LADY DAFFODIL.

My dainty Lady Daffodil Has donned her amber gown,
And on her fair and sunny head Sparkles her golden crown.

The conscious blue bells softly sway
And catch the yellow light,
And violets, among their leaves, Breathe low their young delight.

Her tall green leaves, like sentinels, Surround my lady's throne,
And graciously in happy state She reigns a queen alone.

And thus, my Lady Daffodil In gorgeous amber gown, Bedecked her court this sun-warm day Wearing her golden crown.

CAPTAIN'S SWEETHEART.

BY H. C. HEVERIN.

Through the open doorway of a colonial mansion in South Carolina the October sunlight poured in a mellow flood, gleaming on the polished floor of the hall, dancing in waves of reflected light upon the rafters of the ceiling. The house was ample and sedate. The hallway with its high wainscoting of wood, above which hung the family portraits; ladies with wonderfully arranged and powdered hair, sitting pensively upon the shore of miniature lakes, upon which swans disported, or standing beneath drooping willows.

There were men, too, grave-faced men, in mail, and more modern ones, smiling, tricked out in all the bravery of lace and damask. These were ancestral Rodmans, brought by John Rodman when first he came to America some fifty years ago. A great fireplace filled almost the entire end of the hall. Opposite the entrance a helmet and crossed lances occupied the space between the mantel and the ceiling. A carved staircase descended almost to the floor, then made an abrupt turn and ended in two finely-carved posts quite in the centre of the room.

The house was more imposing than most of its rivals in ——— county, finished throughout with carved woodwork and mirrors, brought especially by its old John Rodman from England.

All was quiet on this bright afternoon. On a couch covered with a design in crimson lay an embroidery frame, together with the novels, "The Reward of Constancy" and "The Impertinent." Near by was an open harpisichord, with music scattered all about it. Behind this a late hung upon the wainscoting. The October breeze blew in from the fields, stirring the leaves of books on the couch, rustling among the pages of music, making the chords of the instrument itself vibrate gently. Without, the twittering of birds sounded. The strip of sunlight on the floor grew longer and longer until it almost touched the dry logs in the fireplace.

Slowly passing down the staircase, first in shadow, then in sunshine, came a fair young girl, in a white gown, with her golden hair gathered in a loose knot high upon her head. A few curls had escaped from their fastenings and were hanging in pretty confusion upon her neck. With one hand clasping the banister-rail, the other the locket at her throat, she descended listlessly. Suddenly she raised her head, her eyes shown brightly with expectation, a delicate flush came to her cheek and in the corners of her mouth there lurked smiles and dim-ples. On the lane sounded the beating of horse's hoofs. She ran to the door as, with a great clatter, a young officer in the English uniform dismounted quickly before the house.

"Oh, Hugh!" she exclaimed, as he ran up the steps, "I was so afraid you would not come. I have been watching since noon for you—I vow I have."

"Prue, I could come no quicker.
Our General had singled me out for duty this afternoon. I have been so angered! But now—now that I see you in that frock—I can forgive him," and, with a laugh, he drew her gently into the hall and kissed her.

"Be careful," she whispered, "if we are seen. There's mother—I left her napping in her chamber—but if she chanced to awake! Oh, Hugh, be careful."

"How long, dear Prudence, am I to be thus put off—thus kept waiting?
When may I see your mother, entreating for this little hind? Prue, when?"

"Not now; perhaps when my Lord Cornwallis doth win or lose; then, mayhap. Still, I know not."

"Always I know not. Alack! I am sick to death of that answer." He arose, striding angrily up and down the room.

"Contentment and patience! dearest Hugh. You know mother would not give her consent now. We must feign loyalty to the Congress. This tedious war has set us much awry. I don't even think she would let you come here were it not for Elizabeth's pleasure. Is it not strange? Father was English, Elizabeth is and I—she paused and flushed, then continued—
"I—I faint would be, while mother and Dick are all for Washington and Liberty."

"Your brother is a traitor!"

"Hush!" she cried quickly, "he is my brother and your cousin Elizabeth's husband. Shame upon you, Hugh!"

"Your pardon, miss; I will not say this again."

"Do not, I pray you, Hugh! I am the traitor. Sometimes I feel I must run mad when I hear mother and Dick talking of our wrongs and England's tyranny. As they upbraid the English and his Majesty, George III, then I feel the very, vilest traitor, for my heart is with you, and where you are, there is my country."

"Beloved," he cried, pressing her to him—but she quickly escaped from his caresses. Running over to the harpisichord and seating herself, she began to play softly the minuet, as her sister-in-law, deked out in the bravest finery, slowly descended the stairs.
"Go d day, fair Bass!"

"Good day to you, sir cousin! And how comes it you are not with your troops in town? Is Captain Trevor turning traitor to his duty?"

"Nay, good mistress, my duty now lies but to my pleasure. I came to hear the music to you that I spoke of.
Also a new veil that I just received for you from London. 'Twas fortunate that I came by it. These are difficult times for importing frippery.
But see! How does it meet your favor?"

"Most bravely—indeed, I do protest
'tis vastly fine!" cried Elizabeth, with a laugh and a deep courtesy.

"Is it not extravagant in maid and fancy?" volunteered the C. pain.

"Aye," replied Prudence. I m sar-tis French. None other knows how to ent so sweetly. I never will continue any other fashion save the French. I, but bless me, Prue, I clean forgot, your mother wants to see you in her room." As Prudence, hurrying up the stairs, vanished out of sight, Elizabeth turned to Hugh, saying:

"Pray, cousin, tell me how stand the fortunes of war. What does my Lord Cornwallis? Hear you aught of my husband? I am nigh dead with worrying. He is with Marion, but where I know not. I get no word of him, nor may I go to him. What a fate is mine, hemmed in by those I love, my kinsmen, from him I love the most, my husband!"

"I've no news, Bess. I dare swear your husband's well. But why did he turn rebel?"

"He should not have turned, say you? Not Nor did he! Why blame him for as much loyalty as your own?"

"He is brave. I would he were with us."

"I would he were with me," sighed Elizabeth.

"I never have seen him but once and yet I thought he looked frail. He is most fair in feature, is he not?"

"More fair in character," replied his wife.

"Missus Lisbun, where are you?" cried a little darkey girl, who came running, out of breath, into the hall.
When the child saw who was there she paused abruptly, much terrified; her eyes seemed to start from their sockets.

"What would ye, J. dith?" gently asked Elizabeth, but the child answered not, but turned and fled, dropping on the floor the large apple she held in her hand. As the fruit struck the floor it burst open, disclosing a small carefully folded piece of paper.

With a cry Elizabeth started forward Hugh anticipated her, seizing the note quickly from its hiding place and tucking it behind him.

"Give it me!" she demanded, haugh-tily.

"Not quite so fast, cousin. It may be of interest to his Majesty. Its secrecy points to its import."

"No, no; give it me, Hugh—it's mine."

"What! you turned traitor, Bess?"

"Nay, but I wish my letter—I insist."

"I cannot give it to you. 'Tis my duty."

"It may—I mean it is of naught, Hugh."

"I faint would not, yet I must see for myself, Bess."

"My dear coz, sweet coz, give it me," she pleaded.

"Nay, dear coz, sweet coz, I may not." As he slowly unfolded the letter Elizabeth sank pale and faint upon the couch. "Egad!" cried the Captain, "I find it is of passing interest.
Well wrote, Master Dick. I must be off at once. Good bye, cousin. I grieve to pain you. Here, take your letter. Ho! I don't second thought, you may read it, but I will keep it. He held it out before her. Tremblingly she read:

"I will be home to-night at 10. Leave the door unlatched. Acquaint no one with my purpose. I must be gone within the hour. I cannot go without a sight of your dear face. R. R."

"What will you do?" she asked.

"Take him prisoner."

"Have pity," she cried, sinking on her knees before him. "Have pity; you cannot be so cruel. Had you not been here—in truth, no one will know.
Oh! Hugh. It is so much to me, so little to you."

"Little! Elizabeth, it is my duty!"

"But none will know," she urged.

"I would know, Nay, tempt me not; it is my duty. Would you make me a traitor? He himself would do as I am doing for his country and you would praise him for it. A traitor I must not be."

"What is all this talk of traitors?" asked Prudence, suddenly returning.
Silently he gave her the note. He almost feared her entreaties.

"Down on your knees," cried Elizabeth; "down, Prudence, and entreat for mercy!"—She paused. Something in Prue's face checked her.

"Nay," was the quiet answer, "I will not entreat him. 'Tis wrong to persuade him from his duty."

"But he will kill D. ck—my husband! your brother! Do you understand, girl?" As she ceased Elizabeth staggered to her feet and seized Prudence's arm.

"I understand, Elizabeth; but it is the fortune of war."

Elizabeth sank weeping upon the couch. Captain Trevor turned and left the house. His spurs clanked loudly as he descended the steps. The sound of the horse's hoofs died away in the silence as he rapidly rode on his errand.

Prudence, unmindful of all, stood unmoved and unmoving in the gathering shadows of the autumnal twilight.

Heavy clouds arose just after sunset, sweeping over the landscape like dark blankets, shutting off the sky and the stars, casting over the face of the earth one great shadow in which all form was swallowed up.

Elizabeth paced up and down her chamber in impatience and terror.
Vainly she peered from her window; all was blackness; no sound was to be heard save the rustling of her own gown. Finally, no longer able to endure her anguish, she seized the candlestick that set upon her dressing-table and descended to the hall. Her heart beat quickly as she slowly swung open the great door and stepped out upon the porch, protecting the candle's flame with one hand.

"Halt! Who goes there?" cried a gruff voice from the shrubbery.

She dropped her candle as she realized that the house was surrounded by the English. Faintly she answered:
"I, Mistress Elizabeth Rodman."

"What would you, Mistress Elizabeth Rodman?" questioned the deep voice.

"I would see your captain."

"Tarry there."

After what seemed an interminable delay, her cousin approached, followed by a private bearing a lantern.

"This is no place for you, Elizabeth," was his first remark.

"Oh! Hugh, is there no hope? Remember poor Andre last fall and Nathaniel Hale. Bethink you, is there no exp. dient? O, bethink you!"

"No, e! Lest he delay or rather come not."

"God grant he may not!" she murmured.

"Amen," he added. Then continuing sternly, in a loud voice, he said:
"Get in, Mistress Rodman, get in!"

As the door closed behind her, a man came on Sunday last by escaping gas, was paralyzed a few days ago and is now reported to be in a critical condition.

Completely Uprooted.

How many remedies there are which merely relieve without uprooting disease. The contrast with sterling medicines which such palliatives afford, not only enhances the dignity of the former, but serves to emphasize the folly of employing half-way measures when thorough ones are available. A marked instance of this is the effect, on the one hand, of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in cases of cholera and fever and bilious remittent, and on the other of ordinary remedies in malarial cases of this type. By the latter, malarial complaints are mitigated they are rarely, if ever, dispelled by the ordinary resources of medicine, although their symptoms may unquestionably be mitigated through such means. The same holds good of indigestion, biliousness, kidney complaint, etc.—all nervousness and debility. By the Bitters they are cured when many remedies fail.

Installation Services.

REV. A. M. Schaffner will be installed pastor of the Reformed Church, in this place, on Sunday morning, June 18th, at 10 o'clock. The committee appointed to conduct the services is composed of Rev. J. W. Santee, D. D., Rev. James R. Lewis and Rev. George A. Whitmore.

GETTYSBURG Battlefield Railroad.
At the suggestion of the Gettysburg Battlefield Commissioner Batchelder, the management of the new electric railway has agreed to run their line over the battlefields via the Emmitsburg road instead of in front of the bloody angle. The railway people will rectify all the damage that has been done along the scene of Pickett's charge.

List of Letters.

THE following letters remain in the Post Office, Emmitsburg, Md., June 5, 1893. Persons calling will please say advised, otherwise they may not receive them:

Mrs. Amanda Briechner, Nellie Brieghner, Norman D. Eshelman, Mrs.
Sallie Gibson, The American Invest.
Co.

A Strange Occurrence.

John Alexander, a hostler in the B.
& O. yards at Brunswick, while riding on the pilot of an engine, jumped off to remove a wheelbarrow from the track ahead, when his foot slipped and he fell, the engine cutting off two toes and bruising him badly. The strangest part of the accident was that the heel of his shoe threw the engine off the track.—Banner of Liberty.

Election of Officers.

ON Monday afternoon the annual election for seven directors of the Charlotte Milling Company, was held at the storeroom of Rowe Bros., in this place, and resulted as follows: Messrs. Jas.
W. Troxell, Charles F. Rowe, Samuel J. Maxwell, Wm. Morrison, John Close, A. H. Maxwell and J. C. Rosensteel.
After the election the new board organized by electing Mr. James W. Troxell, President, and Mr. Charles F. Rowe, Secretary and Treasurer.

When Peter was sick, we gave him Castoria.
When baby was Chilly, we cried for Castoria.
When she became ill, she clung to Castoria.
When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

Water Company Election.

The annual election for officers of the Emmitsburg Water Company took place at the Banking House of Annan, Horner & Co., on Monday, and the following gentlemen were re-elected directors: Messrs. I. S. Annan, E. R. Zimmerman, O. A. Horner, L. M. Motter, E. L.
Rowe, J. Thos. Gelwicks and Nicholas Baker.

SATURDAY morning the steers of Emanuel Plank were being driven to town, one weighing fifteen hundred pounds fell into the well at Robert Baker's. After much hard work the men succeeded in getting a rope about the steer's body and it was pulled out by horses, none the worse for the accident.—Gettysburg Star and Sentinel.

She Ate Clay.

Martin Cresser's cow at Ringgold went mad last week, afterward dying.
During the term of her aberration, she was kept in a stable where she subsisted on the hard clay floor and the feed trough. Veterinary surgeons were called from Waynesboro and Edgemont, but could do nothing for her. Many people went to witness her capers. She had probably been bitten by a mad dog.—Globe.

Rev. Sylvanus Lane

Of the Cincinnati M. E. Conference, makes a good point when he says: "We have for years used Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family of five, and find it fully equal to all that is claimed for it. Some people are greatly prejudiced against patent medicines, but how the patent can hurt a medicine and not a machine is a mystery of mysteries to me."

Early Potatoes Rotting.

Official returns received at the office of the State Board of Agriculture indicate that the recent wet and cool weather has caused considerable rotting in the early planted potatoes and that there will necessarily be a loss to the crop. Similar causes have, in some few sections of the state, so delayed the oats seeding that this crop has been abandoned and Hungarian grass and other fodder crops will at the proper time, be substituted.

Arrested Again.

ON Monday night, Miss Mattie Crosby and Miss Jennie Coleman, captain and lieutenant of the Salvation Army at Frederick, were arrested and taken before Police Justice Eckstein, for disturbance the peace by beating a bass drum. An appeal bond was filed by Wm. P. Mauleby, Jr., and the parties were released. It appears that the Salvationists were advised to beat their drums, not in defiance of the authorities, but in order to have their case tested before the court, as to whether their mode of worship could be considered a nuisance and a violation of the law. The same parties were arrested and placed in jail last week, for beating their drums in the streets, but were released on a defect in the magistrate's commitment.

IN MEMORIAM.

In the death of Mrs. Geo. W. Barrick, Rocky Ridge, Md., has lost one of its most intelligent and well read women.
Upon past and present literature. The church one of its members from early childhood, and the community one of its honored women. On Thursday, May 24th, the death angel drew near and in the twinkling of an eye, her pulse had stopped, and loved ones who had gathered round, leaned carefully open to see if yet she breathed, but she opened not her eyes; for with her head peacefully bowed upon the pillow, she had passed away. Medical aid was immediately summoned, but of no avail.
Thus passed away a soul which first saw life down in the same room, born and died. We wonder if, of any other, the same can be written. For many years, even from childhood, Mrs. B. was a reader of the Daily Star. Being early trained to read for her father, the late Jacob Crise. She leaves a husband and nine children to mourn her loss.
She was exemplary in her life, and always lived in the full hope of entering upon that rest which remains for the people of God. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. G. Whitmore. She was 69 years, 3 months and 16 days old. The family have the sympathy of the entire community. V.

Annual Election.

At the monthly meeting, on May 28, of Branch No. 1, E. B. A., at Emmitsburg, the annual election of officers for the ensuing year took place, and resulted as follows: F. A. Adelsberger, President; H. H. Wivell, Vice-President; Geo. Seybold, Secretary; V. A. Riley, Assistant Secretary; John M. Stouter, Treasurer; John Byrne, Marshall; S.
R. Grider, Assistant Marshall. Stewards, Emanuel Noel and S. R. Grider.
Messenger, Jas. A. Rosensteel. Finance Committee, H. H. Wivell, Emanuel Noel, John Byrne.

After the initiation of a number of new members and the registration of applications for membership, Mr. John H. Roddy, of Mt. St. Mary's, was chosen delegate to represent the Emerald Beneficial Association in State of Maryland, at the International Convention which convened on June 6th, in Philadelphia, Pa. Unless a special meeting is called, this convention convenes every two years, and usually occupies from three to five days. The various States of North America and Canada being represented.

From Friend to Friend

Goes the story of the excellence of Hood's Sarsaparilla and what it has accomplished, and this is the strongest advertising which is done on behalf of this medicine. We endeavor to tell honestly what Hood's Sarsaparilla is and what it will do, but what it has done is far more important and far more potent. Its unequalled record of cures is sure to convince those who have never tried Hood's Sarsaparilla that it is an excellent medicine.

THE TOWN COMMISSIONERS.

They Organize and Proceed to Transact Business.—Appointments, Etc.

The newly elected Town Commissioners met at the Firemen's Hall on Monday evening and organized. After which they proceeded to the transaction of business, and made the following appointments: Tax Collector, John F.
Hopp; Constable, H. E. Hann, and Lamp-lighter, Lewis Gelwicks. The question of keeping our streets well lighted has been agitating the citizens of Emmitsburg for many years, and as each succeeding board of commissioners are about to enter upon the discharge of the important duties of the office to which they have been elected, our people await patiently to learn what action has been taken in that direction. It is true we cannot expect the old street lamps to be simultaneously turned into electric lights, but there is one thing which we can hope for, and that is, to have them kept clean and all of them lighted regularly, and not a few lighted at certain places, whilst other parts of the town is left in Egyptian darkness for weeks, and sometimes, for months at a time, and the residents left dependent upon the moon for a little light.
There were a few lamps at certain places which were lighted, heretofore, by private citizens, who received a small compensation for furnishing the oil, wicks, keeping the globes clean and lighting them every night. The rays from these lamps could be seen every night, whilst on many occasions the other lamps were not lighted from some cause or another.
But there light is seen no more. The new board of commissioners have prohibited the parties from lighting them on the grounds that it is the duty of the lamp-lighter to attend to all of the lamps. But they have not been lighted since Monday night, at which time the order was passed. Was this action on the part of the board a move in the direction of economy? We believe that it was not, and hope to see them all lighted again in the near future, especially the one at the Firemen's Hall, which is so important in case of fire at night.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

Mr. Charles Myers, of New Oxford, is home on a visit.

Mr. Andrew Marshall is building a large shed on his farm in the tract.

Welsh's Show was in town on last Friday. They lost a valuable horse by death.

The locust blossoms are plentiful, and according to the old proverb, we will have a good corn crop.

The Lutheran Sabbath School, of this place, will have their Children's Day exercises on next Sunday.

Don't forget to attend the Reformed festival on Thursday and Friday evenings, Saturday afternoon and evening.

Mr. A. Grove, of this place, has killed his dog. He acted as though he was mad and frothed at the mouth and snapped at everything that came in his way.

Mr. John Gelbach is building an addition to his butcher house. When the building is completed he will have a roomy house. Butchering is a good business in Fairfield.

Your correspondent has noticed Mr.
Robert Currens' name in the Independent, as a candidate for commissioner.
Mr. C. is a competent man and would fill the bill if elected.

The Western Maryland Railroad Co., is building a switch at Marshall's Station for the accommodation of the parties who bought mountain lots. There will be lots of lumber shipped from that place.

Messrs. Thomas Winebrenner and John Marshall set a lot of hooks on last Thursday night and on Friday morning they lifted their lines, and showed your correspondent 23 large eels and 4 snappers. They had good luck.

Mr. Howard Musselman, of this place, received a crate of strawberries from his uncle, Mr. Sudler, who resides on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Your correspondent hauled the crate from the Station and was given a good share of the delicious fruit. They were nice and richly flavored.

Death of an Aged Citizen.

MR. GEORGE H. KRISKE, one of the oldest citizens of this community, and whose death is noticed in our obituary column, died at his residence in Liberty twp., Pa., a few miles north of this place, on Monday afternoon. He had been in declining health for sometime and his death was not unexpected. Mr.
Kriske led an exemplary life and was a consistent member of the Reformed Church for many long years. His wife preceded him to the grave a number of years ago, and his family consists of two sons and two daughters. Mr. Lewis Kriske, of Liberty twp., Pa., with whom the deceased lived; Mr. Abraham Kriske, of Lewis, Iowa; Mrs. Martha Eiker, of Illinois; and Mrs. Anna E.
Tressler, of Fountaineau, Pa. The funeral services were held at the home of the deceased on Wednesday afternoon, after which his remains were brought to this place, and interred in the Lutheran Cemetery. Rev. G. A.
Whitmore, of Mechanicstown, conducted the services.

Was Not Married.

In the issue of the CHRONICLE of October 25, 1889, appeared the following marriage notice:

"HESSMILLER-WELTY.—On October 16, 1889, at Martinsburg, W. Va., Mr. Wm. M. Hessmiller, of this place, to Miss Rosa Welty of Martinsburg."

At that time the report of the marriage of the above named couple was the general topic of conversation in this place, and the facts contained in the article were obtained through an interview with Mr. Hessmiller by a representative of the CHRONICLE. Mr. Hess-miller requests us to state that the report was erroneous and without foundation, and at the time he was interviewed concerning the rumor, he had no idea that it would be published, and says positively, he was not married.

lege commencement exercises on Thursday. Miss Anna Annan, daughter of Dr. R. L. Annan, being a member of the graduating class. Miss Anna was awarded a valuable class medal.

FIREMEN'S Demonstration at Frederick.
The celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Independent Hose Co., of Frederick city, took place on Wednesday. All the public buildings and many private residences were elaborately decorated for the occasion.

The event of the day was a parade of firemen, which began at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and included a great number of handsomely uniformed men, many of whom wore glittering helmets and carried beautiful banners. In the line also were numerous steamers, hand engines, hook-and-ladder and hose carriages, presenting a magnificent spectacle and arousing much enthusiasm.
Many veteran firemen admitted that they had rarely witnessed a finer display. A feature that attracted attention was the number of crippled men in line, some having only one arm or one leg. They marched with vigor, however, that indicated their interest and zeal in the fireman's cause. The marching of the Baltimore veterans called forth many complimentary remarks.

It is estimated that over 3,000 men were in line. The time occupied by the procession in passing a given point was just one hour. Some of the commands marched from six to seventeen abreast. There were in line 40 different companies, 26 bands of music, 7 drum corps, 12 steam and hand engines, 14 hose carriages and 5 hook-and-ladder trucks. Each company carried a handsome silk souvenir banner, made by Sisco Bros., of Baltimore, and bearing the inscription "75th Anniversary Independent Hose Company, Frederick, Md., June 7, 1893," with the name of the company in hand-painting. These souvenirs were presented by the Independent Company to their guests.
All the steamers and trucks were drawn by from two to six galloping horses. Most of the apparatus were beautifully decorated with flowers.

In the evening a large meeting was held at the city hall in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Independent Hose Company. Addresses were made by Chief Judge McSherry, president of the company; Edward Kroontz, president of the Junior Company, and Frederick J. Nelson, vice-president of the United Company.

On Thursday morning the first convention of the Maryland State Firemen's Association was held at the city hall, and during the day there were hand engine contests, prize drills, and presentation of prizes. The number of visitors on Wednesday is estimated at ten thousand.

A Mean Act.

ON last Saturday night, some miscreant entered the stable of Mr. Frederick Brown, of Freedom twp., Pa., and took his gray mare out and rode her nearly to death, and then turned her loose. The animal found its way home sometime on Sunday morning, and was in such a bad condition that it had to be placed in the hands of Dr. J. W. Reigle, veterinarian of this place, for treatment. It is not known whether the person who took the mare intended to steal her or merely to take a ride, as she had a colt in the stable and was very fretful, which indicates a disadvantage to a person trying to steal her.

MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE NEWS.

Notes.

FRIDAY, JUNE 9, 1893.

BITS OF WISDOM.

An Instructive Chat With the Young Ladies.

A young girl once heard a bit of wisdom from the lips of a very aged woman—a woman who had rounded the full term of 90 years, and with eyes still bright and clear looked upon the inrolling waters of eternity. The girl was impressed by the emphasis with which the venerable dame said to her, "Bessie, never insist on having the last word." The determination to have the final word leads to more quarrels and more bitterness of feeling at home than almost anything else in domestic life. The fact is, that one may so control her tongue and her eyes that she may allow her opponent the pleasure of this coveted concluding thrust and yet placidly retain her own opinion, and in the homely colloquial parlance of the up-country, where one finds strong-willed people living together in peace with the most pronounced diversity of characteristics, "do as she's a mind to."

Another bit of wisdom may be condensed into a pithy sentence. Avoid explanations. In some families nothing is taken for granted. Every action, every decision, every new departure every acceptance or rejection of an invitation, must be endlessly talked and fussed over, explained and re-explained. In that way all sorts of stumbling-blocks. As a rule, beyond your parents or your husband there is nobody who has the right to demand of you explanations at each step of your onward path. Don't give them. Establish a reputation for keeping your own counsel. It will serve you well in many a crisis, and be no end of a comfort.

Again, don't be forever setting people right. There is a household fiend with a memory for dates and details, who can never sit still and hear papa say that he went down-town on Monday, at 8, without correcting the statement with the remark that two hours was half-past. If mamma happens to allude to Cousin Jenny's visit as having occurred last Thursday, this wasplike impersonation of accuracy interposes with the statement that it was Friday, not Thursday, which brought Cousin Jane. A dozen times a day exasperating frictions are caused by needless corrections of this sort, referring to matters where exactness is not really imperative, the affairs in question being unimportant, and no violation of truth being for an instant intended.

A manifest bit of wisdom is to refrain from criticism of food. "The sauce may not be quite piquant enough, the salad may be wilted, but in the name of decency say nothing about it in either case."

Silence is golden in nearly every instance where a defect obtains in the home economy.

To abstain from superfluous apologies is also the habit of discretion. There should seldom be the occasion for apology in the household, where all would do well, and wisely to be constantly gentle and courteous.—Harper's Bazar.

Funny Definitions.

According to the Schoolmaster, "stability" was recently defined as being "the cleaning up of a stable"; and an answer to some question about insurance had this passage: "The money is provided by the company to defray the expenses by the birth of members in pecuniary distress." In summer, it seems, "the day is longer owing to expansion by the heat;" and that season itself is thus explained: "Once a year we have the whole bright side of the sun turned towards us. Then it is summer. The sun is in the solstice and stands still."

"What comes next to man in the scale of being?" required an examiner. "His shirt," was the reply. Asked to give the distinction, if any, between a fort and a fortress, a boy nicely defined them: "A fort is a place to put men in and a fortress is a place to put women in." On being asked what the chief end of man was, another boy without, any hesitation, said, "The end what's got his head on."

A teacher asked a very juvenile class which of them had ever seen a magnet. A sharp archer at once said he had seen lots of them. "Where?" inquired the teacher, surprised at his proficiency. "In the cheese."

Being asked what conscience was, a boy replied, "An inward monitor." Asked what a monitor meant, the ready answer was, "An ironed vessel."

Another lad was asked what he understood by celebrity, and perhaps from experience, "says the contemporary account, he described it as 'something to put hot plates down with.'"

"Eureka."

Eureka is from a Greek word meaning "I have found it." Archimedes was consulted by Hiero, King of Syracuse, in regard to a gold crown suspected of being alloyed with silver. How was the fraud, if any, to be detected? The mathematician pondered over the matter, and was still pondering, well-nigh hopeless of a solution, when he got into his bath. The bath was full and overflowed. Then the thought occurred to him: Exactly as much water must overflow as was equal in volume to the size of his body. Quick as lightning came another thought. If he put the crown into a vessel of water and weighed the overflow, then put into the water a pure gold, weighing exactly as much as the crown, the overflow should weigh exactly as much in one case as in the other, provided the crown was pure. Electrified by the thought, he leaped from the bath and ran through the streets shouting: "Eureka!" This test proved that the smith had, in fact, cheated the king. The cry is now familiarly used as an exclamation of triumph at a discovery or supposed discovery. It is the motto of the State of California, in allusion to the discovery of gold there.

THE STRAWBERRY.

Various Ways of Using It in Delicious Desserts.

The aroma of the strawberry is largely lost in cooking, and it should be used fresh wherever it is possible to do so. In preserving it is essential to success to can the fruit when luscious and fresh from the bed, and to use a variety of berry that is of rich flavor. The Wiesbaden preservers, who are more successful with strawberries than anyone else, do not allow their berries to cook more than a moment. They fill the cans with the fresh fruit, and set them in a large kettle containing water just hot enough to bear the hand. There should be a wooden rack in the bottom of the boiler, and cloth should be packed around the jars to prevent their touching each other. When they begin to boil German preservers watch them, and as soon as the berries rise to the mouth of the jar they take them out and cover them with a rich, cold syrup. By this means the plump appearance of the berry as well as its flavor is preserved.

There are many ways in which a basket of strawberries may be used for dessert. There are the daintiest of strawberry tarts, made of fresh strawberries. These are simply shells of pastry filled with perfectly fresh, ripe berries well sweetened. After filling the "shells" with the sweetened berries set them in the oven a few moments to let the sugar melt; then let the tarts cool and serve them heaped with white cream. Shell of puff paste can easily be procured from any French baker.

Another method of serving berries at luncheon or for a light dessert is in a mould champagne jelly. Prepare the jelly with half a pint of champagne, half a box of gelatine, half a cup of cold water, the juice of a lemon, a cup of sugar, and a cup and a half of boiling water. Soak the gelatine for two hours in the cold water; add the sugar and boiling water, and then the wine and lemon juice. Strain the jelly through a flannel cloth. Have one charlotte russe mold holding two quarts and one holding one quart. Put a half-inch layer of the jelly in the bottom of the larger mold, and set it evenly on the ice. When the jelly is firm, set the small mold on it filled with cracked ice. Pour in cold melted jelly between the two molds, and when this is firm take the ice out of the small mold and put in a little lukewarm water, just hot enough to allow it to be lifted out. It is a thing that must be done with care, for if the water is too hot the jelly will melt, but if it is just right the mold can be easily lifted out without disturbing the jelly. A quart cavity will be left in the jelly, which is to be filled with fresh strawberries. The fruit for this purpose must be kept very cold, and must be well sweetened just before it is put in to make it palatable. It also looks pretty if a little whipped cream is mixed with it. The mold should then be wreathed with whipped cream and decorated with fresh strawberries when it is turned out.

There is no more delightful ice-cream than one made of the juices of ripe strawberries and fresh cream. Stir a heaping cup of granulated sugar with the yolks of three eggs. Mix well and add to a cup of boiling milk. Stir the mixture thoroughly in a double boiler, or a saucepan set in another holding boiling water, for about four or five minutes. Then add to the hot mixture a pint of very rich cream and the juice of a quart of thoroughly ripe, rich strawberries. Freeze the cream carefully and serve it with white cake daintily iced and flavored with bitter almonds.

THE POWER OF TELESCOPES.

The Largest Being the Moon Nearer to Us Than Chicago is.

The following careful statement by Prof. E. S. Holden on the power of the eye and the telescope, as they are contrasted in actual experience, is of special and permanent interest: If the brightness of a star seen with the eye alone is one, with a 2-inch telescope it is 100 times as bright, with a 4-inch telescope it is 400 times as bright, 8-inch telescope it is 1,600 times as bright, 16-inch telescope is 6,400 times as bright, 32-inch telescope it is 25,600 times as bright, 36-inch telescope it is 32,400 times as bright. That is, stars can be seen with the 36-inch telescope which are 30,000 times fainter than the faintest stars visible to the naked eye. While the magnifying power which can be successfully used on the 5-inch telescope is not above 400 the 36-inch telescope will permit a magnifying power of more than 2,000 diameters on suitable objects—stars, for example.

This power cannot be used on the moon and planets will real advantage for many reasons, but probably a power of 1,000 or 1,500 will be the maximum. The moon will thus appear under the same conditions as if it were to be viewed by the naked eye at a distance of, say, 200 miles. This is the same as saying that objects about 300 feet square can be recognized, so that no village or great canal or even large edifice can be built on the moon without our knowledge. Highly organized life on the moon will make itself known in this indirect way if it exists. If one were looking at the earth under the same conditions the great works of hydraulic mining or the great operations of Dakota farms or California ranches would be obvious.

Only those of truly heroic mind could fully comprehend or appreciate heroic souls, only the great and noble of purpose can fully know the souls who have wrought these noble purposes into actions and words of flame.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A man has a perfect right to dictate to a woman—if she happens to be a type-writer.

A raincoat is a gentleman who offered a lady the shelter of his umbrella in wet weather.

There is nothing conceived about a church bell. It is always willing to be tilled.

Singular how hot one gets when the cook lets the kitchen fire out just before dinner time.

Mr. Cobb recently married Miss Webb; he knew they were intended for each other as soon as he spider.

It is pleasing to note in the papers that last year's styles in fly-paper will be stuck to this season.

At the last state ball in Berlin a woman fell into a fountain of perfume. She was scent home.

Perhaps it was a Russian immigrant the poet had in his mind when he wrote "There's a name that's never spoken."

"What an old umbrella Battle carries." "Remarkable, isn't it? It is evidently one of the shades of his ancestors or."

It was a mighty man who, when they told him he had the pneumonia, insisted on having an old or second-hand one.

Photographing the hand is a popular fad with lady amateur photographers. The ladies always like to have their hands taken.

Patient: "What do you think of a warmer climate for me, doctor?" Dr. Cor: "My dear madam, that's just what I'm trying to save you from."

Reciprocity—"I wonder why she gave him the mitten?" "Oh, that was the natural outcome of the yarns he gave her!"

The result of jumping of conclusions is markedly shown in those women readers who first turn to the back of the novel to see how the story turns out.

"Dear, I wish you'd prescribe for my complexion."

"Certainly, madam, returned the doctor. And he wrote: "Let it alone."

"I hear that your next-door neighbors have a new organ. Do you know how many stops it has?"

"Only about three a day, and those are only for meals."

Mrs. Becker.—Are the ordinary nursery stories told to Boston children? Mrs. Emerson.—No only "Jack and the Beanstalk," and that solely out of consideration for the bean.

A country newspaper thus describes the effects of a hurricane: "It shattered mountains, tore up oaks like the roots, dismantled churches, laid villages waste, and overturned a haystack!"

Mrs. Quizzar (who wants to know everything)—Now, what do you consider to be the most curious thing you ever saw, Professor?

Prof. Trotter—A woman, madam.

A little Auburn boy evidently has older sisters, for when his teacher asked him the other day to define the word "fellow," he spoke right up promptly and said: "A fellow is somebody who comes to see you."

The Older One—"The happiest day in my life was when I was approaching womanhood."

The Youngest One—"Yes? But you always seem happiest when approaching manhood."

The Chicago Mail notes the fact that some sentimentalists want a World's Fair flower adopted, and remarks that "if there were any blossom that closed on Sunday, there might be some sense in it."

As William bent over her fair face he whispered: "Darling, if I should ask you in French if I might kiss you what would you answer?"

She, summoning her scanty knowledge of French, replied: "Billet doux."

A girl residing in a Lake Michigan town has recovered $500 damages from a steamboat company for raming a boat a ter her without asking her permission. An exchange says she took offense at a marine item stating that "Kittie Marshall, having been thoroughly scrubbed, painted, refted with canopied stern and new boilers, will hereafter serve as mail carrier and poke her pretty nose into the lake business for all she is worth."

The following inscription on the monument of Alexander Stephens recently unveiled at Crawfordsville, Ga., was written by Col. Richard Malcolm Johnson of Baltimore: "Throughout life a sufferer in body, mind and spirit, he was a signal example of wisdom, courage, fortitude, patience, forbearance and unwearied charity. In the depths of age called to be Governor of the State, he died while in the performance of the work of his office, and it seemed fit that having survived parents, brethren, sisters, and most of the dear companions of his youth, he should lay his dying head upon the bosom of his people."

It is not enough to see that God wishes the good we aim at, but when He wishes it through our instrumentality, in our manner, in our time, and we come to discern all this by true obedience.

SELECTED RECEIPTS.

CHICKEN WITH TOMATOES.
This is a Spanish recipe. Put two spoonfuls of butter, dripping or lard (the Spanish use the latter) in a large stew-pot; when very hot add two medium-sized onions sliced thinly and three tomatoes cut up in slices or dice; let all fry for a few moments and then add two tender chickens cut up as for a fricassee and rolled in flour; nearly cover with hot water and let them cook slowly until half cooked, when a pint of potatoes, cut in dice, and half a pint of mushrooms are to be added. These latter may be omitted if you cannot get fresh ones, as the canned mushrooms are very inferior. If the cooking is done very slowly, the chicken is very delicious and savory.

BROWNED POTATOES.
Put a tablespoonful and a half of butter in a frying-pan. Chop up six cold boiled potatoes, season them with salt and pepper and moisten them with about six tablespoonfuls of cream. Spread the moistened potatoes in the frying-pan as soon as the butter is thoroughly heated. Draw the saucepan toward the back of the stove, where the potatoes will slowly brown. In half an hour examine them, and if they are fully browned, fold them over like an omelet and serve them.

RUSSIAN SALAD.
This consists of boiled carrots, beets, turnips and parsnips cut in small pieces by means of a tin cylinder, and inch lengths of boiled string beans. All the vegetables are separately boiled in salted water only until tender, drained and then immediately plunged into cold water to set their color. After they are dried upon a soft clean cloth they will be ready to dress like any vegetable salad, with salt, pepper, oil and vinegar. This salad is excellent with any roast.

A GOOD ONE.
Two cups of good, rich, sweet cream, four eggs, the whites beaten separately, two cups of sugar, beat-n with the yolks, two heaping cups of flour, into which has been sifted two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of vanilla or other flavoring and a little salt. Add the whites last, after the other materials are well beaten together, stir them in lightly and put the cake in the oven in two moderate-sized tins or one large one.—S. A. COLETT, New York.

CHICKEN JELLY, MADE WITHOUT WATER.
Cut a chicken (a hen is better) as for a fricassee. Put it in a double boiler with an even teaspoonful of celery seed, cover closely and let it cook for five hours. Strain it through an ordinary strainer and leave it to stiffen. Remove all the fat, melt the jelly, add salt to taste and strain it through two thicknesses of cheese cloth. The quantity will be about half a pint. An excellent broth is made by adding three tablespoonfuls of boiling water to one of the jelly.

QUICK BUCKWHEAT CAKES.
Sift two cupfuls of buckwheat flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of sugar. When ready to bake add cold water enough to make a rather thin batter, or more in a cold place and will many times take the place of the expensive and tedious yeast cake.

ORANGE PIE.
The grated rind and juice of two oranges, four eggs, four tablespoonfuls of sugar and one of butter. Cream the butter and sugar and add the beaten eggs, then the grated rind and juice of the oranges, and lastly the whites beaten to a froth and mix in lightly. Bake with one crust.

MUTTON BROTH.
The water that mutton is boiled in makes a very good broth. After removing the mutton, set the water to cool; when cold remove the fat that will rise in a cake to the top. Heat what remains, adding a good quantity of salt and a little pepper; also rice or barley and an onion if desired.

PUFFS.
Roll out a piece of bread dough one inch in thickness. Cut off pieces about one inch square, and drop in a kettle of boiling lard. They will immediately put out, and if the bread is light, will cook in a few minutes. Sift sugar over them, or serve with maple syrup.

STEWED BEANS.
Wash, soak and parboil a quart of beans the same as to bake; boil in sufficient water to cook nearly done; add a cup of cream or milk and a piece of butter, salt and pepper, boil dry and serve.

FOR ROUGH, RED HANDS.
A Certain Cure, and as Simple as it is Effective.

He is a sure cure for rough, red, hard hands. It comes from a woman who spent last summer at Warrenpoint, a famous watering place, thirty miles from Belfast:

"During the season Irish girls leave their chickens and cow and come to Warrenpoint to mind children for the guests. They are big, strong, merry-hearted creatures, green as the country grows, with pink and cream complexion and the most beautiful hands imaginable. I couldn't account for them, because they were frequently misshapen and disfigured by ugly, often claw-like, nails. The texture was superb and I made up my mind to get at the secret. Here it is: In every farmyard there are two bins, one containing bran for the cattle and the other oatmeal for the chickens. When the girls go to milk they wash their hands at the pump and dry them in the chicken feed. The result is superb hands—smooth, soft and white. When I left the village I took away as much Irish meal as I could carry. Now I buy the stuff in the feed store and use it. I keep it in a bowl in the bath room; I wash my bony hands with castile soap and a pinch of meal, mop them with a towel and dry them in the bowl. My hands are not soft—bony never are—but look at them!"

They were beautiful—smooth, warm, fine-skinned and as white as bread.

A VIVACIOUS MISS.

The Daughter of the Duke de Veragua De-lighted With America.

Senorita Mariel del Pilar Aguilera. That's a very weighty name to be carried about by one who is barely eighteen years of age. It is borne by the charming daughter of the Duke de Veragua.

The senorita is a pretty girl, without being able to lay claim to any special regularity of features. She is bright and extremely vivacious. Her cheeks are full of the color of health, and her eyes fairly dance from an overflow of animal spirits. Her eyes and hair are dark, and her teeth suggest a king's ransom in pearls.

She speaks English very well, being the only member of the ducal family who converses at all in that tongue. She learned it with the British accent.

"American English," she said "is a little different, I notice, from London English. That's about all that has impressed me about the people. The ferry boats and the big white steamers are strange. We don't have ferries like that in Spain. They look like floating streets with the wagons on them."

"I expect to enjoy the visit very much. Oh, the Indians? No; I know they aren't in New York now. They are all tame, and wear tall hats. I have been told."—Phila. Record.

Remnants of Soap.
Collect all the odds and ends of toilet soap, crumb them fine or break into shreds and put them into a double boiler. Fill the outside vessel with boiling water, set over the fire and keep it boiling until the soap in the inside vessel is melted. Stir the mixture until perfectly smooth, then pour into a small shallow dish or mold. If more than enough for one cake of soap pour into a number of molds. If the remnants of soap are scented the new soap will probably have a delicate odor of its own, or if one wishes a few drops of good cologne, or a drop of attar of rose, or other sweet-scented oil may be added. If without a double boiler, set a small pan or pan inside the large one.

Green Lights Bad for Beauty.

While green is a gay, pretty and fashionable color for decorations the wise hostess will never put green shades on her lamp when she is to entertain women. The green lamp is more beauty-destroying than the lamp complaint and renders faces as pallid and ghastly as those of persons dead. The woman who refuses to rent a pew in a church where the windows were all of green-stained glass, was not so far wrong after all. To sit under a green glare for two hours a week would be asking too much of the most unaffected woman. Yellow, light, red and white all soften and are becoming to all faces. Even Mrs. Lettice would retire from a globe of green glass.

Cleveland's Shamrock.

At the Chicago depot, just before President Cleveland took the train for the East, he received the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, who are philanthropically interested in the Irish village. Mr. Cleveland also received a delegation of Irish lace-makers and dairy maids. Lady Aberdeen presented the President with a bunch of Shamrocks, fresh from County Cork, a blackthorn stick, a gilt badge of Barney Castle and a beautiful Irish point lace handkerchief for Mrs. Cleveland.

If thou dost pass thy neighbor here he will lie in thy path when thou passest over to the gate of Heaven.

CATARRH CURED
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1, 1888.

Dr. Hartley, Baltimore, Md.
In the winter of 1877 I suffered very seriously from Catarrh; failing to obtain relief otherwise, I resorted to the use of your Catarrh Remedy with entire satisfaction. The application of the remedy is painless, and my nose, head and throat were soon relieved. I keep a bottle in the house for use in case of a bad cold and it is invaluable.

GEORGE B. RAY,
Commissioner of Pensions.
DR. HARTLEY'S GREAT REMEDY is the most complete and satisfactory home treatment for Catarrh. It removes all offensive odors from the breath, restores the senses of smell, taste and hearing, immediately relieves headache and prevents consumption, cold in the head and grippe. Sold by all druggists.

DR. GEO. B. RAUB,
DENTIST,
