LATE ONION SOWING.

Harvesting the Corn-Cutting and Prize Taker and Portugal Seed For August and September

To a question asked whether one could sow Prize Taker onion seed in August, store the plants in a cellar that does not freeze and reset them in spring or whether if left out in the the silage cutter is large and the work ground during winter they would live is pushed with a good force of men | to make onions that year, T. An Experiment In Progress. I am just preparing a spot of well protected ground in the same fashion as southern tobacco growers prepare their plant beds-namely, by selecting some new, or virgin, soil, piling on it a lot of brush and rubbish and burning it over, then plowing it, applying some old compost or yard scrapings freely, replowing and fitting it up unitil a perfect seed bed is formed-and in this 1 propose to sow Prize Taker seed thickly in narrow rows, using perhaps five pounds of seed on as many square rods of ground. If the plants live through the winter I shall have a nice lot of plants for setting out in early spring, part of them to make fall bulbs and another portion, which are to be set very thickly in regular rows (the plants perhaps less than an inch apart), to be used for green, or bunch, onions when the White Portugal onions from seed sowed in August are gone. We have much to gain and but little to lose by trying this plan. It will work all right in some seasons at least.

range between themselves the method by which the former is to be remunerated, and through this financial operation Japan might have a very considerable portion of her claim for the "expenses of the war" liquidated. The railroad is ostensibly the property of the Russo-Chinese bank, although built by government money advanced through the bank, and since its completion operated, managed and policed by the Russian government. Japan cannot take the railroad herself. To place herself in Russia's shoes regarding the railroad would be militarily to control the destinies of the three provinces of Manchuria which she has promised to return to China. But Japan is entitled to reimbursement for the expense to which she has been put in restoring the railroad below the present position of Linevitch's army, rebuilding the bridges and narrowing the gauge. If China could not find the money some other power or powers might do so, and the road would become hypothecated to the powers which advanced the money, as other Chinese roads are to those which advanced the money for their construction. Today in the ordinary course of proceedings the first great stumbling block to a treaty of peace should be reached, as after Port Arthur and the leases of Liao Tung, which are included in article four, and which Mr. -Witte is undoubtedly prepared, with slight modifications, to accept, comes article five-the cession of Sakhalin. But it is by no means certain that when this obstacle is reached it will not be postponed until all the articles upon which agreement is easy or possible are disposed of. If this course ils followed, and the Associated Press has high authority for the opinion that it will be, it will indicate a disposition to put off the real struggle to the very last, and the longer the conference endures the brighter the prospects of a treaty are likely to become. "Every day they sit," said a very high authority, "increases the chances for peace." The language of the three articles adopted will form practically the text of the "treaty of Washington" if one is signed, subject, of course, to a final revision. Each side has agreed to the articles and they are included in the protocols of each day's session which are officially signed by the plenipotentiaries the next morning.

In addition to the minutes kept by each side, there is an abbrevited record of the discussions giving the arguments made on each side of every point, which are daily attested, so that when the conference is ended the record of the proceedings will be complete. Of course the agreement article by article does not bind either Russia or apan until a final agreement is reached and the treaty is signed.

It is, however, significant that Mr. Sato, while specifically stating that he ing scale gives all miners of the anbound itself to the articles agreed to.

In the various parts of the arid region which shelters so great a portion of our barbarian population is found a tree remarkable for certain properties. The botanical name of this plant is Prosopis juliflora. It is popularly known as the algaroba, or honey mesquite. This tree thrives with little moisture, grows, with thick, bushy top, to a height of twenty to forty feet, affords shelter from the wind and sun, and, best of all in the sight of the hungry natives, it yields abundant crops of fruit known as mesquite beans. The slim green pods hang in clusters from the tips of the boughs, often bending the branches nearly to breaking, so abundant do they grow. The pods, which are six or seven inches long, are pulpy, juicy, fairly palatable and nourishing.

The screw bean is another food product, less plentiful, but even more highly prized because of its sugary qualities. This fruit is often eaten as plucked from the tree. It ripens the latter part of June or in July, a little later than the mesquite bean.

In some of the mountain sections the Prunus andersonii, or chamish, is found in abundance. The pits of this fruit are pounded in mortars, and the meal is then eaten. There are many varieties of the cactus fruit which are utilized for food, the fruit of the Opuntia tuna or prickly pear being a notable example

"HERBES O' VERTUE."

Rosemary and Rue Held High Estate Among the Ancients.

Of high rank among the ancient and mediaeval "herbes o' vertue" was rue. This plant, "the herb of grace," probably gained its reputation for breaking the spells of witchcraft, because it was so often employed for sprinkling holy water. Spenser includes this herb in the ingredients of a charm by thoughts when she fell in love with the image of Sir Artegal in a magic mirror. Another favorite amulet was vervain, the holy herb, which was much used in ancient religious rites and subsequently for decorating the altars of churches. Roman heralds always crowned their heads with vervain when they either declared war or made a truce.

Rosemary was valued for its powers of strengthening a weak memory; hence it became the symbol of remembrance. Rosemary was also used as a love charm, the reason being "both Venus, the love goddess, and rosemary, or sea dew, were offspring of the sea, and therefore as love was beauty's son rosemary was love's nearest relative." Anne of Cleves wore sprays of rosemary at her marriage with Henry VIII., as this flower was then used by brides instead of orange blossoms, and wedding guests wore it instead of white favors. Rosemary was also closely associated with funerals, the mourners each carrying a spray to drop into the grave at the conclusion of the service. Powdered rosemary applied to the French Art. There must be more vitality in French art as a whole than you would guess from a visit to the salons. Nay, there is. I do not say that it is healthy anywhere. The great days are gone, but still, out of doors-in posters, in illustrations for the journals, in bijouterie, in the ornamentation of shops, even in the pictures in railway termini-there are still signs that the plastic arts have a vitality in France, more vitality than with us. It is often vulgar enough, but at least it is bold .--London Outlook.

The stage manager appeared and explained. "There is one gentleman," he said, "who is absent through illness." the red man. There are in the southwest, particularly in California, bodies of bitter, poisonous waters known as boracie lakes. Owen's lake, twenty miles long, is of this class. It is a veritable Dead sea, and, like the sea of that name and its counterpart, the Great Salt lake of Utah, its heavy, brackish waters do not support fish or marine life.

At certain seasons of the year the waters of these boracic lakes abound in white grubs known to the Indians of that region as "koochabee."
