A TIGER KILLER.

A few years prior to the late civil war I was acting as civil engineer for a party of gentlemen, locating land in the Leon Creek section of the western portion of Texas, near the Nececes river. The party consisted of twelve daring Texans and three tenderfeet or "greenies from the States," as they were called at that day. We were well equipped for the camp and the chase, as well as for the duties of surveying, and had everything necessary to make a most happy combination of both business and pleasure.

As we intended to put in our time to the best advantage from November to January, we concluded to make the trip an enjoyable one and take things easy, hunting while surveying and surveying while hunting, and thus the two months were passed amid exciting scenes, the description of which my feeble pen is totally inadequate to portray.

The ordinary game, such as deer and turkey were so plentiful that the sight of three or four hundred together caused no special remark and it took a wild bull on a desperate charge or a dangerously aroused spotted Mexican tiger to incite the old Texan in the most desperate encounter. Although our firearms were not of the improved pattern that are now in use, the Texans were so well trained in the use of such as they had, and being well inured to the hardships of such a life, that they entered into the desperate and dangerous encounters with the most ferocious of wild beasts with the cool delight of the eagle lifting a common hare. The wild horse or Texas mustang was seen in great numbers, sometimes as many as a hundred in a band, and we managed to capture some as beautiful specimens of that branch of the equine family as I ever beheld.

Our greatest sport consisted in chasing the wild bull, for aside from the dangerous excitement it afforded, the hide was valuable, some of which brought as high as $10, by weight, after being dried into the "flint" state. The skin of the spotted tiger was also a valuable pelt, but they were rare and hard to capture. They were eagerly sought, however, as a fine pelt generally brought about $12 at home. In this section the timber consists almost wholly of scrub mesquite and live oak, sparsely covering the beautiful undulating land in clumps—alternating clumps and prairie. The timber forms such slight obstruction that it is easy to see at long distances, the light atmosphere aiding the vision in a wonderful degree. It was no easy matter to approach game near enough to reach it even with our long deer guns, and our main chance in most cases was to give chase on our horses and fleet-footed ponies. In this mode of capture the lasso was frequently brought into use, and many a lofty tumble was the consequence of a miscalculation as to the heft of the bull and the strength of the pony, the horse and rider being tumbled into a lofty somersault, the horse following the bull, while his four feet beat the air.

Having shifted our camp to new fields after a week's sport and arduous work with the compass and chain one of the tenderfeet, Johnny Bledsoe, having proved himself such a novice in the use of the rifle that his only capture in every case was "what the boy shot at," had become nervous at the geying of his companions at his ill luck, or rather lack of ability in the art of Nimrod, and he determined to try it alone. So one morning after an early breakfast Johnny was missing, and, after waiting, a short search revealing the fact that his hunting accoutrements were also gone, we surmised what he was up to. We thereupon detailed our party for a general day's hunt, dividing up two by two to scour the country in all directions and keep a sharp lookout for Johnny. Near the middle of the day a couple of the boys came into hearing of some one hallooing as though in the most agonizing distress, as though he was trying to call the attention of the whole population of Germantown, Pa., to his perilous situation and wished he was back in old Germantown once more. The boys soon came in sight of Johnny perched in the boughs of a small mesquite bush about ten feet from the ground guarded by a large and furiously-maddened bull. Johnny had made a desperate attempt to capture the beast, and having only straggled to madness, the animal had turned upon him while his gun was still empty. His only safety was in flight, and he rapidly proceeded to the nearest tree followed by the desperately infuriated bull. The tree was so slender that the bull, in his desperate struggles against it, would nearly unseat him, and gave him the horrors in such enormous doses that the cold perspiration beaded out on his palled cheeks as large as marbles.

The rescuing party were soon on the ground to raise the siege, and charged the enemy with such impetuosity that the bull was put to flight for the time being. The shots of the relieving party having done little more execution than Johnny's, only arousing the beast to greater fury by the stinging sensation of two more bullets in his flesh, he in turn put his pursuers to flight. This gave Johnny a chance to come down, which he did with the greatest alacrity, and securing his rifle he forced a double charge down his muzzle-loading heavy rifle, and awaited developments. The men were taking a circle around the seat of the first disturbance to avoid the monster, and in the rounds approached within easy gunshot of Johnny's fortifications, and taking deliberate aim from behind the bush Johnny's rifle belched forth such a terrible charge of powder and ball that the bull landed on his back as dead as though a thunderbolt had struck him. The boy was so proud of this feat and so overcome with joy at the mutual rescue of the party that he wept for very gratitude.

This act of self-possessed intrepidity on the part of Johnny recommended him to promotion in the estimation of the whole company and he showed himself worthy of the confidence ever after placed in him by the company. The time went smooth enough in the ordinary class of game until one day one of the party, Ben Wise, who had been foremost in tormenting Bledsoe for his inexperience, was treed by a ferocious and desperate tigress, the mother of four beautiful kittens. Having become temporarily separated from his companion, he encountered the tigress near her lair, she coming upon him while in the act of securing the kittens to take to camp as pets. He had succeeded in filling his arms with the whole litter and was proceeding to evacuate the premises when the tigress made her appearance, which had been hastened by the cry of her kittens, and in no pleasant mood.

It is not necessary to state that Ben suddenly concluded to dispense with the kittens, and that "discretion was the better part of valor," and that "he who fights and runs away may live to fight another day." The tigress pushed him so close that he barely had time to seek refuge in a small live oak, reaching the utmost limit, seven feet from the ground, "feeling" too close quarters for a sensitive nature like Ben's. It so happened that myself and the chain carriers were on our way direct to the lair of the tigress, and carrying, in addition to our burdensome engineering instruments, our trusty carbines swung from our shoulders and a brace of Colts and heavy cutlass or our belts as usual. Hearing the pathetic cries of Wise we hastened to the scene in double-quick time, the chain carrier declaring they had never heard "stick, stuck" repeated in such rapid succession in all their born days. It was no laughing matter, but the situation appeared so ludicrous that the boys were certainly excusable in this instance.

We had approached within fifty yards of the besieged party before getting a view of the situation of affairs. The tigress was leaping frantically at the limb on which Wise was perched, and at every spring of the tigress Wise drew himself up into the smallest compass possible, as though preparing to leap into endless space. The tigress was so intent on her purpose to capture her enemy that the cry of the kittens on our approach was not observed until we had arrived within twenty steps of her and one of the party had snatched up one of the kittens and twisted its tail, causing it to give a warning cry of distress. Upon this signal of danger the tigress turned about and observing a new enemy in the rear in the act of invading the sacred precincts of her house in disregard of the natural rights of a sovereign of America, she charged the enemy with the impetuosity of a bereaved and infuriated demon.

Although our party of three were well armed and inured to the dangers of such situations as confronted us at that moment, I must confess to a feeling of envy toward Ben Wise. But there was no time for "swapping horses" and we were forced into the conflict without further warning. It was no child's play, at least it looked that way to "a man up a tree." Before the lapse of five minutes there was but one hero left on the ground to dispute the right of territory with the monster, Henry Willis, one of the chain carriers, and he was hampered in such close quarters with his antagonist that for a few minutes it appeared doubtful as to the outcome. Willis' coolness was surprising. After dodging and evading a close contact until he had emptied every charge of his carbine and pistol into the body of the beast without fatal effect he boldly confronted her with his cutlass and almost severed her head from the body at a single stroke.

When arriving at camp with the pelt and four kittens and relating the exciting adventure to our comrades around a cheerful camp-fire while enjoying a hearty supper of broiled venison and other delicious viands of the plains, Johnny Bledsoe, who up to this time had not been heard from, took occasion to remark: "I reckon you wished you was back in Philadelphia 'mongst your 'tother dandies,'" and as he looked searchingly into Wise's face, "Ben Wise, but now foolish hain't ye?"

That proved one of the most successful and enjoyable engineering trips in which I was engaged during an experience of ten years on the Southwestern plains.—

The Grocer's Boy.
It was such a bright boy who applied to the grocer for a job that he thought he would give him a little talk just for a guy.
"If I hire you," he said, "I suppose you will do what I tell you?"
"Yes, sir."
"If I told you to say the sugar was high grade when it was low, what would you say?"
"The boy never turned a hair."
"I'd say it," he responded promptly.
"If I told you to say the coffee was pure when you knew it had beans in it, what would you say?"
"I'd say it."
"If I told you to say that the butter was fresh, when you knew it was in the store for a month, what would you say?"
"I'd say it."
The merchant was nonplussed.
"How much will you work for?" he inquired very seriously.
"One hundred dollars a week," answered the boy in a business-like tone.
The grocer came near falling off his stool.
"One hundred dollars a week?" he repeated in astonishment.
"With a percentage after the first two weeks," said the boy coolly.
"You see," he went on, "first-class liars come high, and if you need them in your business you've got to pay them the price. Otherwise I'll work for three dollars per," and the boy had caught the grocer at his own game and got the job at three per.—Detroit Free Press.

A FALLEN STONE.

BY CATHARINE MCHERRY.

About eleven miles south of the Gettysburg battle-field, whose innumerable monuments arise to tell the tale of bloody strife, there is a moss-covered stone that recalls a less tragic conflict, a war of words, whose peaceful end was reached by means of a mathematical survey. As seen a short time ago, this shaft of unpolished gray granite was outstretched to its full length of four feet six, and from very weariness it had fallen from its upright position down to rest upon the friendly bosoms of Carroll county in Maryland and Adams county in Pennsylvania.

This one of the many marking stones of Mason and Dixon's line has found an ideal resting place in a niche of nature's own devising, a shrine whose upholding pillars are great forest trees. A runaway rill from Piny Creek's broader stream tinkles its music as it darts along by the edge of the old landmark. The county highway, along which passes the eager fisher lad with rod and line and bait, on his way to the mill-dam, is within a dozen yards of the historic relic.

Little recks he of its nearer presence as he hastens on to try his luck at a catch. But I venture to say if the footsteps of Eight O'Clockers should chance to stray within reach of this particular spot they would be stayed, whilst bright, questioning eyes would try to decipher the deep-graven outlines on both sides of the shaft. Its antiquity is read in the fact that it bears on the north side the arms of the Penn family and on the south those of Lord Baltimore.

In colonial days, before the Declaration of Independence, this stone came from its English quarry to take part in a mission of peace. There had been border wars between Maryland and Pennsylvania soon after the granting of William Penn's charter by Charles II., in 1680. The disputes were carried on, with few peaceful lulls, for nearly eighty years. At different periods commissioners were appointed to settle the respective claims of the colonies, but without lasting result.

Finally in 1760, Frederick, Lord Baltimore, grandson of Cecil Calvert and his successor as Proprietor of Maryland, and Thomas and Richard Penn, the grandsons and heirs of William Penn, determined to have the line strictly drawn between the contested boundaries.

As the progress of the native surveyors was necessarily slow by reason of the limited quantity and quality of their instruments, which consisted mainly of compass, chain and staff, the Proprietors became impatient and sent to the mother country for more advanced workers with better tools.

Accordingly, in 1766, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon came to take direction of the continuation of the line. Their "field notes," the original manuscript of which is now owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, gives day by day and league by league, details of their survey, and notwithstanding various drawbacks, their labors were concluded satisfactorily at the year 1767.

The stone, subject of this sketch, shows the kind erected at every fifth mile along the boundary line of the States. The intervening miles were marked by smaller stones, engraved with a P on the north and M on the south. The course over the mountain-crests was indicated by stones gathered into heaps at intervals. No doubt, many of the engraved shafts are still to be found in their original positions, as boundary marks between Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

In a survey re-made in 1849 by appointment of commissioners from the three interested States, it was ascertained that the stone placed in the northeast corner of Maryland in 1768 was missing. Upon tracing up its disappearance, by the aid of the "oldest inhabitant," the tradition given was that it had been undermined by the washing of the stream on whose margin it had been planted, and had been taken by some thrifty householder to be used as a chimney-piece. Not an altogether unsuitable fate for the veteran corner stone, whose firm adjustment at the time of the two colonies' warfare had brought harmony to the hearthstones along the whole length of Mason Dixon's Line.—Times.

THE FLOODS.

The continuous heavy rains of last Friday, Saturday and Sunday caused much damage in many places, especially so to several Pennsylvania towns on the Susquehanna and Juniata rivers.

At Williamsport, Pa., and in the valley of the West Branch of the Susquehanna, the indications were that the floods would repeat the scenes of loss and disaster throughout the northern part of the State of the fatal 20th day of May, 1889, and the early days of June following, when the Johnstown and Williamsport disasters horrified the country.

At Williamsport, Monday night, the terror-stricken people felt much easier, as the west branch of the Susquehanna had fallen one foot and the worst of the flood was believed to be over. At Renovo the river fell 7 feet, and at Lock Haven 3 feet. Williamsport was without railway or telegraphic communication with the outside world, except by telephone wire. The highest point reached by the river on Monday was 35 feet above Normal. In the great flood 1869 it rose 28 feet, and in 1889, when the breaking of the South Fork dam engulfed Johnstown it was 29 feet above low water mark. The present flood carried away a million dollars worth of property and this may not fully cover the loss at Williamsport, every foot of ground in the city was four feet under water. Hundreds of families were made homeless, some temporarily and others for a longer time.

By the week of the great Williamsport boom at an early hour on Monday morning 150,000,000 feet of logs, worth $100,000, were released, and went rolling down the stream towards Harrisburg. As it passed the four bridges below the city the logs crushed against the piers with a roar that could be heard for miles distant. So intense was the gloom that no one could tell how the bridges stood the shock, but by day light, the last of the small fortune in logs was gone, and the crowd could see how the structures fared. That at Montgomery street was intact, as was also the Pennsylvania Railroad's span across the river, Market street bridge was gone, and four spans of the Maynard street bridge had gaye way to the waters.

The wrecks at Philadelphia were great. Six schooners jammed against the South street bridge. One of them is sunk in mid channel and the others were more or less damaged.

The floods completely stopped traffic on the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Greensburg, 28 miles from Pittsburg. The trouble was between Johnstown and Altoona, where the tracks were submerged under four feet of water from Conemaugh to Bennington, a distance of 18 miles. Fifteen hundred feet of track, together with the Conemaugh bridge, was washed away. Dispatches from points along the Allegheny river report great damage from the high water.

At 3 o'clock on Monday morning a shrieking locomotive ran into the little town of Gaysport, Pa., conveying the warning that the Kittanning Point reservoir, five miles up in the Allegheny mountains, the source of Altoona's water supply, and in which was stored 180,000,000 gallons of water, was about to break. The people of Gaysport, Ducessville and Hollidaysburg who were in a direct line of the expected flood, immediately left their homes and went to the hills. A telegram received later stated that the dam had burst. This intensified the alarm, and the streets of Hollidaysburg were soon crowded with shrieking women and panic-stricken men, nearly all half clad, and 2,000 homeless people spent the night exposed to the rain on the hill tops. Many accidents occurred during the flight to a place of safety, and when reports were received that the breaks in the dam had been repaired, they were slow to return to their homes.

Huntingdon, Allentown, Bethlehem, Johnstown and Reading all suffered more or less heavy damages from the floods.

IN MARYLAND. The storm prevailed throughout Maryland and caused much damage at many places. At Havre de Grace, preparations were made for a higher tide than occurred last October. Many hundreds of barrels of salted fish at the fisheries were removed to places of safety. The gilliers, who were obliged to abandon their nets in the bay on Saturday, succeeded after great hardships in securing them on Monday morning. Some of the nets had a good catch of fish in them. In Harford county much damage was done to the tomato fields. In Anne Arundel county many barns, cornhouses, etc., were blown down. The new bridge over Stockett's run was washed away and travel suspended. The melon and pea vines were destroyed. Lightning struck the barn on the farm of James H. Baker, near Pomona, Sunday night. The barn, shedding, 300 bushels of grain, a quantity of hay and some farming implements were burned. Twenty shoats and seven hogs which were one hundred yards from the building were killed.

The advance guard of the 175,000,000 feet of logs that were rushing down the Susquehanna river by the breaking of the great boom at Williamsport, Pa., early Monday morning, reached Port Deposit about day break Tuesday. The arrival of the logs was expected and many people remained up all Monday night on the lookout. Men and boys went to work in taking the logs out of the water and by 6 o'clock in the evening more than 15,000 logs had been captured. The law allows a salvage of 25 cents for each log. This means between $3,000 and $4,000 for the people of Port Deposit.

Snow, Frost and Ice.

Snow fell in Michigan on Saturday, covering the ground to the depth of three inches, making good sleighing. It is feared that the crops have been greatly injured.

A snow over six inches deep was found covering everything in Kentucky on Sunday morning. It began falling rapidly about midnight and continued long after day-break. A May snow was never known before in that section. It extended south to Chattanooga, Tenn.

A light frost fell in Missouri last Friday night, but no damage was done. In Kansas and Nebraska the fall was sufficient to injure vegetables and fruits. Water froze in Iowa last Friday night, but the atmosphere was dry and not much damage was done to the fruit.

Capized Schooner Raised.

The schooner John T. Marshall, of Cambridge, has been raised and towed to Rhode River. This is the vessel that capized at the mouth of South river during the recent storm. The schooner was discovered capized by Wm. T. Conings and John W. Popham, who were proceeding to Eastport in the canoe Daisy. The schooner's yawlbait attracted the attention of the men from Rhode River. The canoe Monie assisted in raising the Marshall. Both masts and the bowsprit of the capized vessel had been carried away. It is believed the crew were drowned. The vessel registered 5.48 tons and was built at Smith's Island in 1887. She hailed from Cambridge, but was licensed at Crisfield. Messrs. Cummings and Popham reported the matter at the customhouse.

What is a Palindrome?

A Palindrome is a sentence that reversed reads the same as when taken from beginning to end. This for example, "Now Eve won." Read backwards or forwards it is the same. But you cannot reverse the sentence of death that a neglected cold involves, unless you at once take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is the great blood and food purifier. It is a sovereign remedy for all diseases due to impoverished blood, such as consumption, bronchitis, weak lungs, scrofula, and their kindred.

C. H. G. TAYLOR, colored, of Kansas, has been confirmed recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia.

Rheumatism racks the system like a thumb-screw. It retreats before the power of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies the blood.

Died in His Buggy.

Mr. Walter Pippin, a farmer, of Queen Anne's county, met a peculiar death on Saturday. He left Price's Station in his buggy about 11 o'clock and was followed in a few minutes by the mail driver, who shortly afterward discovered Mr. Pippin's team on the roadside. Mr. Pippin had fallen from his seat and his head was lodged between the front wheel and body of the buggy. His feet were on the ground. Aid was summoned and it was found that Mr. Pippin was dead, but it is uncertain whether death resulted from an apoplectic stroke or his accidental fall from the vehicle.

KNOWLEDGE Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs. It is excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance. Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Nigh Unto Death

Pains in the Breast—Dizziness—Muscular Rheumatism

Sound as a Dollar After Taking Five Bottles of Hood's.

"Dear Sirs:—It is with pleasure that I state what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me, for I think it is a duty that I owe to my fellow mankind. In the spring of 1888 I was taken with severe pains in my breast so that I could hardly straighten myself up. I could not sleep at night and shortly after I was taken with night sweats. Lumps the size of a walnut came out on one of my limbs and also over my eye. I had no appetite and when I did eat

I Became Deathly Sick. When I would walk up the steps it would seem as though I was going up in the air about three feet and I would nearly fall over. Then large lumps the size of a hen's egg formed upon both sides of my neck. I opened them and closely followed the doctor's directions, but I grew worse and the hair commenced to fall off my head. I felt as if

I Did Not Care to Live for with all my other pains I was suffering with rheumatism. Finally, I heard so much talk about Hood's Sarsaparilla I decided to take it. I continued until I took five bottles which cured me as sound as a dollar, and from that time until now I have not had a sick day

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures and have not felt the slightest effects of rheumatism. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier and it will always have a place in my mother's house. Other members of our household are taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and also realizing much good from it." LOUIS A. WROE, 27 Prospect Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Wanted Its Dinner. Last Saturday Mr. Charles Ertler, living on Mr. Edward Hobbs' farm near town, was aroused by the appearance of a ground hog at his kitchen door. Mr. Ertler procured a gun and soon dispatched "his hogship." He did not know what kind of an animal it was and brought it to Liberty to exhibit it. Judging from its corpulency we would not think that it was very hungry, yet its mission, no doubt, was to search Mr. Ertler's cupboard.—Banner.

Illegal Fishing. Six persons were arrested last Saturday by constable Moberly, charged with violating the law which prohibits fishing during the month of May. They were arraigned before Police Justice Eckstein at Frederick, and as the law had never in the past been enforced, the parties were giving a warning that it would be strictly enforced in the future. They were allowed to take their departure after paying the cost.

A Bridleless Horse in a Jagger Wagon and Two Men. A bridleless horse in a jagger wagon was seen going down the Taneytown road at an early hour on Wednesday morning. Following the animal were two men on foot. The bridleless horse was captured at Bridgeport, where the two men purchased a bridle and lines and proceeded on their journey without giving much of an account of the singular occurrence. The horse is said to have been a very fine looking gray animal. About four o'clock in the morning of the above day a horse was heard passing over the bridge at Flat Run on the Taneytown road, traveling at a very lively gait. Mr. Enoch L. Frizel, who lives at the east end of town, on going from his house to the road on the same morning found a bridle with a pair of lines attached. The men were strangers and the mystery surrounding the affair has not been unravelled.

Since the foregoing was put in type, two men were in town inquiring about an iron gray horse that was stolen from Mr. D. Good, of Waynesboro, on Tuesday night, and a wagon which was stolen from his neighbor, Davis Bear. The description of the stolen horse and of the one that passed through here correspond.

Mr. Good, from whom the horse was stolen, identified the bridle found by Mr. Frizel, as his property. The horse is five years old and branded "31" on the left side, and would weigh about 1,300. The horse was valued at $135.00.

A Coxeyite in Town. A Coxeyite in the person of J. F. Holben, of Massillon, Ohio, came to town on Tuesday evening and spent the night at the Emmitt House. Mr. Holben has his own team and followed the army of the Commonwealers from Massillon to Washington, and spent several nights in their camp. Believing in Coxey and his good road theories and that the marching on to Washington by an industrial army would have the desired effect, and give the unemployed work, this middle aged German farmer left his comfortable home to share the hardships of the Coxey enthusiasts. He left home believing that the movement would prove beneficial to the laboring class, and he is still of the same opinion. Mr. Holben left here on Wednesday for Gettysburg, where he will visit the battlefield and other points of interest, and from which place he will start for Pittsburg.

Frequent copious showers of rain prevailed in Carroll county from Saturday night until Monday morning, causing most of the streams in the northern portion of the county to overflow their banks, washing the county roads and cornfields, and prostrating the growing grain to some extent. The dam of Bishop's millpond, at Cranberry Station, a mile east of Westminster, burst, and caused the inundation of the lowlands along the Patapsco below that point. The damage, however, is not very serious. The pond contained large quantities of fish, which were swept down over the meadows and deposited in pools or left high and dry. Many bushels of the fish, varying in size from one to four pounds, were caught, the meadows swarming during the day with men and boys in eager pursuit of the sport. Most of the fish caught are German carp.

Driven to Death. Last Wednesday, Wm. A. Snyder, of Harney, and Elmer Hoppe, of Westminster, hired a team from Holtzworth Bros. to go to Harney. They brought it back to town the following morning, but the horse dropped dead when about a square from the stable. Mr. J. Harry Holtzworth immediately went to Harney where he discovered that the men had driven from Gettysburg to Littlestown, then to Harney, then to Taneytown, then back to Harney, then to Silver Run, then back again to Harney, making a distance of about 57 miles. It was brought before J. L. Hill, J. P., to recover the value of the horse. The defendants were committed to jail in default of bail in amount of $250 each to await a hearing in Court.

We are informed that the father of one of the defendants, Snyder, yesterday settled the matter by the payment of $125 to the Holtzworth Bros., also all the costs.—Gettysburg Compiler.

Did Not Know It Was Loaded. Master Jesse Rochelle, of Utica Mills, this county, accidentally shot one of his playmates Monday afternoon. A son of David Baugher was having his hair cut at that place when Jesse playfully remarked that he would shoot him. He thought that he had removed all the cartridges from the revolver he was handling. He took aim at the boy while he was holding the apron around his neck, the ball entering the left hand near the middle finger, passing through it and striking the collar bone. The injury is quite painful but not serious.

Wanted Its Dinner. Last Saturday Mr. Charles Ertler, living on Mr. Edward Hobbs' farm near town, was aroused by the appearance of a ground hog at his kitchen door. Mr. Ertler procured a gun and soon dispatched "his hogship." He did not know what kind of an animal it was and brought it to Liberty to exhibit it. Judging from its corpulency we would not think that it was very hungry, yet its mission, no doubt, was to search Mr. Ertler's cupboard.—Banner.

Temperance Lecture. The lecture at the Lutheran church, in this place, on Wednesday evening on the evils of intemperance, was largely attended, and attentively listened to by the audience. After singing a hymn the services were opened with prayer by the Rev. Wm. Simonon, D. D. This was followed by the choir singing another hymn. The pastor of the church, Rev. Charles Reinwald, read the Scripture Lesson, after which Mr. Harry G. Kimball, of Washington, D. C., who presided at the organ, sang a solo, entitled "Throw out the Life Line," the choir singing the chorus. Mr. James A. Clarke, of Washington, D. C., delivered the lecture in his usual earnest and entertaining manner. Mr. Clarke in championing the cause of temperance, feels that he is working in the interest of a noble cause and portrays the iniquities of intemperance in their most horrifying light. He placed much stress upon the degradation brought on the human family by the habit of indulging in intoxicating liquors and urged his hearers to use all the means within their power to aid in blotting out this evil, which is one of the greatest evils man is heir to. In speaking of the liquor traffic, the lecturer said: "The liquor traffic is pre-eminently the foe of the human race. Science, history and fearful experience have all shed their floods of light upon this subject, and still it has gone on in its resistless might, slaying as with the sword of death." The speaker consumed fifty-five minutes in delivering his address. This is the second lecture given by this gentleman within one year in this place, in behalf of the temperance cause. After the speaker concluded his remarks, Rev. George Z. Coehel, of Smithville, Ohio, offered an earnest prayer in behalf of temperance. The services were closed by the singing of the doxology, and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. Alfred M. Schaffner.

After the services, Mr. Kimball gave several fine organ recitals which were enjoyed by many persons.

Maryland Classis, Reformed Church. The Maryland Classis of the Reformed Church closed its session at 10 o'clock Monday night at Silver Run Church, Carroll county. Adamstown, Frederick county, was selected as the place and May 15, 1895, the time for holding the next annual meeting. Rev. C. S. Slagle was re-elected treasurer of Classis.

The trustees of Classis were appointed a committee to purchase a building site, costing not over $2,500, for a new mission church in Baltimore city, if, after investigation, they deemed such action advisable. Delegates to Potomac Synod were elected as follows: Ministers, L. E. Coblenz, J. S. Keiffer, D. D., E. R. Eschbach, D. D., Wm. Goodrich, C. S. Slagle, C. Clever, D. D., T. F. Hoffner, W. I. Stewart, John G. Noss, J. W. Santee, D. D., H. F. Dittmar, G. W. Snider, S. M. Roeder; elders, F. J. Davis, Prof. Wm. H. Harry, Jacob H. Cash, James M. Gervin, E. A. Shriner, H. Wirt Shriver, D. M. Schnebly, O. D. Gilbert, G. S. Griffith, D. C. Hammett, W. S. Kefauver, Daniel B. Sibert, A. H. Geiman.

The congregations of Classis were assessed $7,958 to be raised for benevolence. The report of the state of religion showed general progress in church work. Statistics: Ministers, 39; congregations, 61; members, 8,710; baptisms, 580; deaths, 225; Sunday-schools, 53; Sunday-school scholars, 6,764; students for the ministry, 15; contributed for benevolent objects, $11,982; for congregational purposes, $70,466.

There was an exciting debate on the Sunday-school question, there being strong opposition on constitutional grounds to the action of General Synod creating a Sunday-school board and secretary to supervise the schools, independent of consistories. The classis refused to appoint a committee of five, as required, to act, through Potomac Synod, with this new board, and instead recommended its pastors and consistories to co-operate, within constitutional limits, with that board and its secretary in the advancement of the Sunday-school cause.—Sun.

R. will go to Fountaindale on Saturday and will meet at the church in that place at 2 o'clock, p. m. Several speakers are expected to be present and address the assemblage.

The Rain Storm. The rain storm of the past several days, which caused so much destruction to property throughout the county, was quite severe here. At times on Saturday, Sunday and Monday the rain fell in torrents, swelling the streams and causing them to overflow their banks. At one time Tom's creek was impassable, being higher than for several years. The roads and cornfields sustained the most damage by the heavy rains, whilst the wheat was more or less knocked down.

Man's Inhumanity to Himself. The most inhuman outrages, outrages which would disgrace the savage, man perpetrates upon his own system by swallowing drastic purgatives which convulse his stomach, agonize his intestines and weaken his system. Many people constantly do this under the impression that medicaments only which are violent in their action, and particularly cathartics, are of any avail. Irreparable injury to health is wrought under this mistaken idea. The laxative which most nearly approaches the beneficial action of nature is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is taken in the morning and invigorates the intestinal canal instead of weakening and irritating it. The liver and stomach share in the benefit, the bile and the hepatic influence is felt throughout the system. Malaria, rheumatism, biliousness and nervous complaints succumb to it.
