FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1917.

Is there any reason why the streets of Emmitsburg should become a speedway on Sunday evening? We have no regulations governing the rate of speed at which automobiles shall pass through town,—and there is certainly a necessity for a regulation of this kind,—but there is an ordinance prohibiting fast and careless driving at all times. Those who indulge in racing or in speeding their horses for amusement usually select the hour immediately after dark when identification is not an easy matter, and when pedestrians are less likely to be conscious of their approach. As for automobiles, they enter and continue through the town at an unusually high speed and the occupants of the machines seem perfectly indifferent to the feelings or the safety of those on the streets or for accidents that may befall the teams hitched along the thoroughfares. Such indifference on the part of the occupants of the buggies or automobiles will some day prove disastrous, and it might not be amiss just at this time for those in authority to enforce the existing laws in regard to the former and to pass a suitable ordinance regulating the latter.

AFTER disorganizing the local free delivery system the Post Office Department has now turned its attention to the mail boxes in Emmitsburg. These (there are only three, and the number is barely sufficient to meet the needs of the town) are to be detached and forwarded to Baltimore, and hereafter, unless some heed is given to the petition forwarded to the department by the citizens of the borough, business men and the public generally will be compelled to carry their letters from one end of the town or the other to the Post Office to be mailed. There is no reason given for this action; a peremptory order has been issued and the people who use the mails are supposed to take the consequences with a smile and be thankful that the Post Office itself is not removed.

It is no unusual thing to read of vast fortunes being left to relatives, to churches, to libraries or to public institutions. Detailed accounts of bequests like these are being featured in the press day after day under prominent headings. We hear of affecting resolutions being passed by various boards and "sent to the family of the deceased", and we know that the names of the donors are on the lips of thousands of cursory readers. If the benefactor be a man of prominence the busy world pauses to take a breath—and then goes on; but soon the donor and the gift are forgotten, save by the few, and the act of the giver, generous though it be, is added to the long list of similar deeds performed by others, the last one only helping to make the list more lengthy and more commonplace. Yet little enough is heard of those who "leave their fortunes" while they live, for big kindly hearts, filled with sympathy and attuned to sorrow and misfortune, shun the thought of their inmost feelings being inscribed upon the records of the Orphans' Court. Their happiness is in making others happy and witnessing the joy their wealth gives those to whom has come misfortune or disaster. Such as these go to their death "unheralded and unsung" in public print, but the good they do while living is deeply graven in the memory of many a grateful character whose life has been made more enduring because such benefactors lived. And one can conceive no greater and more lasting monument than this. Only the other day there died in New York a man who measured up to this standard. He was a man of wealth, and that wealth in dollars and cents, at one time reached a million and a half. But he did not hoard it. He spent his fortune with his own hands, he saw the good it did; and this man was even wealthier when he died than when he was alive, for in dying poor himself, he had it said by all who knew him, that "no needy person ever asked him for help in vain."

THERE are indeed many ways in which philanthropy may express itself, and we have hinted at only some of the objects towards which it is usually directed by wills and testaments of people of wealth. But a more unusual and it may not be amiss to say a better object than any of these, is suggested by a reader of the New York Herald who holds that the acme of philanthropy is bestowing the greatest good on the greatest number. He would have men of wealth, who desire to benefit posterity, build magnificent roads throughout the country. These highways would be permanent memorials to the generosity of the benefactor, their value to all communities would be inestimable, and their very construction would, he suggests, "provide profitable employment and opportunity for honest labor."

There is nothing new, to be sure, in pleading for good roads. The common sense of people everywhere dictates that a system of good roads is the greatest asset any state or county or neighborhood can possess; but the idea of memorial roads, to be built by private means, is a new and a most practical one. Nor could the national government adopt a better plan for perpetuating the valor of its heroes than by building memorial highways near the homes where these heroes were born. Monuments are all very well in their way—they are beautiful to look upon (a small percentage of them at least) and their erection indicates the desire of a generous country to honor its noble dead,—but a far more practical appreciation of the deeds of good public or private characters may be shown by the building, with public and private wealth, good roads for the enjoyment and the benefit of the many.

The old saying to the effect that to talk too much is a bad thing was proved the other day by a woman in Utah, who, in debating at the rate of a hundred and fifty words a minute, snapped her jaw bone.

We heartily agree with that part of Governor Warfield's speech, delivered at the "conference," in which he said:

"I have had my day in public life, and I think it would be a good thing for the Democracy of our State if some other party men would realize that they also have had their day and their share of the honors and emoluments of public office, and would step aside and let new men come to the front and have a chance. Let them put aside selfishness and show a patriotic spirit. Let each of them say to the people: 'For 30 years you have been serving and honoring me; I now step back into the ranks. Let us have new men and new blood to lead Democracy in this fight.'"

There are already too many has-beens and stay-ons in both parties—men who in their heyday may have been strong, resourceful and influential, but who, like old actors who have had their day, still refuse to leave the stage although their power and perspicacity is either on the wane or past resuscitation. Old campaigners who have sniffed the smoke of fierce political battle may be needed at councils of war, but younger men, well-balanced, normal men of high principles, vigorous, progressive and full of enthusiasm, are needed in both parties for leadership as well as for positions in the ranks.

We cannot understand where the Editor of the Philadelphia Press gets his authority for the statement that "nearly 7,000,000 of our voters practically accept

Mr. Bryan as their chief political prophet and evangel." We agree with him that Mr. Bryan is an adept in taking up and rapidly discarding new issues and that he is "singularly vacillating" and "uncertain," but these very facts make it more impossible for us to imagine Mr. Bryan controlling the judgment and actions of 7,000,000 voters.

"An analysis of the membership of the Democratic convention which has been invited to assemble in Baltimore, if there shall be a general response to the call, does not convince that a very strenuous effort has been made to get away from that substituted influence which has heretofore usurped the functions of popular sentiment in the making of Democratic tickets."

QUITS THE JOB.

City Attorney Keedy Resigns No Reason Given. (From Our Regular Correspondent.) Quite a surprise was given the Mayor and aldermen of Frederick last Tuesday evening, when City Attorney C. O. Keedy tendered his resignation as such at a meeting of the Board. Mr. Keedy had only recently been named and in his letter of resignation he gave no reasons for his act.

FREDERICK ALDERMEN MEET.

The Board of Aldermen of Frederick, at their meeting last week, decided to have a system of building laws and regulations and the matter was referred to the city attorney, Mr. Keedy, that he might draw up the necessary ordinances. Action was also taken in reference to the laying of the W. F. & G. Railroad track in the Fourth street ward, it is contended, this company did not conform with the existing established grade. The board employed the Westinghouse-Church-Kerr Company (Mr. S. L. Dodge, local manager of engineering corps, to obtain the correct grade and report thereon to the board as to the grade and any modifications that may be offered. The engineers are now at work. An extra fire plug to a six-inch main was ordered placed on West Church street, at the Court House during the week ending July 23.

AFTERNOON OF CARNAGE.

Three Men Hurt in Wednesday's Game of Baseball.—Thurmont Defeated. On Wednesday afternoon after six innings of play Thurmont was defeated by her hurs during the game and one pretty seriously. Mr. Reilly in the sixth inning was hit by a pitched ball and was seriously hurt. Mr. Rouser earlier in the game was also hit. He stayed in the game until it was called although he was in no condition to play. Mr. Charles Rowe had his finger split and retired. The game was called in the sixth inning because of the carnage—there were no more players to be killed.

SURPRISE PARTY.

On Tuesday evening the friends and neighbors of Mrs. Charles Enck, of Hotel Motters, gave her a grand surprise party in honor of her birthday. Refreshments were served in abundance. Among the present were: Mr. Chas. Enck, Mrs. Chas. Enck, Masters David, Boyd and Chester Enck, Mr. William Harner, Mrs. William Harner, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Eby, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Knipple, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Dubel, Miss Ida Harmsburg, Mr. Lewis Troxell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Knipple, Master Charles and Morris Knipple, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shriner, Miss Ella Knipple, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Keepers, Messrs. Chas. Saylor, Wm. Dorsey, Allan G. Dorsey, Chas. Dorsey, Luther Keilholz, Arthur Krugs, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Sharer, and Mr. Geo. Menser, of Union Bridge.

NO LETTER BOXES.

They Will be Removed Next Week by Order of Department. Our local post office received official notice last Tuesday that on August 1, all collection boxes, chargeable at this office, must be removed and sent to Baltimore. This means that from that date persons wishing to mail their letters will have to take them to the post office as the removal referred to includes the three boxes which have heretofore been such a convenience to the residents of Emmitsburg. It is understood that a petition has been forwarded to the Post Office Department at Washington requesting that the town boxes at least be allowed to remain and it is thought that this petition coming from business men and those who have really become dependent on these boxes will have some effect.

LICENSE APPLICATIONS.

No Saloons in Burkettsville, Two Applicants Were Refused by Judge Mottler. (From Our Regular Correspondent.) Thursday, July 18, was the time appointed for the hearing on license applications. Judge Mottler was on the bench. Two applicants from Burkettsville were refused. The Anti Saloon League opposed the applicants, being represented by George A. Pearre, Samuel A. Lewis and Leo Wineberg appearing for the petitioners. One of the applicants asked for an oyster house license, his petition had sixty-five signers. Judge Mottler in this case refused the license on the ground that some of the signers did not reside in the vicinity. Burkettsville, by these decisions, will remain "dry" for some time. W. Franchilli and M. Dominick, of Brunswick, were arrested Monday at that place charged with unlawfully selling liquor at Knoxville, not having a license. They were committed to jail for court in default of $100 bail, each, by Justice Smith, of this city. The arrests were made by Sheriff Martz and Deputy Nelson. Emmanuel E. Brown, by Reno S. Harp, attorney, has filed a petition for absolute divorce from his wife, Lottie I. Brown, on statutory grounds. After next Wednesday, by order of the Post Office Department, the rule prohibiting the writing of addresses on the back of the stamped side of a postal card will be of none effect. Mr. Murray Hardman brought to this office a potato sprout eight and a half feet long.

CITY HOTEL SOLD.

Messrs. Lowenstein and Wertheimer the Purchasers.—To Erect Modern Hotel.—Other Hotel Projects. (From Our Regular Correspondent.) News was received in Frederick on Tuesday of the sale of the City Hotel property on West Patrick street by Mrs. Noble Wiltburger, nee Harwood, of Washington, D. C. David Lowenstein and Charles Wertheimer, of this city. The purchase price has not been made public but is supposed to be about $35,000. Mr. Wertheimer has been in Washington for a couple of days negotiating the sale. Mr. Lowenstein stated that there would be erected on the site a modern hotel just as soon as they can get possession, which will be in June next. Architects will be at once consulted and plans drawn. This will insure for the city, a modern hotel. Efforts are also being made by a syndicate to secure the Groff House in the North End and reconstruct that hostelry.

Valuable Property Bought in Frederick.—Other News.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.) Announcement has been made that Mr. J. M. Newman, who recently purchased the Harp and Keefe property on East Patrick street, will use the site as a residence and office for the J. M. Newman Company, Coal Dealers. The necessary alterations will be made at once.

Cause Of Georgia Explosion. The general opinion is that the fatal accident on the Georgia was due to a "flare back." This is simply a belching of inflammable gases from the breach. The flame varies in volume, but in serious instances is sufficient to ignite the powder charges ready for loading. To guard against these accidents our ships are equipped with gas ejectors which consist of a piping arrangement by which a current of compressed air is let into the breach of the gun with sufficient force to blow a hat or a coat from the breach out of the muzzle. This blast is automatically turned on when the gun is fired, and remains in operation until turned off by hand.
