Present Criminal Procedure Sadly At Fault.

EXPERTS NOT HEEDED.

Result of the Thaw Case Brings out the Weak Points in the Conduct of Criminal Cases and Emphasizes the Need of a Decided Change.

The outcome of the celebrated Thaw case has aroused interest wherever the trial has been followed, and although opinions differ very widely as to the result, there seems to be no doubt as to the necessity for reform in criminal procedure as practiced to-day. A contibutor to the Post (N. Y.) expresses his views on the subject as follows:

The course of the criminal trial which has just ended has fully justified the demand for various reforms in our criminal procedure. It may prove fortunate in the event that in a case exciting so wide an attention, several of the weak points of our practice were emphasized. Expert testimony has certainly proved itself—not for the first time—an offence. The root of this matter is that the expert has become an advocate, with an advocate's code. This is felt to be incongruous in a matter of scientific fact; but much of the expert's testimony is not on questions of scientific fact at all, but of inference, probability, possibility. If it were stated as such it need not offend more than the lawyer's frankly partisan statement of the law and facts as affecting his client. It should not be impossible roughly to separate the questions of fact to be determined by a non-partisan expert in the permanent service of the State, and questions of opinion on which State and defendant might be represented by partisan scientific men each doing his best for his client consistent with conscience and self-respect, and under well-defined legal restrictions.

It may very well be that the law as to insanity and responsibility requires a certain broadening. The present criterion is generally speaking fair and furnishes a safeguard against the abuse of the insanity plea. But the question remains whether a full degree of re-sponsibility should be attached to the make him altogether abnormal.

further on the degrees of murder. This is entirely apart from any general theoretical objection to the death Let us admit that there are crimes to which it seems to most people, rightly or wrongly, the only adequate answer. On the other hand, there are crimes falling clearly enough within the definition of murder in the first degree which have an entirely different aspect to the average mind. In the United States in such cases the sentimentality of the jury is appealed for some time against James Gordon to—and it would be strange if there Bennett, of Paris and New York, and were not one or two sentimental men the Herald Company, of New York City, on an average jury-and it is very apt to acquit or disagree and compromise opinion, revolting, appeals to

One of the advantages of the jury system is that it possesses a large degree of flexibility; and it very frequently happens that the rigidity of the law, whether in regard to the definition of statute law and the judge's charge, the effect is demoralizing.

It is thought unwise to further refine and perhaps complicate the law by providing specifically for modified respon bility in certain cases of medical insanity, and for new degrees of murder, then it is worth considering whether the jury cannot be legally invested with a limited discretion as to the penalty, or at the least an express privilege of making a formal recommendation which would be legally and The Proper Lengths and Kind of Majudicially passed upon.

It may be answered that in exceptional cases they ought to rely on the pardoning power. They cannot have ion spreads that the death penalty is bears only a family resemblance to from the influence of the same feelings.

COL. GEO. A. PEARRE WOULD NOT BE GOVERNOR.

Congressman Denies the Report that he has his Eye on Annapolis .-Looks as Though he Would Not Refuse Judgeship

Col. Geo. A. Pearre, Congressman from the Sixth Congressional District whose candidacy for the governorship was advocated by the Hagerstown Herald last week, is reported to have discountenanced the idea.

In putting forth its selection for governor the Herald said, editorially, "As Governor, George A. Pearre will be acceptable to the party in all sections of the State. As Governor, Geo. A. Pearre, brilliant, courteous, possess ing social qualities of high degree, earnest and intelligent as a statesman, devoted to the people and familiar with their needs—would fulfil the best traditions of the Executive Mansion at Annapolis and satisfy the demands of a people, proud of the Commonwealth."

In reply to all this, Col. Pearre expressed his appreciation of the honor his friends and adherents would bestow upon him, but he indicated that he was not as yet prepared to announce his future political plans. He is said to have stated that were he an aspirant for an office other than Representative Congress, which position he now holds, it would be along the line of his profession. This is taken to mean that he night be a candidate for the nomina tion for Chief Judge, to succeed Judge A. Hunter Boyd. Col. Pearre did not say that he was a candidate for judge, but it is thought he is looking in that direction. He intimated that he would continue active in Allegany, as well as Sixth district, politics. His hand was shown at the recent meeting of the Republican State Committee when he landed the secretaryship for Mr. Irvine R. Dickey, of Cumberland, who is Col. Pearre's law partner. Colonel Pearre says there was no contest in the meeting of the Republican State Central Committee, despite some intimation to the contrary, and that the members from the Sixth district were very much pleased over the selection of Mr. Dickey.

FORESTS A NECESSITY.

Mr. Roosevelt Writes a Letter Which is Read to School Children Throughout the Country .- To Observe Arbor Day "Thoughtfully" was his Appeal.

The offer made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, through its Division of Forestry, to give advice and assistance in the handling of forest lands, similar offers on the part of the Forestry Bureaus of the various States, and an increasing interest in Arbor Day manifested by Agriculture Coileges, schools and the people in general, has established an almost universal sentiment in favor of forest preservation.

To still further impress upon the ounger generation the importance of cultivating and preserving wooded lands everywhere thoughout the United States, President Roosevelt wrote the following letter which was read in all public schools on Monday last:

"Arbor Day (which means simply Tree Day') is now observed in every State in our Union-and mainly in the schools. At various times from January to December, but chiefly in this month of April, you give a day, or part of a day, to special exercises, and perhaps to actual tree-planting, in recognition of the importance of trees to us as a nation, and of what they yield in adornment, comfort, and useful products to the communities in which you live.

"It is well that you should celebrate your Arbor Day thoughtfully, for within your lifetime the nation's need of trees will become serious. We of an older generation can get along with what we have, though with growing hardship; but in your full manhood and womanhood you will want what nature once so bountifully supplied and man so thoughtlessly destroyed, and because of that want you will reproach us, not for what we have used, but for what

"For the nation, as for the man or woman and the boy or girl, the road to success is the right use of what we have and the improvement of present opportunity. If you neglect to prepare your-self now for the duties and responsibilities which will fall upon you later, if you do not learn the things which you will need to know when your schooldays are over, you will suffer the consequences. So any nation, which in its youth lives only for the day, reaps without sowing, and consumes without husbanding, must expect the penalty of the prodigal, whose labor could with difficulty find him the bare means of

GUILTY OIL TRUST.

Case Tried Before Judge Landis in Chicago and Verdict Rendered Against Standard Defendants.

The Standard Oil Company which was indicted for accepting concessions in storage charges, reductions in rates, and receiving other advantages of railroad discrimination has been found guilty on 1,462 counts and not guilty on 441 counts of the indictment. The maximum fine is $20,000 on each count and $1,000 the minimum. The attorneys for the oil company moved for a new trial hoping to get a verdict based on all the charges being considered as one count. This would limit the entire fine to $20,000. District Attorney Sims of Chicago, where the case was tried before Judge Landis, insisted that each rebate and concession constituted a distinct count, and he will endeavor to exact the maximum penalty in each specification. This would bring the aggregate fine to $29,240,000.

Democratic Party Sorely In Need Of Good Leader.

STRONG MAN SOUGHT.

Too Many Factions in the Democratic Camp at Present.-Just at a time When Concord Should Reign .-Judge Gray's Name Mentioned Among Others.

A political correspondent writing ver the initials E. G. L., thinks that the time is ripe for concerted action on the part of the Democrats. In a special to the New York Evening Post this gentleman advances the ideas expressed below in his own words.

The trouble with the Democratic party, candid representatives of that rganization point out, is that it is split p into factions, the writer contends. is conceded that Bryan has the largest following, but he is not satisfactory to the party in the South, or to the conservative Democrats of the East. Hearst is a force in the party that must be reckoned with, but the average Bryan man will not accept him. Hearst is even more distasteful to the conceptable more distasteful to the conceptable more distant. servative members of the party North and South than Bryan. And then there is a respectable company of Democrats who will never enter heartily into port of either Bryan or Hearst. This npany of conservatives is not confined to any particular section of the country, but its most assertive repre-sentatives are to be found in the East and in the South Within the last few months a nany Democrats who have the future of the party at heart have been study ing the situation with the hope that some way might be found for reuniting the party, but these men now confess that the task seems almost hopeless. But the reorganizers have not given up all hope of accomplishing something. They like to hear the talk that Roosevelt will be forced to take a third term. They believe that it is barely possible that if Roosevelt should be the candidate of the Republicans again, the Democratic party might be persuaded to drop Bryan and nominate a conservative; some man of the type of Judge George Gray, Judson Harmon, Senator Daniel of Virginia, or some one of a dozen other men who are mentioned as being in the proper class.

Among thoughtful Democrats both in the East and in the South, there is much serious talk of the possibility of forcing Bryan off the track. The idea seems to be that the country would accept a candidate who would be a sort of compromise between Bryan and Roosevelt if such a man can be found. It might well to attempt to ascertain the difference between Bryan and Roosevelt and their political beliefs before setting out in search of this ideal candidate, who would be a compromise between two extreme radicals. Such a man is not to be named off-hand. That "scrap of sunset dowered with a voice," J. "Ham" Lewis, is the type of Democrat who is most often quoted these days. When he was in Washing-

Democratic organizers the country is alive with Republicans, who, while says an authority on the subject, admiring Roosevelt, refuse to endorse its true cause in the religious decadence

Southern Democrats to pull the party away from Bryan, but they are disposed to doubt whether the enterprise can succeed. It is pointed out by persons who have some knowledge of the political conditions in all sections of the country that the would-be reorganizers underestimate the hold Bryan has on the Democrats of the country lying west of the Alleghany Mountains and north of the Ohio River. 'Why,'' said a Western Democrat today, "there would be a revolt western Democrats if the South and Western Democrats in getting conthe East should succeed in getting con-trol of the next Democratic national convention and should, after rejecting both Bryan and Hearst, nominate a conservative. The cry would go up that a 'rich man's conspiracy' within the Democratic party had succeeded in getting control of the convention. Under such circumstances the Demo-crats of the West, as a rule, would, I believe, vote for Roosevelt, should he be the nominee of the Repulicans. And so it goes. The most optimistic of the Democrats are unable to extract much hope out of the situation. Is it any wonder then that the "flare up" the Republican camp over Presidential possibilities apparently has not revived spark of hope in the breast of any Democratic newspaper. Is it at all strange that the Democratic editors talk as if there is no longer a national Democratic party in existence? Is there such a party?

The contention of the defendant was that the Corporation could not bring an action in a plea for debt to recover tayes claimed to be due, that the Act was played by Mr. Michael A. Gilloegly. Mr. Linus Keating assumed the role of the brainless, bibulous, presumptuous Sir Andrew Aguecheck. Mr. Keating had previously played this part and the jestful boisterousness of the old toper was well acted. A saving edge was put on the roistering humor of Sirs Toby and Aguecheek, by the grindstone wit of my lady's waiting maid Maria, which character was played by Mr. Sidney A. Quinn. Maria's trickery was well studied by Mr. Quinn and made the most of by the very delightful manner in which the gentleman played. My lady's steward, Malvolio, the yellow-legged stork, with the self-importance of a peacock and the pompousness of a turkey gobler, was a revelation to behold as played by Mr. Frank L. Devine. What Mr. Devine lacked in looks, -for we conceive Malvolio a tall individual, -he more than Malvolio a tall individual, —ne more than compensated by the energy which he infused into his acting. As we study the character of Malvolio, we are convinced that he is imbued with his assumed sense of self importance, and,to our great amusement, -is unconscious of the necessity of avoiding, for his own good pleasure and hap-piness, the diffusion of this taint over all the details of his life. NOT WORTH A CONTINENTAL.

Yesterday I heard a good old farmer declare a certain thing "was not worth a Continental."

On asking him what a "Continental" was, I found that he did not know. I didn't either.

So I asked a little girl who is breaking into the High School. She told me that a "Continental" was the common name for the paper shilling used during the Revolutionary War, which when Washington was at Valley Forge was worth about two cents. In fact Valley Forge forged the term of contempt, "not worth a Continental."—Philistine.

Musings Of A Countryman.

HOW MUCH TRUTH CAN WE KNOW?

In knowing the truth our minds are not merely as mirrors reflecting the world outside of us. They are beings capable of action on their own part, and can, and do, combine impressions received from without into a systematized whole. The universe is not a mere aggregate of unrelated units but each part is linked to the other to form what the ancient Greeks called the cosmos—the beautiful.

In knowing this cosmos our minds comprehend it in all its wonderful variety in unity, and man by his power of intelligence becomes a microcosm—a little world in himself. We do not, of course, apprehend the whole universe by one intellectual action. Our minds being above all else finite we are limited as to the amount of their action. We can put no more water in a vessel, than the vessel will hold, and our mental capacity is the limit of our intellectual action.

While we cannot grasp all the universe by one act we can in a succession of actions get a more or less perfect view. The medieval philosophers understood this well, when they declared that man was a potential whole, that he was capable by a series of intellectual processes of becoming an intelligent mirror of the universe.

His intellectual ability to apprehend things and their causes places man at the apex of creation, renders him as Hamlet says: "Noble in reason! infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals!"

Nor is his ability to know the whole truth confined to the visible world. He can as Saint Paul says, deduce "from the creation of the world, His eternal power and also divinity."

He can mount from the things seen and their causes to the great unseen First-cause, from the truth that the world sets forth to the Truth that is the perfection of all Truth.

perfection of all Truth. There are two permanent powers in man. The power to know the truth and the power to love the good. The knowledge obtainable through the senses is ephemeral as are the things themselves. The truth which the intellect grasps, and the moral good which the free-will endeavors to live, alone contribute to the permanent man. They constitute the character that lives beyond man's day on earth, they are his only contribution to the sum of truth and goodness.

Thus the man who farms 30 acres is on the same footing with the one who farms 300, for the one who cultivates the small farm may have far better ideas than he who owns a greater number of acres, and his product, in proportion, may be greater.

¶ It is simply a question of who has the best ideas.

Weekly Letter From Our Regular Correspondent.

There is no doubt that Senator Foraker will put up a determined fight in the coming campaign. He is a fighter by birth and education. He has been twice Governor of his State and Amer can Lever Watches. twice elected to the Senate. He has not however been always successful.
"He has known defeat and mocked it as he ran." He is the most conspicuous and consistent of the reactionaries. He was alone among Republican Senators voting against the Railroad rate bill. His soubriquet is "Fire alarm Foraker." The campaign waged in Ohio and which he has gone thither to direct will be fateful of his political fortunes and if he should unexpectedly thwart the nomination of Taft it will be the control of the should unexpected t probably settle the question as to his candidacy.

The perplexing question as to the names to be given to the various blends, mixtures, adulterations and imitations of whiskey has been finally settled by the President himself. "Straight whiskey" is the only brand of fire water that will henceforth be permitted to use the unmodified name of whiskey. The action of the President is taken under the pure food law which affects about ninety per cent. of all the whiskeys in the United States. Under his ruling whiskeys shall be labled for just what they are, straight whiskey to be labled as such; a mixture of two or more candidacy. as such; a mixture of two or more straight whiskyes to be labled blended whiskey; a mixture of straight whiskey and ethyl alcohol provided there key and ethyl alcohol provided there is enough straight whiskey to make it genuinely a "mixture," will be labeled as compound of pure grain distillate; and imitation whiskey will be labeled as such. Secretary Bonaparte in rendering a decision as to the purpose of the pure food law indulged in a little humor with regard to the controversy over the names of the different whiskeys. According to his facetious judgment According to his facetious judgment "Semper idem" might be used to designate straight whiskey, "E Pluribus Unum" for the second ranks with "Modern Improved and Something better than whiskey" for other grades and imitations.

Distillers and rectifiers throughout the country have awaited his decision with intense interest and for months the question has been stubbornly de-bated between the whiskey interests and the representatives of the Govern-

The unveiling of the equestrian statue of Gen. McClellan recalls to mind that there are now in the city equestrian statues of Washington, Jackson, Scott, Greene, Logan, McPherson, Thomas, Sherman, Hancock, with projected statues of Sheridan and Grant. The last is to have a statue surroundlast is to have a statue surrounded by bronze groups representing the different arms of the service and designed to surpass all others in suggestion and impression. We are not a warlike country or people, but no country not even France, can boast so many memorials to war. There is in the city a statue to Daniel Webster, the gift of a private citizen, Mr. Stilson Hutchins, also a statue of Benjamin Franklin by the same gentleman. It would be by the same gentleman. It would be more credit if we should honor in a greater degeee the many distinguished men, scientists, statesmen, philanthrop-ists of the country. It is not to men on horseback merely that America owes her distinction or to whom history will finally award its highest praise.

It is understood that Washington statesmen are going to taboo all dinners hereafter except those given at the
