

"STICK TO IT, SONNY."

[Published by Request. Copied.]

"Rob, we are so busy today that I cannot give you time enough to go home to your dinner, but if you will wash and brush up nicely I'll take you over to Dale's to dine with me."

"Thank you, sir," said Rob to his employer, as he gave a hasty but delighted glance across the street at the splendid restaurant, while the visions of roast turkey and fried oysters floated before him. "Only beef-soup and bread and butter at home," he thought.

Suddenly a shadow passed over the boy's face, and the eager, happy look was gone.

"Come Rob, no time to lose," called Mr. Benson.

Rob came with hesitating step and troubled face. "I am much obliged to you for asking me, Mr. Benson, but I'd rather go without my dinner than get it where there is a bar-room."

"What do you mean?" was the stern query.

"I'm—I'm a temperance boy," said Rob, and although he spoke boldly and tried to feel brave, he was shaking in his worn-out boots.

"Well, I'm a temperance man, too, but what has that to do with the dinner? Can't a person eat in a restaurant without going to the bar?"

"Of course, sir," answered Rob; "but it don't seem right for temperance people to go into saloons to eat."

"You rascal!" exclaimed Mr. Benson. "You have the impudence to tell me this, when you know I go to Dale's every day for my dinner! You ought to be discharged on the spot, but as it is your first offense I will overlook it. Lock the door when you come out, and if you are not on hand in five minutes, you can fast till you get home. It is now exactly one o'clock." The angry gentleman went out very red in the face, and a minute later Rob saw the door of the restaurant close behind him.

He locked the door, and with a hurt, disappointed look in his eyes, crossed the street and gazed wistfully at the tempting display in the broad window. A big turkey, brown and partly roasted on his back in a China dish. Two handsome vases filled with flowers stood against the lace drapery that veiled the inner sash, and a few black bottles marked "champagne," "port," etc., leaned in the corners, as if tired of seeing Mr. Gobbler lie there in such grand state.

"Ah! it too aggravatin, for anything that fellers like us can't do nothin' but stare at these things when we want to be a chavin' of 'em," said a voice close to Rob, and a shabby old man with a pipe in his mouth stopped at the window.

"I can go in and get dinner if I will," said Rob, "I've been invited."

"Ha! ha! that's too good. Why don't you go?" laughed the old man derisively.

"Because mother taught me not to go into saloons even to eat," said Rob, expecting to be laughed at again.

"Stick to your mother's teaching, sonny, it's all right," was the earnest rejoinder. "Eatin' is such places got me to drinkin' ten years ago. First a glass of beer with a friend, then a little wine, and before I knew it I was a toper. If you don't want to get where I am, you jest stick to your mother's teachin'—stick to it sonny! and the poor forlorn old creature went his way.

"Rob meant to 'stick to it,' but just then the door swung open and a handsome old gentleman came out with silvery hair and beard, and a good, pleasant face. He was a good Catholic and went to the same church with Rob's mother, and a teacher in the Sunday-school.

"Well, I'm puzzled with this conundrum," said the boy. Grown-up-people, temperance men and church members, doing the same thing that a small fellow like me, (and not a very good one either) is told not to do. I'm sure it can't be very wrong for me just once, for I've got no money and he won't let me go home."

The big regulator in the watch makers' window was pointing its long, black minute-hand at five minutes past one.

"Time's up now, or never!" spoke Rob, right out, and crossing the tiled vestibule, he pushed open the door and stood within. For a moment the flash of costly mirrors and the glittering paraphernalia of the bar dazzled him, the savory odors of the appetizing food greeted his nostrils, and he felt hungry enough to eat the whole of Mr. Gobbler and his oyster pyramid—parsley, pickles and all. But there was that bar, and men drinking; what would his mother say? It was a hard thing for a hungry boy to do, but Rob did it. He turned his back on the brilliant, tempting scene and rushed into it, across to the office, almost running over the poor old tramp, who called out to him, "stick to it, sonny."

As soon as he got in he began to dust the furniture with great energy scolding himself furiously all the time. "Your a nice fellow, now ain't you Rob Kinney! Suppose you had done it, wouldn't you feel nice to go home to your mother to-night. Wouldn't you feel nice to think of it in Sunday school to-morrow. There's something out of joint, and there's somebody wrong, when people encourage and support the very thing they pretend to fight against, but I'm sure I've done right, and I'll stick to it."

He was making such a racket with the furniture that he did not know Mr. Benson had come in until he heard his voice.

"True enough, Rob; there is somebody wrong, and I am one of the somebody. I realized it when I saw your hungry face and saw the determined way in which you turned your back on that bar, and on your dinner, too. I had ordered mine, but did not wait to get it, so we will go at once to the temperance dining-rooms around the corner, where I shall dine hereafter."

That was a jolly dinner, and Rob felt so good natured after it, that he made a horrible ugly face at old Mr. Gobbler as he passed the restaurant window, and a black waiter, thinking it was meant for him, rushed out and slapped him across the face with the wet towel he had used for cleaning the glass, calling him an "impertinent snipe."

There was a little fuss which ended in a laugh, and when Rob got home that evening he entertained his mother finely with an account of his day's doings, and in the night woke his little brother by shouting in his sleep, "Stick to it, sonny; stick to it!"

Origin of Convicts' Stripes

"Did you ever stop to think about the origin of the stripes we use in our prisons?" said a man with an eye for the curious. "If you have not it will not take you long to figure the thing out if you happen to know anything about the Bible. The fact is that we get the idea from the old dispensation.

"For instance, in the laws and ordinances of Deuteronomy we find the following, which will give us the clue to the origin of stripes as a badge of infamy: 'If there be a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them, then they shall justify the righteous, and condemn the wicked. And it shall be, if the wicked man be worthy to be beaten, that the judge shall cause him to lie down and to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number. Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed; lest if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many stripes, then thy brother should seem vile unto thee.'

"Now instead of inflicting these physical stripes we put striped clothes on the men who offend. The law, or who may come into the judgment, that the judges may judge them, as it is put in the text. Of course, you could go much further back in history if you cared to."

A Power For Good

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are Dr. Williams' Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot, of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than a calomel, blue mass or any other pill I ever took and at the same time the effect was pleasant. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by T. SOME LEADING POINTS IN JUDGE PARKER'S LETTER.

Judge Alton B. Parker's letter formally accepting the Democratic nomination for the Presidency was made public on Monday. The following is a condensation of some of the leading points in his letter:

While the issues involved are numerous, some stand forth pre-eminent in the public mind. Among these are tariff reform, imperialism, economical administration and honesty in the public service.

If we would retain our liberties we cannot permit the arrogation of unconstitutional powers by the executive branch of our Government.

Tariff reform should be prudently and sagaciously undertaken, on scientific principles, to the end that there should not be an immediate revolution in existing conditions.

The people demand reform. Since the last Democratic administration the cost of living has grievously increased.

I am in hearty accord with the plank in our platform that favors doing for the Filipinos what we have already done for the Cubans, and I favor making the promise to them now.

The methods by which the Executive acquired the Panama canal route and rights are a source of regret to many. Under the laws of the United States the duty is imposed on the Executive to proceed with due diligence in the work of constructing the canal; that duty should be promptly performed.

In the face of the continuous decline in the record of American shipping during the last 43 years the promise of the Republican party to restore it is without encouragement.

If elected, I will revoke that order (the pension order of President Roosevelt declaring every veteran entitled to a pension at the age of 62). But I go further and say I will contribute my share toward the enactment of a law, to be passed by both houses of Congress and approved by the Executive, that will give an age pension without reference to disability to the surviving heroes of the Civil War as a just due to the people through their chosen representatives and not as largess distributed by the Chief Executive.

Official extravagance is official crime.

Shall we cling to the rule of the people or shall we embrace beneficent despotism.

Shall economy of administration be demanded or shall extravagance be encouraged?

Shall the wrongdoer be brought to bay by the people or must justice wait upon political obligatoriness?

Shall our Government stand for equal opportunity or for special privilege?

Shall it remain a government of law or become one of individual caprice?

Only Time Name Was Mentioned

Jim Webster was being tried for bribing a colored witness, Sam Johnson, to testify falsely.

"You say the defendant offered you $50 to testify in his behalf?"

"Yes, sah."

"Now repeat what he said, using his exact words."

"He said he would give me $50 if I—"

"He didn't speak in the third person, did he?"

"No, sah; he tuk good care dat dere were no third person round; dar was only two—as two."

"I know that, but he spoke to you in the first person, didn't he?"

"I was the first pusson myself."

"You don't understand me. When he was talking to you did he say 'I will pay you $50?'"

"No, sah; he didn't say nothin' 'bout you payin' me $50. Your name wasn't mentioned, 'cepting he told me of eber I got into a scrape you was the best lawyer in San Antonio to feel de judge and de jury—in fac' you was the best in town to cover up reskelety."

For a brief, breathless moment the trial was suspended.—Chicago Evening Post.

A HUMAN ROOT.

Tree Grew Over The Burial Place Of A Young Hunter

Stories of petrified bodies are common enough, but so far only two human bodies turned into wood have ever come to light, and one of them is hanging up in the laboratory of Dr. A. L. Metz, professor of chemistry in the medical department of Tulane University. The other is in Brown University, and is said to be the body of Roger Williams. Both of these curiosities were found at the root of a tree, having the exact shape of a human body, and were found in the attempt to examine a human body over the spot of whose burial a tree had grown.

The specimen in Dr. Metz's laboratory consists of a trunk, two legs, on one of which is part of a foot, and one arm. The outline is almost perfect, some of the details of the human body being outlined with remarkable precision. The specimen was sent to Dr. Metz by what he calls one of "his boys" in his usual method of referring to Tulane medical graduates. This particular "boy" is a graduate of the class of '96, and is now a practicing physician in Arkansas, where the human root, or carbonaceous human body, or whatever one might choose to call it, was found.

The body was found under circumstances exactly similar to those under which that of Roger Williams was found. A boy about 19 years old was found dead one day out in the woods, evidently killed by the discharge of a shotgun which he carried with him, in which was found an empty shell. He also carried other hunting paraphernalia, and everybody came to the conclusion that he was out hunting and had accidentally shot himself. He was a stranger in the place, and no one around seemed to know where he came from or who his people were. After waiting a while to see if anyone would come to claim him, and after search and advertising proved unavailing, a planter finally took charge of the body and buried it on his place, planting a tree over the spot for future identification.

Years later, when the sprout planted by the farmer had grown into a huge tree, the almost forgotten incident was recalled to the people of those parts by the appearance there of certain parties to whose ears the story had just come. They said that from what they had heard of the story they believed the boy to have been a relative of theirs, whose parents were still living, and who had been mourning him as dead ever since a fatal day when he left home on a hunting trip, a day that corresponded with the time of the finding of the body. They had come to that place to make further investigation, and upon hearing the story from some of the inhabitants who still remembered it were convinced that the body buried under the tree was that of the boy they were looking for. Permission was given to exhume the body.

Upon digging beneath the tree they found a carbonaceous outline of the box in which he was buried, and inside of this the carbonaceous outline of a human body. As in the case of the burial place of Roger Williams, though there was unquestionable proof that a body had been buried at the spot, some people living having been present at the burial, no bones, dust or other signs of a body were to be found, nothing but this human-shaped root that now hangs in the medical department at Tulane.

In discussing the matter with a reporter, Dr. Metz said:

"It is one of the prettiest demonstrations of the indestructibility of matter that I know of."

The Angel In His

Rev. Dogood—No man is so bad that there is not a little of the angel left him. Bobson—Yes, that's so. Remember Spilkins? Everybody thought he was about the worst man on earth. Why, his own mother wouldn't come to his funeral. Well, sir, I've been told a thousand times a month for the last five years that Spilkins was the only real saint that ever lived. Rev. Dogood—My goodness! Dobson—I married Spilkins' widow.

"I can't imagine how you can dislike work. To me it's real enjoyment," said the father to his lazy son.

"Yes, father," was the gutless response, "but I don't want to give myself up wholly to pleasure."

FIRST AMERICAN COINS.

Copper Half Cents Were Issued From The Mint In 1793

The treasury of the United States on May 6, 1903, redeemed two half-cent pieces, says the Gateway Magazine. This is the first time in the history of the country that any such coins have been presented for redemption. It is more than a century since the first half-cent piece was coined, and it is nearly 50 years since the government discontinued minting them.

Possibly not one person in a thousand now living in the United States ever saw a half-cent piece.

The last annual report of the director of mint, page 82, shows that 7,895,222 of these coins, representing $39,476.11, were issued. For almost half a century each annual report of the treasury department has included them among the "outstanding" obligations of the government.

The half-cent piece was the coin of the smallest denomination ever made by this country. It enjoys the distinction also of being the first coin issued and also the first whose denomination was discontinued. The United States mint was established in 1792, and copper half cents and cents were issued in 1793. Half the total number of half cents issued were coined previous to 1810, after which year their coinage, with few exceptions, was limited. None was coined for circulation from 1812 to 1824, nor from 1836 to 1848. Finally in 1857, their coinage, with that of the big copper cent, was discontinued. On account of their limited issue in the last years of their coinage they practically had disappeared from the channels of trade.

The needs of adopting the half cent as the lowest value computing factor for a coin were made in the early days of the republic. Colonial half cents and British farthings of the same commercial value were then in circulation, and many articles were priced and sold in half cents. With the progress of the nation value rose and the needs for a half cent disappeared, and their use following the first decade of the century was almost entirely confined to multiples.

TYPEWRITER IN GLASS CASE.

Effort Made To Suppress The Noise Of The Machine.

The noiseless typewriter is something the experts are now working on, and they hope to evolve machines that will do the work with a quarter of the noise.

"In this strenuous age," said a manufacturer of type writers, "everything that makes noise is tabooed in offices and other places where men and women use their brains more than their bodies. Every little sound causes irritation.

"It has been found that there is much complaint against the typewriter machine. Its clicking, the din of the busy keys, disturbs the heads of firms, even though they shut the doors to their private offices and sometimes even stuff cotton in the keyholes. Then, too, it interferes with conversations by telephone.

"In the stress of business this little annoyance caused by the typewriter adds just one more element to increase the fatigue incident to the day's work.

"We are experimenting with a machine that we think will fill the need for a noiseless typewriter. It is almost incased in rubber, and the sound is muffled by several ingenious devices.

"We now and then make machines to order for nervous customers, who have worked on ideas of their own for getting rid of the typewriter din.

We have made a few machines encased in glass, with levers protruding under the glass to move the carriage, adjust the paper, etc."

A Good Time To Stop.

When you have said what you intended to say, stop; when you have written what you intended to write, stop. A practice of this habit will render many after-dinner speakers tolerable and many literary persons readable. Verbosity is the ruin of much that might otherwise be endured patiently.—Schoolmaster.

Jovial on the Scaffold.

Sir Thomas More, who was beheaded in 1535, was famous for his wit. "He died," says the chronicler, "with an unconcern that in others would have appeared to be levery, but in him was nature." He jested on the scaffold, and he had been just as humorous during his imprisonment. With a pathetic touch which is never absent from the true humorist he closed all his windows when they took his books from him. "It is time to shut up shop," he said, "when the wares are all gone."

Electricity For Docks

An excellent illustration of how electricity in superseding steam in many quarters is found in a contract recently awarded by the Empire Shipbuilding Company, of Buffalo. This company has decided to use electric power to pump out its floating dry docks in the Erie basin. The motors to be constructed will work the pumps much faster than the steam engines formerly in use, it being estimated that the docks can be cleared in two and one-half hours time. To accomplish this a 35-horse power motor will be located on each of the two docks, and the electricity will be supplied by a cable laid along the bottom of the basin.

EVILS OF "GET THERE."

The Dangers That Lurk In Our Modern Hustling Methods.

If we may judge by its effects on those who obey its command, our slang motto, "Get there," is not an elevating or ennobling one. On the contrary, it is brutalizing. It appeals to the lower and not the higher instincts in man.

STICHOMETRY.

A Book Custom That Never Attained Any Very Extensive Usage

Stichometry, from the Greek stichos, a row, line or verse, and metron, a measure, is used in two senses. The first applies to the subject matter of Hebrew literature, whereby the rhythmic lines which constitute the parallelism of the poetical books are portioned off from one another; the second to an entirely artificial method of measuring the contents of each book by so many lines of fixed or average length.

The former is of great antiquity and may have been introduced by the sacred writers themselves. The latter is due to Euthalius of Alexandria, 458, who applied it to the Pauline epistles and later to the gospels.

St. Jerome professed to have founded his method upon a similar treatment of the text in existing manuscripts of Demosthenes and Cicero. His original arrangement is thought to be represented by the Codex Amalutinus at Florence and that of Euthalius in the Codex Claromontanus at Paris.

As this system left a large proportion of each page blank and as vellum was costly, stichometry never attained any very extensive usage.

GROUND PEARLS.

The Product of the Young of Certain Scale Insects

The large order of hemiptera includes what are known as scale insects (coccidae), some of which are very destructive to fruit trees, while others are the source of cochineal, and, perhaps, were the manna upon which the children of Israel fed in the wilderness.

The life history of these insects includes a motionless pupa stage, similar to the chrysalis of a moth or butterfly. Before passing into this dormant and helpless condition, the young of certain scale bugs make their way into the earth, and then a sticky fluid exudes from their bodies and quickly hardens into a protective coating, resembling plain or colored glass, and causes them to look something like beads, so that in some parts of the world they are known as "ground pearls."

The best known of these are dug out of the earth in the West Indies and strung into necklaces or other ornaments. Similar objects are prized and worn by the natives of other regions.

KEROSENE OIL.

It Is Paraffin In Great Britain and Refined Petroleum Elsewhere.

Petroleum (petra, rock; oleum, oil) is a liquid bitumen exuding from rocks. Paraffin (parum, little; affinis, akin), discovered by Reichenbach in 1830, in investigating the tar produced in the distillation of wood, is a colorless wax-like solid, which he named from its extraordinary chemical indifference, its "little affinity" with anything. He afterward isolated from the same material a liquid oil, which he called eupion, "very fat." For years both were regarded merely as "chemical" curiosities until it was realized that eupion forms the body of petroleum.

Pure paraffin resembles spermaceti and is odorless and tasteless. Paraffin oil is chiefly a mixture of fluid hydrocarbons, and as it approaches gas more closely than any other illuminating agent and is cheap it has come into general use. Illuminating oils manufactured from petroleum are sold in Great Britain as "paraffin oil" and in the United States as "kerosene" and on the continent as "refined petroleum."

Copperhead and Rattles.

The copperhead isn't a bad looking snake, as snakes go, but it has a mighty bad reputation. In fact, it is generally regarded as a mean sort of snake and is apparently without a friend or even an apologist. Although it won't chase you nor go out of its way to get a crack at you, it probably does more business per snake than does the rattler, the moccasin or any other of the venomous kind. It is said that where there is one there are always two copperheads, so when you smell green cucumbers look out, for that seems to be the only warning you will get of the presence of this reptile. The rattler is a little more polite, also more vicious, for after giving you timely warning it will stand its ground and fight like a good fellow, while the copperhead will run and hide.

Queens' Names on Oaks.

Many English queens have chosen oak trees in Windsor forest whereon their respective names, with the dates of their choice, have been commemorated by means of brass plates. In different parts of the forest, with seats around them, are oaks bearing the names of Queen Elizabeth, Queen Caroline, Queen Charlotte and Queen Victoria. "Herne's Oak," mentioned in the "Merry Wives of Windsor" as being in Windsor park, was destroyed by a gale on Aug. 31, 1863.

Heartbroken on account of not being able to see his mother before she died, and despondent over the loss of his position, John Funchun, a former railroad brakeman of Pittsburg, Pa., made an attempt to commit suicide by taking 120 grains of corrosive sublimate at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, near the corner of Baltimore street and Fremont avenue...

The Western patrol wagon was called and Funchun taken to the University Hospital, where it was found that his mouth and throat, as far as visible, were terribly burned. It was stated at the hospital that if Funchun's stomach and bowels were as badly burned by the corrosive drug he would probably die.

Dog Went Mad

A dog belonging to Mr. William Moser residing on Mr. I. S. Annan's farm, at Annandale, went mad last Saturday and was killed. The dog was shot Sept. 10 by the dog which was bitten by Mr. Joseph Hopp.

The body of a man, with his head and face mangled beyond recognition, was found along the roadside tracks near Eleron Tuesday. Some papers and a check were found on the man, the latter bearing the words "Lane Bros. & Co. 730."

Captain of Detectives Humphrey and Detective Peter Brennan are in Denver, Col., searching for Lee B. Mooney, who was indicted along with Roland B. Rigor for holding up and shooting Conductor Charles Baker, of the Lakeside "jerkwater."

Big Find of Honey

Henry Dertzbach, who noticed a swarm of bees about his third-story building back in Frederick, raised a few boards of the floor and got 140 pounds of honey. He says 12,000 bees have lived in the place.

Judge Parker, of New York, has received a compliment from the Oxford Distilling Company of Baltimore they having named after him their latest product—Parker Rye. This whiskey is absolutely pure, and is far superior to the average liquors. Their advertisement appears in another column.

Mr. William McDonald, of Washington bought 100 acres of land near Washington Grove, in Montgomery county, for $3,500, and will erect a handsome residence upon the property, to cost $5,000. He also bought 61 acres of wood land for $2,000.

CLOUD OF WITNESSES IN A NEGRO MURDER TRIAL

Frank T. Taylor, colored, is on trial in Frederick, charged with the murder of Edward Bowie, colored, at a cakewalk near Ridgeville, Frederick county. One hundred and six witnesses were summoned in the case, and about 50 of them will be examined.

Chief Judge McSherry, who seemed annoyed that the county should be put to so much expense, said: "It is physically impossible that each of these witnesses will testify to material facts in a case of this kind."

The witnesses are from Carroll, Howard, Montgomery and Frederick counties, consequently the expense of having them will be very great. On account of the large number of witnesses the court continued in session until 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and reconvened at 9 o'clock and held a night session. The case was concluded and given up to the jury yesterday morning.

HYDROPHOBIA AMONG CATTLE.

Mr. I. S. Annan Had Three Of His Cattle Killed. They Had Been Bitten By A Mad Dog

Mr. I. S. Annan, of this place, had three of his cattle killed this week as the result of hydrophobia. The rabies developed in one of his finest cows early on Monday morning. The cow frothed at the mouth, bellowed, pawed and would make an effort to get at any one going near to her. Mr. Annan had the cow killed at once. Later in the day a young heifer showed symptoms of being attacked in a similar manner as the cow which had been killed, although not in quite as violent a form, and later another cow was attacked in the same manner. Thinking that possibly the cattle were suffering from some other cause than hydrophobia, the State Veterinarian, Dr. G. Allen Jarman, of Baltimore, was sent for. Dr. Jarman arrived here on the 11 o'clock train yesterday, and after making an examination of the two cattle pronounced the disease to be rabies. Dr. Reigle, veterinarian of this place, is of the same opinion. Mr. Annan then ordered the cow and heifer to be killed. The cow and heifer had become quite thin and weak, not having ate any food or drank any water from the time the rabies developed. It is supposed that the cattle were bitten by a mad dog.

The cattle were worth about one hundred dollars.

CRIMINAL CASES HEARD.

Judge McSherry Passes Sentence On Two Prisoners.

In the Circuit Court at Frederick, Monday afternoon David T. Morris was found guilty of shooting Robert Wilkinson with intent to kill in a saloon at Barkittsville was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary.

Albert Lewis, colored, charged with attempting to kill Laura and Ellen Hall, by cutting their throats with a razor, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Judge McSherry paroled Harry and George Burck, Ernest W. Elmsrod, Clarence Jacobs, William Motter and Stephen Hahn, all having pleaded guilty of stealing brass from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The court said: "You are self-confessed thieves, but you were doubtless encouraged to steal because of the fact that people buy stolen goods even when they cannot help but know that they were stolen; therefore I will give you a chance to start life anew; if you fail to conduct yourselves properly and lead an honest life, you will be brought before this court and sentenced to the penitentiary, from which you will go out confirmed criminals and outcasts."

LEAVES THE METHODISTS

Rev. R. Johnson Campbell, for two years pastor of Washington Square Methodist Episcopal Church, Hagerstown, tendered his resignation as pastor at the quarterly conference presided over by Rev. Dr. W. L. McDowell, Baltimore, presiding elder of the Frederick district, and preached his farewell sermon Sunday night. His resignation, which was accepted with deep regret, came as a surprise, for he severed his connection with the Methodist denomination to enter the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

In his letter of resignation Rev. Mr. Campbell states that he reached his decision after much careful and prayerful consideration extending over a period of some years. He declined to discuss the matter. For the present he will assist Rev. Henry Evan Cotton, rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church in Hagerstown, and later expects to be assigned to a permanent charge. He was regarded as one of the ablest and most active of the younger members of the Baltimore Conference. He is a native of Canada, educated at Mount Allison University, New Brunswick, and entered the ministry at the age of 20. A year later he joined the Baltimore Conference.

Remember the dates and don't fail to be registered if you are entitled to vote at the coming election.

Dynamiting Fishpots

State Game Warden John W. Avirett has started a crusade against fishpots in the Potomac River between Fair-Paw and Hancock, where 8 or 10 of them are located. He left Cumberland on a canal boat Saturday, taking along 500 pounds of dynamite with which to blow out the fishpots, their maintenance being contrary to law. Charles W. Ferguson, an expert dynamiter, and Hanson Willison are accompanying Colonel Avirett. The party will be absent four or five days.

Telegraph Tower Burned

The telegraph tower at the East end of the Brinkley yards of the Baltimore and Ohio, caught fire on Saturday. An engine from the yards was summoned and apparently extinguished the flames. The fire broke out anew and burned down the office. The operator had taken out his instruments in the first fire, and at the second fire he was unable to summon help, having no communications.

Fire At Coaldate

Fire did $20,000 damage at Coaldate, on the Bedford Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, a few miles north of Cumberland. The Blair Building with contents, the dwelling of Watson Figard, two frame houses belonging to H. J. Fluke and several cars of the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad were destroyed. The family of Mr. Blair escaped in their night clothes.

GIRL'S MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

Believed To Have Drunk Poisonous Chemical By Mistake

A Harper's Ferry correspondent of the Hagerstown Mall writes that Susan Speaks, a domestic at a hunting and fishing club on the Potomac, met death in a peculiar manner.

"For some time the club has been missing some rare old wine and other fancy beverages," writes the correspondent, "and the members were at a loss to account for its disappearance. They made several attempts to detect the pilferer or discover the leaks, but all to no purpose, and some of the more strategic suggested setting a trap.

"The house is protected with chemical fire extinguishers, and it was decided to substitute the contents of one of these for some of the good liquor that took wings unto itself and flew no one knew whither. Not long after it was noticed that some of the chemical liquid was missing, and, incidentally, Susan Speaks the domestic.

"She lived somewhere in the mountains and no one knew where to locate her. It was given out that she was sick, but no one thought it was anything serious. She gradually grew worse, but stoutly refused to tell the attending physicians what caused her disorder, and, not knowing, the doctor was unable to do anything for her and the result was that Susan died the early part of last week and lies buried in an obscure graveyard amid the green hills of West Virginia, carrying the cause of her death with her.

"Since then, however, the facts in the case have made it look as if Susan's death was the direct cause of chemical poison which she took for wine and that sent her to an untimely grave."

THE DOGGIE'S LAMENT.

For The Chronicle Every dog must have his day. We've had ours and must pass away. Poor doggie! Little lad we thought that our dog days would be so short. We've never drained life's bitter cup. Death will o'ertake us while still a pup. And lay us down beneath the sod. As good a dog as ever trod. We've sought for happiness in vain. But found our pleasures mixed with pain. And when our joys give way to sadness, They say our howling is sign of madness. And shoot us doggies by mistake. Because we had the stomach ache. We'll die without a faint and lose no fees. One fierce struggle will leave our earthly woes.

GIRL HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

What came near being a fatal accident occurred Wednesday morning on Main street, Salisbury. Dr. L. S. Bell and Elmer Bradley were sitting in a carriage in front of Dr. Bell's residence. Mr. Bradley was holding a Winchester repeating shotgun in his hand, and was endeavoring to lock it, when the gun, which was loaded, went off.

The gun was pointed almost directly across the street, and the shot went into the brick wall about one foot from where Miss Alice Smith was at that moment. When the gun was fired Miss Smith was less than a yard from the place where the lead took effect. She was not struck, but for several minutes was prostrated from nervous fright. Dr. F. M. Slemmons was summoned, and the young lady was taken home in a carriage.

Democrats Couldn't Find A Candidate For Congress In The Sixth District

After a vain effort to nominate a candidate to oppose Col. George A. Pearre, the Democratic Congressional Convention, which met in Rockville Wednesday afternoon, adjourned to meet again next Wednesday in Hagerstown. The convention stood ready to name any one of several gentlemen, but no one of them would allow the use of his name, and the adjournment was taken to enable other gentlemen whose names were suggested to be consulted.

Before the convention met DeWarren H. Reynolds, of Cumberland, was a strong favorite among the delegates. But upon his arrival he put a quietus upon the boom by declining in positive language to allow the use of his name in the connection mentioned. Bowie F. Waters, of the Rockville bar, was also considered, and the nomination was offered him, and his friends insisted that he should accept, but he declined. The names of George A. Pearre, of Frederick, a cousin of Col. George A. Pearre, the Republican candidate, and of Christian F. Kenneweg, of Cumberland, and one or two others were also considered, but it was not known whether they would accept or not, and the convention, as stated, adjourned.

Owing to the late arrival of the delegations from Allegany and Garrett counties, the convention was not called to order until 3 o'clock. Mr. Bowie F. Waters was elected chairman. He cautioned the convention to make a wise selection of a candidate and expressed belief that, with a good nominee, Democratic chances in the district are by no means hopeless.

Committees on credentials and resolutions were appointed, and while they were out Col. William Kilgour was invited to address the gathering. He spoke for half an hour, and his remarks were frequently interrupted with applause. He predicted a sweeping Democratic victory in the State and declared that Montgomery would give 1,000 Democratic majority.

A committee on nominations was then appointed, with the following members: Daniel J. Moran and Edward J. Decker, of Allegany county; Charles A. Rice and William J. Grove, of Frederick county; William R. Offutt and Robert G. Hilton, of Garrett county; Robert G. Hilton and Charles F. Brooke, of Montgomery county; Dr. Wade and L. R. Yountree, of Washington county. After deliberating for several hours this committee reported in favor of adjournment to Hagerstown, which was unanimously adopted.—Sun.

STRAYER'S BUSINESS COLLEGE BRANCHING OUT.

Another evidence that Baltimore business men were not discouraged by the fire, is to be found in the recent development of Strayer's Business College. The school was located in the burned district, and lost practically all of its equipment in the fire. Recent developments, however, seem to show that the school is more vigorous than ever before.

It has recently issued a complete series of commercial text-books, which have already been introduced in some of the best business colleges.

Branch schools have been opened in Philadelphia and Washington. Mr. H. P. Ellsworth, who was formerly principal of the Commercial Department of the Baltimore School, has charge of the Philadelphia school, while Mr. J. P. Harman formerly a teacher of Penmanship in the Baltimore school, is principal of the Washington school.

The Philadelphia school is located at the corner of 8th and Market Streets, and the Washington school at the corner of 11th and F Streets, N. W. Anyone who is familiar with these cities, will recognize the fact that the best possible locations have been secured for the branch schools, and anyone who visits them cannot fail to be impressed with the up-to-date equipment with which the schools are supplied.

Both schools report that they expect to have an enrollment of over 100 students to begin with on September first.

Another evidence of the progressiveness of the institution is to be found in the fact that Mr. Charles S. Catherman formerly a teacher in the school, has been engaged as Superintendent of Instruction for the Baltimore School. Mr. Catherman spent the whole of the past year in the careful study of the methods of the leading business colleges in the East, and he comes to his work at the Baltimore school ready to put in practice the best methods that are to be found anywhere.

Mr. C. A. Braniger, who for the past seven years has been at the head of the head of the Commercial Department of the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg, W. Va., and who is a penman of national reputation, has been selected as principal of the Commercial Department of the Baltimore school, and will begin his work there on September first.

The President, Mr. S. Strayer, and the Business Manager, Mr. T. W. Donoho, have been receiving congratulations from their many friends on the remarkable progress of the well known institution over which they preside.

Kindly take notice that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is of great benefit to those suffering from nasal catarrh who cannot inhale freely through the nose, but must treat themselves by spraying. Liquid Cream Balm differs in form, but not medicinally from the Cream Balm that has stood for years at the head of remedies for catarrh. It may be used in any nasal atomizer. The price, including a spraying tube, is 75 cts. Sold by druggists and mailed by Ely Brothers, 50 Warren Street, New York.

RAN INTO DYNAMITE.

Crash At North Branch Causes Terrible Wreck. Two Men Killed 8 Injured.

O. Walter Whitehair, of Brunswick, this county, was killed Monday afternoon by an explosion of Dynamite at North Branch, Allegany county. Whitehair was brakeman on a B. & O. freight train which ran into a wagon loaded with dynamite. Nelson Pike, of Martinsburg, W. Va. the engineer of the train, was also killed and eight persons were injured, including James Laing, who drove the dynamite wagon. Laing escaped with a cut on his leg and his ear-drum fractured.

The Baltimore and Ohio tower was wrecked, as were the residences of Adam Seibert, Charles Hamilton, J. Lewis Seibert, Stephen A. Bloss and John Coleman.

The commissary, office and stable of Mike Elmore, Washab subcontractor, and the office of the camp physician, four buildings in all were wrecked. The fronts were all torn out. The windows of the schoolhouse and residence of G. A. Zimmerty, on the mountain half mile away, were all broken out. Windows of several other houses were blown out by the violent concussion, not one in a radius of half a mile escaping damage.

The dynamite was being carried for Michael Elmore, the Washab construction work being in progress at the point of the explosion, where the Washab crosses the Baltimore and Ohio tracks, by an overhead bridge. The fifteen cases of dynamite on the wagon weighed 750 pounds. The powder house is some distance south of the Baltimore & Ohio tracks, which must be crossed to reach the Washab work.

James Laing was driving across the track with the load when he saw the train coming. He became terrified and stopped on the track, according to eye-witnesses in the tower, and then he suddenly deserted the team and ran. The train struck the tail-end of the wagon, which had but three feet to clear the track; but the engine, No. 2043, advanced some feet before the explosion occurred. Grant Hamilton, who with James Ashkettle, was in the tower with his brother, said he knew what was coming, knowing that the wagon was loaded with dynamite. He dropped down, and the tower caved in on the three men. He saw the train strike the wagon. He says that if Laing had kept on with the wagon the accident would not have occurred, as he had plenty of time to clear the track. The escape of the three men in the riddled tower, the center of the explosion, as it is right on the crossing was miraculous. They are peppered with cuts from glass and splinters and could hardly be recognized, so much are they maimed.

The engine was stripped of its trimmings and steel sheating and was turned over at right angles to the track, a total wreck, while seven freight cars following, loaded with high grade merchandise, were badly broken, the foremost cars being destroyed. The track was torn and twisted in all directions. It was given a serpentine shape and heavy steel rails were broken in two like pipestems. The concussion was terrific. An unusual incident was the breaking of wires in the two halfways between telegraph poles. These wires hung slack and were not hit by any object, the concussion simply snapping them.

The most marvelous thing of all was the escape of James Laing, the driver of the team, and the horses. Laing was some feet away in a ditch when the engine struck the wagon. He was down low and the force of the explosion passed over him. When he revived he found himself against a telegraph pole. He was able to talk and will be all right in a day or two. The front running gear of the wagon was not hurt.

Brakeman Whitehair, who was on the front of the train, was killed almost instantly. It required the strength of four or five men to get Engineer Pike away from the throttle. He laid on top of the overturned boiler buried in steam and his hands having a deathlike clutch on the throttle. He was also pinioned by broken iron.

It was marvelous that more were not injured, considering the large number of persons living and working in the immediate vicinity. The ground shook as if by an earthquake when the explosion occurred, and the noise was most deafening. It is thought that Laing's eardrum was torn by the concussion solely.

Farmer's Team Stolen.

A thief stole a team valued at $200 from Daniel Cordell, a farmer living along the Marsh turnpike, several miles from Hagerstown, and succeeded in getting away with it. Mr. Cordell returned home late Monday night and put the team in the barn. The thief drove in the direction of the Pennsylvania line, and two officers started in pursuit of him in a few hours.

The injury to Postmaster Charles Hamilton by the dynamite explosion at North Branch has caused the postoffice to be closed, there being no one to look after the work.

Letter To J. D. Caldwell

Dear Sir: Three gallons saved is $12 to $15 earned.

Mr Hanford Platt of Bridgeport, Conn, ordered 15 gallons Devco to paint his house, and returned 3 gallons. His painter said it would take 15; a lead-and-oil painter.

Hubbell & Wade Co sold it. They say everybody has the same experience there.

The reason is, of course; they are used to poor paint. What is poor paint? Anything not Devco: some worse than others. Besides, paints wear about as they cover. Double the $12 to $15. Yours truly, F W DEVOE & CO

GRAND JURY REPORT.

Was In Session 19 Days And Found 101 Indictments.

The Frederick County Grand Jury finished its work on Monday afternoon and submitted its report to the Court. The report in part is as follows: "We have been in session for 19 days, an unusually long time, but from the great number of cases brought before us and the large number of witnesses examined even though working seven hours daily, it will be seen that an earlier adjournment would have been impossible.

"The total number of cases upon which we heard evidence were as follows: Assault with intent to murder, 7; gaming tables, 11; carrying concealed weapons, 5; cruelty to animals, 1; bastardy, 5; murder, 1; selling liquor without license 9; permitting females to drink on the premises, 6; selling liquor on Sunday, 5; selling liquor to minors, 7; selling cocaine unlawfully, 2; assault and battery 10; larceny, 11; attempt to burn stable, 1; burning stable, 1; receiving stolen goods, 4; bigamy, 2; selling liquor on election day, 1; robbery, 1; adultery, 2; keeping bawdy houses, 3; forgery, 1; attempt to break in storehouse, 1; statutory breaking and larceny, 2; cases dismissed, 62. We examined in all 542 witnesses. We visited the jail and found 3 prisoners for corporation offenses and for State offenses 11. We found the jail kept in excellent condition and every possible consideration shown by the sheriff for the inmates. We would recommend one flush closet and some flooring in the bath room. There are, however, a number of matters to which we desire to call your attention. First, we deplore the fact that the business of the grand jury should be hampered by the examination of so many witnesses on account of trivial offenses, which in our judgment should never come before the grand jury. It is simply a useless waste of the taxpayer's money, and we believe some remedial legislation should be enacted along these lines, so that the time of the grand jury should not be so uselessly employed in considering these petty and oftentimes trumped up cases, in some instances possibly manufactured on some flimsy excuse, in order that a few designing persons may be summoned before the grand jury for the purpose of receiving the per diem.

"Second. The most appalling evil that has come to the attention of the grand jury is the cocaine habit and the open and flagrant violation of the law on this subject. This evil we find so far as it has come to our attention exists largely in Frederick city, and the extent to which this drug is used as a "dope" or a substitute for drink, is indeed most alarming. Your Honorable court directed us in your charge to make searching investigation regarding this evil. Your observation that it was more dangerous in its evil effect than the use of alcohol, is, indeed, true to an exceedingly great degree.

"There is another matter of grave importance that we desire to direct attention, and that is the reckless manner in which automobiles are run over the public highways, the owners or occupants of same showing an utter disregard of travelers with horses and vehicles. The people of the county have rights that should be respected by those who run automobiles, and the law should be so framed as to require them to use the same care and precaution as is required of the owners of traction engines; for in our judgment more accidents occur from reckless driving of automobiles than the running of traction engines over the roads of the county.

"We wish to call attention to the lax methods in which traders' licenses are issued by the clerk of the court, growing out of a custom which, we are informed, has prevailed for many years. It seems to be the custom of a merchant after taking out his license in the first instance, to simply send his check to the clerk the next succeeding year for his license, and it is thereupon issued. The State no doubt is deprived of much revenue by this means and we would recommend that no trader's license be issued by the clerk unless an affidavit be made every year to the amount of stock in trade carried by each merchant."

What's in a Name

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicgo, discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for Piles. For blind, bleeding, itching and protruding Piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases, DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by T. E. Zimmerman, Druggist.

Postoffice Re-established.

The postoffices at Johnsville and Petersville, this county, have been re-established, and it is said that this is likely but the beginning of the re-establishment of most of the larger offices discontinued on the introduction of Rural Free Delivery.

Norman Baynard, the 11-year-old son of Wesley Baynard, colored, near Concord, Caroline county, who on Wednesday last shot and killed his sister, aged six years had a hearing before Justice Trice Saturday. He claimed that the shooting was accidental, but was committed to jail without bail to await the action of the grand jury.

DIED.

OHLER.—On Sept. 24, 1904, at the home of his parents in this District, Helen May, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Ohler, aged 1 month and 13 days. The interment was made in the Tom's Creek M. E. Cemetery.

"JOKE" ON POLICE COST $42.50

That jokes played upon the police are rather expensive was demonstrated Tuesday morning at the Baltimore Northeastern Police Station, when Edward Kennedy, 19 years old, of 1620 Hillman street, and William McCabe, 20 years old, of 921 Valley street, were each fined $20 and costs by Justice Kepingler on the charge of being disorderly. Both paid the fines.

The youths thought it would be exceedingly funny to joke the police, and on Sunday night they called up the Northeastern Police Station and reported that Mr. Michael Buckley, of 807 East Chase street, had committed suicide by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid. The ambulance was immediately sent to the house and the officers found Mr. Buckley very much alive and apparently in robust health. In the meantime the youths had sent the same messages to several undertakers, and a physician had been summoned, and when the doctor appeared Mr. Buckley almost collapsed.

The police then decided to find the perpetrators of the atrocious joke, and the two youths were arrested by Patrolmen Fanning and Spangenberg. They confessed to the police, but said that they had been requested by a friend to notify the police of Mr. Buckley's death.

LIES THE MAPS TELL

NOT ABOUT LOCATION, BUT IN THE MATTER OF NAMES.

For instance, Greenland isn't green by any means, nor is the Black Sea black.

In few places will you find more healthy, robust lies to the square inch than an average map.

Begin up north and take Greenland. Was there ever a more flagrant imposture than the name of this country?

"It is high and rocky and barren. It is covered with eternal snow and glaciers. July is the only month in which there is no snow."

How did it get called green? Well, by an unscrupulous falsehood on the part of a tenth century reprobate called Eric the Red of Iceland.

He cut back to Iceland and "boomed" it for all he was worth.

But there are plenty of equally gross impostures. Take the Black sea, for instance. Why black? Who said it was black? It is no more black than it is pink or purple.

The Cape of Good Hope! Good Hope, indeed! Ask anybody who has been round that promontory what they think of it.

Why the Dead sea? The locality may be as dead as a doornail, but the sea itself is pretty lively.

Why English channel? It's no more English than it's French. The French themselves don't call it English at all, but simply "La Manche."

Then was ever a more absurd name given to that bit of water which separates England from Holland, called the German ocean?

There's nothing German about it and never has been. Dutch, Belgian or British, if you like, but not German. Then why ocean? It is not an ocean at all.

North sea, too, is absurd. Why north? It is not north of anything in particular. It is east of Britain, west of Iceland, Belgium and Denmark and south of Norway and Sweden.

There are some islands in the Pacific—why Pacific, by the way? Where does the name come in on that desolate, typhoony, billowy, icy waste and derness called the Friendly islands?

Look at the encyclopedia's version of their friendliness: "They are volcanic, and earthquakes are frequent. Islands are frequently upheaved. Hurricanes are constant."

The sole reason the islands were called Friendly is because when Captain Cook visited them he found the natives had not got any arms.

For thirty years they endured "a perilous struggle with the savage paganism of the inhabitants."

I could call your attention to dozens more of cases of monstrous mendacity on the part of the map. But the editor has just taken away my atlas.—Pearson's Weekly.

FARM & GARDEN

THE TURKEY INDUSTRY.

An Active Market Demand and Possibilities of Good Profits.

Washington.—In view of an increasing popular interest in the production of turkeys for market a paper has been prepared by Mr. T. E. McGrew, an experienced judge and breeder, and published as farmers' bulletin No. 200.

Throughout the country the attention of turkey growers has been called to the successful production of market turkeys in the state of Rhode Island. Unquestionably some of the best market turkeys produced in the world have been sent out of Rhode Island.

The market statistics show that there has been an active demand for turkeys for many years past. The records of the winter of 1903-04 perhaps show the highest prices that have ever been paid for the turkey crop.

Rhode Island turkeys, sold at retail in the markets of New York city and Boston during the Thanksgiving and holiday weeks of last winter for as high as 38 and 40 cents a pound.

There is no other kind of live stock, according to Mr. McGrew, that will return so large a profit to the successful producer as will poultry, and no kind of poultry is more profitable than turkeys when properly handled.

BUFF TURKEY HENS.

are next. None is more desirable for all purposes. Some growers claim that the Narragansets will reach market size and condition in less time than the bronze.

The buff turkey is not generally grown in this country, but in some localities it is highly valued for quick growth and attractive appearance when dressed.

Early Sown Turnips. Early sown turnips, especially Swedes, are very apt to grow tough and stringy. The usual cause is a deficiency of phosphoric acid.

Foultry on the Farm. The farmer who does not keep poultry not only loses an opportunity to add measurably to his income, but he fails to avail himself of one of the most important privileges that naturally belong to the tiller of the soil.

A Hearty Farewell. The old friends had enjoyed their three days together in spite of the fact that tact was not a conspicuous quality of either of them.

"You have quite a pretty place here, John," said the guest as he took a final look about him on the morning of his departure.

"Oh, that's because the trees are so young," said the host comfortably. "I hope they'll have grown to a good size before you come again."

"And they shook hands with mutual affection and good will."

THE AGING PROCESS.

A Medical Suggestion as to How It May Be Arrested.

To drink the waters of the fountain of youth is still, in the opinion of some, within the range of possibility.

A recent writer observes that man began in a gelatinous condition and ends in an osseous or bony one. He is soft in infancy; he is hard in old age.

Development of the ossific character takes place. The arteries become thickened with calcareous matter, and there is interference with circulation, upon which nutrition depends.

The whole change from youth to old age is one of steady accumulation of calcareous deposits in the system.

Entire blockade of the functions of the body is a mere matter of time, and the refuse matter deposited by the blood through the system stops the delicate machinery we call life.

In early life they are thrown off; in age they are not. Almost everything we eat contains these elements for destroying life.

Barthy salts abound in the cereals, and bread itself, mistakenly called "the staff of life," is one of the most calcareous of edibles.

Nitrogenous food also contains these elements; hence a diet made up of fruit is best for people advanced in years.

The daily use of distilled water is, after middle life, one of the most important means of preventing secretions and de-arrangements of health.

Distilled phosphoric acid is one of the most powerful influences known to science for shielding the human system from the inconvenience of old age.

Use it daily with distilled water and so retard the approach of senility. To retain perpetual youth, avoid all foods rich in the earth's salts, use much fruit, especially juicy, uncooked apples, and take daily two or three tumblerfuls of distilled water with about fifteen drops of diluted phosphoric acid in each glass full.

Thus will your days be longer in the land.—Medical Age.

HEALTH. "I don't think we could keep house without Theford's Black-Draught. We have used it in the family for over two years with the best of results."

Because this great medicine relieves stomach pains, frees the constipated bowels and invigorates the torpid liver and weakened kidneys.

No DOCTOR is necessary in the home where Theford's Black-Draught is kept.
