Ar Engagement Ring Which Amputates a Finger Joint.

Ethnological experts agree that with most Australian tribes every woman is betrothed in infancy or even in anticipation of her birth. According to some mysterious law of their own, this is arranged by the old men of the family, the women having no voice in the matter. The age of the proposed husband is n t taken into consideration, so that it frequently happens that by the time the girl is of a magriageable age her Intended is an old man. If in the meantime some younger man has set his heart upon her, this means a fight, in which the unfortunate bride to be, as she is dragged away, is certain to come in for a share of the blows which the rival suitors aleal out to each other.

In some of the coast districts, where not all the girls are promised in infancy, the betrothel of a young woman to a man who follows the occupation of a fisherman compels her to lose the first joint of the little finger of her left hand. This slow and painful operation is performed by a stout string bound tightly about the joint-an engagement ring with which one would willingly dispense! A marriage license, equally unique, is common in some sections, where the chief gives knotted string, possessing which he is free to seek the wife of his choice.— Woman's Home Companion.

The oldest epitaph in English, which is found in a churchyard in Oxfordshire and dates from the year 1370, to modern readers would be unintelligible not only from its antique typography, but from its obsolete language, the first two lines of which run as follows and may be taken as a sample of the whole:

"Man com & se how schal alle dede be: wen yow comes bad & bare: noth hav ven we away fare: all ye werines yt ve for care."

The modern reading would be: "Man, come and see how shall all dead be when you come poor and bare; nothing have when we away fare. All is weariness that we for care."

THE COVERED BARNYARD.

Its Advantages For Wintering Farm Stock-Just the Thing For Sheep. The present time of year should show to the fullest extent whatever benefits may pertain to a covered barnyard. An thio Farmer writer says of this:

If appearances are facts, seldom indeed is there a farmer who appreciates the real worth of a covered barnyard. At any rate, those seen by the writer in his travels over and about the country have been exceedingly few and far between. A covered barnyard, just the same, is a very important factor in farm management, it not only being possible with it to keep manure from leaching, even in the slightest degree, but preserve it to a certainty from that hateful consumer of the majority of manure heaps, "fire fanging."

With a covered barnyard one should simply wheel out the manure daily and throw some litter over it. Thus dealt with, the cattle will run over it and keep it so closely packed that too rapid heating is an impossibility. A covered barnyard also affords stock a chance to exercise and secure fresh air without exposure to storms and cold winds, no matter what the period of the year may be, and for sheep that lamb in the spring it is just the place in which they of wool as they are, thrive better on an average when they have a cool sit-
