Mayor of Lancaster Speaks Against Traffic in Cards that are all Hoplessly Bad in Suggestion and Character.-Moral Poison.

Mayor J. P. McCaskey, of Lancaster, Pa., whose whole life has been one of devotion to moral cleanliness and in recognition of whose efforts that city elected him mayor, made the following characteristic remarks before the quarterly meeting of the Federation of Churches of his own town, then consider ing methods in the suppression of the sale and exposure of vicious literature and indecent cards:

'So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.' That is the record. We have no other, and we need no other. In both the vegetable and the animal world this high and beautiful relation of sex—so little understood by any man, so amazingly wonderful, so eloquent of the divine love and wisdom—is essential to the being of everything that lives. But for it our busy world teeming with life in its myriad forms would be a dead planet. You and I are its outcome, and thank God for his beneficent provision of Nature-but another name for Diety-under which we have come into conscious human existence, with all its blessing of to-day and the vast promise for to-morrow. It is a sacred relation, highest and purest and best-if only men had hearts to feel and wisdom to Nothing else in the life of the race has caused so much wreck and utter ruin. caused so much wreck and utter ruin, so much suffering, disappointment and death for time and for eternity, as this relation of sex abused by the folly, the frailty, the madness, and the wickedness of men. "Boys and girls, by tens of thousands, are being ruined in these days by an infamous trade in the so-called post cards that are scattered everywhere. The legitimate postal card has grown into favor with the public, and along the same lines comes the emissary of Satan, with his accursed wares. He finds a ready market. From five hundred to a thousand copies of one of the most dangerous double-cards I have ever seen have been sold within a few weeks in Lancaster. I fear that any one copy of this card may do more harm in the hands of a boy or young man than a teacher can do good in a year of ordinary work in the school room. Within the past month or more. I have been looking into this horrid trade in our city. Of the dozens of kinds of cards that have been surrendered to me, I had never before seen any one of these vile pictures. Some are cheap and crude, others half-tones with more pretension, and still others French photographs of high finish—but all hopelessly bad in suggestion and character. I have sent a thousand or more of them to Anthony Comstock, of New York, Secretary of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, that terror to evildoers in these special lines of infamy.

NOTICE BEING TAKEN OF THIS SUBJECT.

Why are we Right Handed a Perplexing Question.-Well to Supply A Substitute.

In the Sunday Magizine for March 24, O. P. Morris contributes an interesting article on this subject. The following information is gathered from that

Benjamin Franklin was the first great man to raise this question and make an appeal for the disused left hand. More than a century and a half later Franklin's adopted city, Philadelphia took notice of his left hand's plea by bringing ambidextrous training into force in the public schools. training into force in the public schools. Thorough scientific courses of blackboard drawing, brushwork, modeling in clay, and wood carving were introduced so as to train the left hand on terms of perfect equality with the right.

Soon news of what the Quaker City was doing spread abroad in the country, and the cult of ambidexterity throve apace. More than this, it spread into foreign countries; and to-day in the admirable public schools of Prussia both hands are given an equal chance from the child's tenderest years. In England too lectures have been given on the subject to teachers, and on all sides one hears expressions of wonderment that "no one thought of it before." ment that "no one thought of it before."

Many theories are given by way of answer to the inquiry, Why are we right handed? Some suppose it is because of long ages of heredity; that centuries upon centuries of merely. fight with mammoth or mastodon for bare subsistence, stone ax or spear in hand, he probably used the right hand in order to keep his heart, most vital of organs, as far away as possible from organs, as far away as possible from adversary's assault.

That is eyes open must admit it to be. That is a fixed datum, to be conceded in any discussion, whether of the exact amount of his popularity, or of his political future.

Yet as the golden image had feet of

There is much curious and interesting evidence to show that in the early days or the world's history left handed men perienced observers can see serious abounded, and were warriors of renown | weaknesses in another candidacy of at that. If you turn to the Bible you will find many references to left handedness. Thus Ehud the Benjamite, who slew Eglon, King of Moab, was a left hendedness at the standard will be the president as little as his recorded relationship.

As to whether there is any real advantage in ambidexterity, there can only be one reply to this question; for would have to be still more secret. only be one reply to this question; for surely it is well to provide one's right hand with a substitute in case it should fail. And we live in a strenuous age, running risks on railroad and street, in workshop factory. Therefore, it certainly behooves us to give our left hand a fair training in order that, should occasion arise, it may instantly take up all the important duties usually intrusted to its possibly crippled right. No less a personage than the late Queen Victoria realized this, and found much entertainment and amusement in training her left hand to perfect equality with her right; and few people among Her Majesty's hosts of corres-pondents could say definitely with which hand one of her letters had been written. Then too it is clear that if properly trained the left hand may relieve the right of much weary work. Altogether one is not surprised to learn that at this hour of the day, in almost every great capital of the world there are teachers with chalk and blackboard training children to draw circles is the possibility of and freehand movements generally, first with one hand and then with the other, until lines are produced with grace and freedom. Can Mr. Roosevelt Retain His Popularity?

POLITICAL CHANGES.

An Editor Sizes up the Situation and calls Attention to the Falling off from the President of his Onetime Supporters.

While the popularity census is being taken and party organization editors are saying that Mr. Roosevelt is stronger than ever," there is a deal of sawing wood going on among the conservative and thinking element of the Republican party and the opinion of that quiet element in regard to the President would not be expressed by the word "delighted."

A very good idea of the situation seems to be embodied in an editorial in the New York Evening Post of Monday last a part of which is as follows: Putting aside all interested testimony, and making no account of the vocifera-tions of the fawners and parasites, we make no doubt whatever that Mr. Roosevelt has won and retains an extraordinary hold upon great masses of people in this country. And there are signs, too, that he would have difficulty in annexing bodily the labor unions. The protest of Haywood, the miner indicted for murder, and whom Mr. Roosevelt has referred to publicly as an "undesirable citizen, was taken up yesterday by the Central Federated Union. There is much force in it. Here is a man on trial for his life, the facts about whose guilt remain to be proved, and the President of the United States openly stigmatizes him. It was a grave impropriety, and good lawyers agree that Haywood has a just grievance against Mr. Roosevelt. The Central Union is so stirred by it that it calls upon Mr. Roosevelt to Labor newspapers are angrily taking up the quarrel, just as they are ringing the changes on the revelation that the President was urging Harriman to come freely to the White House and advise him about his message, and was gladly taking his money with that of his plutocratic railway associates. THE COMPACT NEWSPAPER.

The tendency is toward the compact newspaper. The large unwieldy sheet is to be a thing of the past, and the voluminous colored suppliment will eventually give way to the clean cut, newsy, well edited and properly arrang-ed paper that is suited to the needs of

SPECIAL PRIVILEGES

BY PUBLIC CONCERNS STIFLES FAIR COMPETITION.

Public Service Upon Railroads, Like Justice In the Courts, Should Be Assured to All On Equal Terms.

Although there is nothing particularly new in the ideas expressed by a certain college president and quoted below, they do serve to bring the matter of railroad rate-discrimination once more to the attention of shippers who should at this particular time use every legal means to force railroads to adopt an equable scale of charges.

"There are two great questions before the people of this country which require the careful and dispassionate 250 miles from Emmitsburg, and many consideration of scholars and practical will take advantage of this rare oppormen of affairs," he said. "Time was tunity to visit what promises to be one men of affairs," he said. "Time was when the railroads were looked upon almost wholly as private property. Contracts were made with them by shippers upon this theory. It resulted in the growth of the greatest evil that exists to-day—in the granting of fortifications, where can be seen all the special privileges and rates to large shippers by transportation companies, which stifle fair competition.

"If a corporation, by securing large capital and the services of men of genius, can reduce the cost of producing any article, and by shipping it in the most economical way to markets at the lowest possible price, society is served. But if a corporation is able to transport its products over a railroad at less rates than are allowed its competitors and can secure facilities which are denied to its competitors, then the law is violated and society suffers to the extent that it is deprived of the most and military features of the Jamestown Exposition that the idea has been created in the minds of some people that the manufacturing and commercial interests are a mere side issue, or at least of minor concern, but nothing people felt that they might as well die by the sword as by hunger.

An Exciting Runaway on Sunday.

A horse belonging to Mr. Hott, living near Payne's Hill, ran away on Sunday morning just after the close of services at St. Joseph's Church. In trying to avoid a team coming down street the horse ran in on the pavement in front of Mr. Charles Rowe's house on West Main street. The horse fell, knocking off a shutter and breaking the door step. Before the animal could get up he was caught. The buggy to which he was attached was uninjured.

Ducks are more difficult to raise than chickens, because they are so cowardly. The difference between the two is noticeable from the start. When a num ber of chicks are liberated from the incubators, they walk boldly out in the light and begin a critical survey of their surroundings. Ducklings will peep timidly out of the incubators, become alarmed at the strange sights their young eyes behold for the first time, and make a dash for the darkest cor-ner available. It takes considerable coaxing to get them to venture out and make a start for themselves and, strange to say, they do not outgrow their fear. When a stranger enters their pen they rush pell mell to the opposite side and pile upon each other

It is estimated that a duck loses in weight every time it is frightened, so it is a matter of good business to keep strangers away from their pens and few visitors are allowed to go there. One of the best ways to get a flock of ducklings to venture out and forage for themselves, is to put a little chicken reference to an Irishman who was being examined as to his knowledge of a certain shooting affair:

"They are quick to follow a leader, and when young Mr. Chicken, who is not afraid, leads off, the ducks

When feeding time comes the keepers have a peculiar call which never fails to bring the tiny feathered beauties in swarms from every direction. The attendants also have alarm call which is a sort of imitation of the whirring noise of a hawk's wings. In event of a storm coming up suddenly, they can clear the yards in less time than it takes to tell it, by sounding this alarm, for which the little birds soon learn to be on the lookout. The natural enemy of the young chicks and ducklings is the rat, but ferrets are kept on the place, and the loss from the depredations of the rodent is small.

Mr. Stevens paid a high tribute to Mr. Wallace, his predecessor. He said that the plan of organization laid down by Mr. Wallace, with a few modifications, was one now in effect. The fancy colored lithographs depicting the beautiful costumes of those who man our nation's war vessels that have graced the walls of many a post office are to be tolored.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided that the Isle of Pines is not American territory. The decision, by Chief Justice Fuller, was in the case of Edward J. Musings Of A Countryman.

Someone commenting on the text John 18:38, "Pilate saith to him: What is truth?" has written, "and the fool went away without waiting for an answer." The comment is more witty than wise, for the Master had already said "I am the way, the truth, and the life," and any definition that he might have given would be received by only that portion of the world of men who find "life in his name"."

What is truth? The question has been asked from the dawn of recorded human striving, is asked today, and the end of the asking is not yet. Systems of of philosophy from the Brahma to Nietsche have been built up in attempts to of philosophy from the Brahma to Nietsche have been built up in attempts to answer, and men yet unborn in languages yet niknown will no doubt strive with the same object in view. Men have even grown weary of the quest and have declared that there is no such thing as truth, or if there be we cannot attain it. And yet we all do many things in the name of truth. We assert that we speak the truth, act the truth, are endeavoring to live the truth. If we take thought with ourselves, however, what a hazy content we have of that all-dominating word in our lives? Would not most of us be compelled to consult our dicionary if 'Pilate's question' were put us directly, and after our consultation of the most approved makers of lexicons would we be much the wiser for our effort?

The Emmit House, under the capable management of Mr. J. W. Breichner, is already attracting many travellers.
When the house was not fully in condition for the reception of guests some insisted on accomodation, and ever since, Mr. Breichner's popularity has become more and more apparent.

Still pretended to think them birds.

Aristole says that we are in possession of truth when we know the four causes of anything, the efficient, the material, the formal, and the final. In other words when we know the answer to the question: Whence is it? What is it? and why is it? The fountain pen with which I write may serve as an illustration. In answer to the first question I know it was made by man, that it did not grow on a tree that it was not dug out of the eath.

To the second question, I know it is composed of rubber and gold under the form of a pen, and in answer to the third, I known that it is for the purpose of writing. Hence my mind is in a state of truth in regard to the pen I hold in my hand. This is the philosophy upon which, the world is built, man livss, and dition for the reception of guests some insisted on accomodation, and ever since, Mr. Breichner's popularity has become more and more apparent.

To Farmers---A Word of Explanation.

There seems to be an impression that the Fine Set of Harness offered by the Emmitsburg Chronicle for the best article on farming will be awarded to the farmer who has raised the biggest crop.

This is a decided mistake. The sole idea is to get a series of articles for publication, written by practical farmers, explaining the methods by which they have succeeded with various

Thus the man who farms 30 acres is on the same footing with the one who farms 300, for the one who cultivates the small farm may have far better ideas than he who owns a greater number of acres, and his product, in proportion, may be greater.

It is simply a question of who has the best ideas.

LIVE CAPITAL TOPICS. The Exercise of Reasonable Diligence

Weekly Letter From Our Regular Correspondent.

Presidential candidacy politics have been seething in Washington. It is quite natural for President Roosevelt to assume to dictate the nomination to to assume to dictate the nomination to the next Presidency. He has been elected to his present office by an unparalleled majority and it is widely conceded that he is more popular now than when he was selected. The desire that he shall run again is well nigh universal. So great is the aspiration of the people for another term of Roosevelt that they refuse to believe his positive, off iterated assertion that he will retire at the end of the present term. Knowing this end of the present term. Knowing this feeling as he does he cannot doubt its meaning and it is nothing more than reasonable for him to assume that since he cannot fulfil a universal wish by accepting the office in person he can a least name a proxy or successor. Thi is all there is to it and it is certainly enough. There are millions of enthusi astic supporters of the President who long to see the policies and enterprise that are known as "Rooseveltian, complished and have no hope that they will be under the sinister and abhorren minority that is working for the old gang in support of Fairbanks, Foraker

Washington society is deeply stirred now over the failure of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont to be accepted to mem bership in one of the country club made up of the fashionables of the Capital. Mr. Belmont is the brother of August Belmont and O. H. P. Belmon and all are well known in social circles in this country and in Europe. They have vast wealth and are members of exclusive clubs of New York and London. Nevertheless upon being proposed for the Chevy Chase Club here they were black balled. The fact is of small importance except to Mr. and Mrs. Belmont and their immediate friends but taken as an indication of Belmont and their immediate friends but, taken as an indication of the feeling and sentiment of the exclu-sive society people of the city, is of decided interest. Several reasons are alleged for the snubbing of this well-known family. Divorced people are ac-cepted here as they are in other cities, for common as they are among the smart set there would be an apalling thinning out of the ranks if the divorcthinning out of the ranks if the divorc ed ones were excluded, but there are prominent people here who have their notions about it and who have never forgotten the unsavory details of the divorce of Mrs. Belmont from W. H. Sloan, of New York, and her speedy marriage with Mr. Belmont who, it was alleged, was responsible for the divorce. Then Thomas Nelson Page, the author and one of the shining lights of society is said to have rather emphatically expressed the agreements of phatically opposed the acceptance of the Belmonts on the ground that the fast set of New York should not get a foothold at Washington where society should consist, according to his notion should consist, according to his hotion, of the serious, cultured and literary set made up of the diplomats, the prominent officials and authors. He would have the society of the Capital of the old Faubourg St. Germain type and he would repleate the test of extractors some would make the test of entrance some prominence and distinction other than that of mere wealth or "horsiness.
