The taking of a first dose of Chinese medicine is an ordeal which can be better imagined than described. It is invariably a bitter decoction. If the patient prefers, the herbs are given him square pasteboard boxes holding about a pint each, and he "cooks" them at home. A Chinese prescription contains from ten to sixteen varieties of herbs, flowers, nuts, gums, barks, and roots. More than 3,000 species are classified and used as medicine, but of these only some 600 are in general use. Whether the patient takes the remedies at the sanitarium or at home, he is requested to present himself every day before the doctor for another pulse examination, so that every change in his condition may be noted and the prescription may be varied accordingly. The Chinese are clever chemists in the line of pharmaceutical preparations, and prepare many medicines for their own use in the form of pills and powders; but these are employed by the Chinese physicians in treating the ailments of white people only to a limited extent. The reason given is that the simple, hot decoctions of the fresh root or plant are the best form, because the most readily assimilated into the sys-

A MODERN DELILAH.

BY JAMES PAYN.

John Riddle was a young man in whom confidence was justly placed by Messrs. Moonstone & Co., jewellers, his employers, in whose establishment, at the time we became acquainted with him, he occupied the post of foreman. He was not a "self-made" man as yet but he was on the road to it. John never drank, except a glass of beer with his early dinner, he never smoked nor of course took snuff; he never handled anything in the shape of a billiard cue, unless it was his neatly and tightly rolled-up umbrella; he nev-er—I was going to add, he had no weakness as regards the ladies; but this I hardly dare to write, because of the extreme attention he paid to his very fine head of hair. He was not a Don Juan, nor even a gay Lothario. Still he cultivated that fine head of hair, harrowed it with a tortoise shell comb, drove a furrow straight across it from his brow to the nape of neck, and "top-dressed" it with macassar oil and unguent.

There were other assistants in the shop, and with them, I am sorry to say, Mr. John Riddel was not popular -young men rarely appreciate in their associates so much virtue as resided in our hero, especially if that virtue has not been its own reward, but has enabled its possessor to walk over their heads and stop there. There was hardly one among them but at some time during his servitude with Messrs. Moonstone had mislaid a ring or a so much from carelessness as from Goodness knows whether there was any truth in such stories. Perhaps it pleased his rivals to invest the drudgery that was their daily let with this halo of romance. But he was certainly as fascinating as he was hard-hearted. When any lady customer who was unknown to him got out of her brougham-for no one ever came in a cab to Messrs. Moonstone's establishment - and moved up the shop in his direction, he would look at her through his halfshut eyes—for they were of the "dreany" order of beauty—and murmur to himself, "Now, is this a swindler or a bona-fide party?" And many a bona-fide party did he serve with such external politeness who little dreamed of the suspicion which she excited within him.

One afternoon, a brougham stopped at Messrs. Moonstone's establishment with a widow in it; it was not a private vehicle, but one of those which was hired by the day or hour-the appearance of the driver, not to mention that of the horse, precluded the passibility of its being the property of the person who employed it.

What roused suspicion in the watch-What roused suspicion in the watch-ful eye of Mr. John Riddel was the widow herself. Like Mr. Weller, Senior, he had a prejudice against widows—at least, in jewellers' shops; nor, I am bound to confess, was it altogether without grounds; the garb and the mien of sorrow being the stalking-horses under which a good stalking-horses under which a good deal of knavery is accomplished. And then this widow was so bewitching to look at, that he was naturally alarmed; from every neat plait of her beautiful hair, and every fold of her modest suit of mounning, there seemed to him to flutter a danger-signal. "I wish to see some rings," she said, mean," she added hastfly, and with a modest blush, "when the rings would have done so; but jewels and gewgaws have no longer any attractions for me" Mr. John Riddel by no means felt certain of this, but he had an eye for number, and would have missed a ring from the tray in an instant, though he had been exhibiting a thousand. At last she made her choice (it was the most expensive of the lot, and produced from the prettiest little bag in the world—a check-mer," she said smiling, ("No; but jou're a queer one," he thought, "or much mistaken.") "Still, I should have thought in the case of a lady like myself—"

"Madam," said this crafty young man, "if it lay in my power to oblige you, there would of course, be no difficulty in the matter; but the rule of the firm is, unhappily, what I have stated.

"Then the firm will take my last six-pence," she rejoined with tender playfulness; and from the most ele-gant of "porte-monnaies" she counted him out the sum required, when its contents in truth were quite exhaust-ed. "I am lodging at De la Bois', the court hairdresser" she said; "my name is Mrs. Montford. However, I will pot trouble you to send the ring, as I shall have to go home to get some more money," and she looked at him with eyes that seemed to say, "Cruel man, thus to reduce me to destitution."

On the third morning after her viswidow called again, sailed quite naturally up to our hero, and cast an-chor under his eyes. "You will think," she remarked, "after what I said the other day about gewgaws, that I am very changeable in my tastes; but I am not come this time upon my own account; I want to see some diamond lockets for a friend."

This is quite the usual course with ladies and others who victimize the fewellers; they buy a ring for ten pounds and after having thus established themselves-cast out their sprat to eatch a herring-they patronize the establishment in earnest.

Singular to say, however, this did rot rouse Riddel's suspicions. Not-withstanding his pretence of indifferonce to Mrs. Montford's charms, he had privately sent to De la Bois, in the interim, and found that the lady did reside at that fashionable hairsser's, and on the first floor; he had done it of course in the interest of the tirm, and in case she should call The locket that pleased her most was an expensive one, perhaps too much so for her friend's purse, she said. It was very foolish of that lady, but she had such a complete reliance upon her (Mrs. Montfort's) taste and judgement, that she had placed the matter entirely in her hands. great responsibility. What did Mr. Mr. Piddel's thoughts were always cut and dried on such occasions. He expressed his opinion that the locket selected by Mrs. Montfort was certainly the most elegant of all, and testified to the sagacity of the lady who had such confidence in her good taste. But as to the price, Mrs. Montfort herself was the only judge as to the state of her friend's exchequer. "Oh, she's rich enough," smiled Mrs.

Montfort, "and as open-handed any woman can be, Our sex are naturally inclined to be a little close," she added with a smile, "don't you think so?" Mr. Riddel did not think so; he had always found ladies very generous in their dealings; in this lady's lar case he felt more certain than ever that the locket-and he let the light play on it so as to show the brilliants the best advantage-was the very thing to suit her.

"I think so too," murmured the wid-"but then you see there's the re-

It will be equally corvenient to the niece, and you needn't be afraid of being garrotted by daylight.'

"My dear madam," exclaimed Mr. Riddel for the second time, with even deeper deprecation than before. Of course I'll come when can vou? ever you please." Very good; as my brougham is here

I will drive you home in it." In five minutes he had packed up all the lockets and was following her elegant though stately figure down the shop. Months rolled on but though you lad gene ever so many times into Moonstone's establishment you would not have seen Mr. Riddel. I tus (wn mother-not to mention the duchess-would never have h.m. He had fallen from his high estate, and was beginning life again on the lowest rung of the ladder. This was how it happened.

Monrfert and her niece, a young lady only less charming than herself, dwelt as I have said on the first floor of Mr. De la Bois', the court hairdress-er. They had lodged there for some weeks, and by punctual payments, and carelessness concerning the dowestic accounts, had won the heart of their susceptible landlord. He saw that she had an inward grief-passing that or the ordinary widow—and he ventured to inquire what it was.

"Alas," she said, "I have a dear and or y nephew whose condition gives me the greatest uneasiness. He has over worked himself, and is threatthat i' we could only get him to have his head shaved, all might be well, but he has a splendid head of hair trdeed, a great deal too much of it. "Just so; and in five minutes nobody chall know him madam.' "Don't be in a hurry about it. Let Accordingly when Mr. John Riddel had arrived in the widow's carriage at Mr. de la Bois' and had just placed the parcel of diamond lockets upon ter s'tting-room table, there was an incursion of four strong young men. with combs in their heads and apronround their waists. They carried him into a back room, fastened him in a chair, and in spite of his babbling about how he was a jeweller's fore-nar and was being robbed (and with violence), they shaved his head.

Ther not only effected this with great completeness but took their time about it, as his aunt had requested them to do, so that in the meanthe got clear out of the house and acthing was ever heard of her afterward, nor of her niece, nor of the diamond lockets. It was supposed to be the completest "shave" in the slang sense, that had ever been effected. Never since Samson's time had anyone suffered so severely from eropped: for Mr. John Riddel not oaly lost his hair but his situation. The Messra. The Proper Way to Walk Upstairs.

A physician who declared that few people know how to walk up stairs properly was asked to describe how it should be done. He said:

"Usually a person will tread on the ball of his foot in taking each step. This is very tiresome and wearing on the muscles, as it throws the entire suspended weight of the body on the muscles of the legs and feet. You should in walking or climbing stairs seek for the most equal distribution of the body's weight possible. walking upstairs, your feet should be placed squarely down on the step, heel and all, and then the work should be performed slowly and deliberately. In this way there is no strain upon any particular muscle, but each one is doing its duty in a natural manner. The man who goes upstairs with a spring you may be sure is no philosopher, or, at least, his reasoning has not been directed to that subject The doctor might have gone a little further in the same line and protested against the habit which many persons have of bending over half double when they ascend a flight of stairs. In exertion of this kind, when the heart is naturally excited to a more rapid action, it is desirable that the lungs should have full play. But the crouching position interferes with their action, the blood is imperfectly aerated, and there is trouble

SOME QUEER CURES.

Anonymous Letters, Freezing, Bees and Other Unusual Remedies.

One physician has discovered a new use for the anonymous letter. He has observed that in cases of hysteria, melancholia, rheumatism, etc. tients have sometimes been cured by a violent and sudden shock. That fact being established the doctor said to honself, "why not shock my patients into good health?" and since the idea occurred to him his life has been not only profitable but entertaining. He suits the shock to the case, but says that he has had better results from anonymous letters than from any ever worked himself, and is threatered with brain fever; the doctors say structed letters full of innuendo, abuse and threats of injury will give a patient an absorbing interest in life, He will forget his allments, and that is a long step toward recovery. Russian steppes and the—starvation cure in Germany. Germany is the native heath of the barefoot fraternity, too, where devout believers in Father Kneipp paddle merrily about in the morning dew, and, arrayed in conventional purple and fine linen, but still barefoot, invade the neighboring towns on Sunday. A Paris doctor has designed a dry bath of Arctic temperature which discounts the most noble efforts of a disapproving chaperon. A tank of metal lined with fur, is sunk in a larger out-er tank, and the space between the endiress, and if you will bring him o is filled with an evaporating fluid, which lowers the temperature of the lower tank to about 100 degrees below freezing. The nervous patient is put into this refrigerator and kept there for a few moments, the treatment being repeated every other day. The effect is said to be marvelous, and disease is frozen out.

Malta's way of treating rheumatism is a trifle heroic, but a generation brought up on mustard plasters and electricity ought not to object to it. The patient is stripped and bees are cordially invited to settle upon his body. It amuses the bees and cures the rheumatism, so it seems to be a philanthropic system all around. The poison in the bee stings is said to net tralize the blood which is responsible for the rheumatism.

A New Orleans paper the other day gave an account of a conductor on one of the street cars who refused to accept five coppers as fare from a pas-senger. Conductors in New York city, says the New York Herald, have not quite reached that point, but if looks could kill many a poor woman who laboriously hunts up the stray pennies in her purse and calmly tenders them to the waiting conductor she would have been dead long ago, Why are conductors so averse to re-ceiving pennies? The principal rea. son is that pennies will not be taken from the men at the auditor's office, Conductors cannot turn them in as part of their receipts. Many colored persons consider pennies unlucky. I saw an old Southern mammy remonstrate with a conductor because he gave her five pennies in change, and when he refused to take them back she threw them on the seat and left them behind her when she left the car.

Many actors and actresses also look upon pennies as bringing them bad luck and often throw them away.

Eye Language.

No part of the human countenance engages our attention so frequently as the eyes. When face to face in conversation we do not look at the lips-although as a rule, the attention is very quickly taken by any move-ment—but at the eyes of the person with whom we are speaking. So much is this the case that the habit of many deaf people of watching the mouth al-ways strikes us as peculiar. In fact, one usually feels that there is a sense of incompleteness in the association of mind with mind by means of conversation if there is not a continual interchange of glances, making a kind of running commentary on the words spoken. The same may be said of ordinary greetings when two people shake hands; unless there is at the moment a meeting of friendly looks the ceremony loses much of its meaning.

Now, why is there this continual meeting of eyes accompanying all kinds of human intercourse? Partly, no doubt, it is attributable to certain habits of comparatively recent date.

The eye, "the window of the soul." is a most truthful exponent of the inward thoughts than the tongue, and, seeing that speech is very frequently used not to tell the thoughts, but to conceal them, we look to the eve for confirmation or the reverse of what our ears are taking in.

Housekeepers with thoughts of home decorations will be interested in this short talk on Lace Curtains. This is cleaning up time on Spring patterns by the manufacturer's agents. We being rather large operators in the disposing of quantities our notice was called to such a clean up, with the result that we put on sale this Tuesday, June 6th, until sold, over at a very considerable reduction on the former price. We will mark them with both the selling price at the regular cost, and the quick moving price at the "clearing up" cost—so that you can more fully see just how much you save on this purchase. As some of the lots are small, the sooner you avail yourself of this buying opportunity the better the choice will be.

We are after the trade of all who need anything in our line, and are offering "Sledge Hammer" arguments in the way of low prices, in order that you may deal with us. We will not misrepresent any of our goods, all we ask of any person is a right to a share of their custom. Expenses are sure in a large establishment like ours, but profits can only be counted on goods sold. A quick profit is the best, be it ever so small. We know this and always make the "Almighty dollar" act as our agent when purchasing stock from the manufacturer, and spot cash is the watchword that guided us through ten years of almost unparalled business success. Our customers wants are always in view when we buy stock, and we always fr mark goods with Rock Bottom Figures, thus making a bargain of every article in our stock. If you come from distance by rail to examine our stock the money you save in purchases will be more than equivalent to a

We do not wish to brag, but certainly our great success is the very best evidence that Square dealing, and business-like methods, have been shown in all our transactions with the public.

Now, when we are asking for an increased share of patronage, it would be suicidal for us to misrepresent our stock. We have a large and most complete line of Clothing, Gents Furnishing Goods, Hats, Shoes, and we have also added a large and most complete line of Ladies Wraps, etc., and in spite of the advance in the prices in various grades of goods, we have decided to increase our popularity by offering everything at figures that will compel all to acknowledge us as the "Leaders in Low Prices" If you need anything in our line come

PIN CUSHIONS

The Number Necessary to Perfect Happines, is Quite Surprising.

The number of pin cushions apparently necessary to perfect happiness in these days is quite surprising; but they are such dainty little affairs, and, after all, so very useful for holding the many different kinds of pins, that the fashion is not so foolish a one as might the thought. Oddly egough, some of the very prettiest pin cushions made are never used. They grace hand-some dressing tables, but there is al-ways a pin tray put beside them, in which the pins are supposed to be put pather than into the small piece of satin or brocade so handsomely embroidered as to be a work of art. The ribbon work on white sain brightened with little fine paillettes are the most exquisite little things imaginable; they are quite small and pound but are not used except for very handsome jeweled pins. Then a pretty style of on is of fine line embroidered ith the Dresden patterns in colored silks, and trimmed with a little lace ruffle and very tiny bows of ribbon. There are, moreover, the satin pin cushion covered with a square of linen also embroidered in small designs; this last is one of the most useful of all for, if the silks are of the wash kind, the cover can be laundered at any

The mattress pin cashion, while not new, is still as fashionable as ever, and is one of the most useful cushions ever invented. It should not be made over half an inch thick, and should be made of bits of satin ribbon and quitted, or fastened with buttons like the mattress. The pins of all sizes can be put on the top and bottom, while at the sides are the safety pins, and also the hat pins, and it is surprising what a number can be carried at once in these useful little cushions. round cushions drawn in the center with gold thread, and made with the top of brocade silk, and the bottom of velvet, or vice versa, can be used on any bureau or dressing table, and look particularly well on the old mahogany

The prettiest tollet tables are those covered with the dotted Swiss over some color and trimmed with lace, and on these tables nothing looks half so pretty as the pin cushions, covered to match. They should not be large and should have little bows of ribbon at the corners. Large pin cushions have quite gone out of style, probably because of the number of silver arti-Large pin cushions cles that are now laid on the tables, and which leave very little room for the cushions. Bran is no longer used for stuffing pin cushions; cotton of a very fine quality is considered much better. Few Women Walk Well.

"No; she walks well," was the laconic criticism substituted by a man who had quietly observed and discovered the true secret of this woman's chic. And that it was and nothing more. Her trunks furnished on'y the most unpretentious gowns, her handboxes only the most modest arrangements in straw and mull, but she carried herself with a poise which was bewitch-There was a grace and dignity in the very swirf of her skirt ruffles as she swept along.

When she walked she created—not a sensation, but an impression. In contrast to her free, elastic steps, other women seemed to hobble. They depended upon the swish and rustle of their taffeta linings to give "style" to their promenade up and down the hotel piazzas, but "style" traveled in the footsteps of the woman who knew how to manage her feet.

Whether the average graceless carriage comes from carelessness or bad shoes, it is hard to say, but watch the approach of a lot of women, and you will be in luck if you find one of growd who is anything but a shoddy

A young matron was telling about three girls she chaperoned last sum-

"They literally walked their way into the most exclusive circle of the hotel. They had all taken a thorough course of physical culture and you had only to look at them to know it. I used to bridle with pleasure when those girls walked the length of the dining room. Everyone else either slouched along minced along, or strode along. out my girls-well, I can't tell you how they did it, but they walked,"

The Secret of Beauty.

The most helpful and agreeable bath is that of tepid water. Few persons can stand absolutely cold baths, and no matter how strong one may be such a bath should not be indulged in unless a thorough rubbing is taken afterward. To speak plainly, it must be remembered that while a cold bath may be more or less invigorating, it is not cleansing. The condition of the skin depends almost entirely upon the care given to the general health.

The girl who is up late at night, gives no care to her diet, indulges in garious stimulants, bathes but seldom and exercises less is certain to have either a dull, muddy-looking skin or one covered with disagreable looking black and red spots. She should avoid many sweets and much pastry and not allow herself to become a slave either to tea or coffee any more than she would to some vicious drug or strong stimulant. Mitual Sympathy and Usefulness Should Enter Into the Marriage Contract.

Not to cook, and wash, and mend, and drudge, day in and day out, surely. If this is all a man wants, why not hire a servant; they can be had hough cheaper than a wife? If this is all a man wants, it is easy to fancy a young man calling upon a young lady and asking her for a sample of her pud-ding and that she show him some of her needlework, and that she bring the broom and give him an illustration of how she can sweep. Such things are important and it should be every girl's aim to be proficient in all duties of the household. But how much more happiness there might be in this life if young men and women would only try to realize that what they most need to learn is how to become helpful, sympathetic, loving companions! When they are courting they are fond of each other's society, they like to be together, to talk, to take walks, and what a lot they find to talk about while his strong arm is about her waist. And there is never a need for these days to end. The man would be better at his business, and the wife would get her work done while he is away, with nimble fingers and a happy heart, if such a condition did but exist. The great mistake is made when the young wife thinks, Well, she has her home, and the young man reflects-he has a wife. Sympathy and love, that is what each should give the other all through life, and with these the home may be made a paradise—without it, cannot be other than a wilderness.

Items of Interest About the Hair. Black hair was most esteemed by th ancient Jews, while the Greeks and Romans gave the preference to the golden tints, a certain shade of red be ing much in vogue among the ladies, who sought every means of imparting the desired color to their dark locks. It is said that those with dark hair work the best, while those with fair hair uo People with very fair, almost colorless hair, accompanied by white lashes and eyebrows, are generally of a weak constitution, rather stupid, fond of music, cut no great figure in the world and being of a harmless and inoffen-sive disposition are seldom badly missed when they leave it.

Black-haired persons, on the contrary, are strong and healthful, but apt to be quarrelsome. If the hair is smooth and straight it denotes constancy, but if curly, great ardor in the beginning of an attachment of the pursuit of an undertaking, followed by inconsistency, want of application and unfaithfulness.

Dark brown hair combines strength. susceptibility, attention to business and good humor, the owner of this colored hair usually making an excellent life partner.

Red hair is usually supposed to indicate a passionate, ardent, hot-tempered nature. An old Scotch saw, how-ever, says, "a red-headed lass never needs look for a lover," which would imply that the color is not in disfavor with the stern sex, in spite of the temper that goes with it, and statistics support this idea, for some calculating observer has discovered that the red-headed old-maid is such a scarce arti-cle as to be practically non-existant. and when such a phenomenon is found events never fail to prove that she is

"Miss" by choice Regarding the ills most common to different colors, it is said that black and dark-haired people are more liable to consumption than others: brownhaired to rheumatism and heart-diseases; red hair to pleurisy, pneumonia and neuralgia; yellow-haired to skin diseases.

Closely curled hair denotes vivacity, excitability, inconsistancy and uneven-ness of temper; hair curling in loose, irregular rings indicates good nature an affectionate disposition and generosity. Straight hair in cultured persons indicates evenness of character honesty of purpose, a clear head, good talents, perseverance and determina-tion, but in persons of little or no eduation it is a sign of obstinacy, self-gratification and mulishness.

"You can't place any dependence on a woman's word," moodily remarked young man who had been jilted. "Of course you don't believe that."

ORCHARD TREATMENT

Good Tillage Increases the Available Food Supply of the Soll and Conserves

Good drainage, natural or artificial, is essential to success. Trees are impatient of wet feet. Good tillage increases the available food supply of the soil and also conserves its moisture. Tillage should be begun just as soon as the ground is dry enough in the spring, and should be repeated as often as once in ten days throughout the growing season, which extends from spring until July or August.

Only cultivated crops should be allowed in orchards early in the season. Grain and hay should never be grown. Even hoed or cultivated crops may rob the trees of moisture and fertility if they are allowed to stand above the tree roots. Watch a sod orchard. It will begin to fail before you know it.

mote nitrification) and nitrogenous green manures. Barn manures are generally more economically used when applied to farm crops than when applied to orchards; yet they can be used with good results, particularly when rejuvenating the old orchards. Cultivation may be stopped late in the season, and a crop can then be sown upon the land. The crop may

You may think this is a very silly question to ask, but is it? There is no catch about it. It is a simple, demonstrable fact, which you can prove to your own satisfaction in a very few

If you will take any pavement that is clear of other pedestrians, so that there shall be no interference, and walk briskly in the centre, you will find that before you have gone a hundred yards you will have veered very much to one You must not make any conscious effort, of course, to keep in the centre, or you may do it, but if you will think of something and endeavor to walk naturally it is a hundred to one you cannot kee; a direct line.

The explanation of this lies in the callarity of one feet to walk factor than the other. Or, to be more correct, perhaps it should be said that one less takes a longer strile that the of ear, and this, combined with the inches movement, causes one to walk more to one side can the other.
It is well known, for instance, that if

You can try an interesting experiment in this way if you will place two stakes in the lawn, about eight feet apart, and then stand off about sixty feet from them, allow yourself to be blindfolded, and endeavor to walk between them. You will find it an almost impossible task, because one foot will go a bit faster than the other, either to the right or left. Now, which one of your feet walks faster than the

FIFTY-FIFTH YEAR.

The Publisher of THE ECLECTIC MAGAZINE begs to announce that the Magazine has been consolidated with the Living Age, and, beginning with the number for January, 1899 will be issued under the title of "The Eclectic Magazine, and Monthly Edition of The Living Age,"

The new issue of the Eclectic Magazine will be increased in size to 160 pages monthly, a change which will give to the subscribers 192 more pages of reading matter annually than hitherto. While the Magazine will contain practically the same kind of material as formerly, some changes and additions will be made, which it is believed will largely enhance the value of the publication. To the selection from British periodicals will be added original translations of some of the most noteworthy articles in French, German, Spanish, and Italian reviews. A monthly supplement will give Readings from New Books, and an editorial department of Books and Authors will give the latest news in the literary world.

The magazine will bear the imprint of the Living Age Company, Boston, and E. R. Pelton, New York, and subscriptions may be sent to either address The Publisher of THE ECLECTIC MAGAZINE beg Educating Farmers.

No State has been more active in the eduction of its farmers in improved dairy methods than the State of Wis consin. As a result of the education of the people of that State in this direction the net gain in the manufacture of butter in ten years has been six and a half million dollars, and the net gain in the value of cheese manufactured in that time has been a round million dollars, making a total net gain in ten years for butter and cheese alone of it is quickly aborbe seven and one-half million dollars. Gives Relief at once And the increase in the value of the dairy cattle has been many millions more, to say nothing of the saving of feed and labor that was formerly thrown away on poor cows that did not pay for their keeping but were kept at a loss. This shows that the education of the farming classes adds to the wealth of the State and is a benefit to all the people.
