A fifth man jumped from a second-story window, breaking a leg, but escaped the fate of the others. The fire originated in a blacksmith shop adjoining the building in which the men were

At last one of them struck the other in such a manner that every one thought he had killed him, but the stroke was given song of triumph. Then other Thracians carried off the man as if he had been dead, though indeed he was not hurt. After this some Anians and Magnesians rose up and danced for their arms what they called the carpaean dance, the manner of which is as follows: One of them, having laid down his arms, sows and drives a yoke of oxen, look ing often behind him, as if he were afraid. Then a robber approaches, whom the other perceiving, he catches up his arms and, advancing, fights with him in defense of his oxen. All this these men performed in time to the flute. At last the robber binds the plowman and carries him off with the oxen. Sometimes the plowman overcomes the robber and, fastening himto the oxen, ties his hands behind hims

"After this Mysus entered with a buckler in each hand and danced som: times as if he had been engaged with two adversaries, then used his bucklers as if engaged with only one. Sometimes he whirled round, then threw himself head foremost and fell on his feet without parting with his bucklers. This made a fine sight. Last of all lic danced the Persian dance; striking his bucklers against each other and indancing fell on his knees, then sprung up again, and in all this he kept time to the flute. He was succeeded by some Mantineans and other Arcadians; who, being dressed in the handsomest armor they could provide, rose up and advanced in time to a flute that played a martial air. They sung the paean and danced in the same manner that is practiced in solemn processions. "On this one of the Arcadians led forth a woman dancer, dressed handsomely and carrying a light buckler. She danced the Pyrrhic dance with great ability, on which there was great applause. That caused the Paphlagoians who were present to ask whether the woman also charged with the troops. Then the Greeks said that it was the women who drove King Artaxerxes out of the camp. This was

Removed By President For Violating Civil Service Law.

Washington, Nov. 28. - President Roosevelt removed from office William S. Leib, assistant United States treasurer at Philadelphia, for "constant and persistent violation of the civil service law while in office." The removal was announced in a formal statement issued at the White House by the president.

After careful consideration of all the facts developed by the inquiry, the president decided to remove Leib from office, it being shown, according to the statement, that there was constant and persistent effort on Mr. Leib's part to evade the provisions of the civil service law, to hamper its workings as far as possible, and to obstruct in every way the action of the commission." The president declared that the evidence showed fraud in the civil service examinations, the fraud in one instance implicating Leib's sisaer. After reviewing the case pretty fully, the president concludes:

"Under these circumstances of persistence in wrongdoing on your part it seems to me that there is no alternative but to remove you from office. You are accordingly hereby removed from the position of assistant treasurer of the United States."

Incendiary Fire.

The dwelling of Mrs. William Kendie, aged 80 years, who lived alone near the top of South Mountain, near Smithburg, Washington county, was set on fire Sunday night, and she had a narrow escape from being burned to death. Whatever the motives of the incendiaries, it is thought they did not wish the old lady to perish, for after the fire had made considerable headway stones were thrown through the window to awaken the sleeping woman. Neighbors, seeing the conflagration and hearing the noise made by breaking window glass, hurried to the scene and were just in time to rescue the semi-conscious old woman, whom they carried out of the house more dead than alive. The flames had reached her bedroom, which was filled with thick smoke. She was removed to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lincoln Fox, near Foxville. The house was destroyed. Only a few pieces of furniture were saved. The building was set on fire from the out side. Robbery, it is thought, was not the motive of the firebugs. So far as is known Mrs. Kendie had no enemies.

Bowl after bowl of water is poured over the bedraggled pair, strained through the cocoanut fronds and the cloth. The milk of the young cocoanut is emptied after it. The cocoanut shoots and cloth are soaked and dripping. Two women continue to drench the couple, but for the sheer comedy enacted by the rest I had not been prepared, though I had expected something from seeing my friend the rajah doff his official European khaki for something less elaborate than his silks of yesterday. I was soon to learn. The excited women having finished with the victims in chief, turned their attention to the audience and vented their feelings by dousing every one within reach, the rajah and myself included. We could only retort with ineffectual handfuls, while they were of practiced arm and equipped with basins. However, fortune favored us. Often bamboo squirts, salted or peppered water or rice water are employed. The women lead the bride away for a fresh toilet. The groom dons his silks again and waits, no short time, in the passage till his spouse shall have had her toilet completed to the satisfaction of the matrons. Once more the bridegroom is ushered inside, and he and his bride are seated side by side, as on the previous evening. The nasi dami or rice of accord is brought in and placed before them. They just taste it, the circle of women indulging the while in piquant reflections on the married state and the newly married couple in particular. An old latah woman is galvanized into grotesque activity, clapping her hands and chuckling in a gruff voice. The audience shriek with have his own way as yours does. The wall is made of large field rocks, the curt reply, upon which the emperor three feet thick at the bottom and is said to have exclaimed, "If I were about fifteen inches at the top. The stones are laid in lime and cement, both sides smooth and tight from the bottom up. The wall is thirty feet turned homeward; I also, to don native ugly habit of drilling," writes an Engthe cellar slanting one foot in thirty. In the front end of the wall I left a doorway five feet wide. For sills in the building I took three pieces 8 by 8 inches by 30 feet and three more 8 by 8 by 40 feet, The long sills extended beyond the wall ten feet on the front end, so that my wall is 30 by 30 feet, but the building is 30 by 40 feet, giving me a sorting room on the front end 10 by 30 feet.

The floor timbers are 2 by 8 inches, laid on top of the sills crosswise of the building and sixteen inches apart. These floor timbers extend sixteen inches over each side of the sills and form the eaves. A three inch plank is spiked on top of the floor timbers on each side of the building, and on top of this plank the rafters are placed. The floor is made of a course of one inch boards laid tight, and on top of this is one thickness of heavy tarred building paper, over which is laid a tight floor of two inch plank. In this floor are six scuttles, three on each side, that open into the bins below.

Storing Seed Potatoes.

We store our potatoes for seed in a cool cellar, built with hollow walls, so that it will stand two weeks at 10 degrees below zero without making us feel uneasy about their freezing. If the weather continues that cold too long, we cover with blankets. A potato does not have to freeze to spoil it for seed. If kept too near the freezing point too ong the vitality will be so weakened that it will fail to grow, and if it grows at all the stalk will be weak and puny and never amount to anything. We store in crates for the convenience of looking after them. In the spring, when in danger of sprouting, we jostle them around in a box with a slat bottom that holds a bushel and empty them back into the crate. This is done as often as necessary to keep the sprouts back. We can run 100 bushels through this sprouting process in a half day, says a Michigan correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer.
