 o'clock Mr. Leckrone again discovered some one in the stable. This time he fired three shots at the man, who fled and also returned the shots, the bullets whizzing past Mr. Leckrone's head. Saturday night another attempt was made, and a man was caught in the act of bridling the horse to ride off, when several armed men in waiting opened fire. The man staggered and ran away and eluded his pursuers. He was certainly wounded, as the ground for a long distance was streaked with blood.

The Lutheran Reunion.

President Hood of the Western Maryland Railroad, has notified the Lutherans that they cannot hold their annual reunion at Pen-Mar, this year, as the Railroad Company has decided not to undertake the transportation of such a large crowd of people to any one point. If they desire to continue their annual reunions it will be necessary to find a new place for holding them. President Hood being asked to explain the cause, said:

"After a thorough consideration of the question of holding large reunions at Pen-Mar, and with the concurrence of the board of directors, it was decided to be inexpedient to make engagements for the handling of such a large concourse of people as now usually congregated at Pen-Mar upon the occasion of a reunion. The transportation of such a large body necessitates the running of a great number of crowded special trains upon a single track, and this is of course attended with considerable risk. When the low price of tickets is considered, from which there must be deducted the commission paid to the association under whose auspices the reunion is held, the advertising and other expenses, the amount of revenue received by the company is not only not commensurate with the service performed, but entails loss by reason of the great interference with its regular freight and other business."

"The location of Pen-Mar, upon the side of a mountain, while affording the place its chief attraction, at the same time makes it impracticable to provide extensive facilities in the way of yard and track room for the convenient handling of a great many trains, excepting at an enormous expense. While, therefore, the handling of the ordinary excursion business and large numbers of passengers from a given point under certain conditions is practicable, yet, in the case of the reunions of the past few years, where trains are run in large numbers from every direction, all centering at one point, and where an enormous crowd is required on the return to be moved practically all at one time, the risk to life and property and the interference with the regular business, as well as the unavoidable overworking of engineers, trainmen and others, is so great that the company does not feel warranted in continuing it. The company has enjoyed remarkable immunity from accidents in handling this business, and would be disposed to continue it, but for the interference with other business and the attendant loss."

At the Academy.

Prof. J. B. Cressler gave his second exhibition in aerial navigation in the Academy Saturday evening to a large and intelligent audience. The exhibition was highly successful and enjoyable. The new models, the Flying Boy and Girl, and the High Flyer admirably fulfilled all that had been promised for them and showed that the Prof had made great strides since his last exhibition in unlocking the mystery of aerial navigation. The Boy and Girl, constructed after the principle of the butterfly, made the race from the stage to the gallery a distance of 50 feet in five form and could have gone further if no obstruction had been in the way. The High Flyer is something entirely new and rises seven or more feet and goes without any support or motive power except that of its own machinery. It will be no surprise to hear in the near future that Prof. C. has mastered the problem and reduced theory to practical application.—Waynesboro Gazette, March 19, 1893.

Professor Cressler has fourteen other flying machines constructed on the natural principles of flying insects and birds. He will exhibit these wonderful machines in the Opera House in this place, on Saturday evening, April 22. See posters.

If sufficient subscriptions cannot be secured to pay for the expenses incurred by the association Mr. Crawford will assume all the association's expenses.

The Societies. The Carroll Lyceum held its regular meeting in the Library, Thursday evening. The program for the evening consisted of the following: Declamations, Messrs. Henry O'Connor and John McMorrow. Debate, "Resolved that the abuses of the stage are greater than its benefits," was participated in by Messrs. John Toyle and Frank Gilfoyle for the affirmative, and Messrs. William Rice and Thomas McTighe for the negative. Each speaker acquitted himself in a creditable manner. The critic awarded the debate to the affirmative.

The Philomathian did not hold a meeting Sunday evening.

The Carroll Lyceum held its regular meeting in Carroll Hall, Thursday evening, when the following program was rendered. Debate, "Resolved, that Geography is a more beneficial study than History." Those who upheld the affirmative, were Messrs. Gamber and Garvey, while Messrs. Miller and E. Munson acted in like manner for the negative. Mr. Gamber presented some very strong arguments and was instrumental in having the debate decided in favor of the affirmative side.

Historic Scene Painted by White. Governor Brown has reached no decision as to whether or not the celebrated painting, "Washington Resigning His Commission," shall be removed from the State House in Annapolis to be exhibited at the World's Fair. The picture hangs in the most appropriate place that could have been selected for it—the wall of the Senate chamber overlooking the spot on which the events depicted occurred. To be sure the room is sadly changed now, with its new paint and its modern appointments, but, as one stands before the large picture, the old atmosphere seems to return and latter-day vandalism is forgotten in imaginings of the scene in the simply-furnished room preserved on the canvas. The painting is 14 by 11 feet and is set in a heavy gilt frame. It was executed in 1859 by Edwin White, of New York by order of the General Assembly. White was born in 1817 and died in 1877, and it is said that the work was executed in Paris. It is not considered historically accurate in the details of the ceremony as it occurred, for the artist had to draw largely upon his imagination and contemporaneous accounts to produce it. It is said, however, that White obtained accurate information in reference to the persons present in the Senate chamber at the time, and traveled all over the country hunting up family portraits on which to base his work.—Sun.

Rededicated.

The Presbyterian Church in Waynesboro, which has been remodeled and undergone extensive repairs, was rededicated last Sunday in the presence of a large audience. The dedicatory sermon was preached by the Rev. J. W. Wightman, of Pittsburg, who was pastor in charge when the original church was built. He was assisted by Rev. R. F. McClean, of Carlisle, also a former pastor. The entire cost of the improvements was $5,500, of which amount $4,500 was raised before the work was commenced, and the balance on the day the church was rededicated.

Simon Roat committed suicide on Sunday by hanging himself in the woods, near Mt. Carmel Cemetery, in Baltimore county. The Baltimore American says: "Roat was a gallant soldier in the late war, and was a member of Company B, First Maryland Cavalry. He served through the entire war, entering the service in 1861, going out at the surrender at Appomattox. He has been receiving a pension for disabilities received during the service. Roat left home in good spirits on Saturday morning early, and was not seen again until identified by his brother Monday morning."

A new industrial building, 63 by 23, containing two stories and a basement, has just been completed by the board of visitors to the Maryland School for the Deaf and Dumb at Frederick, as an addition to that fine institution. The building is divided into three departments in which cabinet-making, printing and shoemaking are taught. It is provided with the most improved machinery, furnished by Cumberland Dugan, of Baltimore. The entire cost of the structure was about $4,000. Between fifty and sixty of the pupils are engaged in learning these several trades and thereby fitting themselves to earn a living on leaving the school.

Accidents.

Allan, the four year old son of Joseph Redding who lives on the old Sandoe farm, while riding a horse in the plow on Saturday, was thrown from his seat by a low limb of a tree, falling between the horses. He was trampled by one of the horses, sustaining an extensive laceration of the scalp and a compound comminuted depressed fracture of the skull. The loose fragments removed leave an aperture about 2x1 1/2 inches in the skull. Dr. Stewart rendered the necessary medical attention, and the child is progressing very well.

Mrs. Carver of East Middle street one day last week fell off the porch and broke her arm. The injury is now rapidly healing.—Gettysburg Star and Sentinel.

The Microbes of Bank Notes.

In the recent weekly medical article which appears in the Herald's European edition some interesting facts are given showing the extent to which bank notes are carriers of disease.

It is popularly supposed that paper money, however soiled by indiscriminate use, is not capable of conveying any serious amount of infection, and hence it is not uncommon to see it handled without caution. But it is not certain that the infection in bank notes is infinitesimal or insignificant. Few persons smitten down with erysipelas, diphtheria, tuberculosis, typhoid and other microbial diseases can find out how they contracted the disease. But perhaps in not a few cases the malady has been derived from paper currency, which unfortunately cannot be disinfected.—New York Herald.

WATER AS A PAIN KILLER.

A discovery in the domain of anesthetics is being a good deal talked about in medical circles in Vienna, which, if it bears the severe tests which it is proposed to apply to it, will prove an inestimable boon to suffering humanity.

The new discovery, which is credited to Dr. K. L. Schleich, determines the fact that absolute local immunity from pain, even during protracted operations, can be obtained without resorting to general narcosis of the patient, so that a sufferer may remain perfectly conscious during the amputation of his hand or foot without undergoing the tortures usually associated with such operations, or exposing himself to the danger of syncope ever present in the operating room.

The explanation of the phenomenon is simple. Local insensibility to pain is caused in the case of cocaine by purely chemical changes; while cold water acts mechanically—by means of high pressure and low temperature. Under the influence of the high pressure and sudden lowering of temperature, the blood and lymph are driven from the region operated upon to places where the pressure is less.

It is stated on the authority of one of the first physicians of Europe that the importance of this discovery is all the more undoubted seeing that if, in a given case, cold water should fail to produce the needful degree of insensibility, a weak and absolutely harmless solution of cocaine would prove certainly efficacious.—New York Telegram.

She Wouldn't Say.

A gentleman stopped at a cabin, where an old negro woman lived, and while waiting for one of the children to get a bucket of fresh water, entered into conversation with her concerning crop prospects.

"I did had fo' 'five hogs," said the old woman, "but dat's divided down till I ain't got but one now."

"Somebody steal them?"

"I neber talk 'bout my neighbors, but I don't like to say what become ob de shoats. I neber makes mischief, I doesn't?"

"Did the hogs die?"

"Da muster died, but I ain't agwine to say nuthin' agin my neighbors. De hogs disappeared away from heah while dat man was libin', but I ain't agwine to say nuthin' agin him."

"Do you think that he took them?"

"Mister, dat man's dead, an' I doan' want ter say nuthin' agin him, but, lemme tell yer, while dat man was libin' he was a powerful stumblin'-block ter hogs."—Cincinnati Tribune.

ANOTHER PAUL REVERE.

In April, 1852, I had left my old home in La Crosse, Wis., and was bound West with an emigrant train for California. It was my first trip. We had left the Missouri river on the 1st of May and by the latter part of the month had reached the Laramie Plains, just below Fort Bridger.

In those days the whole country swarmed with buffaloes. There were millions of them. For days everywhere you looked you could see buffaloes. We hunted them a good deal and killed many. Bands upon bands were nearly always in sight and all we had to do was to saddle our horses and be away after them to get all we wanted.

When we had arrived at the Laramie Plains we were out of meat. Buffaloes were unusually plenty, and a lot of us concluded we would set out after them. I had the best horse, and I got in ahead of a tremendous band, and was riding alongside when I saw a magnificent 2-year-old calf that suited me exactly.

"He was as fat as butter on the new spring grass. I blazed away at him with my rifle, but the trigger did not work right, so I threw away my gun, and drawing my revolver poured two or three shots into him.

"The calf fell down, and, without thinking, I leaped from my horse and left him standing to cut his throat. I drew my knife and had just plunged it into the calf when, looking up, a horde of buffaloes were upon me. My horse was frightened and swept away.

"Death stared me in the face. I was to be tramped upon and crushed. No shots from my revolver, not even a fusilade, could turn the thousands of scared buffaloes from their course. The myriads behind would press the others forward.

"In an instant their hot breaths oppressed me, amid the thunder of their feet. A gigantic bull was almost upon me. I watched his every movement and a thought dashed upon me. Just as he reached me with his big horns down and his eyes glaring, I slipped aside, buried my hands in his shaggy mane and leaped upon his back.

"The buffaloes ran as only such animals run. Before me were thousands upon thousands. To my right and left were myriads and in my rear was a following flood of them further than the eye could reach.

"How I escaped their horns, even after I got on the bull's back, and through the mad ride I do not know. They cracked and rattled all around me. Their snorting and roaring sounded, with the clash of their sharp horns, like the roar of a battlefield.

"My hat came off and I lost it, for I had enough to do to hold on to my strange steed, who was all the time going in the mad phalanx like a house afire. I must have ridden him in this way at least five miles. My companions were all long since obscured from view.

"What my thoughts were no one can imagine. I kept figuring how I could get off and out of the midst of the great band.

"Finally we came to a little creek which the buffaloes had to ford. By this time my buffalo had begun to get tired of carrying me, and he had got pretty well to the rear. Just as he got to the edge of the creek I got behind and slipped off, and he plunged in and went on.

"My hat I never got. It took a good deal of searching to secure my horse, and as long as I was in the train I never heard the last of my buffalo ride. Some of them made some pictures and caricatured me riding on the shaggy beast, and they had a lot of fun out of it for a long time.

"The ride, strange and dangerous as it was, didn't hurt me any. At that time I was but 23 years old, and I was exceedingly strong and supple, and could do most anything.

"Now, I suppose there will be some people who won't believe this story—say it's too big to be true—but John McHenry, my watchman here, will tell you and everybody that it is. He was in the train at that time. That's where I first met him. I'm a poor hand to remember names, but I do not doubt there are yet many others scattered up and down the Pacific coast who were in the train at that time, and will testify to the truth of my singular experience."—New York Evening Mirror.
