Nature's Awakening.--Signs Of Welcome Spring.

A WALK IN COUNTRY

To a Close Observer Full of Pleasure. -Nothing Strange to See But Everything New.-Nature's Housecleaning In Evidence.

To one who likes the manifestations of the Divine in the more lowly forms of life nothing could be of more interest than a walk in the woods this month. The birds are all here and 'everything teems with life; overhead the trees are at work and underfoot the hepatica, blood root, spring beauty, the delicate little wind flower, the graceful anemone and the mayflower, not to forget the beautiful arbutus are pushing aside the leaves to catch the light and please the

The pussy willows give the first sign of the approach of spring. Sometimes in February, if the season be mild, but more often in March, these willow buds swell, the scales open, and the little

An odd feature of the oak is the way many of its leaves remain through the winter, and fall only when literally crowded off by the growth of the young leaves. A feature of her work, which never fails to fill me with wonder, is the manner in which she disposes of her refuse. In early spring, when the snow has just gone, the woods and fields seem littered with dead plants, dead grasses, dead leaves. It would require a host of gardeners to clean up and put things in order. Yet little by little the new life rises and by midsummer it has covered all this dead refuse and is even drawing on it for sustenance. Among the forms which spring into life, the ferns are prominent. Though they are devoid of flowers their grace of form and variety of leaf make them very attractive. In the spring the first sign of life is a small woolly knob rising above the rootstock. A stem pushes this up, until we have a bishop's crosier

The Republican-Gazette Of Lima Considers His Death a Calamity to City and Individuals.

The sudden death of Mr. Isaac Motter, of Lima, Ohio, as noted in these columns was a shock to the wide circle of Mr. Motter's friends and relatives in this place. Shaxper could not even write orthographically until late in his career. Would not this fact prove that Shaxper, far from being the author of those plays, was exercising merely the functions of a copyist? Is it not merely gave his name to the works of another who, for reasons of his own, preferred to conceal his identity?

The great unknown, the author of Shakespeare's plays, Dr. Bleibtreu claims, was no other than Roger, Earl of Rutland. Born in 1576, he died at ledge of the law; also his acquaintance Later Roger took part in Essex's war quest to the Azores. After Essex had been beheaded, Rutland was condemned to imprisonment and the pay-ment of a heavy fine. In the period in which he was incarcerated—that is from 1601 to 1603—no Shakespeare play appeared. When James the first restored him to property and freedom, Rutland lived quietly and far from the court in O. H. Foster, proprietor of Carvel his country seat. CEDAR TREES.

Where Will Future Supply of Wood Come From?

110,000 TONS PER YEAR.

Used In The Manufacture of Lead Pencils.—Tree Can Be Profitably Grown. - Ought to Be Given a Better Chance.

What might be a source of considerble revenue to our local farmers and ndowners, the cultivation of the cedar tree indigenous to this climate and country, is entirely neglected. This isregard of what in a few years might be valuable property is simply a case of looking no further than the end of our own particularly short nose. wisdom of forest preservation cannot be proven by a better illustration then the wholesale destruction of this valuable tree. Every one is familiar with the story of the building of the temple of Solomon in which cedar wood was used so largely. This wood was brought from the mountains of Lebanon where the forests were so dense that "four score thousand hewers" were employed by the wise Jewish king in obtaining timber. So great was the demand for this peculiar lumber and so shortsighted were the owners of these hills that in the sixth century A. D., Justinian found it difficult to procure cedar timber enough for the roof of a single church

So in this country the small trees of this variety are ruthlessly cut down to supply the local demand for fence posts. This has been going on for years and the customary small, insignificant cedar brush, so familiar to all, is conceived to be the limit of the size to which this But this is not so for the cedar can be cultivated to a merchant-

How the world will write when its supply of cedar wood for lead pencils is exhausted is a problem not yet solved. Red cedar is used almost entirely for pencils because of its peculiar qualities; for which no equally good substitute has ever been found. It has a soft, straight grain, and when grown under best conditions is free from defects. It is doubtful if any other wood-using industry is so dependent upon a single species as the pencil industry is depend-ent upon red cedar. This will be ap-preciated when it is known that 20,000,000 pencils are manufactured in this country ever year, and that to manufacture these 110,000 tons, or 7,300,000 cubic feet, of wood are required. In other words, each day in the year 300 tons, or 20,000 cubic feet, of wood are used for pencils. The supply of red cedar is greatly depleted in consequence of the steady growth of the pencil industry. It has been esti-mated that, leaving out of consideration ported pencils, the average edu-

Largely because of the lack of in formation on the rate of growth of the cedar and the habits of the tree, no NEWS FROM FREDERICK steps have heretofore been taken to provide for a future supply of red cedar. The belief has been widespread that second-growth red cedar never reaches merchantable size. The Forest Service has recently made a careful study of this tree, and has come to the conclusion that it can be profitably grown in regions of its development. In the outhern forests the cedar must be given a better chance, instead of being considered, as it is now, of no use in its younger stages. Many of the forest-grown trees which are now cut for fence posts can profitably be left to attain their full development, and thus become available for pencil wood.

> "This centralization has not been the work of one administration. It has een evolving for years and now it is proposed, in order to bring about a strengthening of Federal and State relations, that the governors of the fortyfive States meet annually for a session of two to three weeks to discuss, con sult, and confer on vital questions affecting the welfare of the States, the unifying of State laws, and the closer unity of the States as a nation. The house of governors would have no lawmaking power, nor should it ever aspire to such power. Its force would be in nitiative, in inspiration, and in influence. The governors would seek to unite on a general basis of action on great questions to be submitted to the legislatures of the respective States in the govern-ors' messages. It would seem that an august, dignified body of forty-fivegovernors, representing their States, with the lawmaking power of forty-five legislatures behind them, should in time become an inherent part in the American idea of self-government and a powerful factor of good in the nation. "The brief statement covers the broad lines of the suggestion, and for it we ask consideration in connection with the amplification and detail of the thought that follows this outline.

"In the Congress of the United States the Senators, chosen as they are by the State legislators nominally represent States, but not the people of their States, for the latter have no direct voice in their selection. About fifty students spent the day in Emmitsburg, and took dinner at "The Emmit House" and "Hotel Spangler." people have never yet had. "On many great questions it is difficult. others it is impossible to secure it without constitutional amendment. To-day we have no national holiday legalized by Congress for the States—not even Fourth of July, Thanksgiving Day, or Christmas—yet by the action of the separate States these days are universally observed. They are national in scope, but not national in genesis, so if the legislatures of the forty for States. the legislatures of the forty-five States, working together through the house of governors for uniform law, should pass the same law, the practical effect of a national law, would be secured without Federal action. "We need in our country to-day less politics and more statesmenship, less party and more patriotism. We need an awakening to higher ideals. We need a higher conception of America's place and destiny in the evolution of the world. We need something nobler as a purpose than our self-satisfied complacency at the material prosperity of the nation, for there is a moral and ethical success that is never rung up on a cashregister. We need the scourging of the money changers out of the temple of legislation—State and national. We need a purifying and ennobling of the body politic. We need the clear clarion voice of a great inspiration to rouse the States to their duty—not the gilded phrases of mere rhetoric, but the honest eloquence of a high and exalted purpose like that ringing speech of Patrick Henry's a a century and a quarter ago, which breathes the very spirit of the present hour of need, when it is said that the States are too week to do their duty and must surrender to government cen-

On the other hand a performance produced by a dramatic organization, bound together solely by the tie of goodfellowship, actuated by a laudable desire to give finished performances at a nominal admittance fee and not for the purpose of financial gain, does not seek the generous mantle of charitable opinion. Indeed there would be little necessity for the latter in connection with the two performances given this week by the Emmitsburg Dramatic Club. If he does leave this troublesome question to the Commission, Congress would probably be called upon next Winter to enact amendments to the rate law, which act amendments to the rate law which would facilitate such work, and the Commission which has concerned itself with a vast variety of less important matters would have to bend all of its energy and talent to keeping in touch with the railroad world.

What physico-psychological effect is produced on the mind when a question a saked?

PSUKOS.

Psukos:
This depends entirely on the nature of the question; for instance, if you ask for that five I borrowed the effect on me would be very serious both physico and psychico, whereas if you were to ask me to join you in boiled live lobster the effect in the psychic order would be decidedly exhilarating, setting up in the region of the pneumographic previous a distribution of the preumographic previous and preumographic previous and preumographic previous and preumographic previous and preumographic preumographi gastric nerves a disturbance that might produce, some hours later, a phantasma-goria that Byrne Bros., "Eight Bells" could never excel; the effect in the physical order would be simply an investigation of your rating in Brad-street Uncle Bill:

Who is the greatest American philosopher and what is the cardinal principle of American philosophy?

PHILOSOPHUS.

According to a great authority on this subject, the Socrates of American philosophy is Phineas T. Barnum, and the cardinal principal is expressed in that truly socratic dictum "There's a sucker born every minute."

Uncle Bill:
What would be a good name for a new drink and what would characterize it?

BARTENDER. Bartender

Paranoia Punch. You drink it and forget to pay for it.
