The Mississippi Floods.

BY JAMES A. MITCHELL, PH. D.

The Mississippi delta has an area of 14,000 square miles, or almost one-third again as much as the delta of the Nile. Its form is very irregular, due to the many bayous which break away from the main flood and thus scatter the deposit. It is pushing seaward more rapidly than any other, because it pushes along narrow lines. Its advance measures one mile in sixteen years. The sediment carried down by the river and deposited at its mouth and throughout the delta each year is equal to a mass of earth one mile square and 268 feet deep, a mass weighing at least 400,250,000,000 tons.

By far the most interesting question connected with the "Father of Waters" respects the means which man has employed to keep the raging torrent within its bounds and thus to reclaim both delta and river swamps, and render them instead of weary wastes, habitable plantations, aglow with the signs of life and smiling under the productivity which everywhere marks the persevering industry of the energetic American farmer.

As the greater and more fertile portion of the Mississippi river between Cairo, Ills., and the Gulf is below the level of the floods and since the condition has existed from a period long anterior to the discovery of the country, the first object of the settler has always been to secure himself from inundation during the high stages of the river. Throughout the entire region the levee system has been adopted for the purpose to the exclusion of every other, except that of "cut-offs," which have been partially tried in a very few instances for local objects.

When, in 1812 Louisiana was admitted to the Federal Union, the levees extended on both sides of the river from the lowest settlements to Point Coupee on one side, and to Baton Rouge on the other, except where the country remained unoccupied. Higher up the river, levee construction had not made much progress and whatever had been done was accomplished by independent effort, and this continued to be the case, with slight progress, until 1850.

In September of that year a great impulse was given to the work of reclaiming below the mouth of the Ohio by the Federal Government, which by an act of Congress, approved September 28th, 1850, granted to the several States all swamp lands within their limits remaining unsold, in order to provide a fund to reclaim the districts liable to inundation.

The States of Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Missouri soon organized offices for the sale of the swamp lands and appointed commissioners for the location and construction of the levees.

Throughout the flood-plain the river has built up along its course natural embankments by sedimentary deposits. In many cases, these have given sufficient protection to the adjoining territory when the river is in its ordinary stage. But in flood-time they have failed to retain the water and the surrounding swamp lands have been inundated. To reclaim these swamp lands and guard against future inundations artificial levees had to be built on the natural embankments, with the result that the river channel gradually became higher and the flood-plain correspondingly lower; so that during the annual freshets of March and April, caused by the melting snows and heavy vernal rains, there would always be a great strain on the levee and grave danger of floods.

One may have an idea of the danger to be feared when he considers that the river at flood-time rises 40 feet above low water at the head of the plain, though during the month of April of 1897 it registered 48 feet. It rises 20 feet at New Orleans, that is higher than the roofs of the houses inside the levee, and here, where the levees are higher than the level of the city, an inundation would have terrible results.

The breaks, which at such times frequently occur in the levees, are called crevasses. However, among the numerous branches which connect the main river, there are some whose sources begin at its banks and whose providential work is to ease the river flow at flood-time, by carrying off as much as possible of the surplus waters. These exhausts are called bayous and their service is of inestimable benefit.

Even with these bayous to lend their aid inundations of great extent annually occur. During the year 1897 one tract of land extending upwards of 12,000 square miles, or of about the size of Maryland, was inundated and the planter's labors destroyed. Every year people are driven from their homes, their crops wasted, their possessions lost and damages running into millions of dollars sustained.

The various systems of levees adopted have generally been faulty and the modifications undergone have usually failed of their expected results. It seems that the only plan now remaining and which is entirely feasible, is that new levees, or a second line of embankments, be constructed at least one mile back from the present river banks. This, of course, would make necessary the withdrawal of settlers from the lands immediately bordering on the present embankments, unless they would be willing to submit to a yearly discomfiture or two. But the second line of levees would be a bulwark against an extended inundation, and would guarantee immunity to the settlers beyond.

The only obstacle to such a consummation, and it is a great one, would be to succeed in inducing the present holders of these lands to agree to the project. Until such a barrier is erected danger will continue to threaten and the flood will not cease to wreck its ruin.

Levees are constructed in either of the two following methods: One consists in putting a soft bottom on the bed of the stream at the point where erosion is greatest. This is made up of what are called mattresses or hurdles, composed of mats of brush woven together and fastened to a wire strengthened by a lattice-work of heavy timbers. These mattresses are placed along the banks and secured by a substantial ballast of rubble stones. The other consists of a crib of timbers, constructed in sections of sufficient dimensions to cover the place to be protected, over this crib is laid a carpet of heavy brush with the twigs of fibre running generally in parallel lines. Another carpet of similar construction is laid on the first with its fibre running at right angles. The two are then knitted together with wire and the crib ballasted. These levees are frequently improvised and in time of flood the mats are hurriedly banked with banks of sand or loam.

The expenditures connected with the reclaiming of the flood plain and with construction of embankments have been enormous. From about the time that Louisiana became a portion of the United States up to the Civil War, that State alone had expended $18,000,000 on the levees of the main river, $5,000,000 more on its great outlets and $1,000,000 on the shores of the Red River. In addition to this the State of Arkansas had spent $1,000,000, whilst the State of Mississippi on its water front of 444 miles constructed protection levees at an outlay of $14,500,000, and the State of Missouri on 140 miles of river front had also expended the amount of $1,640,000. In point of fact the total expenditure by individuals, parishes, counties and States had amounted up to that time on a river front of 2,000 miles to upwards of $41,000,000.

According to the recommendation of Humphreys and Abbot, Federal engineers, it would cost no less than $17,000,000 to build levees confining the river to a single channel. And yet with all this expense, to which much has been added, a great deal still remains to be accomplished. In 1879 the Mississippi River Commission was organized by act of Congress. It was composed of seven members taken from the engineers in various governmental departments, as well as of members from civil life. The duties of this commission included the making of complete surveys of the river and of its tributaries from source to mouth; to consider plans for correcting and deepening the channel and to remedy faults, whilst endeavoring to protect the banks. The expenses during the first ten years for surveys, etc., exceeded $1,000,000, and this was entirely independent of appropriations for actual works of improvement, which were begun in 1881 and which have thus far cost $13,000,000.

Another very interesting feature connected with the Mississippi River and one which added greatly to the prosperity of our country at a time when there was need of the aid of nature as well as of art to establish firmly the central government was the part that this great waterway played in commercial enterprise.

It was the central artery of commerce which through its tributaries reached the very heart of our vast commonwealth and afforded an avenue to the markets of the world for the produce of no less than twenty-eight States and Territories. On its bosom floated to the sea immense rafts of the choicest lumber, millions and millions of feet; innumerable floats of coal barges and steamboats freighted with cotton, the staple of all the States bordering on the flood plain, carried their valuable cargoes over its waters.

Before the war of the Secession and before railroads made their appearance, the Mississippi was the greatest commercial highway in the world. Its ancient glory has faded, the railroad crosses and recrosses the land and the days of the river steam boat, the raft and the barge are slowly but surely passing away, leaving nothing to the river of that interest which formerly centered in it, and bringing it to notice only when its turbulent flood is carrying terror and dismay among a fearful populace.

(THE END.)

"I had long suffered from indigestion," writes G. A. LeDeus, Cedar City, Mo. "Like others I tried many preparations but never found anything that did me good until I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. One bottle cured me. A friend who had suffered similarly I put on the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. He is gaining fast and will soon be able to work. Before he used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure indigestion had made him a total wreck. T. E. Zimmerman & Co.

A Droitwich barber was just finishing lathering a customer and was talking volubly, as usual. "Yes, sir," he said, "there's no carelessness allowed by our employer. Every time we cut a customer's face we are fined sixpence, and if we make an ugly gash it costs us a shilling."

Then, picking up and brandishing his razor, he added: "But I don't care a rap today. I've just won a sovereign."—London Answers.

Mrs. T. Bridgeman of Parshallville, Mich., was troubled with salt rheum for thirteen years and had tried a number of doctors without relief. After two applications of BANNER SALVE, her hand became better and in a short time she was entirely cured. Beware of substitutes. Zimmerman & Co.

Patti's Escort.
Adelina Patti, the great singer, on one of her tours of Europe was due at Bucharest on a certain date. Owing to inclement weather, however, madame declined to budge from Vienna, and the poor manager went nearly distracted. As storming had not the slightest effect on her serene highness the manager set his wits to work. Soon afterward a telegram arrived from Bucharest, stating that a brilliant deputation of Rumanian nobles, with a torchlight procession and military band, was to receive the diva. The message was handed to Mme. Patti, who was enchanted, and at once made ready to start. On arrival, the band played and the torches flared, and madame was put in the best of spirits by being escorted to her hotel by the Rumanian nobles. It is not known what she would have said had she been told that the "nobles" were hired for the occasion by a representative of the manager.

Grazed In the Fog.
It is not usual for a ship on the high seas to elect to cast anchor on the deck of a passing steamer, but that is what a four masted schooner did once in the Atlantic. The two vessels grazed in the fog, and the "cutted" port anchor of the schooner caught in the steamer's deck "by a fluke." It fastened to an engineer's stateroom in such a manner as to bar his exit; but, fortunately, the chain parted just as the room was being ripped into fragments. The schooner followed the steamer to its destination to recover her anchor.

"WHAT's the matter here?" said the officer, coming into the restaurant.

"Why, boss, this man said I could eat one of his dinners without any trouble," said the tramp.

"Well?"
"Well, I ate one, and I've got no money to pay for it, and now it seems there's all sorts of trouble."—Yonkers Statesman.

A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at T. E. Zimmerman & Co's drug store. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free.

JEWELER—See here, you want to be more cautious. What was it you said about that cheap watch you sold to that customer?

MOTHERS every where praise One Minute Cough Cure for the sufferings it has relieved and the lives of their little ones it has saved. Strikes at the root of the trouble and draws out the inflammation. The children's favorite Cough Cure. T. E. Zimmerman & Co.

"SAY, boss," he began, "I don't want no money. I on'y ask yer ter pass me inter dat lunch joint and buy me a square meal."

"Poor man!" exclaimed the Philanthropist.
"I can't do that, but the next man you ask may, so here's a pepsin tablet in case you overeat yourself."—Philadelphia Press.

When you have no appetite, do not relish your food and feel dull after eating you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at T. E. Zimmerman & Co's drug store.

GEORGIA farmers and planters are appealing to negroes to help them with their turpentine getting. Builders of new cotton mills are greatly concerned as to where they will get hands to run their mills.

Chronic Constipation Cured.
The most important discovery of recent years is the positive remedy for constipation. Cascarets Candy Cathartic. Cure guaranteed. Genuine tablets stamped C. C. C. Never sold in bulk. Druggists, roc.

Going to Canossa.
The saying "going to Canossa" refers to the humiliating pilgrimage made by the Emperor Henry IV to Italy in the year 1077. Henry had objected to the claims advanced by Gregory Hildebrand, and refusing to submit, was excommunicated by that pontiff. The emperor at first laughed at the sentence, but took a more serious view when he found himself deserted even by his personal attendants and resolved on a journey to Italy to make his peace with the pope. The latter was then at the Castle of Canossa, a fortress of the Countess Mathilda and situated in the mountains of Modena. Thither the emperor hastened, but the pope refused to see him save under the most degrading conditions.

The desperate situation of Henry compelled him to submit, and for three days and nights, barefooted and bareheaded, clad only in a hair shirt, the raiment of a penitent, he waited at the gate. At the end of this fearful penance, which was undergone in the month of January, he was admitted to the papal presence, was absolved and received his dominions as a gift from the pope. The expression has ever since been current as indicative of abject submission on any terms imposed by the conqueror.

They Weren't Fed.
"Some years ago," said a San Francisco man, "a globe trotting Englishman came into the city by the Golden Gate, and it fell to my lot to entertain him. So one night I took him to dine at the far famed Cliff House. It was a beautiful moonlight night, and from where we sat upon the porch we looked out upon the broad bosom of the Pacific ocean. The moon's light made a path across the waters, and in its center the Seal rocks lay like a black patch. The Englishman inquired what they were and upon my informing him said: 'Bah! Jove, are those the Seal rocks of which I have heard? I'd very much like to see the seals. I say, my man, turning to the waiter, 'can't I see the seals? Don't you feed them at night?'"

"Oh, yes, sir," replied the waiter, who was of Irishman descent, without blinking an eye. 'At 9 o'clock we always gives them their ham and eggs, sir.'"

The Englishman accepted this surprising piece of information without turning a hair and announced that he would surely be on hand at the time mentioned. He was; but, needless to say, the waiter was not.

Knocked Her Out With a Look.
While talking of so many notable people he met during his ramblante career John L. Sullivan said one day in New York: "Once when I was in Sydney I had a suit of rooms directly over Sarah Bernhardt. I never met the lady, and I didn't much care. She was jabbering French all the time and was rehearsing constantly in her room. I heard so much of it that I pretty near had the nerves. One night I happened to follow Sarah into her majesty's theater in Sydney, and I had a good chance to size her up. She was a featherweight all right, and there was so much powder on her face that I thought she'd made a mistake. She got a look at me, and because I had been so much annoyed with her jabbering I scowled at her—gave her the look that used to scare the dubs who tried to stay four rounds with me. Well, sir, Sarah gave one long, mournful howl and fainted away. After that she didn't jabber any more, for she'd found out who was living up stairs."

Analyzing His Affection.
The young lovers sat beside the waterfall. The rapids and the nearby whirlpool had a strange attraction for the romantic young girl. She had heard the story of the unhappy Indian maid, and the young man, who had gone to their doom, clasped in each other's arms, to the slow music of the "Swan Song." That seemed very beautiful to her.

"Jack," she said, "if you saw me struggling in the water near the edge of the falls, would you jump in after me?"

"What would be the use, my dear, when I can't swim?" he answered.
"But at least we could perish together," she replied bravely.

"Yes, there would be no doubt of that," he returned, shuddering at the sound of the cruel waters.
"But haven't you often said you would die for me?" she asked, plucked at his coldness.

"No, my dear," replied her practical lover. "If you'll remember, I've always told you that I had an undying love for you!"—Smart Set.

Use of a Long Exposure.
When chilled by exposure to cold, take a long exposure, with the mouth firmly shut. Repeat this several times until you begin to feel the heat returning. It requires only a very short time to do this. The long breath quickens the pulse, and this causes the blood to circulate faster. The blood flows into all parts of the veins and arteries and gives out a great deal of heat. It is stated that a long, deep breath, held as long as possible, will close the pores of a heated skin, and the danger of taking cold, on stepping outdoors, may be thus guarded against.

Cleaning the Clock.
A farmer has an ambitious son, 19 years old, who, being left alone for a few hours the other day, tried to clean the clock. He easily got the clock to pieces, but his difficulty lay in putting them together again after cleaning. At this task he was only partly successful, and upon his father's return home he eagerly exclaimed: "Father, I've cleaned the clock and got enough works left over to make another one!"—Exchange.

UNION VETERANS

About 1,000 veterans—men who volunteered at the outbreak of the war for three years of service—are assembled in Gettysburg for sixteenth annual encampment of the Union Veteran Legion.

Among the officers and more prominent men in attendance are General Wooters, National Commander Thomas J. Cummings, Adjutant General Thomas J. Hubbard, Quartermaster General Thomas J. Shannon, Chief Mastering Officer Corporal James Tanner, the Rev. Henry N. Cowden, chaplain of the House of Representatives, and Mrs. Ella E. West, president of the Ladies National Auxiliary of the Union Veteran Legion.

The contest for national commander is between Comrade Minor, of Indiana, and J. Edwin Brown, of Washington, D. C. Wednesday the veterans were free to visit the points of interest on the field.

FELL DEAD IN CHURCH.

Abraham Shenk, a class leader in the Iona United Brethren church, near Schaefferstown, Pa., died suddenly Sunday while attending the conference of the United Brethren of East Pennsylvania at Reading. Bishop Mills had just finished the act of ordination with the word "Amen." Mr. Shenk repeated the word "Amen" in fervent tones, and then, with a gasp, sank into the seat of a pew which was occupied with his wife.

G. W. Weaver & Son, G. W. Weaver & Son, GETTYSBURG, PA. FOR EMMITSBURG AND VICINITY. Owing to what comes to us a demand from this section, to give those who are unable to visit our store at Gettysburg, an annual opportunity to see our stock and have the privilege of purchasing from it in a comfortable manner, we have secured for this season, the storeroom on Main Street, in the building owned by Miss M. L. Motter, nearly opposite the Furniture Store of M. F. Shuff, and have fitted it up for our purpose.

We Will Exhibit There From October 16 TO 24 Inclusive. A sample line of almost our entire stock from Gettysburg, under the care and direction of Mr. P. G. Breighner as before, with assistants. The showing this season will be very much more extensive than any made heretofore, and our method will include instant deliveries on many of the goods shown, to those who desire it. All goods ordered will be delivered at the sample room free.

Our Store (at Gettysburg) was never quite as good as it is this season. Stocks Are Larger. Better Assorted READY TO WEAR. Goods for ladies, is of a character that will bring praise from all who see it. It embraces Ladies' Suits, in the newest creations of the suit maker, separate Dress and Walking Skirts, properly tailored.

JACKETS AND CAPES, of the correct lengths. We cannot give descriptions here, but we wish to emphasize the fact of style and make, and we ask you to come and judge the value. We are willing to stand by your judgment. One garment of each kind will be on exhibition.

CHILDREN'S AND MISSES' CLOAKS. In every size and in great variety of styles and lengths. A full line in different sizes will be on exhibition. All Ready To Wear Goods will be altered, when necessary, free of charge.

FURS. The time to buy Furs is now—if a saving in price is desirable. DRESS GOODS. Will be shown in Dress lengths, both in Black and Colors from lowest to best. Making the best assortment of Dress Goods outside of Baltimore.

SILKS. In dress and waist lengths—and those intended for trimmings—by sample sufficiently large to show quality. DRESS LININGS. Many will be shown in the piece, others in sample. An opportunity to get correct dress linings at right prices. DRESS BRAIDS and TRIMMINGS will be shown in samples. LACES and EMBROIDERIES—shown in sample, a comprehensive showing.

GLOVES. Kid Gloves in sample pairs. Wool Golf Gloves and Mitts—will be shown as stock and delivered when sold. A fine line of Men's Wool Gloves for delivery also.

CORSETS, ONE OF EACH STYLE. HOISERY AND UNDERWEAR. For men, women and children. The most popular kinds as stock will be sold and delivered. A large showing will be made in assortments—by samples. Some special prices will be given in these lines.

BLANKETS AND COMFORTS. A handsome line of these goods will be shown. Blankets ranging in price from 50 cents to $6 per pair. Will be delivered when sold.

LACE CURTAINS. From 35 cents to $6 per pair, will be shown in sample curtains to be ordered. Portieres in sample pairs. RUGS. All the various patterns and sizes will be exhibited, to be ordered.

AS TO PRICES. We assert that in no instance will any article be marked higher than our regular prices, and many things will be sold less than we would sell them at Gettysburg. We ask an inspection of our sample and stock lines as opened there. Don't forget the dates.

OCT. 16 TO 24. OPEN AT NIGHTS. G. W. WEAVER & SON, SAMPLE STOCK, Main Street, Emmitsburg, Md.

Chalk Wonders.

Few people know what a wonderful object a bit of chalk is when examined under a microscope.

A better way, however, is to rub down a portion of chalk with an old toothbrush in a tumbler half filled with water.

A certain duke, while driving from the station to the park on his estate to inspect a company of artillery, observed a ragged urchin keeping pace with the carriage at his side.

The duke, feeling interested, stopped his carriage and opened the door to the lad, saying he could ride to the park with him.

The delighted lad, being in ignorance of whom he was, kept his grace interested with quaint remarks till the park gates were reached.

As the carriage entered it was saluted by the company and guns, whereupon his grace said to the lad:

"Now, can you show me where the duke is?"

The lad eyed his person all over, then, looking at the duke, replied quite seriously:

"Well, I dunno, mister, but it's either you or me!"—Spare Moments.

Dog Used, Not Holes.

"There used to be a famous character in our part of the world named Frank O'Connor," said a Cincinnati man, "and the stories of his doings and sayings still form a large part of the staple anecdotes of the country which he used to permeate."

"One of his stock expressions has passed from local to national use. If any one did a particularly clever thing or said anything that especially struck him, O'Connor would say, 'That shows almost human intelligence,' and now when far and near I hear that expression used it conjures up memories of my genial old friend."

"Up in Ontario at one time ill fortune compelled O'Connor to accept a job on a farm, where a friend one day found him, the sweat pouring off his brow and a spade in his hand. 'Hello, Frank!' he was called. 'Are you doing very well digging out postholes? I'm not,' was the tart response of O'Connor, who was nothing if not literal. 'I'm digging out mud and leaving the holes!'"

He Wasn't Deported.

Shortly after the Chinese exclusion act was passed the secretary of state received a letter from Pennsylvania, signed by a Chinaman. The writer said that he had been interested in this legislation and that he fell within the conditions of this act. He had come to this country under false pretenses, and hence he should be deported immediately. The request was so strange that the secretary of state ordered a few days later that the Chinaman's statement about the way in which he entered this country was correct and that he should be deported. There was just one drawback to this programme, however. The Chinaman had been convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Extremes in Iceland.

In Iceland nature seems to have defied all her ordinary operations and to have worked only in combining the most terrific extremes which her powers can command. Nor is she yet silent. After the lapse of ages the fire of the volcano still bursts out among the stupors of eternal snow, and the impetuous thundering of the geysers continues to disturb the stillness of the surrounding solitude.

A Gate Covered With Shoes.

The principal gateway at Allahabad is thickly studded with horseshoes of every size and make. There are hundreds of them nailed all over the great gates, doubtless the offering of many a wayfarer who has long since finished his earthly pilgrimage. The sacred gates of Sonmath, in the fort of Agra, are similarly adorned.

OCTOBER DAYS ... AT THE... PAN-AMERICAN

AT Chicago October was the great month in point of attendance at the World's fair. There is every reason to believe the same result will come to the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, where October is always a month of delightful weather.

The Exposition in point of beauty and interest is at its climax, and the programme of special events is such as to attract and please. September started with great crowds, and only the tragedy in the Temple of Music, which stunned and shocked a world, halted an overwhelming success in that month.

The Exposition management as a tribute of respect closed the gates for one day, Thursday, when the state funeral of the third martyred president took place. The crowds since then have poured to Buffalo. The Temple of Music, now hallowed and historic ground, has been the Mecca of thousands.

Buffalo has demonstrated her ability to care for great crowds satisfactorily, not only in hauling them to the Exposition by street car and steam railway at a fare of but 5 cents from any part of the city, but to house and feed them at prices in the reach of all. The stories of exorbitant prices were long ago shown to be fables, and every visitor who makes the slightest effort to get accommodation can do so wholly within his means.

The Exposition itself, with its beautiful buildings, its coloring by day, its magic lighting at night, its walks and courts, its canals and lakes, its fountains and statuary, its exhibits and its amusements, has been a delight to the 5,000,000 visitors who have already been to the Pan-American.

The Exposition Company opened up the month of October, beginning Monday, Sept. 30, with a Carnival week of splendid events, including a baby coach parade, with 3,000 school children singing in the procession, a monster pageant with the floats used in the New Orleans Mardi Gras and allegorical parade and the feature of the beautiful floral parade at Saratoga.

These will take place on Thursday and Saturday, Oct. 3 and 5, but every day from Sept. 30 to Oct. 5 will be replete with interest. Special fireworks on the lake, with decorated and illuminated launches in a procession of fiery grandeur, will afford new and wonderful sensations to the visitors.

Thus October will be ushered in with a programme so arranged as to give the American public a delightful week. The life saving drill, daily, has become one of the great attractions of the Exposition. It tells the story of the work of the heroic men who guard the shores of ocean and great lakes, always on the alert to drag from death's brink the shipwrecked sailor or passenger. The model camp of United States marines, the seacoast guns, the ordnance and all the exhibits showing war's panoply and our defensive measures have been a great educator to thousands of visitors. Some military company is always encamped in the park, and that part of the grounds is never without interest.

With the magnificent exhibit of the United States Government and the South and Central American States' buildings every visitor can spend a day. No exposition has ever provided in so compact a space, with such beauty of architecture and with so much care for the comfort of the visitor, so much. All exhibit buildings are free, including the Stadium, the great amphitheater, the art gallery, state buildings, and never was so much given for so little.

The gorgeous pyrotechnics—and no exposition has ever been so lavish in the display of fireworks—are free to all Exposition visitors. The programme provided by Buffalo in October includes the magnificent water carnival with gorgeous ballet, wonderful figures in liquid fire, and aerial bombs and rockets of startling beauty and mystifying construction.

To the millions interested in agriculture, stock and poultry raising, the Pan-American Exposition especially appeals. The cattle show was a tremendous success and the sheep show, beginning Sept. 23 and continuing to Oct. 25, has proved an attraction for those interested, from every section from Maine to California and Canada. Among the states represented are Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Vermont, Ohio, New Jersey, Texas and Missouri. Of the total number of flocks on exhibition twenty-seven have been sent here from the Dominion of Canada, most of the exhibitors being located in the province of Ontario. The province of Quebec is also represented. During the course of the sheep show there will be held in the New York State building a series of meetings of prominent North and South American sheep breeders.

The Buffalo Review of Sept. 24 said that "this ought to be a great time for the farmers to visit the Pan-American. Every farmer in New York State, not to mention those in other parts of the country, ought to see the attractions of the Rainbow City during the next three or four weeks."

"The cattle show last week was a big feature of the Exposition, and this week there is a great sheep show in progress."

"The New York State farmers and the sheep raisers from other states will find it most interesting to compare the South American breeds with those of North America."

"It will surprise many to learn that the pavilions for animals at the Pan-American cover 35,000 animals."

The programme for October so far as made up at this time is as follows:

- 1. Mexican day, fireworks, free organ recital, John P. Lawrence, Washington.
- 2. Free organ recital, W. H. Donley, Indianapolis, Ind.
- 3. Nebraska day, Toronto day, fireworks.

Can Care For 250,000.

Director General Buchanan says the only problem now confronting the Exposition is how to find days enough within the closing weeks to adequately take care of the many attractions and features now being planned. He predicts a great attendance during the month of October and one far in excess of the highest estimates that have been made by the most sanguine. In answer to the inquiry as to whether or not Buffalo could take care of the crowds, he said there was no difficulty whatever in this regard; that Buffalo could easily care for 250,000 strangers every day comfortably and at reasonable prices.

In the Music Temple.

The organ recitals in the Temple of Music are daily features of the Pan-American Exposition. Many celebrated organists are on the programme for October. Victor Herbert's famous organ concert will be at the Temple of Music from Oct. 14 to the close of the Exposition.

Drops of Ink.

"A drop of ink may make a million think," quoted McSwigglin. "So I have heard," added Squidig. "It may prove language too. A few drops of ink that I inadvertently dropped on my wife's new carpet brought forth about a million words, and all energetic words too."

Not Lipped. A naturalist says that the squirrel tribe is increasing all over the wooded districts of England and in the Scottish lowlands. In some parts of Scotland, notably in the north, the little creature is unknown.

It is not so long ago that a Scotch judge was trying a case which had to do with the escape of a squirrel from its cage and the question as to whether it had been stolen.

"Were its wings clipped?" he asked a witness. "But, my lord," interposed the counsel, "it is a quadruped."

"Quadruped or no quadruped," said his honor sternly, "if its wings had been clipped it could never have escaped."
