THE "OLD MOUNT."

A. V. D. WATTEWSON Writes Entertainingly of The Oldest Living Alumnus of Mt. St. Mary's College.

From The Pittsburg Catholic.

For some time the belief has prevailed that Archbishop William Henry Elder, of Cincinnati, is the oldest living alumnus of Mt. St. Mary's college, Emmitsburg, Maryland.

When I was at the commencement at the Mountain, in June of this year, I had a conversation with a lady who gave me sufficient facts to convince me that this belief is erroneous, and that her uncle, Mr. Alphonse Van Schalkwyck, of No. 307 North Fulton avenue, Baltimore, is not only the oldest living alumnus, being now 97 years of age, but that he is 12 years older than the "grand old man of the American hierarchy" who is only 84. I was so surprised to learn this and the other things she told me that I took the train on the following day for Baltimore and called to see Mr. Van Schalkwyck. I found a very old gentleman, practically blind, but in fairly good health and possessing a very clear recollection of the events of a long and busy life. He lives with his two daughters, most estimable ladies, who render his declining years not only cheerful and comfortable, but even happy. I spent several hours with him and reduced to writing much of what he told me, which I now produce for the benefit of not only the alumni and students of Mt. St. Mary's college, but also of the friends of this most remarkable and venerable institution, which will celebrate its centennial in four more years. This is what he said:

"The battle of Waterloo had just been fought when my father determined to send my brothers and me to Mt. St. Mary's college. I was a very little fellow, the youngest of the three boys, the names of the other two being August and Augustin. I was born in the parish of Sainte Ann, Gaudeloupe, on October 22, 1807, where my father was a planter. The island was then nominally in the possession of the French, and later, in 1813, was made over to Sweden, although the British were in actual possession, and it was not until the summer of 1816 that the British troops were withdrawn and the government again passed into the hands of the French. It was likely because of the disturbance in the affairs of the island that my father concluded to send us to the United States, where, he considered, we would be safe until the uprisings and troublesome times at home would terminate. We were accordingly placed on a ship bound for New York, where we arrived in due course of time, and, after a few days' stay in that city, we left for Mt. St. Mary's college, arriving at that harbor of safety upon August 14, 1815. From New York we took a vessel to Baltimore, and from there to the college we went by wagon, leaving Baltimore early in the morning and arriving at the college in the evening. Father DuBois was the president of the college, and a grand man he was. It was said at this time when he came to the Mountain he was the only priest between Baltimore and St. Louis.

"The college was composed of two buildings, one log, the other frame, the latter erected shortly before I came, and was two stories in height. In the log building were the professors' rooms, four class rooms, a library and Father DuBois's room. The refectory was in the basement of the log building, and it opened out on the yard below, now the second terrace. There was only one terrace then. The frame building contained only the study hall and dormitory. A porch began at the junction of the two houses and ran along the log house. It was level with the ground at one end and about eight feet from the ground at the other, where there was a pair of steps going down to the yard. There were doors leading from the various rooms to the porch. The college fronted toward the east and on the west was the mountain. In another building were the kitchen and the infirmary, separated from the main building by a little street or lane. A white woman, assisted by several colored women, did the cooking. Not far from Father DuBois's room, on the east side of the college, was the wood pile, and everybody did more or less chopping, as we had only wood fires. I chopped my ankle one day and I still wear the scar. There were stumps of trees on the terrace and rows of poplars stood like sentinels around the buildings. Each boy had charge of a poplar. I took the greatest care of mine, and when I left it was in superb condition. In those days we were not blessed with the comforts and conveniences which boys have nowadays. Some things were very primitive. The water was conducted in wooden pipes from the springs on the side of the mountain over to the buildings and flowed into troughs, where we washed. In winter, when the weather was unusually cold, we had our discomforts, it is true, but, at other times, it was very agreeable to wash in this way. It made good, hardy men of us, and it is doubtful whether any of your present boys with all their comforts will live as long as I have. The infirmary was located over the kitchen and was in charge of the Sisters from Mother Seton's house, Sister Angelia, a beautiful woman, was infirmarian, and every person was very fond of her. There was another little frame building off by itself, not far from the kitchen, used as a tailor shop, the tailoring being done by two women named DeVoyce. A hand ball alley stood between the upper terrace and the garden, when I first went to the college.

"On the side of the mountain, just below the church, there was another little house occupied by a family, and where an old priest named Duhamel lived and died in 1817 or 1818. He did not do anything around the college, and did not appear to be well. In the garden was a little log house in which Mr. Hughes, who afterwards became Archbishop of New York, lived for a while after he came to the Mountain. (This house is still standing.) It was said that Mr. Hughes had been a hostler somewhere over in Western Maryland before he came to the Mountain, and he worked in the garden and lived in this little house just about the time he began to study for the Church. There was no chapel at the college. The priests went to the church on the hill to say Mass and the boys and country people went there too, as did also the Sisters from St. Joseph's. The Sisters formed the choir, and one of their number accompanied them on a piano. Sister Guerin was one of the singers in the Church and her son was a student at the college with us. The building now used as a chapel was the only stone building there, and it was then used as a wash house above and a dairy below. South of it was a fountain that supplied an abundance of water to the college. We had good milk and butter and plenty to eat. We were permitted to raise chickens and to trap game. A family named Hickey lived on the east side of the garden. The farm was owned by a man we called Uncle Eacie, who rented it to Father DuBois. Uncle Eacie had another farm where he had a great many cherry trees. He sent word to Mother Seton to permit the Sisters to come and eat cherries on his farm. They were pleased, accepted the invitation, had a feast, and took home a few for the morrow. The next day Uncle Eacie sent Mother Seton a bill for $3.00.

"There was a little log house on the declivity on the opposite bank of the brook, not far from the present music hall, in which the garden, or lived, a Frenchman named Marcelly. He had come from San Domingo and had brought two slaves with him. Mother Seton, with 10 or 12 other Sisters, walked over from St. Joseph's each Sunday to attend Mass and they stopped in this house from after Mass until Vespers. There was no bridge over Tom's Creek in those days, and when the creek was too high the Sisters could not come over to Mass. Afterwards Father DuBois made arrangements to have Mass said at St. Joseph's by Father Brute, who generally went over on horseback, although he frequently walked. I remember of hearing him tell that on one occasion he had got as far as the fording and found the creek so high that he concluded it was too dangerous to cross. He stood on the bank for a while and then said to himself 'If I do not go the poor Sisters will be deprived of the consolation of hearing Mass today,' so he clung tightly to his horse and plunged into the water and the horse swam across with him. He arrived at St. Joseph's soaking wet, and Mother Seton met him. Seeing his condition she asked the old gardener to exchange clothes with him while he said Mass. The gardener cheerfully complied and after Mass Father Brute put on his own clothes again and went back to the college in the same manner he came. That is the kind of man Father Brute was. No danger was too great for him when it was in the line of his duty. I have known him to go on sick calls 25 miles away. He was a very pious and learned man and a very humorous man too. He always saw the sunny side of life. While I was a boy at the Mountain we never had over two or three priests. The greatest number of boys we had during the five years I was there was about 65. The boys were permitted to go to Tom's Creek to swim, and my brother Augustin saved the life of Francis Elder when he was drowning in one of the swimming holes. Alexis Elder became a priest while I was there, but he was ordained in Baltimore. We never had an ordination at the college while I was a student.

"Among those I now remember who were at the college with me were Charles I. White, of Baltimore; Mr. John Hughes, afterwards Archbishop of New York; Mr. John Purcell, afterwards Archbishop of Cincinnati, and Messrs. Michael Egan, Monahan, Edward Mullen, John McGerry, Marshall, Floyd, John McCaffrey, Francis X. Gartland, McCubbins, Alexis, George and Guy Elder, Frederick, Ferdinand and Henry Chatard, LeClerc, Guerin, Anthony Deydier, Thomas and Francis Jenkins, Jerome N. Bonaparte, Thomas Haydon, William Head, Athanasius Mudd, Richard and Wm. Whelan, Basil Shorb and William Owings. Father Hickey was a priest and taught several classes. Father Brute was not there when I arrived. He had been there for about three years, but he returned to France shortly before I went to the college, and he did not return to the college until 1818. Michael Egan became a priest and was afterwards president of the college. He was not very strong and I think he had the consumption. Mr. McGerry became a priest and afterwards president of the college, but he was a very passionate man and people had hard work to get along with him. John McCaffrey also became a priest and afterwards president of the college for over 30 years. Richard Whelan became Bishop of Wheeling, W. Va. Mr. Gartland became Bishop of Savannah, Ga. Mr. Mullen, Basil Shorb and Anthony Deydier all became priests. The boys did not like Mr. Floyd, and on several occasions wanted to hang him. I remember the day Father Brute returned to the college. He was a great help to Father DuBois, and all rejoiced when he arrived. I left the Mountain in the fall of 1820, and arrived in Gaudeloupe on January 1, 1821, on the first steamship that ever came to the island.

"After the death of my father we returned to the United States, landing in Baltimore August 6, 1848. I had five children, two sons and three daughters. One of my sons, Louis Albert, (Conreella) died at Mt. St. Mary's in 1857 and was buried there. My brother Augustin married a cousin of Josephine Bonaparte, to whom he had 11 children. He became a professor of French at Mt. St. Mary's college and remained there for seven or eight years, until 1862, living in the house in which you tell me Mrs. Corry now lives. My brother August married in Martinique, had two children and died in 1835. I was last at the college in 1856. I was professor of French at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, from 1865 to 1890, when I resigned and returned to Baltimore, where I have lived since." As will be noticed, Mr. Van Schalkwyck was born just one year prior to the foundation of Mt. St. Mary's College by Bishop DuBois, and, from present indications, I feel satisfied that the chances are most excellent that I will be able to have him present at our centennial celebration in 1908. He has never used tobacco or liquor in any form and for 50 years he has never failed to go to Mass every morning and to receive Holy Communion every Sunday and holy day of obligation. He is a member of St. Martin's parish, corner Fulton and Fayette streets, Baltimore, where all the people hold him in the highest esteem and veneration.

A. V. D. WATTEWSON, President Alumni Association of Mt. St. Mary's College.

AHEAD OF GREAT BRITAIN.

American Cotton Mills Consume Over 4,000,000 Bales Yearly

The United States still maintains its lead over all other countries in the consumption of raw cotton. In the Department of Agriculture's report on the cotton crop for the year 1898-99 attention was called to the fact that for the first time the United States had gone ahead of all other countries in this direction.

The department made public a report on the cotton crops of 1900-01 1901-02 and 1902-03, showing among other vital facts that American mills consumed over 4,000,000 bales in 1902-03, or 930,000 bales in excess of the estimated consumption of Great Britain. Every year witnesses an increase in the spinning capacity of the mills of this country. It has been far greater than that of any other cotton manufacturing country, and during the past three years greater than that of all the European countries combined. This is full of significance, not only indicating an indefinite continuance of American supremacy in the consumption of cotton, but the advanced position the United States has already taken in the manufacture of cotton goods.

Beginning with September 1 and ending with August 31—the cotton year—the commercial movement of the cotton crop from the States and Territories of production, together with the takings of the mills located in those States, amounted for the season of 1900-01 to 10,401,453 bales, for the season of 1901-02 to 10,662,995 bales, and for the season of 1902-03 to 10,725,422 bales. With the exception of two years, 1897-98 and 1898-99, the commercial movement in 1902-03 was the largest on record, though it was a noteworthy fact that even this crop did not begin to meet the requirements of spinners who use American cotton. This was true to the extent that in the latter part of the season a large number of mills in Europe, as well as in this country, were compelled either to run on short time or shut down entirely.

Another feature of the three crops under consideration worthy of notice relates to the unusually wide range of prices during the seasons of 1900-01 and 1902-03. Regarding this feature, the bulletin made public Public today says: "Although the commercial crop of 1900-91 was nearly 790,000 bales less than that of 1898-99, the greatest on record, it was worth $205,630,000 more than that crop, its value being $511,098,111, or, if the value of seed sold to oil mills be included, the total approximate value of the crop realized to the planter would amount to $588,000,000. The value of the crop of 1901-02, including seed sold to oil mills, was approximately $493,000,000, and that of 1902-03, $538,000,000, and the value of the exports of cotton in 1902-03 was the highest on record, amounting to $316,180,429, and exceeded that of 1897-98—the banner year as to the quantity exported—by $85,738,214."

PRESERVING FENCE POSTS.

Simple Method The Farmers Can Easily Follow

The well-known methods of preserving posts and wood which are partly imbedded in the earth are only effective when both the charring and tarring are applied, says American Cultivator. Should the posts only be charred, the charcoal formation on the surface would act as an absorber of the moisture and, if anything, only hasten the decay. By applying a coating of tar without previous charring, the tar would only form a casing about the wood and would not penetrate to the depth which the absorbing properties of the charcoaled surface would insure. Wood that is exposed to the action of water or let into the ground should first be charred, and then, before it has entirely cooled, be treated with tar until the wood is thoroughly impregnated. The acetic acid and oils contained in the tar are evaporated by the heat and only the resin is left behind. This penetrates the pores of the wood and forms an airtight and waterproof envelope. It is important to impregnate the wood a little above the line of exposure, for here it is that the action of decay effects the wood first, and where the break always occurs when removed from the earth or strained in testing. Wood exposed to the air should not be dressed with coal tar, but pine tar. The former will rot the fibers when exposed to the sun and air.

IT IS MURDER NOW.

Mr. Albert Constable Dies of Bullet Wounds Inflicted by Highwayman
The charge of murder, in addition to that of highway robbery, is now to be laid against the man who shot down Mr. Albert Constable, the well-known Cecil county lawyer, last Thursday evening at Gray's Hill, on the outskirts of Elkton, and then compelled the wounded man to toss away his money and flee for his life. Constable died Monday afternoon at 3:50 o'clock at the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore.

Great indignation has been aroused by the dastardly outrage not only in some towns of the deceased, but all over the State. Mr. Constable having been held in high esteem for his accomplishments as an attorney and his worth as a citizen. In addition to the reward of $500 offered last Saturday by the Commissioners of Cecil county for the arrest of the assassin, Governor Warfield Monday offered a reward of $1,000 on the part of the State.

The Governor's action is partly the result of the efforts of the Cecil County Bar Association and of Mr. Harrison W. Tickers, a member of the Kent county bar and a close friend of the dead man.

FALLS 40 FEET INTO CELLAR.

Breaks Both Legs and Lies Over an Hour Without Aid.
After falling a distance of about 40 feet, fracturing both legs and receiving a number of bruises on the head and body, Mr. Littleton Morgan, an employe at the warehouse of Joel Gutman & Co., Baltimore, lay on the floor of the cellar where he had dropped Monday morning for an hour and 15 minutes, suffering great agony and trying to attract the attention of passers-by. When nearly exhausted and hardly able to speak, Mr. Edmund F. Benish, heard his groans, and by forcing open the cellar door got him out.

Mr. Morgan had gone to the third floor after locking the front door, as he was the only one in the warehouse, and was in the act of pulling on the rope to lower the elevator when it fell on his feet and he fell into the cellar. He landed on his feet but the fall broke both legs at the knees and also fractured a bone of the left leg. He was out on the head and brained about the body.

As soon as he could collect his scattered wits, he called to the top of his voice for help, but no one heeded him. He then dragged himself to one end of the building and shouted for help, but his voice was then very feeble. Mr. Benish, however, heard his groans and went to his aid. The doctor called on the ambulance was called and he was taken to the City Hospital.

Pultz and Walter Sharrar, of Hagerstown, exploded on Antietam Creek, near Pottsville, Sunday, when it was being driven by his 18-year-old son, Roy Mowen, who was seriously burned, their faces being unrecognizable. Messrs. Pultz and Sharrar, who were also on board, escaped by jumping into the creek. Mowen and his son were taken to the hospital. The launch was damaged and the machinery when the explosion occurred. A defective pipe allowed a quantity of gasoline to escape, which ignited from an electric spark. By hard work the launch was saved from the flames.

It has been about 50 years since he left to take up his home in the West. He will return home after a stay of several weeks.

The ordinance granting the extension relieves the company of laying a double track on Market street, but they are obliged to pave the street 181 feet, as if both tracks were laid.

Says Horse Bit Him

Because a carnivorous inclined horse is alleged to have bitten him, Mr. William T. Wyatt, by attorney W. H. Lawrence, sued De Ved & Sons in the Superior Court, Baltimore, Tuesday for $5,000 damages. He says in his declaration that on August 18 last the horse bit him, and he further says that it was all the fault of the defendants for having a horse which was "understood to bite mankind." This is said to be one of the few suits in the local courts in which a horse figures as a biter.

Big Potatoes

BROKE JAIL AT EASTON.

Three Prisoners Escaped by Digging Through Wall
Three negro prisoners escaped from the Easton, Md., jail at about 2 o'clock Sunday morning. This is the third time that prisoners have made their escape from the jail in the last two years.

The men who escaped are: William White, a light mulatto, with black mustache, five feet two inches tall and weighs about 170 pounds, 35 years old; Lewis Williams, 18 years old, about five feet two inches tall, stout, smooth face and weighs about 145 pounds; Isaac Chase, 24 years old, about six feet two inches tall, chestnut color, smooth face and slender.

White and Chase had been sentenced by Police Justice William Reddie to the House of Correction for six months for selling whisky from above their heads. Williams was awaiting trial for the alleged larceny of a horse and carriage.

Two of the prisoners had obtained a piece of iron from one of the benches in the corridor and with this succeeded in removing the bricks from above their heads. They crawled through the aperture, and going around to the corridor on the north side of the jail they were met by White. One of the men, who was lifted up to a window, pried the iron screen partly off and threw a bar of iron which was across the window at the top. This allowed space for a man to crawl over between the barred spike in the window and the top of the arched window.

The first information the Sheriff had of their escape was from Arthur Ockney, one of the men who escaped some time ago and who gave himself up a day or two ago. Ockney was awakened by the noise of the escaping prisoners and called to the Sheriff. When he arrived the men were gone, but the prisoners were prevented from following them.

RESISTING THE LAW.

A Mob in Snow Hill Attempts to Rescue Prisoners

The enforcement of the local law at Snow Hill, Md., Tuesday by the arrest of 15 or more persons who had refused to work on the public roads or to pay the 75 cents which the law requires in lieu of labor if the person summoned so desires created what for a while promised to be a serious riot. Tuesday night eight white men and two negroes are in jail pending the sentence of 10 days imprisonment which the law prescribes as a penalty. When those convicted before Justice of the Peace William J. H. Owens were being taken to jail by Sheriff Lanford and his deputies many of the prisoners are said to have violently resisted and a mob rushed to their rescue. Instantly there was great excitement. The mob surged through the corridors of the Courthouse as the prisoners were gradually forced to the jail in the rear. Sheriff Lanford summoned assistance, and amid a great tumult the jail was reached and the prisoners were locked up.

In the mob resisting the officer were many citizens of the community about Box Iron who had heretofore been respected by the public. The conduct of the mob resisting the officers created the most profound indignation among the law-abiding citizens.

Under the road law of Worcester county all male citizens of certain qualifications are compelled to work on the public roads when summoned each day for an hour or pay 75 cents each day for a substitute. It is a noteworthy fact that those who instigated the resistance are safe at home, while those who were so influenced are behind the bars of the county jail.—Sun.

DEWITT IS THE NAME.

When you go to the Witch Hazel Salve look for the name DEWITT on every box. The pure, unadulterated Witch Hazel is used in making DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which is the best salve in the world for cuts, burns, bruises, boils, eczema and piles. The popularity of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, due to its many cures, has caused numerous worthless counterfeits to be placed on the market. The genuine bears the name E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. Sold by T. E. Zimmerman.

SOMNAMBULISM

Blanche Pope, a 10-year-old girl, fell from the second story of the Browning boarding house in Cumberland, last Friday night and was dangerously injured. It is thought that the child was walking in her sleep and raised the window and fell out. She was picked up in an unconscious condition, and medical attention was rendered by Dr. T. W. Koon. An examination of her injuries showed internal suffering, a broken wrist and several bumps and bruises. The child fell on her right side.

She is the daughter of Mr. J. W. Pope, of Washington, Pa., who went to Cumberland last Friday night en route to Moorefield, W. Va. He failed to make connections and was forced to remain in Cumberland all night.

Married in a Record Vault

Edward P. Greene and Edna Knox, of Turtle Creek, Pa., were married in the record vault in the office of the clerk of the court in Cumberland, by Rev. Wm. H. Leslie, of Allwood City, Pa. The couple were anxious to have Rev. Mr. Leslie perform the ceremony, and went to Cumberland for that purpose.

LADIESBURG HAPPENINGS.

Mr. J. A. Hahn Badly Injured by a Frightening Horse
Ladiesburg, Aug. 23.—Mr. J. Allen Hahn, our popular young veterinary surgeon, met with a very serious accident on Monday last on the road between this place and Pleasant Hill. He was passing a tract of land when his horse, a spirited thoroughbred animal, became frightened and in the effort to get away reared up and came down on Mr. Hahn who was then leading it, rendering him unconscious, badly injuring his head and neck. Dr. W. H. Kabig, of Woodsboro, has him in charge but it will be several weeks before he will be able to resume his practice.

Mrs. Elie B. Hamerick and little son, of West Carroll, Ohio, who have been visiting in this vicinity, left for their western home this evening.

Mrs. Sophia Biehl, an aged lady of this place, is ill with heart disease. The threehermen of this neighborhood report an average of 11 bushels of wheat per acre. This would be the largest ever known in this section. The potato crop is a fine one. Mr. George W. Vanfossen expects about four thousand bushels from 23 acres.

The Ladiesburg Sunday School will hold its cream festival on Saturday evening next.

The M. E. Sunday School, of Middleburg will picnic on Saturday next, 27th, inst., in Walden's Grove, at the railroad station.

We read with much interest the account of the reception held at the residence of Mr. Samuel Fitez, recently, as published in last week's issue of THE CHRONICLE. Mr. Fitez was born and raised in this vicinity, receiving the most of his education at the hands of the noted educator, the late Rev. Jesse R. Fox, at old Good Young Academy, he was considered a model young man, very popular, a hustler and had made a success of life. His estimable wife, who was raised only a few miles from this place, was also quite popular. We wish their son, who has just embarked on the matrimonial sea and in whose honor the reception was held, a long and likewise prosperous life.

Mr. George W. Shoemaker, the popular 73 cents which the law requires in lieu of labor if the person summoned so desires created what for a while promised to be a serious riot. Tuesday night eight white men and two negroes are in jail pending the sentence of 10 days imprisonment which the law prescribes as a penalty. ## NEWS FROM LOYS

Loys, Md., Aug. 23.—On Wednesday night this vicinity was visited by a very heavy thunder storm, accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning. Considerable damage was done around here.

The death of a fine mare, owned by Mrs. Mabel Reinhold, was a great loss. She was killed by lightning while in the stable. The loss was a great one, as she was a valuable horse.

ROBBED BY A FOOTPAD.

Roy Nicholas was held up and robbed shortly before 12 o'clock last Sunday night on the road between Hagerstown and Gettysburg. The robber, a negro footpad, who jumped out from behind a tree and, pointing a revolver at Mr. Nicholas, demanded his watch. The young man said he did not have a watch. The negro, who was armed with a pistol and a knife, shot, demanding money, which was produced. The robber deliberately struck a match and counted the money in the presence of his victim. He was enraged when he found that the sum did not amount to more than three dollars, but before he could do anything further the young man sprang away and ran toward Hagerstown, followed for some distance by the robber. The police were promptly informed, but the robber was not captured.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Rev. Charles Heinewald, Gives An Interesting Description of The Great Exposition.
ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 24.

EDITOR OF THE CHRONICLE:—The remark once made by an enthusiastic lady on her first sight of the ocean, "I am glad to see something there is enough of," comes fittingly into use here amid such a confusion of sights and scenes. The St. Louis World's Fair impresses you with its magnitude and variety. After being here now four days I have seen many processes and products. To give an account of the things I have seen would be beyond the realm of my expectation. The task is too great. After a trip of nearly 1000 miles traveled in 28 hours over the picturesque B. & O. R. R. via of Cumberland, Parkersburg and Cincinnati, we arrived in St. Louis last Thursday evening.

My first glimpse of the exposition was by the aid of over 100,000 electric lights, making the Cascades, Canals and Colonial buildings seem like fairyland. Life, vivacity and splendor, greet you on every side.

Coming into the Exposition grounds by the main entrance, naturally the finest effect was obtained. According to the timely advice of a friend I took a seat in an electric launch passing over all the water ways and under the brilliantly illuminated bridge arches, under the spray of the Cascades, near Festival Hall. This introduction to the Exposition grounds enriches any one with most rapturous impressions. It so transcends all other past or present conceptions. With the exception of the buildings of the fine Arts, and the attractions on the Pike, the main buildings are closed at night.

On Friday I first visited the great Palace of Manufactures and its architecture in the Corinthian order, with imposing sculpture, crowned entrances at the centers of the main facades. The building has a frontage on the North of 1200 feet and a depth of 525 feet on the plaza of St. Louis and Orleans.

A visit of a week in this old Palace would not disclose the marvels of its interest. The principal exhibits in this department are: Hardware, heating and ventilating apparatus, glass, merchandise in wood and metal, clothing, costumes, embroidery and tapestry of all kinds.

Foreign nations are largely and creditably represented. Two foreign countries are not in evidence with their exhibits—Russia and Spain.

The endless variety of designs in the display of products cannot fail to impress the most casual visitor.

One great hardware firm has a colossal pen-knife so arranged that its four blades are constantly opening and closing. A very ingenious water-jet has been constructed by the use of steel chains and other finished steel products.

The next building soliciting your interest is that of Liberal Arts. Its style of architecture is that of the French renaissance. On the main facades, north and south, are three entrances and on the east and west, two entrances. The dimensions are 750x525 feet, with an area of 9 acres. Statuary of historic figures surround the building.

The principal exhibits in this building are: Equipment and machinery used in the various printing processes, photographic, books, publications and book-binding, equipment for manufacture of coins, scientific instruments and apparatus. Imposing exhibits are shown in musical instruments of all kinds. Equipment and machinery used in the printing and architectural engineering. Not only the results of man's inventive genius and skill are here grouped in massive and marvelous display, but the very processes of their construction are shown before your eyes.

One of the most interesting exhibits in this department is a specimen of the latest Hoe Printing Press, capable of turning out 50,000 of the EMMITSBURG CHRONICLE per hour.

Still a third building known as Varied Industries Building, appeals to you, and furnishes many curiosities. It is nearly identical in dimensions with its companion building—that of Manufactures—and covers about 14 acres. It has a large square shaped inner court, and its swinging colonnade at the southern end, is a masterpiece of architecture.

Stationary, clocks, watches, jewelry, productions in marble, bronze, leather goods, toys, ornamental vases, mosaics, decorations, carpets, porcelains.

Germany has the finest and most excellent exhibits of any nation in the world. Japan has a most creditable display. France, Austria, Sweden and China are worthy of honorable mention.

My visits to the Palaces of Transportation, of Mines and Metallurgy, of Electricity and Machinery, have afforded much delight and not a little instruction.

Monday I devoted a large part of the day to the Palace of Education and Social Economy. Every State and Territory of the country has its own special exhibit in this department, and educational work. Exhibits of school work include every grade from the Kindergarten to the University. Cuba and Porto Rico have a very commendable showing.

In this latest and greatest of World Exhibits it is quite probable our general Government should have a building of no mean proportion. This is, indeed, the case. On this ground there is a handsome structure, twice the length of the great Treasury building at Washington. It was costed at the cost of nearly half a million dollars.

A boy was asked the other day, "What he enjoyed most at the World's Fair." He replied, "The Government building, because it has a battleship in it." Certainly the Government battleship is always thronged with visitors. This building contains one cannon 491 feet in length, with a range of 21 miles. Its projectile weighs 2,400 pounds, and requires a charge of 600 pounds of smokeless powder to discharge it. The weight of the gun is 130 tons. This building has notable exhibits. Some of the choicest from the National Museum and Smithsonian Institute at Washington.

It offers opportunity of making comparison between the slow stage coach delivery of the middle 40 years ago, and the railway postal car in complete working order, handling the mails on the railroads through the United States.

There is also given an illustration of the process of minting the coin of the country. It shows every step of the process.

The palace of Fine Arts has been the scene of my last day's sending this letter. It has been a rare treat.

The closely printed catalogue of rare paintings and works of sculpture fills a volume of 307 pages. The countries represented by their most noted artists are the United States, Argentine, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Cuba, France, Germany, Great Britain, Holland, Hungary, Ceylon, Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Sweden, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Sweden. These works are among the finest of famous galleries of the world can boast.

I have said nothing about the different State buildings, all of which are architectural gems, and some of them veritable palaces.

The "Pike" is of course famous. It has many attractions for the lovers of amusements. Among these attractions are "The Tyrolean Alps," an Irish Village, Under and over the Sea, in the

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

There is a free exhibition at the hotel every night. Dr. Hudson has a dancing floor in his orchard, and there are four or five colored boys carrying on the show. Pictures of many different kinds are shown on the canvas.

Misses Ida, Lizzie and Grace Herring, and their cousin, Alice Herring, of this place, spent a few days near Waynesboro recently.

Mr. George Neely filled Mr. Frank Moore's place last Thursday on the mail route and when he was near home the horse jumped to the side of the road and ran off. Neely held on to the reins and stopped the horse, but the buggy was broken somewhat, and Mr. Neely being dragged a short distance, was bruised considerably.

Miss Florence Carson, who was at Parkersburg with the family of H. Martin, has returned to her home in Fairfield.

Mrs. A. C. Musselman and daughter, Mrs. McClean, of Gettysburg, are visiting in this place.

Mr. John Pitzer, of this place, met with a painful accident. His team ran off and the wagon caught one of his legs, tearing the flesh from the leg, just above the ankle. He is getting along as well as could be expected.

Correction.—In the Fairfield Items of last week it was stated that "Roger Musselman, of Gettysburg, is visiting Mrs. Carl Reinhold, his daughter." It should have read: Mrs. Aaron Musselman, of Fairfield, is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Carl Reinhold, of Glen Rock.

ONION SETS.

How They Are Grown on a Large Scale For Market.

Growing onions sets on a commercial scale is a leading industry in many sections of the market garden region around Chicago.

The ground is prepared carefully in the spring as soon as it can be worked. It is thoroughly pulverized and the seed bed fined, so that there are no clods of any character.

ONION SET CRATES WITH FLAT ROOF.

Rows about eighteen inches apart. From eighty to a hundred pounds of seed per acre are used.

After seeding of course it is a big task to keep the onions free from weeds. A garden wheel hoe is used to clean out the spaces between the rows, but a large amount of hand weeding is also necessary.

The other plan is to pile the crates up in the field until the harvest season is over; then when the last onion set has been pulled the sets, still quite green, are run through the fanning mill, cleaned and sorted.

As a rule these large growers sell their sets to seed houses in different parts of the country.

When to Cut Corn For Fodder. Some years ago Professor Hunt of Pennsylvania made three cuttings of corn for fodder.

The fodder was then fed to milk cows. The results of this investigation show that the best and best food was secured when the fodder was cut Sept. 25.

Among late varieties of peas tested the Michigan experiment station finds that none surpasses Teddy Roosevelt, a relatively new variety resembling Telephone.

Women's Real Worries. McJigger-Tedd's a rather clever little book, "Don't Be a Chicken."

Don't Be Envious. The men or women who envy those who happen to be able to dress well and to enjoy the pleasures of life a little more than those who are compelled to work continually will be miserable all their days, for no matter how high they may get, they will find others still higher.

Seem on the Water. It has been observed that immediately preceding storms an unusual amount of scum appears on the surface of ponds, and in London-Nature a plausible explanation of this phenomenon attributes it to change in barometric pressure.

A Practical View. "He's nothing but a hypocrite. Isn't it disgusting for a man to use his religion as a cloak?"

Sav Himself. "Honest, now, Jones, did you see a burglar in your room when you called the police?"

Will ink not corrode pens if a bit of old iron (nails or tacks will do) is kept in the bottle.
