Keep Up Your Interest and Win The Chronicle Piano.

In a little over two months the name of the winner will be announced. The question is, will it be your name? The contest is very spirited and those who are working for this splendid Instrument are working very hard. Remember that there is no chance about it. The winner will be the one receiving the greatest number of votes, and there is no reason why you should not be that one. Begin today—determine that you will have this fine piano for a Christmas Gift—and then hustle for it.

THE WAY TO GET IT IS TO WRITE TO EVERY FRIEND YOU KNOW, ASKING FOR A YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION, AND TO CANVASS YOUR OWN NEIGHBORHOOD FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

A LITTLE TIME, A LITTLE EFFORT AND THE PIANO IS YOURS. TAKE THE TIME, MAKE THE EFFORT AND WIN THE PRIZE, YOU CAN DO IT.

A DEMOCRAT

OPENS UP ON THE REPUBLICAN PARTY AND EULOGIZES HIS OWN.

Senator Rayner Declares That For Honor And Integrity The Democrats Have Decidedly The Advantage.—She Stands Upon The Rock of The Constitution.

Senator Rayner, in an address delivered in Baltimore on Thursday night, Oct. 25, arraigned the Republican party with great power and convincing logic. "He," as the Baltimore Sun says, "riddled its principles and policies and scoffed at its promises, performances and claims." At the end of his speech the speaker said:

"Now, I want to say this in conclusion: I am not a partisan, but I profess to be a sort of political economist. I believe that so far as personal virtues are concerned the Republican party is about as good as the Democratic party, and the Democratic party is as good as the Republican party, and I believe that so far as personal defects and vices are concerned they are about equal to each other.

"But I believe that in public principle and in honor and integrity the Democratic party has the advantage, and I thought to hold it by every means within its power.

"It is claimed that the Democratic party is dead. Our Republican friends are conducting a post-mortem examination over her remains, and some of our brethren of good standing in the church are pronouncing eulogies and singing funeral hymns in memory of her departed virtues.

"But I have no such belief. The party may be asleep and may be in a trance, but I think I can detect the throbbing of her heart and the beating of her pulse.

"Please do not let us inter her in her sepulcher while there is a sign of life within her mortal frame, and at least do not let her relatives and companions gather around her couch and while they bewail her fate accelerate the progress of her malady.

"Let us discharge the quacks and empirics who are pouring into her veins their poisoned nostrums and bring her back to the school of her old physicians, who have carried her through many a critical period and whose prescription and remedies coming down to us through a century can never be improved upon by mountebanks and imposters.

Bruised And Wounded.

"There is not a vital organ of the Democratic party that is not just as intact as it was upon the day that she sprang from the virgin soil of the republic. She is being bruised and wounded, I will admit, but there is the balm of Gilead within her reach, and there is an elixir of youth that has invested her with the attribute of immortality.

"My friends, the Democratic party was not born to die. She stands upon the rock of the Constitution, and no siren voice can tempt her from her mooring and no agitator's hand can cut her adrift and send her out upon the wild sea of tumult and disorder.

"There she stands, the foe of all combinations of centralized wealth that are arrayed against the people, but the friend and handmaid of honest toil and enterprise. There and thus she will stand until all enduring time, and while around her breast the clouds are spread, eternal sunshine gathers on her head."

Time is only precious as we make it so. To do the wholesome, satisfying thing, without direct or indirect injury to others, is the privilege of every man.—J. W. Streeter.

A REPUBLICAN

DECLARES THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY HAS NO PRINCIPLES.

Secretary Bonaparte Denounces the Party and Tells a Baltimore Audience That Its Success Would be a Calamity.

At the immense meeting held last Friday in Baltimore, at which meeting both Secretary of War Taft and Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte spoke, Bonaparte in his introductory remarks, said in part:

"Two weeks from Tuesday we shall decide whether the next House of Representatives is to be Republican or Democratic. This no one can deny. Whatever else he may think, or say he thinks, will or will not be involved in the people's verdict.

"I say this because I believe it would be, in every sense of the word, a national calamity were the House of Representatives in the next Congress controlled by the Democratic party. For some, indeed for many individual Democrats, whether as citizens or as men, I entertain the very highest esteem; in truth, I have by far more friends among the Democrats than I have among the Republicans; but this is because these men are better than their party. They cling to its name because of its memories; because they hope—hope against reason and experience—that it may be once more a party with policy and with principles, a party worthy to include such men as them. In fact, the Democratic party, since I have been old enough to know it, has had no principles at all, and no policy except to get and keep office, no matter how.

"In this State it retained power for years against the people's will through shameless and systematic fraud at the polls; the only really distinctive Democratic principle in Maryland has been and is that everyone, or, at least, every ring Democrat, ought to cheat ad libitum at elections whenever and wherever he can do so and escape punishment. In our national politics it has been always ready to profess any doctrine, however inconsistent with its past, and to accept any candidate, however incongruous or distasteful, to gain votes; any thing to win has been its motto for 40 years, and it never has had enough conscience or enough honesty to learn even from repeated experience that a party ready to do and say anything to win can never win the respect and confidence of the American people.

Has Bad Record, He Says.

"And what it has been for two generations it is today. It has nominated Hearst for Governor of New York, just as 34 years ago it nominated Greeley for President of the United States, although it must be noted that Greeley was personally a respectable man. It tried a 'safe and safe' candidate in 1904 only because it had been beaten with one not called 'safe' or 'safe' in 1900 and four years previously, and as it was beaten even worse when it tried sanity and safety, it is apparently getting ready to try something yet more insane and yet more unsafe in 1908.

General Picquart, Minister of War of France, who took an active part in the Dreyfus trials as friend of that officer, has further shown his good sense by his attitude toward those officers in the French army who conspired to have him banished to the Sarah Desert. One of these men had occasion to enter the office of General Picquart and began to stammer out a statement on the subject. Picquart stopped him, saying: "I know only one thing and that is that you have been an excellent officer. You may be sure that I shall not forget that."

SOUSEVILLE SIFTINGS

BY McSWATT.

Miss Caddy Bum, after reading of the accident that befell Gruppy Sloats last week, has had her celluloid eye insured for $100.

On Halloween night some one broke into Diah Hunch's shack and split his wooden leg up for kindling. Mr. Hunch laid the blame on those in charge of Berkeley Brank's campaign and has gotten out 50 warrants.

Dory Jouse, who is employed to take the brass dog-license tags out of sausages at Ikey Knoekenschmizer's, was so badly bitten by a spitz-tom-cat yesterday morning that Dr. Rooze had to remove five ribs and inoculate him with paris green.

Bantz Shuckle, our local junk dealer, was caught removing springs from several spring chickens on the lunch counter down at the Tub and was sentenced to serve ten days in the coop.

The last time Bantz was up he was indicted for picking the feathers off of the cuckoo in the Court House clock.

While picking rubber balls from a large rubber plant in her garden, Miss Georgiana Whitpenny found the schedule of the Western Maryland Railroad which she immediately turned over to the proper authorities.

It is supposed that from now on the trains on this road, when on the track, will run on time.

Miss Spruce Dunk denies that she is engaged to Putt Haydock. The report arose from the fact that Putt was seen Saturday night treating Miss Dunk to a slice of prune nugget pie in front of the Post Office. It is said that there may be some words between Putt and Grouse Gimlock over the matter.

Time for a little excitement in the village.

A serious accident happened in the office of the Bugtown Bugle. Zed Scapple, the pencil pusher of that rusty rag lost his temper and struck Bute Featherdip with what he thought was the office towel. It proved however to have been a piece of sheet iron, and Bute in consequence, will be out of commission for several weeks.

Wish we had had a chance to be mixed up in that little pleasantry. The undertaker would have had to take the editors' measure.

Although he struck us in the left eye with a satchel full of billiard balls, we feel constrained to apologize to Major Souse for an error that crept into our columns.

The "copy" read: Miss Danzy Souse, the talented young belle of Souseville, has decided to exchange the beautiful holstein goat her father gave her, for a red automobile.

The article was set up as follows: Miss Danzy Souse, the talented young holstein goat of Souseville, has decided to exchange her beautiful redheaded father for the gift of an automobile.

We have fired the "devil" and are using Dr. Scrutt's liniment.

"No more spasms of goodness will make a right life, for we rise no higher than our habitual thinking."—M. W. R.

REAL ECONOMY

Is Not Stinginess and Parsimony.

True economy is not stinginess or meanness, says O. S. Marden in Success. It often means very large outlay, for it always has the larger end in view. True economy means the wisest expenditure of what we have, everything considered, looking at it from the broadest standpoint. It is not a good thing to save a nickel at the expenditure of twenty-five cents' worth of time.

Comparatively few people have a healthy view of what real saving, or economy, means. I have seen a lady spoil a pair of fine gloves trying to rescue a nickel from a mud puddle. Several people have been run over by street cars or teams in New York while trying to rescue a dropped package, a hat, an umbrella, or cane.

I know a young man who has lost many opportunities for advancement, and a large amount of business, by false economy in dress, and smallness regarding expenditures. He believes that a suit of clothes and a necktie should be worn until they are threadbare. He would never think of inviting a customer or a prospective customer to luncheon, or of offering to pay his car fare, (if he happened to be traveling with him.) He has such a reputation for being stingy, even to meanness, that people do not like to do business with him. False economy has cost this man very dear.

I used to travel with a business man who was much better off financially than I was, yet he would never take a sleeper at night, and never go into a dining car for his meals, but he would take his luncheon with him, or live on sandwiches or what he could pick up at lunch counters on the route. The result was that, when he arrived in far western cities, he would be so used up and tired out, and his stomach so out of order from irregular eating, that it would take him several days to get straightened out, and he lost a great deal of valuable time.

No man can afford to transact important business when he is not in prime condition, and it pays one in health and in comfort, as well as financially, to be very good to oneself, especially when health and a clear brain are our best capital.

I know a rich man who has become such a slave to the habit of economizing, formed when he was trying to get a start in the world, that he has not been able to break away from it, and he will very often lose a dollar's worth of valuable time trying to save a dime.

He goes through his home and turns the gas down so low that it is almost impossible to get around without stumbling over chairs. Several members of his family have received injuries from running against half-open doors, or stumbling over furniture in the dark; and once while I was present, a member of the family spilt a bottle of ink upon a costly carpet in passing from one room to another in the darkness.

This man, although now wealthy, tears off the unused half-sheets of letters, cuts out the backs of envelopes for scribbling paper, and is constantly spending time trying to save little things which are utterly out of proportion to the value to him of the time thus consumed.

In opposition to the overtures of the King of England the Duchess of Marlborough, a daughter of the Vanderbilts, has been separated from her husband. It is said that the King used his utmost efforts to bring about a reconciliation. Miss Gladys Deacon is named by the London gossips as being the object of the Duchess' jealousy.

COST OF BUILDING.

A Comparison Of The Expense In Different Localities.

From an interesting article published in Country Life in America, on the comparative cost of building in different sections of this country, the following facts were ascertained:

A magazine once offered prizes for plans and photographs of houses that cost $5,000 to build. An architect in a little town won first prize. His house was finer and larger than those of the city architects. There was a good deal of grumbling among the losers and many readers doubted that such a house could be built for that sum. On investigation it was found that the magazine and prize winner were both right. Some time after this a magazine published photographs and plans of a house that cost $10,000 to build in a fashionable suburb of New York. This time the laugh was on the other side of the house. It seemed strange that a magazine should brag because a man had built a house for $10,000 that could be erected in a small place for $7,500.

It costs less to build in Philadelphia than in Boston or New York; it costs still less in certain small cities which are not near large cities and yet possess first class shipping facilities; it costs less still in small towns in the lumber belt, where labor and lumber are both cheap. The difference is not a slight one, amounting in some cases to almost 300 per cent.

Many factors enter into the comparative cost of building. The two principal ones are labor and material. As to the former in parts of Maine, Pennsylvania and Georgia it is comparatively cheap while in New York and Nebraska it is very expensive. The cost of building increases from year to year in the proportion of the advance in the price of lumber.

In the matter of labor the price of it varies greatly. For example, the services of a good carpenter can be obtained in Chautauque, N. Y., for $2 a day, while a carpenter in Rochester, 100 miles or so distant, cost $5 a day. Naturally, the scale of building costs in one place cannot be applied to the other.

To get somewhere near the facts a concrete example is given of a country house called Mohican Lodge, built in 1905 at Sinking Springs, near Reading, Pa., at a total cost of $8,651.50. Photographs, plans and specifications of the house were given to half a dozen architects and builders in various sections of the country. The estimates secured from these men range all the way from $15,206 in New York, under the most expensive conditions, to $5,171 in Bangor, Me., where lumber is plenty and labor cheap.

The estimates on total cost from six places here in the East were as follows:

Vicinity of New York.....$15,206

Vicinity of Boston.....12,232

Vicinity of Philadelphia.....10,500

Actual cost near Reading.....8,651

Syracuse, N. Y.....7,775

Angiston, Ala.....7,249

Bangor, Me.....5,171

Ceremony and Good Cheer.

"There is sound philosophy in the custom of civilization to make a meal of ceremony. For if the ceremonial aspect be observed properly—if it be forbidden to make the home meal the occasion for the home-grumbling—then amid talk and laughter will eating be slow, as it should be, and mastication thorough. So when at the family dinner table appear only pleasant faces; when conversation is bright and merry, and when from one to the other of the diners is a bearing as courteously as if each were 'company,' then does indeed good digestion wait on appetite, and health on both."—Nature and Health by Edward Curtis.

BIDS CALLED FOR.

Contractors All Over The World May Have A Run For The Panama Job.

The advertisement calling for bids for finishing the work of construction on the Panama Canal, are being published in all parts of the country and requests have been made by Ministers and Ambassadors to this country for the advertisement and copies of the form of contract, which they are sending to their respective countries. It is believed that bids will come from Germany and England and France and it would not be a matter for surprise if the French might yet do the work which they failed to do under DeLesseps.

If the contract should go to a foreign company of contractors though, there will be no change in the requirement that the materials used in the construction be purchased in the United States. By law the commission is required to buy everything in the United States unless in the judgment of the President the prices asked are unreasonable. This contingency has not yet been met, but on the contrary the trusts have been so thoroughly frightened by the report of the possible foreign purchase of materials that they have lowered prices until the Canal Commission is buying materials at less than they are being sold to some of the big railway and contracting companies here. The fact that there is to be foreign competition in the construction work of the Canal will tend to lower the bids of Americans for the work.

TO BEGIN WORK.

The Emmitsburg Broom Factory Will Begin Work.—Officers Elected.

The stock holders of the Emmitsburg Broom Factory, notice of the incorporation of which was given a few weeks ago, held a meeting last week and elected officers. Vincent Sebald was made President, B. S. Jenkins, vice-President, Dr. D. E. Stone, Secretary and Treasurer and J. F. Winegardner, Superintendent. It was decided that work should begin on Thursday, November 15.

With the new life and energy of the recently organized company and under the personal management of Mr. Winegardner, who conducted the affairs of the old company with much success, the prospects of a busy season and much prosperity are very real.

PARAGRAPH NEWS FROM ALL POINTS OF THE COMPASS.

Last Saturday President Roosevelt was 48 years old.

Two more saloonkeepers have been arrested, in Hagerstown, for selling liquor on Sunday.

Saint-Saens, the great French composer is now in this country. He will be heard with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this winter.

While attempting to serve a State writ a deputy sheriff of Harford county shot and instantly killed James Agen who, it is said, resisted the officer.

After the completion of the vast improvements in and near New York City, A. J. Cassatt will resign the presidency of the Pennsylvania Railroad. James McCrea is expected to succeed him.

There has been some friction between the Japanese Government, represented by Viscount Aoki, and our authorities in Washington over the action of the State of California in barring young Japs from the public schools. Secretary Metcalf has been sent to San Francisco to make a thorough investigation. The situation is grave enough to require careful treatment.

The French Cabinet has reached a decision regarding the application of the law providing for the separation of church and state, by which the property and revenues of the churches, in the event of the clergy persisting in their present attitude, will be sequestered, December 11. A drastic measure against the clergy, according to well-informed persons, has been decided upon by the Cabinet, which intends to deal with them as foreign officials.

Mr. Hughes, in a speech made at Corning, New York, spoke very feelingly of the patriotic duty of citizens of this country and of his own duty in particular. He said, "I have been ordered to the front in this campaign and I have responded to what I believe to be a call of duty. It is not a call to arms, but it is a call to think, it is a demand upon intelligence. The issue in this campaign is simply whether the good sense of the people of this State shall triumph."

After Prof. John W. Burgess, the first incumbent of the Theodore Roosevelt Professorship of American History at the University of Berlin, had finished reading a letter from the President to the University, the Emperor arose and said: "Fellow students, let us express our thanks for what has been expressed so eloquently by accepting the offered hand which has been extended to us from America and by giving a cheer for the man who is the incarnation of the good qualities of his people, President Roosevelt. Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!"

Stable Ventilation.

These first cold snaps should call your attention to stable ventilation. Was yours satisfactory last winter? When you hear that the King system is best, don't get scared at a name and think it is beyond your means. Like all good things it is simple. The principle is only to let fresh, cold air in near the top of the stable and to draw the foul air out from near the floor. The trick is to do the latter without causing a draft. Build an upright flume with opening near the floor and terminating above the roof. It may be built outside the stable, if necessary, with intake cut through the wall near the floor. Perfect ventilation means healthy stock which is easily translated into profit. Most of us are in business for profit.—Farming.

Voters across the line, in Adams county, will have the opportunity of voting next Tuesday for a splendid man for the Assembly. Mr. David H. Guise, who is well known throughout this entire community, is the candidate on the Democratic and Lincoln Reform ticket, the same ticket that bears the name of Lewis Emery who, during his campaign, has laid bare the stupendous graft that has cast such a stigma upon the State of Pennsylvania.

Herr Otto Schlick, a young German engineer, has invented a simple device which counteracts the tendency of ships to roll from side to side. It is said that a trust is being formed in America with the idea of selling the device for use among high rolling clubmen who are given to carrying top-heavy cargoes.

"Let well enough alone" is the cry that is often heard, but the cry usually comes from those who are unwilling to have it applied to anything except that which may require effort or expenditure on their own part. It is the slogan of those who demand much, very much from the world in general, but who are unwilling to give even encouragement themselves.

FREDERICK NEWS. Memorial Services Held By The Knights Of Pythias—Total Registration Is Less Than Last Year. (Special to The Chronicle) Frederick, Oct. 31.—Mountain City Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, of this city, held their annual memorial services, last Sunday. Rev. McLane delivered the address. The following members have died during the past year: Allen Bentz, W. S. Ray, H. T. Haller, George Sanders and F. T. Rhodes. The total registered vote, of Frederick county, is 12,933, a loss as compared with last year. The campaign has been a dull one here as no meetings have been held by either party. Mr. Spessard, the Democratic Candidate, spent the week in this county. Both Central committees will meet here on Saturday. The Democrats have arranged a luncheon for their committeemen and it is expected that Mr. Spessard will attend. Halloween was duly observed by the boys and girls, the youngsters bombarding doors and pulling bells. Cabbage stalks, corn, confetti, in fact everything sacred to this night, except flour, which was under the ban, were in evidence. Rev. J. W. Kiracofe was tendered a reception, last Wednesday, at the United Brethren Church, by his congregation. The occasion was Mr. Kiracofe's return from the Conference where he had been reappointed pastor of the charge for another year. Daniel F. Feigley, who has been, for many years, engaged in the wholesale fruit business in this city, has moved his business to Baltimore. A mortgage, for the purpose of bonding the Jefferson and Braddock Heights Railroad, now building, has been filed in the Court at this place.

HARNEY NEWS. Mr. and Mrs. William Foble and daughter, of Freedom, spent a few days, last week, with friends in this vicinity. Miss Oneda Reek has returned to her home, in this place, from Baltimore, where she had been visiting for several months. Mr. John Ridinger recently purchased the farm owned by Mrs. Williams, of Virginia. Mr. William Farnwalt, who has been living on the farm for a number of years will move to New Windsor. Rev. Castle, the former pastor of the U. B. church in this place, preached a very interesting sermon to the Mystic Chain Order, on Tuesday evening. The meeting was largely attended. The many friends of Mr. Castle are loath to see him leave his old charge. Mr. Howard Harner, son of Mr. Charles Harner, is very ill with pneumonia. The young man had been in the West and had just returned when he fell ill with typhoid fever and had recovered sufficiently to be up when he took a cold and contracted pneumonia. He is in a very low condition. Mr. Edgar Shriver and Mrs. Shriver and son spent Tuesday with Mrs. Shriver's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hess. Mr. Harry Shriver made a business trip to Baltimore last week. No Trespassing. No hunting on my property. S. R. GRINDER. oct. 26-31.

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS FREDERICK COUNTY. The County Treasurer will visit the following places in the county for the accommodation of the tax payers: EMMITSBURG—At Emmitt House, Monday and Tuesday, November 12 and 13. MECHANICSTOWN—At Miller's Hotel, Wednesday, Nov. 14. GEORGE W. CRUM, County Treasurer. oct 26-31.

IN THE COURTS. Wm. Weaver Released on Bail—Two Men Arrested for Skipping Toll Gates. (Special to The Chronicle) Frederick, Oct. 31.—Wm. Weaver, who was charged with stealing a horse from Russell Dorsey, of Motters Station, was, by order of Judge McSherry, released on $50 bail for appearance at court. Harry and William Wolf, of Yellow Springs, were held for the Grand Jury upon a charge of running the tollgate near Yellow Springs. Bail was furnished. Thomas Brengle was discharged and acquitted upon a charge of non-support of his wife, Emma Brengle. Later in the week Brengle's wife assaulted him with a club and is now under bail for court. The parties were separated. Daniel Lenhart, of Park Mills, who lost $24 on a shell game at the Fair grounds, has recovered his money. Judge Smith caused the gamblers to disgorge.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS. In this column "Uncle Bill" will answer all questions of a proper character submitted to THE CHRONICLE. Readers of this paper should not hesitate to patronize this column frequently, as "UNCLE BILL" draws a big salary and loves to work. Uncle Bill: What is the meaning of the term "Skidoo"? D. O. X. D. O. X. Skidoo is made up of two words; skid, a slide and do (Latin, do, dare, dedi, datum) to give. Hence, to give the grand slide. Skid is from the Persian: skid, to slide. Uncle Bill: How far from the earth is a star of the 16th magnitude? ASTRON. If there's anything I like it is astronomy and you've hit me just where I live. There is nothing mercenary in my make-up otherwise I'd tell you to buy my astronomy published by Long, Green & Co., entitled: "How to See Stars Without Making The Effort." I might say (if you'll pardon my seeming lack of modesty) that for this exhausting work I was made a member of the Academy of Sciences, and a fellow of the Royal Society of Geographers. In addition to this I was decorated with the order of the Tin Telescope by His Majesty the King of the Hongkonging Islands. Now for the answer to your question. Take the mean distance from the sun and the fourth satellite of Mars, square the result and multiply this by ten light years. Find the distance from the earth to the moon when Venus is in apogee, making sure that she's there. This distance multiplied by the sine of the angle produced by a line drawn from Capricorn to Thurmort, intersecting the celestial equator at X, added to the product already obtained will give you the distance. To make it exact, deduct 4852 1/2 miles for the time lost in taking the cork out of the telescope. Uncle Bill: What is the North Pole? JOHNNY. Johnny: Don't let anybody fool you about this, Johnny, and don't take any shares in the North Pole Trolley Co. I have inside information on this subject and I feel it my duty to be outspoken in denunciation of this pole business. Why Johnny, my boy, the North Pole is a myth the mere workings of the snow-ball trust, one of the most gigantic freezeways ever perpetrated on an unsuspecting, trust-ridden country. Ida Tarbell was offered $10,000 to make an expose of this scandal, but, even with fur mits on, she wouldn't touch it. You'll thank me for this some day, so back off and let the pole microbe thaw out of your brain. Uncle Bill: What is La Grippe and what is a good cure for it? M. D. JR. M. D. JR.: La Grippe is an excuse for thirst. The term was invented by a patent medicine man to increase the sale of cheap bottled "suds." When you feel it coming on take a dose of equal parts of aqua pura and benzoin and then read five chapters of Carry Nation's book: "Some Joints That I have Hatched." Uncle Bill: How much would it cost to take a trip around the world and how should one prepare for such a voyage? TRAV. Trav: This depends entirely with whom you travel. If you hitch up with a "personally conducted tour" party and are willing to take your chances, it will cost you about $327.38 and tips. In this case a horse blanket a celluloid collar and a Panama hat, a Waterbury watch and a package of dog biscuits is all you need. If you were to travel with your Uncle you'd have to dope out an entirely different menu. You'd have to get a letter of credit vised by the treasurer of the Bank of England, an insurance policy for several thousand kopels and a ticket that looks like a gross of book agents' samples. Other little details, such as a present of a bunch of Plymouth Rock elephants to the king of Siam or a pack of pinocle cards to the Emperor of Germany, would be taken care of as occasion arose.

Y. M. C. A. INCORPORATED. Chartered by Chief Justice McSherry. Building Plans Approved. (Special to The Chronicle) Frederick, Oct. 31.—The local Young Men's Christian Association was incorporated, on Saturday, under the laws of this State, Judge McSherry signing the articles of incorporation. The object and rights of the association are duly set forth. There shall be twelve directors, and the following are named for the ensuing year: J. H. Apple, Hammond Urner, J. T. Thomas, H. H. Abbott, R. R. Lewis, C. T. Kemp, W. C. Birely, C. B. Trail, W. C. Johnson, H. C. Zacharias, C. E. Cline and E. D. Shriver. The plans of the new building have been submitted by the architects, Hamme & Leber, of York, Pa. The building will be 60x120 feet, three stories high, basement and raised floor. It will be built of brick and stone of a buff color. It will contain everything needful and will cost over $25,000. Work may be commenced this fall on the property now occupied by the Park Hotel building.

GOOD ADVICE TO FARMERS. A Veteran Packer Tells Them To Handle Better Class of Cattle In Feed Lots.

"The farmer cattle feeder has the best of the big feeder, says Nelson Morris, the veteran packer, who has fed thousands of cattle. He has the corn and can give the cattle his personal attention, while the big feeder must necessarily buy corn and haul it and it stands to reason that he cannot give the right kind of attention to the cattle. This is why every farmer should have a drove of cattle in the feed lot. It is needless to add, though, that the cattle must have the quality. The trouble is with many farmers that they neglect this factor in the business. It does not cost as much in the long run to handle cattle of good quality in the feed lots as does the common ones.

"There is every reason to look for a good market for choice, fat cattle this winter. The country is prosperous and the call is strong for the better cuts of beef, and besides there should be good outlet through the foreign channels. We cannot compete with Argentina and other countries which put common grades of cattle on the market in great quantities, and the sooner the feeders of this country learn this lesson and put a better class of cattle in their feed lots the better they will be off."

An Old Trespass Law That Has Never Been Repealed. The following law, an old one, which has never been repealed may be of interest to some of our readers now that the hunting season is in full swing. It reads: Every person, who shall presume, upon any pretense whatsoever, to come to hunt with dogs or guns within any enclosed grounds without leave or license from the proprietor thereof, shall, for every offence forfeit and pay to the party grieved, three dollars and thirty-three and a third cents ($3.33 1/3) to be recovered before a single justice as small debts are recoverable.

This is done that Swallow may be saved a multiplicity of suits.

The Postoffice Department is considering the feasibility of introducing a system of printing on the postage stamps the names of the cities where the stamps are sold in the largest quantities. Approximately, 40 per cent. of the entire output of stamps is sold at 24 offices, and the plan may be introduced of providing each one of these offices with stamps having the name of the office printed across the face of the stamp.

Last Friday night Prof. V. G. Valdez, an instructor at the United States Naval Academy, offered a quart of his blood for transfusion into the veins of a man in St. James Hospital, Newark. Prof. Valdez did this that he might save the man's life, and his motive was to show his thankfulness to God for the saving of his and his mother's life sometime ago, by doing a like service for some one else. His offer came to late. The man died before the help could be given him.

This is what United States Senator Bailey thinks of Hearst: "Hearst buys men and when his moneybags won't work he uses sandbags. He has done more to corrupt Democracy than any other one man or set of men. They say I ought not to talk about the Democratic nominee and yet he is trying to defeat the Democratic nominee for Governor of California. He is a political Ishmaelite, with his hand raised against every man and every man's hand ought to be lifted against him. He is so bad that his candidacy would debauch any electorate, his inebriation would disgrace any office, his leadership would disgrace any party. He is a political renegade; a moral degenerate and a physical coward."

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Fifty-Two Members Secured. Call For Books.

The Executive Committee of the Emmitsburg Public Library met on Monday evening, Oct. 22nd at the home of Dr. R. L. Annan.

As a result of the efforts of the Committee 52 members have been secured. It was decided to rent the room at the home of Mr. C. T. Zacharias. Miss Ruth Hoke and Miss Gertrude Annan were appointed a committee to canvass the entire town in order to secure as many members as possible. A set of twelve rules were adopted for the regulation of the library. These rules will appear in a later number of THE CHRONICLE. Membership cards have been adopted which will be printed and issued to the members on payment of the fee, as soon as the library is ready to open for work. This date will be announced later.

In order that the library may be a success from the beginning it will be necessary for the people of the town and community to make contributions of books to the library in so far as they may be able. A committee will be at the library room on the Saturday afternoons of November to receive such donations of books.

A list of new books will be made out at once to be procured immediately upon the opening of the library. But before filing this list the committee desires all contributions of books to be in order that we may not duplicate.

MASONIC BANQUET.

Sometime ago a few of the ladies of Emmitsburg plied the needle with deft and delicate hands so that their brothers of the Mystic Tie might tread softly and gently over a carpet of green. Last Tuesday night, in appreciation of their kindness, the same party of ladies were hospitably entertained by their admiring brothers.

Dr. Reigle gave them a cordial greeting, and his congenial face shone the pleasure he inwardly felt on the occasion. Dr. Stone, very facetiously, remarked that no oratory was needed on his part as two orators were always kept in reserve to extol or embellish the doings of Tyrian's Mystic Shrine. The Rev. Mr. Gluck rose to the needs of the hour with fine spirit, and his address won the admiration of all present.

Mr. Harry Beam was so absorbed catering to the physical needs and being unaccustomed to making coffee on great occasions, he could find little time to display the nobler gifts of oratory.

Mr. Annan Horner felt that all the land-marks had been so amply and vividly portrayed that he could only bow his thanks for the honor the ladies had conferred on Tyrian Lodge by their presence.

The Rev. Mr. Craig and Mr. Palmer both expressed their appreciation and thanks to the ladies for their kindly help, their presence, and their warm devotion to Masonry, or at least to Masons.

The gentlemen having exhausted their eloquence, several of the ladies replied in very graceful language. Mrs. Stone said she was glad and proud to be present on the occasion, as her associations with Masonry had ever been of the most pleasant and enjoyable nature. Her father, her brother, and many of her friends had been Masons, and she therefore had come to have the highest regard for all associated with it. Her address was couched in beautiful language, and added many to her already large circle of friends. Before parting Mrs. Craig conveyed the thanks of the ladies, and said how much they had all enjoyed, and appreciated the hospitality and kindness of the members of Tyrian Lodge.

The following are the ladies who were present: Mesdames McNair, Stone, I. S. Annan, M. F. Shuff, Helman, Harry Beam, E. L. Annan, Colliflower, M. E. Eberhart, Samuel Rowe, Craig, George Cook, T. E. Zimmerman, Horner and Resser; Misses Helen Annan, Maria Helman, Miss Jennie Smith, Shuff, McNair, Bruce Morrison, Sue Guthrie, Alice Annan, Barbara Beam, Marjorie Eichelberger, Amelia Annan, Anna Smith, Clarice Craig, Ruth Hoke, Anna Annan and Annie Helman.

ZEIGLER--HARNER. A Telephone Romance. Consummated Last Tuesday Evening.

Shortly after the C. & P. switchboard had been installed in this place, the night clerk at Frederick had occasion to speak to the operator at this place. This was the beginning of a romance which came to a happy completion last Tuesday night when Mr. Walter F. Zeigler and Miss Teresa Irene Harnar were united in marriage by Rev. Father J. O. Hayden.

After this long distance introduction it was several weeks before Mr. Zeigler met the object of his affections. On May 15th it happened that Miss Harnar was called away to attend the funeral of her uncle, and by chance, mere chance, Mr. Zeigler was sent to take her place. This he did and the long distance wooing was changed as was also Miss Harnar's name.

The ceremony was a very quiet one, the happy couple being married on Tuesday evening, much to the dismay of their friends who had prepared to make them conspicuous. Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler have gone on a trip to Baltimore and Washington, after which they will return to Emmitsburg.

MT. ST. MARY'S DEFEATED. Gettysburg defeated Mt. St. Mary's on Wednesday afternoon by the score of 52-0. The game was called on account of darkness with five minutes to play. Sieber's run of 85 yards was the feature of the game.

TEMPERANCE DAY.

Schools Of The Sunday School Of The Presbyterian Church Hold Exercises.—Interesting Address.

Last Sunday the scholars of the Presbyterian Church, of this place, held pleasing and instructive exercises for the promotion and spread of the temperance cause which, in late years, has taken its place, in the work of this denomination, on the same level as missions.

An interesting programme was given by the pupils of the school, and Rev. Craig delivered the address which was listened to with marked attention. Rev. Craig said:

"The subject of total abstinence, is vast, and far reaching in its issues. The enlightened conscience, both now, and in the coming years will take no other stand than total abstinence against this most powerful foe the world has ever known."

It has been proved beyond all question that fermented liquors are neither heat producers, nor food producers. These facts have been fully substantiated both in the Polar regions, and among the standing armies of every nation. And for medical purposes they are rapidly being discontinued by the most reputable physicians both in Europe and America.

In this country the sale of intoxicating liquors—this deplorable traffic, is still legalized by our Government because of the revenue it brings to the country. But if you deduct the upkeep of our large police force, our jails, our insane asylums, our homes for the profligate and outcast, and I question much if the deal is a profitable one financially. It seems the more the revenue derived the more the outlay to protect the State from crime and lawlessness. It is a lamentable fact that fully 75 per cent. of those now caged almost as wild animals, are the off-spring of the drink habit. But surely the day is dawning when this great government, this great land of the free will cease to extract its resources from the graves of its people.

It is strange, it is passing strange that some men are still to be found to advocate moderate drinking. Drunkards—lying in dishonored graves, have been the offspring of moderate drinkers. Even in our own day and age there are some professing church people who are taking that into their mouths which is stealing away their brains, their manhood, their honor. Young men, those of you who have vowed before the altar of Almighty God, and before the witnesses of heaven, see that you come to the help of the Lord, against the mighty, and rest not day nor night till this demon, this mighty agent of evil, is swept from the land. You are ambassadors of the Truth, of all that is clean and pure, of all that is lovely and of good report. Your lives, your fortunes are of little moment, but the results of your lives are of infinite and eternal value.

I charge you, therefore, by the love of God, I beseech you in the name of all those who have died in the faith, I appeal to you in the presence of the great army of silent witnesses, to beware of this habit, or if formed, abandon it, cut loose from it, for if persisted in, it will lure thee to an untimely grave, it will blight thy prospects in time, it will make shipwreck of thy soul for eternity.

Pass on with me to the saloon, if you please. I see that man made in the image of God, passing out the devil's cup to his brotherman, till he becomes dazed and dead to all around him. Will not the ill gotten gold burn in the soul of the trafficker some day. What! Pass into the hands of Almighty God, with the stain of a thousand murders on the soul. Oh, let us fly to the rescue of the slayer.

Pass with me to the home of the drunkard. See the mother, the wife, cheeks pale, eyes are tear dimmed, and hearts breaking. Oh the wail of the mother over the son of her heart, her very life, passing swiftly and surely to a drunkard's grave. Oh the rending cry of the devoted wife over a husband lost to all sense of shame, lost to all those nobler qualities, that once inspired to lofty thoughts, and noble deeds.

Oh, what havoc this drink traffic is making in the home, alienating hearts, and sundering the most endearing ties. Aye, Daniel was eternally right when he spurned the wine cup. Every young man is right, is safe, when he says I cannot, I will not.

In some churches we are accustomed to hear from plague, pestilence and famine, from battle, murder, and sudden death, "Good Lord deliver us." Oh let us pray the Good Lord tonight to deliver us from this mighty agent of Satan—this drink traffic which is tapping the foundation of the individual, the home, the country. And if we are thus delivered, all the minor ills will soon perish, soon pass away.

FIRST PERFORMANCE

Of "The Princess" Given By The Emmitsburg Opera Company.

Twenty young ladies, under the direction of Father Maloy and Prof. Frederick J. Halm, opened the dramatic season, on Tuesday evening, in St. Euphemia's Hall, by giving Prof. Halm's delightful operetta, "The Princess." A small but appreciative audience greeted the singers at this initial performance and, judging from the splendid way in which the young ladies acquitted themselves and the bright and catchy music of the operetta, not only will a larger audience be in evidence at the next performance but there will be a strong demand made for a repetition of this sprightly little opera. The inclement weather had a good deal to do with the size of the audience and by no means should the small attendance dampen the ardor of the conscientious young performers.

From first to last there is not an uninteresting line in the libretto nor was there any evidence of hitch or unfamiliarity with the score. The stage settings were good and the costumes, made by Miss Rose Tyson, were beautiful as well as tasteful and appropriate. Too much credit can not be given to the chorus and about the only suggestion that might be offered by an attentive listener would be that the stage manager should have the soloists a little nearer the foot lights. The acoustics of the hall and stage demand this. The accompaniment at times, was a little too heavy to make the ensemble effective, but no doubt, in the second rendition, which will be given this evening, these little inequalities will no longer be in evidence.

The congratulations heaped upon Prof. Halm after the performance of the "Princess" gave ample evidence that his work was thoroughly appreciated. The book and the score, both from the pen of this accomplished gentleman, are full of gems and the tuneful, catchy music of this sprightly operetta will be whistled and sung in this community for many a day.

"The Princess" is but one of the many successes that are due to the untiring efforts of Father Maloy and his associates. Before any of these performances, so easily and smoothly rendered, can be given, there are weeks of work and hard practice, of training and wise direction, and when it is considered that all this care is taken in the production of plays that have for their end the betterment, not of the instructors, but of the players and people at large, and that all the performances are clean and wholesome, too much praise and support can not be given the Rev. Father Maloy.

The first act opened on a sylvan scene with the chorus of court maidens on either side of the Princess' throne. Miss Mae Long, who impersonated the Princess, entered from the left and sang her part admirably. This was followed by the Dance Song and, after the entrance of the ambassador, Miss Stella Long, by a war song. Dolorosa, Miss Lillian Gelwick, acted her part well and her song, Woman's Sphere, anti-amazonian in spirit was well acted and sung. The act ended with a full chorus.

In the second act the scene was laid in the camp of the Princess' forces. Miss Euphemia Tyson, who took the part of Martella, sang with her usual grace an anvil song. The audience was robbed of an encore by the entrance of the Newsboys, who captured the house. This was a source of regret to the audience who would have been glad to have heard several repetitions of this song.

The singing and acting of these "CHRONICLE" newsboys, Lilly Long and Gertrude Krise, was one of the most thoroughly enjoyable features of the excellent programme. The make up of these little stars was perfect and their rendition of "Emmitsburg," a witty topical song, and their clever bits of good natured satire aimed at this paper, called forth prolonged applause.

Miss Stella Topper, as Gladiola, was excellent and her sword song was sung with a spirit and abandon worthy of the "Fencing Master." She drilled her corps of soldiers with grace and was vociferously applauded.

The third and last act saw the return of the victorious ladies of the Princess' court. In the final scene of this act the wounded and defeated Prince was borne in upon a stretcher. The song of the Princess over the stricken man was beautifully and touchingly rendered. Miss Tyson, the Doctor, acted and sang her part well and the act and performance was closed with a full chorus.

The following is the cast: The Princess, Miss Mae Long; Aline, Miss Blanche Dukhart; Dolorosa, Miss Lillian Gelwick; Imogen, Miss Vincenza Sebald; Perdita, Miss Anna Elder; Candida, Miss Julia Tyson; Portia, Miss Mazie Sebald; Martella, Miss Euphemia Tyson; Gladiola, Miss Stella Topper; Calpurnia, Miss Rosella Burdner; Katherine, Miss Mary Burdner; Rose- lina, Miss Valerie Welty; Nerissa, Miss Carrie Gelwick; Dulcissima, Miss Madeline Gelwick; Lydia, Miss Lillian Cool; Terpsichore, Miss Nan FAVORITE; Ophelia, Miss Anna Long; Ambassador, Miss Stella Long; Newsboys, Miss Lilly Long and Miss Gertrude Krise.

"He rose to go.
"I was a little premature," he added, "but you mustn't blame me. Put yourself in my place. If you were a young man and loved a girl as sweet as Polly and were walking home with her on a moonlit night."
"I presume there'd be more or less lovelorn," said the widow. "She is a pretty thing and has the way of a woman. We were speaking of you the other day, and she said to me: 'He is ungrateful. You can teach the primer class for him, and be so good that you feel perfectly miserable, and give him lessons in dancing, and put on your best clothes, and make biscuit for him, and then perhaps he'll go out and talk with the hired man.' Polly," said the widow, "you're getting to be very foolish."
"Well, it comes so easy," said she. "It's my one talent."

CHAPTER XVIII.

NEXT day Trove went home. He took with him many a souvenir of his first term, including a scarf that Polly had knit for him and the curious things he took from the Frenchman Leblanc and which he retained partly because they were curious and partly because Mrs. Leblanc had been anxious to get rid of them. He soon rejoined his class at Hillsborough, having kept abreast of it in history and mathematics by work after school and over the week's end. He was content to fall behind in the classes, for they were easy, and in them his arrears gave him no terror. Walking for exercise, he laid the plan of his tale and had written some bits of verse. On an evening he went out to the Sign of the Dial and there read his lines and got friendly but severe criticism.

"Is there anything you do not know?" Trove inquired.
"Much," said the thinker, "including the depth of me own folly. A man that displays knowledge hath need of more."
Indeed, Trove rarely came for a talk with Darrel when he failed to discover something new in him—a further reach of thought and sympathy or some unsuspected treasure of knowledge. The thinker loved a laugh and would often search his memory for some phrase of bard or philosopher apt enough to provoke it. Of his great store of knowledge he made no vain use.

Trove had been overworking, and about the middle of June they went for a week in the woods together. They walked to Allen's the first day and after a brief visit there went off in the deep woods, camping by a pond in thick timbered hills. Coming to the filled shore, they sat down awhile to rest. A hawk was sailing high above the still water. Crows began to call in the treetops. An eagle sat on a dead pine at the water's edge and seemed to be peering down at his own shadow. Two deer stood in a marsh on the farther shore looking over at them. Near by were the bones of some animal and the fresh footprints of a panther. Sounds of a fight in the hush of the unbroken wilderness.

"See, boy," said Darrel, "with a little gesture of his right hand, 'the theater of the woods. See the sloping hills, free above tree, like winding galleries! Here is a coliseum old, past reckoning. Why, boy, long before men saw the Seven Hills it was old. Yet see how new it is, how fresh its color, how strong its timber! See the many seats, each with a good view, and the multitude of the people, yet most of them are hidden. Ten thousand eyes are looking down upon us. Tragedies and comedies of the forest are enacted here. Many a thrilling scene has held the stage—the sportsman deep swimming for his life, the painter stalking his prey or leaping on it."

"'Tis a cruel part," said Trove. "He is the murderer of the play. I cannot understand why there are so many villains in his cast. Both the cat and the serpent battle me."
"Marry, boy, the world is a great school, and this little drama of the good God is part of it," said Darrel. "All the play hath a great moral—thou shalt learn to use thy brain or die. Now, there may be many perils in this land of the woods, so many that all its people must learn to think or perish by them. A pretty bit of wisdom it is, so, it leaves the great man moving, ever moving—in the long way to perfection. Now, among animals a growing brash works the leech of its owner, sending them far on diverse errands until they are strong. Mind thee, boy, perfection of brain and body is the aim of nature. The cat's paw and the serpent's coil are but the penalties of weakness and folly. The world is for the strong. Therefore God keep thee so or there be serpents will enter thy blood and devour thee—millions of them."

"They sat a little time in silence, looking at the shores of the pond.
"Have you ever felt the love passion?" said Darrel.
"Well, there's a girl the name of Polly," Trove answered.
"Ah, Polly! She of the red lips and the dark eye," said Darrel, smiling. "She's one of a thousand." He clasped his hand upon his knee merrily and sang a sentimental couplet from an old Irish ballad.

"Have ye won her affection, boy?" he added, his hand on the boy's arm.
"I think I have."
"God love thee! I'm glad to hear it," said the old man. "She is a living wonder, boy, a living wonder, and had I thy youth I'd give thee worry."
"Since her mother cannot afford to do it I wish to send her away to school," said Trove.
"Tut, tut, boy. Thou hast barely enough for thy own schooling."
"I've 82 in my pocket," said Trove proudly. "I do not need it. The job in the mill—that will feed me and pay my room rent, and my clothes will do me for another year."

"On my word, boy, I like it in thee," said Darrel, "but surely she would not take it from you."
"I could not offer it to her, but you might go there, and perhaps she would take it from you."
"Capital!" the thinker exclaimed. "I'll see if I can serve thee. Marry, good youth, I'll even give away thy money and take credit for thy benevolence. Teacher, philanthropist, lover—I believe thou'rt ready to write."
"The plan of my first novel is complete," said Trove. "That poor thief—he shall be my chief character—the man of whom you told me."
"Poor man! God make thee kind to him," said the thinker. "An thou'rt willing, I'll hear of him tonight. When the firelight flickers—that is the time, boy, for tales."

They built a rude lean-to, covered with bark and bedded with fragrant boughs. Both lay in the firelight. Darrel smoking his pipe, as the night fell.
"Now for thy tale," said the thinker.
The tale was Trove's own solution of his life mystery, shrewdly come to after a long and careful survey of the known facts. And now, shortly, time was to put the seal of truth upon it and daze him with astonishment and fill him with regret of his cunning. It should be known that he had never told Darrel or any one of his coming in the little red sleigh.

He lay thinking for a time after the thinker spoke; then he began:
"Well, the time is 1835, the place a New England city on the sea. Chapter I—a young woman is walking along a street, with a child sleeping in her arms. She is dark skinned—a Syrian. It is growing dusk. The street is deserted save by her and two sailors, who are approaching her. They, too, are Syrians. One seems to strike her—it is mere pretense, however—and she falls. The other seizes the child, who, having been drugged, is still asleep. A wagon is waiting near. They drive away hurriedly, their captive under a blanket. The kidnappers make for the woods in New Hampshire. Officers of the law drive them far. They abandon their horse, tramping westward over trails in the wilderness, bearing the boy in a sack of gallicloth, open at the top. They had guns and killed their food as they traveled. Snow came deep. By and by game was scarce and they had grown weary of bearing the boy on their backs. One waited in the woods with the little lad while the other went away to some town or city for provisions. He came back, hauling them in a little sleigh. It was much like those made for the delight of the small boy in every land of snow. It had a box painted red and two hubs and a little dashboard. They used it for the transportation of boy and impedimenta.

"In the deep wilderness beyond the Adirondacks they found a cave in one of the rock ledges. They were twenty miles from any postoffice, but shortly discovered one. Letters in cipher were soon passing between them and their confederates. They learned there was no prospect of getting the ransom. He they had thought rich was not able to raise the money they required or any large sum. Two years went by, and they abandoned hope. What should they do with the boy? One advised murder, but the other defended him. It was unnecessary, he maintained, to kill a mere baby, who knew not a word of English and would forget all in a month. And murder would only increase their peril. Now, eight miles from their cave was the cabin of a settler. They passed within a mile of it on their way out and in. They had often met the dog of the settler roving after small game—a shepherd, trustful, affectionate and ever ready to make friends. One day they captured the dog and took him to their cave. They could not safely be seen with the boy, so they planned to let the dog go home with him in a little red sleigh. Now, the settler's cabin was, like that of my father, on the shore of a pond. It was round, as a cup's rim, and a mile or so in diameter. Opposite the cabin a trail came to the water's edge, skirting the pond, save in cold weather, when it crossed the ice. They waited for a night when their tracks would soon disappear. Then having made a cover of the gallicloth sack in which they had brought the boy and stretched it on twigs and made it fast to the sleigh box, they put the sleeping boy in the sleigh, with hot stones wrapped in paper and a robe of fur to keep him warm, hitched the dog to it and came over hill and trail to the little pond awhile after midnight. Here they buckled a ring of bells on the dog's neck and released him. He made for his home on the clear ice, the bells and his bark sounding as he ran. They at the cabin heard him coming and opened their door to dog and traveler. So came my hero in a little red sleigh and was adopted by the settler and his wife and reared by them with generous affection. Well, he goes to school and learns rapidly and comes to manhood. It's a pretty story—that of his life in the big woods. But now for the love tale. He meets a young lady—sweet, tender, graceful, charming."

"A moment," said Darrel, raising his hand. "Prithce, boy, ring down the curtain for a brief parley. The story says that they were Syrians—they that stole the lad. Now, tell me, hast thou reason for that?"
"Ample," said Trove. "When they took him out of the sleigh the first words he spoke were 'Anah jouban.' He used them many times, and while he forgot they remembered them. Now, 'Anah jouban' is a phrase of the Syrian tongue, meaning, 'I am hungry.'"
"Very well," said the old man, with emphasis, "and sailors. That is a just inference. It was a big port, and far

SUNLIGHT AUTOMATIC FORGE FEED GAS MACHINE

YOU CAN NOW BE YOUR OWN GAS COMPANY

PUT THE MATERIAL INTO ME AND I WILL DO THE REST.

No Limit to Size.

LIGHT FOR ALL.

It Has Come To Stay. It Has No Equal.

SAFE, ECONOMICAL, BRILLIANT, HEALTHY.

Having made important improvements in our Gas Machine by the application of Force Feed and combining generator and gasometer in one, and simplifying many points of construction, and requiring small space to install; obviating all danger of excessive discharge of carbide into generator, making gas in excess of consumption. We now claim to have the perfect Gas Machine, furnishing the most brilliant light ever produced, and are prepared to furnish the Improved Machine, guaranteed to be the most simple and efficient working Gas Machine on the market. We guarantee all machines as represented and put in on approval. All material of the best, put up in neat and substantial manner. All inquiries for price or information in regard to installing machine will have prompt attention. Descriptive circulars on application. Rights for sale. Fully protected by patents.
