THE WANDERER.

BY R. LEIGHTON GERHART. The moon is in the heavens, And the night winds softly blow: The mountains, veiled in darkness, Their grand outlines faintly show: From lone forests in th' distance Comes the voice, both sad and shrill, Of that wanderer in th' darkness, Who cries ever, "Whip-poor-will."

In-years of thoughtless boyhood Oft I heard this plaintive cry, And I hoped as long I waited One would surely make reply And tell plainly all th' reasons, Be they good or be they ill, Why this wanderer keeps on crying, In the darkness, "Whip-poor-will."

My waiting brought no answer, And I lightly walked away; With men I mingled laughing, Seeking joy, and learned to pray: Then back I turned and wandered Near the mountains grandly still, And heard once more the crying, In the darkness, "Whip-poor-will."

The world is ringed with sorrow, And the world is ringed with strife; The paths of men are reddened With the crimson tide of life. They sit beside their hearthstones, Gaunt with famine, stricken sore; They perish in the wilderness

And on the wave-beat shore. For right I see them striving, As the years wear slowly on; Then down the steep to death passe they, As those before have gone. Yet th' struggle ceases never, For the ranks that go before Are followed fast by thousands, Who fear not the battle's roar.

I see the sign of sorrow In the mist that wraps the world; I hear the sound of struggle In the snapping of the cold; The winds that whisper softly Sigh, too, as they onward sweep, To mingle with the moaning And the raging of the deep.

I ask no more for gladness, And I weep no more from grief; yearn no more for solace, And I seek no more relief; Where men are toiling toil I, And where men are dving die; Tis th' craven heart that asks for joy. And wins not the victory.

The moon is in the heavens. And the night winds softly blow; The mountains, veiled in darkness, Their grand outlines faintly show: From lone forests in th' d Comes the voice, both sad and shrill, Of that wanderer in the darkness, Who cries ever, "Whip-poor-will."

Will Be Flagships.

As-these ships will undoubtedly be flagships, their complements will be 520 persons-officers, seamen and marines. The vessels will be driven by triple expansion engines and twin screws. Five boilers-three double-ended and two single-ended-in four watertight compartments will generate the necessary steam.

A comparison of these vessels with any foreign battle ships built or building will, in every case, be to the advantage of the United States ships. They carry heavier guns and more of them; heavier armor, more widely distributed and protecting more thoroughly the vitals of the ship and gun crews. Their normal speed of 16 knots will be less on paper than that of most foreign battleships, but this speed will be obtained with a very moderate forced draught and without unduly pushing the engines, so that it may be expected that at any time this speed can be duplicated by our vessels, while it is notorious that ed ship.

WITHOUT A GOVERNMENT. Greentown, Ind., Has No Mayor, Marshal,

NO. 18.

The city of Greentown, Ind., is perhaps the least governed city of its size in America. Although it has 3,000 inhabitants, the town has no Mayor, Marshal, Policeman or other peace officer, not even a Constable. The town is governed by a Board of Trustees, who meet once a month to allow electric light bills, gas, water and other claims. A Justice of the Peace, residing in the suburbs resigned a few weeks ago, having no official business. The city charter provides for no mayor or policeman, and the duties of a Marshal are performed when required, which is very seldom, by the Street Commissioner. A regular Marshal was elected a year ago, but resigned because there was nothing for him to do. The Street Commissioner was then engaged, without any additional compensa- .

tion over his salary as Street Commissioner, to act as Marshal whenever occasion should require.

The jail was sold years ago for a stable, and there is absolutely no place where an arrested person could be confined pending trial. There are three saloons in the place, and they do a good business in beer and ale, but sell very little spirituous liquor. The worst offense that has occured in the town in years is the hilarity consequent upon too liberal beer drinking. The offender is never locked up or even fined. He is escorted home and never fails to go in a quiet and peaceful manner. The oldest inhabitant does not remember of an arrest having occurred in the town. The present Street Commissioner. however, denies this soft impeachment. He says that he did arrest a man once. It was for an attempted assault that took place in the country, and when the man was brought to trial he proved his innocence. After all, this is not a blot on Greentown's fair escutch-

STUDYING THE TRUST. The closing of the Conference on Trusts and Combinations, which was held in Chicago, and which occupied the last four days of last week, has developed the fact that an extraordinary interest in the subject has been shown throughout the United States.

As to the result of the conference the consensus of opinion among the leading men of the United States who attended it is that much good has been done. While a political end may have been sought by many delegates, the public has been educated in a gratitying way.

William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, and W. Bourke Cockran, of New York, were the leading figures of the conference.

In speaking of the conference and its influence, Mr. Bryan said beneficial effect upon the minds of the people. He was not willing to talk at length, but condensed his

"The discussion by the delegates an the conference will do more for the good of the public than we can now realize. I do not want to attempt to enumerate the results. Some of them stand out more boldly than others, and to name part of them would not do any good. The trust question is not yet settled, and it will not be settled until it is placed before the people for final adjudication."

Mr. Cockran gave his views on the results of the conference as fol-

Gents Furnishing Goods. We are after the trade of all who need anything in our line, and are offering "Sledge Hammer" arguments in the way of low prices, in order that you madeal with us. We will not misrepresent any of our goods, all we ask of any person is a right to a share of their custom. Expenses are sure in a large establishment like ours, but profits can only be counted on goods sold. A quick profit is the best, be it ever so small. We know this and always make the "Almighty dollar" act as our agent when purchasing stock from the manufacturer, and spot cash is the watchword that guided us through ten years of almost unparalled business success. Our enstomers wants are always in view when we buy stock, and we always mark goods with Rock Bottom Figures, thus making a

Now, when we are asking for an increased share of patronage, it would be suicidal for us to misrepresent our stock.

We have a large and most complete line of Clothing, Gents Furnishing Goods, Hats, Shoes, and we have also added a large and most complete line of Ladies Wraps, etc., and in spite of the advance in the prices in various grades of goods, we have lecided to increase our popularity by offering everything at figures that will compet all to acknowledge as as the "Leaders in Low Prices". CHESTNUTS AS FOOD.

Used Through France as a Popular Article of Diet.

The absence of Indian corn as an article of diet among the poorer classes in France is, writes Commercial Agent Griffin at Limoges, to a certain extent replaced by the popular chestnut. Throughout the center of this country, the Bay of Biscay to Switzerland, there are large plantations, and almost forests, of chestnut trees. These nuts differ very much from the ordinary species indigenous to the United States; they are broad, large, and resemble the American horsechestnut or buckeye, and are extensively eaten by human beings and animals. Great care is taken in harvesting this nut before the severe frosts touch it, as freezing hastens fermenta-

The poor people, during the fall and winter, often make two meals daily from chestnuts. The ordinary way of cooking them is to remove the outside shell, blanch them, then a wet cloth is placed in an earthen por, which is almost filled with raw chestnuts; they are covered with a second wet cloth, and put on the fire to steam; they are eaten with salt or milk. Hot steamed chestnuts are carried around the city streets in baskets or pails; the majority of the working people, who usually have no fire early in the morning, eat them for their first breakfast, with or without milk. I'hysicians say that as an article of food, chestnuts are wholesome, hearty, nutritious and fattening. These nuts are often used as a vege-table and are exceedingly popular, being found on the table of the well-to-do and wealthy. They are served not only boiled, but roasted, steamed, pureed, and as dressings for poultry and meats.

Chestnuts are made into bread by the mountain peasantry. After the nuts have been blanched, they are dried and ground. From this flour a sweet, heavy, flat cake is made. It resembles the oaten cakes so popular among Scotch peasants. They are extensively employed for fattening animals, especially hogs. The nuts are boiled without shelling; only small, inferior fruit is thus used.

In good seasons, chestnuts sell as low as 1 cent a pound retail, and wholesale at $1.50 per two hundred-

The Origin of Confetti

"Confetti" was invented by accident. A big printing house in Paris used to turn out millions of almanaes yearly. each with a small hole punched in the corner to receive a metallic eyelet. An enormous quantity of the tiny paper circles accumulated. These were sent to the paper makers, and would be so disposed of still had not chance and the smart proprietor turned them to profit. According to the "Family Doctor," it happens that two of the work-men were having a little dispute. Suddenly one of them caught up a handful of the paper circles and threw them in the other's face.

The other workmen joined in, and in the midst of the engagement the proprietor appeared. Far from getting angry, he told one of the men to fill a paper bag with the circles and take them to his house. That night he engaged a seat in the gallery at the opera, and during the dances showered the paper down on the heads of the people below. The idea caught on immensely, and he invented special machines for manufacturing the confetti. One has only to walk through Paris or of the quantity of these little circles used. In Paris alone during the three days' carnival of the Boeuf Gras there were 200 tons of the confetti used.

Making Brass Instruments

The bell of a brass band instrument, which is the big end, extending back to the bow or first bend, is made of a single piece of metal which was originally flat. The pattern by which the metal is cut is of the shape that a bell would have if it were slit straight down the side from end to end and then flattened out. When the flat piece of metal from which a bell is formed has been cut out by such a pattern, it is bent by hand over a rod until the edges meet. The seam is brazed, and the piece of metal now has its trumpet shaped form, but with many little more or less uneven places in the thin metal.

The bell is then placed upon a wooden mandrel, a form which fills the interior of the bell from end to end and is of the size and shape to which the bell is to be conformed. The inequalities in the surface of the metal are then worked out of it by hand with wooden hammers, the bell being repeatedly driven down upon the man-drel. When the bell has at last been brought in this manner substantially to its true form it is finished and brought to its perfect smoothness of surface in a spinning machine.

Moose and Carlbon Cemeterles.

Forest and Stream contains the following contribution from a Quebec correspondent concerning the habit moose and caribou have of going to the same place, season after season, to shed

"The idea of the animals seeking a definite place for this purpose was quite new to me, but lately the efficient Superintendent of Game and Fisheries at Quebec, L. Z. Joucas, Esq., has told me that they do frequent such places, and that this habit was quite well known to him. He knew of many and mentioned several places where horns could almost certainly be found at any time. And not only do they go to shed their borns, but they go there to die. These places are known as cemeteries, and whole skeletons are occasionally found. This, however, would be rare, as the bones would usually be torn apart and scattered by bears and other carnivarae.

"Mr. Joucas instanced the case of a gentleman going to a certain region for geological exploration, who asked for a permit to shoot a moose out of season in order to get a good pair of ant-lers. He was told that by diverging a little from his route he might reach a place where he would find plenty of them. He did so and secured five excellent specimens."

Jobson Plannes It Out All Right, but

Mr. Jobson got home from his office at.4.15 one afternoon last week and found a note from Mrs. Jobson saying that she had gone to hear the perform ance of a long-haired pianist, and that he'd find his dinner all ready for the girl to serve it.

"That's a good thing, too." mused
Mr. Jobson sulkily, when he had read the note. "It's a wonder these mattress-headed geniuses that come over here to this country and rake in American dollars, hating Americans all the time, wouldn't gall their game at an hour that 'ud permit a toiling man's wife to be on hand at home to give him something to eat when he wants it,' etc., etc.

The opportunity was too good for Mr. Jobson to miss, so he declined to eat any dinner when the servant put it done without the merciful aid of wanted to give Mrs. Jobson a lesson. to put in this time, and to talk with a lot of bachelors from whose ways of thinking he had departed. He was bored exceedingly by theatre time. The show bored him still more. But he stuck it out, for he wanted to get home as late as possible, the better to rubit in on Mrs. Jobson. By 11 o'clock he reflected that he had had a pretty poor sort of an evening—his evening paper unread, his favorite pipe neglecte a lot of cigars that gave him heartburn, a poor dinner, idle talk with a slew of men that he didn't want to talk to, and, finally, a tawdry, cheap variety performance that might have got a laugh out of him ten years before, but was only so much ribaldry to him now. He took in a couple more billiard games, however, after the show, and threw a couple of cocktails into himself, not because he cared to drink, but because he wanted Mrs. Jobson to smell his breath and thus perceive the awful consequences of her conduct.

Mrs. Jobson was comfortably tucked in bed when Mr. Jobson got home about half an hour after midnight. She had not even left a light burning in the vestibule or in the bedroom She woke up very leisurely when Mr. Jobson started one of the gas jets going. Shedidn't say anything, however.
Mr. Jobson had expected to find her up, fully dressed and in tears. He was disappointed. He was more disappointed that she didn't greet him with repinings. Mr. Jobson saw that she was likely to go to sleep again, and that he wasn't causing any grief at all by being haughty and keeping still. So he cleared his throat and said:

"Did he play the Buck Dance Con-certo in Z minor with his hair, and how

There was a lot of sarcasm in the way Mr. Jobson asked this question. Mrs. Jobson didn't turn over at all, "What are you talking about?" sne inquired, sleepily.

"I want to know if that Dutchman that kept you away from your duty of serving a meal to your husband after his day of grinding labor gave you your money's worth; also if you think you're making any kind of a hit with anybody by these methods, hey?'

"Oh, the recital—that's what you're speaking of, isn't it?'' said Mrs. Jobson, sweetly. "Well, I didn't go. I had intended to go when I started out shopping in the morning, and left the pote for you talling you so, but I note for you telling you so, but I thought it might annoy you to have me away from dinner, and so when I concluded my shopping, about 4 o'clock this afternoon, I decided not to go to the recital. It's shameful the way they're overworking you, you poor old thing," and then Mrs. Jobson, who knew that Mr. Jobson hadn't been working at his office tunned over and subsided into office, turned over and subsided into dreamy slumber.

"You can't beat 'em," thought Mr. Jobson, when he got into bed. He was thinking of women in general-Wash-

STORY OF MOCHA COFFEE

500 Years Ago Arabs and Indians Were Taught to Make the Drink.

Mocha is not alone the name of a kind of coffee, but also a port (Yemen) on the Red Sea. The patron saint of both was Schelle Schoedell, whose memory is venerated by the Mahometans almost as much as that of Mahomet himself.

One day, 500 years ago, a vessel from the Indies cast anchor in the port. Those on board had noticed a hut, and they disembarked to see what

Kittens and puppies, and cats and dogs, it was stated, are frequent suf-fers from a lack of discrimination in swallowing things never intended for consumption. Hatpins, meat-skewers knitting needles, and ordinary needles and pins are among the articles they have been known to swallow. Only recently a tiny fox terrier was sub mitted for professional examination on what was supposed to be an abscess on the side. The surgeon, however, decided that a foreign body was pres eat any dinner when the servant put it on the table. Instead, he slammed on the table. Instead, he slammed on proform, for it is both interesting and his hat and went down town. He gratifying to know that even the least painful operation is never attempted until the animal to be operated upon He ate an unsatisfactory dinner at a restaurant, and then poked around until it was time for a variety theatre to open its doors. He had to watch a lot of poorly played billiard games in order meat-skewer in the terrier's stomach, with the point projecting between its meat-skewer in the terrier's stomach, with the point projecting between its ribs. The obstacle was successfully removed and today the tiny pet is as frisky as ever it was. Another small spaniel paid the pen alty of its avariciousness with its life mainly owing to the fact that its owner was a comparatively poor man. One morning the dog entered the bedroom, and bouncing upon the dressing table, lapped up a diamond stud worth five or six guineas. Ordinary emetics had no effect, and unfortunately under chloroform on the operating table the surgeon was unsuccessful in dislodging the stud. At the wish of the owner a further supply of the drug was given, and a post-mortem revealed the missing gem. It is attributed to some cats that they show an intemperate inclination for wine corks, and frequently swallow them. Others swallow needles, which gradually work out through skin, and there is a case on record of an omnivorous goat that swallowed a packet of small needles, and for some months afterward, owing to its porcupine exterior, was a ter ror to the small boys who attempted to take a seat on its back.

Whale Butchery.

The progress of our age has played havoc with many time-honored indus-tries, but on the other hand has caused new ones to spring up and take their places. Whaling in bygone times was a dangerous business. Sailing vessels fitted out for the purpose had to take along not only a crew of hardy whale hunters, but also men skilled in cut-ting the lard from the leviathian's sides, cooking it and placing the blubber into oil barrels, carried along for the purpose. A large quantity of fat and other materials was always wasted, no matter how careful the captain and crew went to work. To-day whaling is carried on differently. Steamers fitted with all the modern appliances and covering ten times the ground of a sailing vessel are out after the great cetaceans. When they catch a whale within a couple hundred knots from North Cape they do not stop to cut up the big fish at sea, but tow the animal to Vardoe or Vadsot, where enterprising Norwegians have started a quite novel business—a whale butchery. They work on a partnership arrangement, paying the ship-owner pro rata of the whale oil rendered and the amount of whale bone secured. Be-cause of their improved facilities they obtain more than twice as much oil, and since the meat of the whale makes a splendid fertilizer and they derive another large source of income by selling whale hides and skeletons for museums to dealers in curios, they are doing very well. They employ at the present 120 men, most of them in former years sailors on board of the whalers.-Philadelphia Record,

A Day Ahead of the Almanac An interesting circumstance incident to Magellan's circumnavigation of the globe and discovery of the Philippines is that every degree Magellan sailed westward added four minutes to his day, until, when he reached the Philippines, the difference in time amounted to sixteen hours. Curiously enough, this escaped the notice of all. Elcano. the only Captain who made the entire eircuit, was not aware, "when he returned to the longitude of his depart-ure, that his ship's logbook" was about a day behind "the time of the port his long-continued westward course had brought him back to. The error remained unnoticed also in the Philippines till 1844, when it was decided to pass over New Year's Day for once altogether." Thus it appeared that the Philippines, instead of lying far to the west of Spain, the direction in which the discoverers had sailed, might more properly be spoken of as lying about eight hours east of Spain. When it is noon in Madrid it is about 8:20 in the evening in Manila, and about 7:10 in the morning at Washington,

Wells That Breathe

Blowing or breathing wells are strange phenomena which exist at Sauk City, Prairie du Sac and Merrimack. Wisconsin.

At those places wells have been put down to depths varying from 60 to 130 feet, and, strange to relate, they make a good profit by it.

The owner of the ship was impressed by this strange man, especially as he cold weather water is frozen at a pump pipes to burst in many cases. Recently, Charles Stoddard put some light boards over his well and during chants who purchased all the goods on the night the exhalation blew part of the boards off.

One man covered his well, except a other similar obect was placed over the hole, it would be blown off. The air seems to come from a stratum of sand or other substance, except a

While some vagabounds remain in the country during the winter, there is none the less a general exodus from the road in the autumn. In the South the professional wayfarer's last chance of obtaining work in the fields is at "hopping"; in the North, at "tater scratching." Thousands of vagrants rely on one or the other industry to get a winter's stock or keep, or, at least, something with which to tide them over the beginning of the town season. Comparatively seldom, however, do they reach their winter quarters with

Earth-and its Axis

Nine persons out of ten—yes, 999 out of every 1,000—if asked how long it takes the earth to turn once on its axis would answer twenty-four hours, and to the question: "How many times does it turn on its axis in the course of a year?" the answer would be: 3651/4 times. Both answers are wrong. It requires but twenty-three hours and fifty-six minutes for the earth to make one complete turn, and it makes 3661/4 turns during the year. The error springs from a wrong idea of what is meant by a day. The day is not, as is commonly supposed, the time required by the earth to make one turn on its axis, but the interval between two successive passages of the sun across the meridan-that is to say, the time which elapses after the sun is seen exactly south of its diurnal course through the heavens before it it is seen again in that position. Now, in consequence of the earth's revolution in its orbit, or path around the sun, the sun has the appearance of moving very slowly in the heavens in a direction from east to west. At noon tomorrow the sun will be a short distance to the east of the point in the heavens at which it is seen at noon to-day, so that when the earth has made one complete turn, it will still have to turn four minutes longer be fore the sun can again be seen exactly

When "The Philadelphia Record" untook nineteen years ago to demonstrate that the best of morning newspapers could be made and sold for one cent publishers were generally skeptical. But the world of readers was not askep.
