day not so very far from Washington? This last fragment of a nation, which, at the time of the landing of Columbus, occupied all of the region hereabout, including a large part of Virginia and Maryland, consists of about 110 individuals. They call themselves the Pamunkeys and dwell at what is known as "Indiantown," which is situated on and comprises the whole of a curiously shaped neck of land extending into Pamunkey river and adjoining King William county, Va., on the south. The "town" consists of 800 acres and is almost entirely surrounded by water, being connected with the mainland by a narrow strip. The comparative safety afforded by the situation in time of war is doubtless accountable for the presence of the tribe in this spot. Very likely their survival is due to the protection

Powhatan was a chief of remarkable valor and judgment. The confederacy organized under the direction of his savage genius was one of the most notable among the many unions of native American tribes. The prominence of this aboriginal nation in the early history of this country is partly due to the fact that Captain John Smith was a writer as well as an explorer. Opechancanough himself was a man of unusual ability. His leadership in the massacre of 1622 made him the most dreaded enemy ever encountered by the colonists

WHICH EPICURES RAVE. A Town of 800 Acres With 440 Inhabitants. The Greusalem" Kind Is Not the True Article and Is Used to Fatten Cattle-Mouth

> Watering Recipes Used by French and Creole Chefs. Just 56 years after Columbus discovered America a gastronomic genius in the south of France discovered the artichoke as a delicious dish of a saladie character. It was indeed a rather remarkable find or guess, for the plant > bears a strong resemblance to the thistle, and up to that date any man who ate it ran the risk of being classed with that animal which enjoys thistles and knows how to bray. The portion of the artichoke generally eaten is the underside of the head before the flower unfolds itself, or what in kitchen parlance is called the artichoke bottom. But the lower part of the leaves that join this base and contain about a fifth of a teaspoonful of edible and easily digestible substance is equally prized > by the wise. A common way of eating these bottoms after the head is removed from the plant and the body has been well boiled, like a cabbage, is to pull off the leaves and then cat; the remainder sonsed in salt and butter. But the French and the creoles of

> New Orleans, where the artichoke is regarded with a kind of sentimental or affectionate appetite, frequently gather the heads when the bottom is no larger than a silver dollar and eat the lower end of the leaves raw, dipping them daintily in a sauce made of oil, red pepper and red wine vinegar or occasional ly in a queer sauce of butter and spice.

Another way the French and their kindred here have of embalming the artichoke in the memory of particular stomachs is to bake the dried heads, for which purpose the second crop or rowen of artichokes is preferred, in a meat pie with mushrooms. This dish has not yet made its appearance in New York res-

Neither has the artichoke patty, an invention of the famous Parisian chef, Trisconi, now living in rich retirement on his estate near New Orleans, and cooking only oceasionally on state occasions or for gourmets whose praise delights his poet nature. At a dinner given in 1884 by the New Orleans exposition management to some editorial visitors, Trisconi presented some of these famous patties, and one editor, whose name is a household word, remarked that such a dish could teach a man the art to choke himself to death without grieving, to which another replied that the art to joke in that way was an editorial function more honored in the breach than in the observance, and in an awesome hush the guests went on solacing their souls with patties. The composition of these culinary wonders is a profound secret, which will probably die with its Columbus, but there are many other ways-about 20 in all—of cooking the artichoke, and some of these methods carry elaboration to excess. Let a brief description of one

You take about six or eight plants of medium size, remove the coarsest leaves, trim them off straight on top, cut out the cores or chokes, wash and drain carefully. Then fry the tips in oil, and for dressing chop up very fine half a pound of fresh pork fat, with the same amount of butter. Add 3 minced shallots, a large spoonful of chopped parsley, salt, pepper, nutmeg, a pound of minced mush-rooms and a gill of madeira. After thorough mixing divide into as many portions as you have artichoke shells and fill the hollow plants.

Cover these with bands of thick pork and tie around with strong string. Put these imprisoned artichokes now into a large saucepan, with more pork, chopped carrots, onions, parsley, etc. Moisten with medium stock and white wine and let boil.

Then skin and cook in an oven for an hour. Drain off the stock and reduce it with espagnole to a semiglazed state, sprinkling in just a suspicion of lemon juice now and then. Free the articokes from their cord and bands and serve them, thinly covered, not drowned, in their accompanying sauce. The name of the dish is artichants entiere a la barigoule and is equal to a dinner of several courses.

By some persons this dainty vegetable has been confused with the so called Jerusalem artichoke, which is also eaten, though chiefly by cattle. The Jerusalem artichoke is not a true species at all, but of a kind of wild sunflower (hence its Italian name girasole, turning to sun), with a tuberose root that resembles a potato and tastes very like a delicate turnip when well cooked.

This plant is called in some localities the Canada potate, in others the Virginian. It was introduced into England in 1620, and its tops, when cured, were found to be good hay, five or six tons to the acre, and its tuber was fed to cattle. It is not quite as nourishing as the potato, having 14 per cent more water, but it is very fair eating in spite of the prejudice against it. Once in a soil, it is extremely difficult to extirpate, and it has a curious gift of resisting cold, having never been known to be killed or

It was also introduced in southern Europe at the same time it came to England, and in some places its dried fibers are transmitted into cordage and a very curious fashion. They have what coarse cloth. It got its and name, Jerusalem, in English, by a corruption of the Italian name, girasolo, just as tomatoes of the Italian name pomi di Mori, applo of the Moores, that vegetable having come to Italy from Morocco traders. It is a fact worthy of note that arti-

But and the younger Pliny received large which is constant for the earth must New York is a metropolis if turning night into day can make it one. It is an owly town. And it is far handsomer by artificial light, like some beauties wot of, than by the cold, unflinching glint of Old Sol. At night its paints and powder do not show, its ugly spots vanish under the magical effect of electricity, and its varied and elaborate architecture, its miles of brownstones, loom out in conspicuous, aggressive splendor amid the millions of lights, the animated throb of the crowded streets and that half mysterious movement which signifies the pleasure seeking of thou vision of corn and wine. - New York | cooled down to about 28 degrees, and sands of people. Fortunes of the Romans.

When L. Calpurnius Piso was appointed governor of Macedonia for one year, he drew for his outfit from the public treasury 18,000,000 sesterces, or £150,000. He did not want the money for that purpose; everything required by a proconsul was supplied to him by the province. Piso simply took the money for himself and loaned it out in Rome at high interest. C. Verres was charged by Cicero with having robbed Sicily of £350,000 in three years, besides many valuable works of art. He practically admitted his guilt by retiring from Rome without attempting any defense. Cicero, when governor of the poor province of Cilicia, found himself the richer in one year by £20,000, and he was perhaps the

WHEN THE APPLE TREES BLOOM.

Across the blue sea of the sky The stately cloud swans float.
And hark! from yonder elm there comes
The oriole's thrilling note.
Each wandering breeze that kisses us Is heavy with perfume.

And all the world seems fresh from God

The little hills, like emeralds On earth's fair bosom set,
Reflect the azure of the sky
Where peeps the violet.
The chestnut lifts its snowy spires
Like tapers in the gloom,
And life is sweet and heaven is near
When the annle trees bloom

When the apple trees bloom,

When the apple trees bloom With buttercups the meadows shine,

And bluets in the grass, Like happy eyes of children, smile Upon us as we pass,
So fair a world that in our hearts
There surely is no room
For aught but pure and loving thoughts When the apple trees bloom.
