Discussion Of The Knox Boom By Several Papers.

HAS STRONG BACKING.

Editors Place Different Constructions on the Move and Give their Individual Ideas About the Result of the Campaign.-"Favorite Son" Policy.

The people did not seem to take it eriously when the so-called Knox boom "The distinction between the execuseriously when the so-called Knox boom was started last winter. Nor did many newspapers look upon it in any other light than a desire on the part of Mr. Knox's friends to pay him a formal compliment at the time. is not to be lightly estimated.

At the very outset let it be broadly understood throughout the country that this is not a narrow, perfunctory or me-chanical expression. It is no mere Machine declaration. The elements of Republicanism in Pennsylvania which are in sympathy with the best and most progressive Republicanism of the nation are heartily for Senator Knox. They are for him because they know how true, sound and sure he is, and how well he embodies the principals and purposes for which the worthiest Republicanism

At the same time there should be no suspicion of the sincerity and fidelity with which the regular Republican organization of the State has put forward Senator Knox as the Presidential candidate. There is no reservation and no ulterior The movement is launched be cause it is the natural and inevitable outgrowth of both State and national conditions. It is the recognition of Senator Knox's large and commanding bound to take the broad avenue of popular rights and protection against banded greed; the Republican party of the State is bound to go along with it, and Senator Knox is the individual bond of union."

Harington and D. Lloyd, and to the judicial manœuvre as anything but a little diversion, or else a scheme for tying up the delegates from that State in a way to make them highly useful for trading purposes in the National Convention. This was long the fashion under the Cameron dynasty, as later under Quay and the Penrose machine is a good im tator. Tradition and precedent are of great power in politics, and two obstacles of that sort confront Mr. Knox's ambition. First, there is the rule, now amounting almost to a superstition, that no man can hope to go from the Senate to the White House. Garfield was elected President after he had been the name of the tug or the barge. chosen Senator from Ohio, but he had Is Knox to never sat in the Senate. succeed where Clay and Webster and and Sherman failed? Still more formidable is the difficulty of a purely modern sort. Senator Knox has had a career as a corporation lawyer and his candidacy would be exposed to the troublesome question which President Roosevelt put in the case of Mr. Root. It was in effect: 'I think most highly of his abilities, and feel that he is admirably fitted to be President; but do you really think a corporation lawyer could be elected?""

Seeing nothing of a Roosevelt thirdterm move in Mr. Knox's candidacy the Washington Herald accepts him as the out and out choice of the Republican party in the Keystone State, but suggests that Mr. Knox's candidacy would been strengthened by a tariff plank. This is the suggestion

We feel certain that Mr. Knox's candidacy would have been strengthened everywhere by a declaration for tariff revision, which, coming from the stronghold of protectionism, would have for the battleship Minnesota, when she been an earnest of sincerity of purpose was suddenly struck and sent to the on the part of the Republican party to bottom in several fathoms of water. take up the tariff question in a spirit of reform. The tariff plank adopted is apt to have just the contrary effect, in spite of the assertion of Mr. Knox's friends that he is willing to have Congress undertake revision in 1910.

A part of the editorial comment in that paper was: "The unanimous action of the Pennsyl vania Republican Convention, placing Senator Knox in nomination for the Presidency, brings a new figure of force and interest into the contest for the Presidential succession. There may be plenty of money to handle it, to transform and apply it to new means of production, but if it is not to is something of value to call it out and

"This country with all the activity of perity and wealth, is short of capital because it has not been saving enough Consumption has been lavish and wasteful and has kept too close upon the footsteps of production. Any surplus that this extravagance has permitted has been quickly turned into the means of increasing production, which has only stimulated increase of consumption, appetite all the while growing by what it feeds upon. There has been much borrowing of the future, for money may be used in handling credits that anticipate the future accumulation of capital and postpone the realization of value. While this has been going on and as a result of the eagerness with which it has been pushed, the demand for labor has caused an increase wages, increase of wages has raised the cost of production and the prices of products, increase of prices has required more capital to accomplish the same results, and the capital has been wasted in unstited consumption and absorbed n providing for larger production until there is no surplus to be had, except in driblets as it is newly saved, and the future is overmortgaged. The feverish haste is compelled to stop, the expansion has reached its limit and is being squeezed back, consumption must be checked and we must wait for capital to accumulate. The cost of doing things must be reduced, there must be a slow ing up, a saving in expense and the nursing of a slowly growing surplus of production over consumption. "The present lack of capital in country and the difficulties and cost of raising that actually needed for legitimate enterprises are in a large degree due to squandering the fruits of past production. While consumption has been extravagant and wasteful on all sides, existing capital has largely been used by processes of manipulation, not for solid additions to existing wealth and its fair distribution, but for gathering it into the hands of individuals and cliques who have had the control of its application. at the expense of those who furnished it. For the Extra Stout the Short, and the Tall, Slim Man.

For the man of abnormal build, the extra stout, and slim, we have well provided. And there is no price penalty whatever for the abnormality.

Usually the very stout and the tall, slim fellows have an unusually hard task to find a suit of clothes that will not only fit their person, but that will fit their fancy as well. We have long since changed that order of things by keeping in stock at all times a very broad variety of neat patterns in worsteds, Cheviots, and Cassimeres, in addition to plain effects.

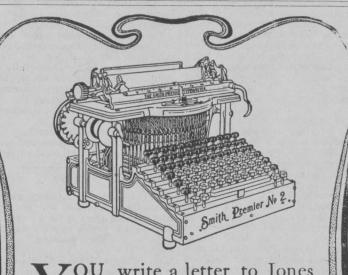

We provide for every variation of the human frame—noror abnormal—and every garment measures up to an infinitely higher standard than that which usually governs the clothing of unusual measurements.

"THE PRIVATE SECRETARY" AT ST. EUPHEMIA'S.

Emmitsburg's Capable Players End a Brilliant Season by Presenting Wm. Gillette's Witty Comedy.

-Large Audiences.

The admirable presentation of "The Private Secretary" by the Emmitsburg Dramatic Club, Monday and Tuesday evenings, was a fitting climax to Emmitsburg's very successful dramatic season, and Father Maloy's able band of entertainers need have no doubt as to the impression made upon the large audiences which greeted Mr. Gillette's sparkling comedy.

The people knew from past performances that the play would be properly presented and knowing this, they went—and they were repaid for going.

First of all the stage setting was complete. Every detail received atten-by Mr. Charles Stouter who had many complications to unravel. Mr. Robert Kerrigan had a perfect conception of his important part and in the character of the Rev. Robert Spalding displayed marked talent as a young amateur actor. Applause greeted him whenever he spoke his lines, and his actions, his facial expression and attitudes created much genuine amusement throughout the entire evening.

Harry Marsland's acting (Mr. John Harry Marsland's acting (Mr. John Rosensteel assuming the part) was good from every standpoint and his interpretation of the character assigned him was very clever indeed. Mr. Rosensteel has a good voice and a fine stage presence and his manner was thoroughly natural and his attitudes easy and graceful.

Dr. J. McC. Foreman, the free and devil-may-care Douglas Cattermole.

devil-may-care Douglas Cattermole, was up to his usual standing as an ac-tor, and when that is said further criticism is hardly necessary. Dr. Foreman does not act, he lives, for the time being, whatever part he assumes. On Monday and Tuesday evenings he was 'ilving some' and the audience was with him in his splendid portrayal of Gillette's well-known creation.

Mr. Joseph Elder as Gibson, the irrepressible tailor, was wrapped up in his part and, incidentally, in a few curtains, and the manner in which he insisted on the payment of his bill would have been worthy the attention of any tailor in real life. His mannerof any tailor in real life. His manner-isms and bluster created much amusement and his acting reflected much credit upon himself.

So creditably have the young ladies of the Emmitsburg Dramatic Club inavariably acquitted themselves in the several plays heretofore given at St. Euphemia's Hall that it seems almost unnecessary to say more than that Miss Euphemia Tyson, Miss Valerie Welty, Miss Julia Tyson and Miss Helen Knode were in the cast. Full justice to them however, demands more comment as never before did their ability show to

Miss Velovic Welty, and Miss Julia

Miss Valerie Welty and Miss Julia Tyson as Eva Webster and Edith Mars-land, were very happy in their respec-tive roles and their vivacity and their tharming personality gave a breezy touch to the action of the comedy.

The minor part of the play, that of the Butler was well taken by Mr. F. S. Starner who was well made up and always equal to the demands made upon Mention has frequently been made of the untiring efforts of Rev. Father Maloy whose direction and training have made these achievements possible, but no comment has been fulsome, for this gentleman deserves far more praise this gentleman deserves far more praise than he has publicly received and he and Prof. Halm, both of whom have given so much pleasure to the community, may be assured that their unselfish work has been thoroughly appreciated.

Smith was cut heavily by his party but the Republican votes cast for him more than compensated for his losses. Mr. Shepherd ran way ahead of the ticket. This was not due to the weakness of Ausherman, his opponent, but rather to the splendid record of the City Register. Ausherman consented to go on the ballot but made practically no fight for election. The Democratic aldermen all won by substantial majorities, greater than that of Mayor Smith. Mile traveling expenses of the President there was long and spirited debate as to whether that amount would cover Eleanor, visited in Frederick a few days the expense of his travels or on the other hand if it might not be more than required. With the close of the fiscal vear now near at hand, it is possible to make a calculation of the probabl yearly traveling expenses of the president. This has not been one of his busiest years in the traveling line Mr. Harry Orndorff is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Orndorff, that is as many as he wanted to make and he has traveled in good style, if not in the splendor of the old days when he was traveling at the expense of the railroads. When he has concluded the trip to Lamestown which he will but he has made a number of trips, of the railroads. When he has concluded the trip to Jamestown which he will take next week, the total expenditure for his year's traveling will be less than eight thousand dollars. It is true that his trip to Panama, which was the most extended and most expensive of the year, was made on a war ship and consequ ly the amount did not come out of his jaunting allowance, but it will be seen that the twenty-five thousand is likely to prove an adequate amount for the most restless President we may have. In the midst of our toasting General Kuroki, a number of 'lawless reso-lutes in San Francisco attack a Japanese cafe and presto, an international situation with the Japanese papers in Tokio hinting war and all this before the Panama Canal is finished and while our defenceless Philippines are three weeks from our base of supplies and only about five days from the Japanese strongholds. The Japanese papers claim that the outrages against their countrymen are less excusable than the murder of a missionary in China which resulted in the occupation of Chinese territory by an American force. These papers say that the recent treaty be-tween the United States and Japan has been treated as a matter fit for a waste paper basket and do not accept the theory of State rights or the irre-sponsibility of the United States for the barbarous conduct of California, or rather of a mob in San Francisco. We could doubtless lick the Japanese if that were the only question; but we are, it is to be hoped, big enough to loath a war in defense of unjustifiable attacks upon Japanese sojourners by undesirable citizens of San Francisco. The National conscience will not justify such a war. We have in a score of instances come to the defense of our people when attacked in foreign countries and the causes are numerous in which foreign countries have paid damages for such attacks. We cannot honestly

Whatever Mr. Roosevelt says is an epigram. An epigram used to have a different meaning, but it has all been changed in these strenuous times and now as to what constitutes an epigram depends on who says it.
