Relative Economy of the Beef and

LOCOMOTIVE BLOWS UP Two Killed and Three Fatally Injured

In Accident On Lehigh Valley. Elmira, N. Y., Dec. 23.-The boiler of a locomotive drawing a south-bound Lehigh Valley freight train running between Van Etten and Sayre exploded at "Swamp Siding," one-half mile east of the village of Van Etten, killing Fireman Frank Morris and Leon Dennison and fatally injuring Engineer Fred Swarthout, Brakeman Henry McMann and Conductor Martin Gal-1 Ther, all of Sayre, Pa.

The explosion was witnessed by a large number of people, and the deafening roar was heard three miles away. The boiler was blown from the carriage of the engine and hurled over 100 feet down the track, where it continued to roll, end over end, tearing a deep hole on the Lehigh Valley tracks, crossing over to the Elmira, Cortland & Northern tracks, and then coming to rest across the Lehigh tracks. Prompt assistance was given to the Injured men, several of whom were thrown into the swamp, where they were found in 15 inches of water. They were taken to a caboose, which was run to Sayre, Pa. The men were horribly burned and mangled, and the clothing was torn almost completely from their bodies.

The young people (all aged 18 years) came from Arnold, their home, for a skate, but after getting on the ice they decided it was not strong must have had very large beds in Bible gestion there. The latter road, it seems, enough and started to return to shore, One of the boys fell and Miss Freund stumbled over him. The strain on the ice was too much, and the whole party went into the water, Miss Freund was carried under the ice, and her body was not recovered until four hours later. Southworth and Coughey, with the aid of people on shore, who threw planks to them, did everything in their power to save Miss Koeffler and succeeded in getting her through 15 feet of ice, which broke at almost every move, but when the young lady was finally carried to shore it was discovered that she was dead. The young ladies were highly connected in Arnold, and the whole party were high school pupils at that place.

CHOKED TO DEATH ON BIT OF

Mrs. Jennie Armstrong, aged 45 years, wife of Mr. James T. Armstrong, of the firm of Armstrong & Parker, bolt and iron manufacturers, 361 to 365 North street, Baltimore, die from strangulation from having a piece of meat lodge in her throat, at the boarding-bouse of Mrs. Charlotte Merriman, Baltimore, about 2.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

In the room with Mrs. Armstrong at the time, and an eyewitness to her seeonizing death, was her husband, who tried in vain to relieve her. Mrs. Armstrong was confined to her room, having felt the ill effects of an attack of indigestion a couple days ago; and only a few moments before swallowing the piece of beef which caused her death the meat had been carried to her room.

She started to eat while still in conversation with her husband. Mr. Armstrong was about to descend the stairs when he heard a gurgling noise. Turning around, he saw his wife throwing her arms and making motions to him. She tried to speak, but could not. Mr. Armstrong yelled to the floor below for assistance and pounded his wife on the back. Members of the household ran up the stairs to the room, while another ran to the office of Dr. J. M. Craighill, and the physician hurried to the scene. Mr Armstrong and those who ran to his assistance endeavored to get the piece of meat out the unfortunate woman's windpipe, but it was held fast.

Dr. Craighill, living but three doors away, arrived in the room where Mrs. Armstrong was struggling for her life just two minutes after she had swallowed the meat, and he worked earnestly to remove it from her throat. She expired, however, before the physician could give her any relief.

The fully developed insect somewhat resembles a small winged black ant. The grub is whitish, with white jaws. Its natural length is indicated by a line at the right in the second cut. E shows an antenna and F the jaw.

The effect of the grub in the wheat straw is variable. Sometimes the straw is distorted, sometimes bent; again, there will be no enlargement of the straw whatever, as there may be large galls or excrescences at the base of the sheath; again, the growth will not exceed three or four inches, with the straw galled or hardened at the base of the head. In some cases there is no outward indication of attack.

In thrashing the grain the hardened portions of the straw break up into pieces of from half an inch to an inch or more in length, many of which do not go over with the straw and chaff, but remain with the grain. The presence of these bits of broken straw in the grain is frequently the first evidence the farmer has seen of the presence of the pest in his fields. Wheat heads from the infested stems are fore-shortened, and the kernels thereby re-shortened, and the kernels thereby reduced in size and number. There are no known remedies. most serious ravages are observed on thin or impoverished soils, especially along the margins of the fields infested. Anything that tends to add vigor to the young growing grain will constitute a preventive measure. I did not catch a vampire at his work, though I saw hundreds of them, but the cattlemen all tell the same story. The vampire setbeast in the pasture at night and then, while slowly fanning its wings to and fro, cuts a circular piece of skin onequarter of an inch in diameter. The calf is badly weakened by the loss of blood, while a saddle horse so served is worthless until the wounds are entirely healed. But that is not the worst result of the bite. The region swarms with a pestiferous fly that soon after daylight finds the wound and lays eggs in it. A BOSTON LANDMARK

HISTORY OF A FAMOUS OLD ELM DESTROYED BY THE WIND.

This Celebrated Tree, Believed to Have Existed Before the Settlement of the City, Was Blown Down In the Great Storm of 1876.

In 1825 the first recorded measurement of the old elm showed its dimensions to be as follows: Height, 65 feet; circumference, 21 feet 8 inches at 2 feet 6 inches from the ground, and the extreme diameter of the branches was 86 feet. At this time it was said of the tree that "this pride of our Common is pronounced by judges to be as handsome in form as it is large in size tles somewhere on the back of the and venerable in age, and it may be worth the remark, notwithstanding all the buffeting it has received from storms and hurricanes for more than a century, its original beauty and symmetry have not been impaired, although it has at times lost many of its branches.'

it was found that it was considerably larger than in 1825, its height being figured at seventy-five feet. This showed that it was still growing in its extreme old age.

The first serious damage the tree received was in 1832, when the largest of its limbs was so rent asunder that three branches rested on the ground, but at much cost and labor they were replaced in their former positions and held together by iron rods and bolts.
