A. L. CROTHERS?

A Word on Democratic Nominee

A MACHINE CREATION

Does not Measure up to the Standard of Gaither.

ONCE FOND OF CORPORATIONS

Who Ever Heard of Crothers Before His Nomination?—People Have Discovered that He is a Party Accident, a Compromise of the Split Party.

As election day draws near the voting element of both parties is sizing up the chances of the various candidates in the field, especially with reference to those who head the respective tickets, and as things look at present George R. Gaither will be the next governor of Maryland. Notwithstanding what the Democrats say about him, Gaither is a strong card. He is a man of force, he is a man who accomplishes what he undertakes, he is a well-known public character, and withal he is popular—very popular. His record in Baltimore is clean, and what he did for the city and the county, where his greatest strength has always been, will go a long way towards clinching his hold there and influencing the votes of the people at large.

Since the campaign opened in earnest Gaither has lost no opportunity in coming before the people of every section of the State; and he is remembered that wherever he has spoken the logic of his public utterances and the magnetism of the man have not failed to gain for the Republican cause new friends and new supporters. With every speech he makes his popularity increases and thinking voters, no matter what their party affiliations may be, are daily indicating their approval of his views.

But what of Crothers? Is he making the headway his party expected him to make? All along the line the question being asked is, "Who is Austin L. Crothers?" The majority of the population of the State of Maryland never heard of the man until his name was mentioned in connection with the nomination for governor, and now the farther they delve into his record the less satisfaction do they find. One thing they do discover and that is that he was a party accident, the compromise of a split organization. Crothers would never have been dreamt of had not the "Democratic machine" needed, at almost the twelfth hour, a tool to do its bidding. The big men in the convention were at loggerheads, neither faction would give in, the fatal moment was fast approaching and some man with not too positive views must be chosen to do the will of the "bosses." The lot fell to Crothers, the appointee on the bench of a governor who is at this moment unpopular in his own party. Crothers accepted, and he took up the fight, but a fight it has been in very truth, for the people remember that in times past, before he went upon the bench, he was not their champion. They remember his connection with the corporations which opposed the will of the people, they remember a few transactions in which he was not entirely disassociated with a certain railroad, as far as counsel went, and they have not entirely forgotten that when traction interests were to be looked after Crothers was not with the people. No, this Democratic candidate was not the choice of the people but the selection of a few political bosses who were playing the dog-in-the-manger act. They played their game to little purpose as far as they were concerned, but they could not have done anything more acceptable to the Republican party which on November 5th will elect its candidate, George R. Gaither, governor of the State of Maryland.

WARFIELD FOR SENATE

Announces His Candidacy With Conditions.

WHAT IS A DEMOCRAT? HE ASKS.

It is Believed by Politicians His Conditions Will Not be Accepted And That Eventually He Will Withdraw From The Fight.

Gov. Warfield on Monday announced his candidacy for the United States Senatorship. Attached to his candidacy, however, are certain conditions. When asked if he would be a candidate if these were not accepted by the other candidates, he replied that he would not be in position to answer that question until fully satisfied whether his suggestions would or would not be adopted.

The conditions, set forth in a letter addressed to Chairman Vandiver, of the State committee, are:

"First—That a definition of a Democrat entitled to vote at the Senatorial primaries be agreed upon.

"Second—That the several candidates for the Senate agree among themselves to adopt the plurality plan.

"Third—That the limit of expenditures in the primary campaign shall be $1,000, and that other contributions in the general campaign shall be made known to other candidates for the Senate upon request.

"Fourth—That each candidate shall have the power to object to judges and clerks, and upon objections new judges and clerks shall be substituted."

Politicians believe the conditions will not be accepted, and that Warfield will eventually decide not to go into the fight.

ABOUT OCEAN LINERS

Greater Speed and Larger Vessels in the Future

IT IS ONLY A MATTER OF MONEY

Designer of the Lusitania Says It Takes Six Years to Increase The Speed Of Ocean Vessels One Knot And a Half.

W. J. Luke, designer of the ocean wonder, the Lusitania, and William Weir, a mechanical construction engineer, who had much to do with the building of the machinery of the vessel, both of Glasgow, Scotland, said to a reporter of a Washington paper the other day: "The possibilities of ship construction are infinite. It is only a matter of money, so far as the size of vessels is concerned. We have not by any means reached the limit in that respect. Ships can be built much larger and more powerful than the Lusitania, but speed is a thing that can be increased only by years of study and experiment. It took six years to increase the speed of ocean vessels a knot and a half, and it will take a long time to get one to go faster than the most recent patterns. It will come, of course."

"Will it ever be possible to cross the ocean in three days?" Mr. Weir was asked.

"Time will answer that," replied Mr. Weir. "I doubt not that ships will be built that will accomplish such a feat, but it will be years hence. But there is hardly any limit to the size of vessels. It is measured only by the depth of water on either side of the ocean. We drew much less water when we landed in New York than we did when we left the other side, and the draft will be greater when we sail out of New York harbor on our return trip than it will be when we reach Europe. That is because of the weight of coal carried."

TEA OR COFFEE?

"Was it tea or coffee they threw over in Boston harbor?" asked the funny man.

"Why, tea, of course," replied the other.

"I'm sorry it was tea," continued the funny one, "for if it had been coffee I was going to say that they could have thrown an egg over afterward and that would have settled it."—Yonkers Statesman.

LATE FLOWERS

Those That Bloom In the Autumn

GORGEOUS IN COLOR

The Climax of a Display Begun Last Spring.

THE GOLDENROD AND THE ASTER

The Fence Corners and Stone Walls Are Resplendent With Beautiful Flowers.—Cardinal Flower's Red Is one of the Rarest Colors in Nature.

It is in early autumn that the display of wild flowers reaches its climax. In fence corners and beside stone walls is a sort of no-man's land, a debatable ground, where any may stay which are able to gain and keep a foothold. The tall stalks of the evening primrose easily attract the eye. A line of seed-pods shows that it has passed its prime, but late in the afternoon a few flowers of pale yellow still open to attract the night-flying moths. Even in Winter, the plant is still conspicuous with its dead stalks covered with bell-shaped empty seed vessels standing above the snow.

If the gift of ubiquity entitles the goldenrod to recognition as a national flower, it should receive the prize. About eighty species grow in this country, and we find them everywhere—by the roadside, in the fields, in deep woods, in wet meadows, on the mountain side and on the summits, above the timber line. To the uninitiated a goldenrod is a goldenrod, but when we come to examine closely, we find a marked difference both in the plants and in the growth of the flowers in the various species. In some the flowers are in a spreading plume; others grow closely along the stem, while a few have only a small terminal spike. The New England aster vies with the goldenrod in making a show of color by the roadside. Its golden centres and rays of royal purple blaze out in a splendor that a king might envy. Blue with the blue of the sky on a clear autumn day, the cheery flowers look up at us. The plant is ragged and irregular, with the flowers set along the stems, but its very irregularity is a joy to the eye.

The scarlet berries of the bitter-sweet afford the eye a greater treat than the grapes do the palate. The clematis, with its white flowers or feathery tufts of seeds, makes a pleasing contrast to the bitter-sweet. One outland plant is there, against which we must be on our guard—the poison ivy. It can be easily recognized by its oval, pointed leaves, which grow in groups of three. The harmless and beautiful Virginia creeper, with which it is often confounded, has its leaves in groups of five. To know this distinction may save a deal of trouble.

Tansy is another member of the roadside colony. Its small yellow flower heads, which grow in clusters, call to mind the daisies from which some lovelorn maiden has plucked the rays as she played "he loves me, he loves me not." Its finely divided leaves have a pungence that tells of its one-time vogue as a "yarb." Boneset, another of the old reliable herbs of physic, grows beside the road, but its favorite place is a damp meadow, where it lifts its broad head of dull white flowers. The opposite leaves clasping around the stem always make me think of some web-footed creature and seem to fit the plant's moist surroundings. Its near relative, the Joe Pye weed, is often found in its company. Its tall, straight stem, some times ten feet high, always makes one marvel at the vital force which must abound in a seed not an eighth of an inch long to produce such a growth in a few months. The leaves grow in regular whorls about the stem, and a large head of feathery flowers, which range from dull pink to deep magenta, gives the finishing touch of color.

Down by the brook many shyer flowers are growing. How the spikes of the cardinal flower glow against the background of dark green! Its red is one of the rarest colors in nature, so clear and pure, free from any mixture of blue or yellow. It is to flowers what the scarlet tanager is to birds. With both their absolute beauty keeps them from becoming common, and, however often we see them, there is always the same feeling of delight.

OLD TRAGEDY.

A Strange Gettysburg Mystery.

A REMARKABLE STORY.

Miss Jennie Rosensteel's Peculiar Malady.

HAS BEEN IN BED FORTY YEARS.

Lying on Her Bed Since Girlhood She Maintains a Cheerful Disposition.—Her Name Associated With An Old And Almost Forgotten Tragedy.

Some time ago there appeared in the New York Press a story about a certain Miss Jennie Rosensteel, now living in Gettysburg. According to this paper this young lady, forty years ago was stricken with a peculiar malady which has baffled the physicians. At the time she was stricken the doctors called it paralysis, and predicted that she would live but a short time. In her home, a little frame building at the base of Little Round Top, she still lives apparently no worse off than when she first took to her bed. In all these years the sufferer has maintained a cheerful spirit and her face is still youthful, showing traces of the beauty that made her so popular years ago.

Back of all this, says the above mentioned paper, is a remarkable story that will be vouched for by any of the old-time residents of Gettysburg, or of the entire county of Adams, for that matter. These people do not attempt to account for this strange illness by saying it is paralysis, but they have a version of their own, which years ago has come to be accepted as the true one all over that county. As told by one of these old-timers, seated in front of the Hotel Gettysburg, it is as follows:

"Before the newspapers of the great cities were great papers, and before the days when celebrated murders were exploited in those same papers, this quiet farming community had one of the strangest cases in its history, and it was the most celebrated murder case of its day.

"The trial occurred in that same old courthouse you now see standing up the street. Jennie Rosensteel was one of the prettiest girls in this whole county. She had admirers by the score. Among them was William Lee, a prosperous young farmer, and another, Weems Black, a hardy mountaineer. Their strong rivalry for the hand of the girl made them bitter enemies. One night Lee was shot and instantly killed, soon after he had bid good night to Jennie Rosensteel in her little cottage, which was then situated on Culp's Hill.

"When the body of her sweetheart was found near the door of her home Jennie Rosensteel collapsed and took to her bed. That bed she never left. They said at the time she was paralyzed, but she is not paralyzed to-day, and still no doctor can tell you just what ails her.

"The other lover, Black, was arrested on the charge of having murdered his rival, and was twice tried and finally acquitted in the courts of this county. The trial was one of the most sensational ever held in that historic old building. Only a few months ago Black died up in the mountains, where he had lived a life of seclusion since that day.

"That may or may not be the real cause, but around here any one will tell you that that shock caused the breaking down of Jennie Rosensteel, which for forty years has kept her on that bed of suffering."

I could not say to man: "Forbear To use the things God putteth here." But rather would I say to man:

"Use in fruition of a plan; Take then these gifts God giveth thee—The golden fruit, the mighty tree, All pleasant things the fields produce—And render them to proper use; And, in return, one thing I ask, One simple, easy, proper task: That which from nature you efface With its own seedling life replace, And cherish all the gifts of God, To serve the ends of brotherhood."

"Can a rich man enter into the kingdom of heaven?" "Yes," answered wise old Parson Brodhead, "but not on a technicality."—Courier-Journal.

OPPOSITION TO BRYAN.

Virginia Democrats Are Disrespectful to Him.

CALLED "GREAT UNCOMMONER"

Some Pertinent, Personal Remarks by The Members of Virginia Organization.—Resolutions that Created Quite a Furore.

There are reasons for the belief that Mr. Bryan will not be a candidate for the nomination of his party next year. It is asserted on good authority that ex-Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic National Committee during the Bryan campaign has written a letter to the "Peerless Leader" advising him to keep out of the race next year. Down in Virginia their is a hot campaign against him and at a meeting of the Virginia Democratic Association, held in Washington, the following resolution was introduced and discussed, and from the way it was received it evidently voiced the sentiments of the majority of those present:

Whereas, William Jennings Bryan, the "great commoner" as well as the great uncommoner; the great advocate of free silver; the great advocate of government ownership of railroads; the great advocate of the initiative and referendum; the greatest blower upon earth; the greatest standing candidate on earth; the greatest man without a record known in American politics, is threatening again to become a candidate of the Democratic party for President of the United States in 1908; therefore, be it.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this association that he stands about as much show of success as a short-tailed mule in fly time.

TO RELEIVE INSOMNIA

Simple Remedies To Induce Sleep Worth Trying.

THE WAY TO QUIET THE NERVES

Much Needed Repose May Be Gained By one of These Simple Methods.—Nerves of Eyes are Very Last To Quiet Down.

One woman advances the theory that by laying a silk handkerchief lightly across the eyes on retiring sleep will be induced. The nerves of the eyes, she avers, are the last in the body to quiet down and the bandage has the effect of hastening the process.

Others have found that the inability to sleep may be traced to the habit of having the head too high. When the person lies flat without any elevation at the head, says the American Home Monthly, the much needed repose has been obtained.

One of the most efficient remedies for sleeplessness is to lie perfectly still in bed, close the eyes, or the lids, and then, with the lids still closed, raise the eyes to as high a point as possible. Retain them in this position as long as possible. At first there may be a consequent straining of the muscles, and when this is noted it would be well to desist for that night. But a repetition of the practice will undoubtedly bring about the desired result.

A good rubbing down with a coarse Turkish towel will often induce sleep and soothe unquiet nerves when one has tossed about for hours trying to woo nature's sweet restorer. Onions are known to have a soporific effect on the nerves, and it is said an onion soup taken at dinner will have the desired result.

AS TO THE SPINAL CORD.

A young teacher whose efforts to inculcate elementary anatomy had been unusually discouraging at last asked in despair: "Well, I wonder if any boy here can tell me what the spinal cord really is?" She was met by a row of blank and irresponsive faces, till finally one small voice piped up in great excitement:

"The spinal cord is what runs through you. Your head sits on one end and you sit on the other."—New York Sun.

WASTEFULNESS

Our Natural Resources Wasted

NEED CONSERVATION

Prosperity Of Our Country Is Endangered.

GOVERNMENT IS INVESTIGATING

Fuel, Forests, Water, Coal, Natural Gas All Being Treated as if The Supply Was Boundless.—A Solemn Warning by Government Experts.

The present prodigious waste of our natural and national resources is causing much concern to those who have been investigating the matter for the government. Mr. J. A. Holmes, noted scientist and fuel expert, after touring the entire West says that in the mining operations of the present time nearly one-half of the total coal supply is being left underground; that water, the most valuable of all mineral resources as a source of power, is being wasted year after year to the extent of millions and millions of horse power; and that forest fires have burned more lumber than has been used in the building of homes or in the industries.

Mr. Holmes estimates that at the present rate of increase in the consumption of fuel the supply of the country will be gone by the end of the present century. This statement if it is true, and it must be so for this expert bases his deductions on facts, makes it imperative for this country as a whole to take steps for the conservation of these resources. This gentleman says that notwithstanding the recognized importance of coal its mining and use are subjected to enormous waste. In the mining operations great quantities are left underground partly as pillars to support the roof; partly as coal of inferior quality; and partly due to the fact that the working out of lower beds of coal first frequently breaks and renders impracticable the subsequent mining of the adjacent higher coal beds.

Not more than five per cent. of the coal actually used is converted into actual work, the remainder is consumed in making steam and smoke, and in overcoming the friction and inertia of the engine and shafting. During the past year the country used considerably more than 400,000,000 tons of this fuel and the consumption will increase in proportion to the increase in the population of the country unless ways are found for using the coal more efficiently.

The world recognizes Americans as the most wasteful of people in the utilization of their resources. The nation has literally grown up in luxury. Out of abundance there has developed an indifference to economy and the habit of waste.

Through the destruction of the forests about the sources of important streams and the improper cultivation of these sloping lands the fertile soils are washed away from the fields where they are needed and deposited in the streams and harbors of the country, from which their continued removal will cost an enormous sum. Thus gradually but surely is being destroyed the value of the great water resources for power, for irrigation and for navigation purposes.

An example of the result of the wasteful use of our natural wealth is given in the consumption of natural gas. Persons now living can recall when the great gas wells were seemingly inexhaustible in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Indiana. In many of these fields this gas supply was wasted in a manner wellnigh criminal, and the exhaustion has been so complete that there is no ground for believing that other sources of supply will be discovered in many of these special regions.

In like manner petroleum was wasted in enormous overflows and the burning of material. There was also enormous waste through the failure to save the gasoline and other bi-products.

"Me father," said Mrs. Murphy, "always gits up whin a lady enters the room."

"The old man is to suspicious," Mr. Murphy grunted. "I never seen the woman yit that'd be mane enough to hit ye when ye was sitten' down."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WEIGHING THE MAILS.

The Thirty-Days' Test Authorized By Congress Is Now Under Way.

Just after midnight on Tuesday morning, Oct. 1, morning railway mail clerks throughout the country began the weighing of mails in obedience to a general order of the Postmaster General. Congress is responsible for this. In the regular appropriation bill for the Postal Service, approved March 1, the clause requiring the weighing for thirty days was inserted. It was the first time in the history of the Postoffice Department that the weighing of all mail matter in all trains over all routes on which mail clerks are employed was required.

In former years, in order to arrive at an average, special periods were set aside to determine the amount of a certain class of mail carried over certain routes or in certain postal sections of the United States.

The object of the thirty days' trial is to give the Department and Congress reliable statistics to determine the cost of handling and transporting different classes of mail matter. For this special thirty days' weighing test Congress made an appropriation of $300,000.

FOREIGN PRIESTS MUST GO.

Rome Will Get Rid of All Who Have No Real Occupation and are Not On Business or Study Bent.

The police of Rome, at the request of the Vatican authorities, have issued a circular instructing all their agents to arrest all priests, monks and nuns found to be wearing the religious habit without authorization. The decree does not concern only individuals sailing under false colors but includes all the real priests, monks and nuns who have fallen under the censure of the Vatican authorities. Ever since his election to the papal throne, Pius X. has been most earnest in getting Rome rid of the numerous priests and monks who had no real occupation in the curia and who were not residing there for business or because of ecclesiastical studies. Within the past four years hundreds of priests, foreign as well as Italian, belonging to dioceses other than Rome, have had to leave. Still many are left who positively refuse to comply with the orders of the Pope's vicar general, Cardinal Respighi, because they claim to be engaged in business that requires their presence in Rome. The police decree just issued is aimed principally at these, and they will be forced to return to their country of origin or the police will ship them there or to the Italian frontier, in charge of a squad of carabinieri.

Letter to Prof. Palmer.

Emmitsburg, Md.

Dear Sir: We should like to set your boys and girls at work on this question in arithmetic and casuistry.

A farmer is fattening three hogs in three small pens; they have equal room and straw and care, and are fed in these three ways: first hog, on a certain proportion of milk and cooked cornmeal; second hog, on the same, half water; third hog, on the same, half water and sawdust. How long will it take, how much will they weigh, how much will they cost, and what'll the profit be on the three?

And a similar question in pigmentry. That same farmer is going to paint three barns same size, and he says to three painters: "what'll you take to paint that barn?"

First painter scratches his head a few minutes and says: "I'll do it for $50."

Second painter: "$75."

Third painter: "$97.48."

Will they each get a barn to paint, or one get two, or one all three, or nobody any; and what'll they make on the job?

That's about how painting goes sometimes. But there is a way to reckon: $5 a gallon. The difficulty is in knowing how many gallons to buy. There's a way out of that.

Buy the least-gallons paint, Devoe. No matter how much one buys; he returns what's left: costs nothing.

Yours truly

His Hand In His Own Pocket.

Concerning the criticism some people have made of the position given McKinley's hand by the artist who created the monument to the late President's honor, F. B. Sanborn, in the Springfield Republican, speaking of the pose of the figure, particularly of the hand which is hidden in the breeches pocket, writes—"However, this must be said, his hand, as President, was in his own pocket; it did not reach out from Washington to New York and dip down deep into the pockets of Harriman, Depew, Perkins and other practical men of 1904."

We had better seek for a system which will develop honest men than for one which will deal cunningly with vagabonds. Let us reform our schools, and we shall find little reform needed in our prisons.—John Ruskin.

Maryland Senatorial Aspirants Declared.

THOSE WHO WILL ENTER RACE.

William Pinkney Whyte For Short Term.—Six Men on the Other List.
—Former Governor Brown Withdraws to Surprise of Many.

Midnight Wednesday marked the expiration of the time limit set by the Democratic central committee for filing with that committee of the declarations of intentions to be candidates in the primary on November 5 for long and short terms in the United States Senate. Chairman Vandiver was on hand at headquarters at the Eutaw House to receive all declarations. When the list closed it contained the names of the following candidates:

For the long term: Gov. Edwin Warfield, former Gov. John Walter Smith, Congressman J. Fred. C. Talbott, former Congressman Joshua W. Miles, former Attorney General John P. Poe, Gen. Joseph B. Seth, of Talbot county, president of the State senate.

For the short term, ending March 4, 1909: William Pinkney Whyte.

Wednesday afternoon Chairman Vandiver of the State committee received a communication from former Gov. Frank Brown, now city collector, requesting him to place his name on the list of candidates for the long term in the Senate. At 4 o'clock a change had come over the mind of former Gov. Brown, and he announced that he would not be a candidate.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

While coming down the mountain with a load of wood Mr. John Cool's saddle horse stumbled and fell on him. Mr. Cool was badly bruised.

Mr. John Manherz, of Fairfield, while picking apples for Mr. D. R. Musselman, last Saturday was thrown to the ground by the slipping of an eighteen-foot ladder on which he was standing. His hip was fractured and he will be confined to his bed for some time.

Mr. Quincy Jacobs has his barn ready for a new steel roof which he intends to put on in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Gross Beaver, of Waynesboro, are visiting their parents, Mrs. Julia Beaver and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. King, of this place.

Misses Maud and Nellie Plank were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Shully. Mr. and Mrs. Low and family visited Mr. and Mrs. Kearney Reid, of near Emmitsburg.

Miss Bessie Kittinger, who has been very ill, is greatly improved. She took charge of her school last Monday. Miss Helen Neely, who was teaching during Miss Kittinger's illness, has accepted a position as teacher near Altoona.

LATE FLOWERS.

The turtle-head shows the same fondness for mud and water as the reptile from which it takes its name. Its odd white flowers can with a slight use of the imagination be seen to resemble a turtle's head with open mouth. The jewel-weed like-wise dwells by the water's edge, and dangles its orange flowers over the stream. From the way they swing like some pendant decoration, we might fancy that was the reason for the plant's name. But when, after a shower, the sun's rays touch the wet leaves and each drop sparkles in the light, we see the true source of the name. Another name, snap-dragon, comes from an odd trick of the seed pods, which, when ripe, burst with a snap at the least touch, and scatter their seeds.

Late in the Fall the fringed gentian blooms. In its fringed flowers of silken texture and deep clear blue, Nature seems to attempt to give expression to one final form of beauty before the frost destroys all. It is not, however, the last flower; for in the leafless woods the witch-hazel puts forth its small yellow blossoms. They are queer little flowers, like small elves, and seem to be some jest of Nature's, as though she would dismiss us with a laugh before Winter comes and she withdraws from our sight.—A. A. J. in New York Post.

Value Of Cotton Crop.

Mr. W. S. Whitman in an address to the American Bankers' Association sometime ago said: "Bring to me all of the grain, all of the provisions, all of the feedstuff, all of the steel and all of the iron of the 47 States of this great Union which was exported last year and I will sell the cotton crop of 1907 and pay you cash, and yet have money enough left to capitalize 200 national banks."

ANYTHING TO BEAT THEM.

Bryan and Roosevelt, One in Democratic Circles the Other in Republican, Must be Beaten.

Anything to beat Roosevelt. In the Republican party every interest, political and financial, that has suffered, or believes it has suffered, from President Roosevelt's policies, is now scheming to defeat him or Taft or any other candidate whom Roosevelt should favor.

In order to defeat Roosevelt these men are willing to take up anyone giving promise of popular strength, even Governor Hughes, whose own policy toward the corporations, as shown by his Public Service Commission law, is almost as advanced as Roosevelt's itself, and who appears to be as impossible to control as Roosevelt.

But it is a desperate case, and desperate remedies have to be applied, on the principle that a poison must sometimes be administered to get rid of a poison.

In the Democratic party much the same situation exists.

It is anything to beat Bryan.—Wall Street Journal.

GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT

Issued On Wednesday Shows Decrease In Corn Yield of 12.1 Per Cent.—Wheat About Normal.

The Agricultural Department on Wednesday reported the condition of corn on Oct. 1 was 78 per cent. as compared with 80.2 per cent. last month, and 90.1 per cent. on Oct. 1, 1906. The average yield of Spring wheat is 13.1 bushels per acre, as compared with 13.7 bushels for 1906. The production of Spring and Winter wheat combined is about 625,567,000 bushels, compared with 735,260,970 bushels as estimated for a year ago.

The average yield of oats is about 23.5 bushels per acre, as compared with 31.2 bushels for 1906.

Clerks of Election.

The following clerks of election have been appointed. The first named in each District or Precinct is to represent the Democratic Party and the second, the Republican Party.

District No. 5, Emmitsburg, Precinct 1—Charles R. Hoke, Charles B. Ashbaugh, Emmitsburg.

District No. 5, Emmitsburg, Precinct 2—Clarence E. McCarren, Robert Hockensmith, Emmitsburg.

Under the management of Mr. Sterling Galt, the EMMITSBURG CHRONICLE has become one of the best county papers in the State, and is a model of good typography and press work. Emmitsburg is rather an unpromising looking field for a newspaper, as it is a quiet, sleepy old place, living largely in its memories of past, rather than in the rushing, bustling twentieth century. But Mr. Galt seems determined to wake up the people of the old burg, and indications are not wanting that he is meeting with success. At any rate his paper is arousing Emmitsburg to a sense of its importance and unused advantages, and the inhabitants are confidently awaiting the prosperity which they feel sure will come along in the near future.—The Westminster Democratic Advocate.

Enormous Profits Of Trust.

Records submitted in the Oil Trust hearing show that since 1882 this corporation has declared dividends that amount to $551,922,904.50. The years 1900 and 1901 are the banner ones the dividends amounting to $46,680,000 in each of them.

Pen-Mar Not Wanted by the Western Maryland

C. G. & W. WILL TAKE THE PARK.

A Rumor Says the Steam Road is Anxious For Some Company to Take Pen-Mar Off Their Hands.—Trolley Line Will Keep Park Open.

The Waynesboro Herald published in its last issue a rumor that has some credence on the Mountain namely that the Western Maryland Railroad Company 'has no overweening desire to lease Pen-Mar park for next season and will be well satisfied to let the C. G. & W. Co., (Chambersburg, Green-castle & Waynesboro trolley line) operate it.

"It is natural enough that the W.M. should regard the C. G. & W. as its legatee in the Pen-Mar matter, as it has always alleged that the trolley line profited by the park at the expense of the steam railroad.

"Just how inviting such a proposition would appear to the trolley people is another matter. They have paid the W. M. a goodly sum each year for the use of the park for their passengers and erected and operated the electric lighting system there. Whether they would want to add to this the annual rental of the grounds, the maintaining of the roads and buildings and the engagement of the orchestra is something that is not known.

"There may be nothing in this rumor and it may be merely speculation but it has been in circulation and there is enough of the probable in it to cause it to continue to be a subject of discussion.

A BRILLIANT SPECTACLE.

A Meteorite of Unusual Luminosity Passes Over Emmitsburg.—Light of a Greenish Hue.

On Saturday night about ten o'clock a meteorite of unusual brilliance passed over Emmitsburg, or to be more correct seemed to pass over Emmitsburg for it fell to the earth near the railroad station at Cockeysville. The light from this "shooting star" was especially brilliant and was of about the color of a burning copper wire as is often seen when there is "trouble with the trolley wire." Near Cockeysville, the sudden appearance of this body caused no little terror among the negroes who, as usually, looked for the speedy end of things terrestrial.

Almost every large meteorological museum contains specimens of meteoric stones and meteoric irons. The former are more numerous than the latter. There are several large ones in the National Museum at Washington. From the most ancient days we have records of the fall of such bodies. Plutarch writes of one which fell in Thrace in 466 B. C., as large as two millstones. The fetish of the Mohammedan religion, the Caaba, is supposed by many to be a meteorite. In 1879, there was a shower of meteoric stones in Iowa, the largest mass weighing more than 400 pounds.

In composition these bodies contain every known chemical element; no new element has ever been found in them.

A Veritable Patriarch.

Government In Grocery Business.

The pure-food law has forced the Department of Agriculture into the grocery business. Whenever a sample of an article of food has been tested and proved impure, the remainder is destroyed, but the greater part of the articles the department found pure, and so the government has hit upon the device of selling the remainder by auction.

HAGERSTOWN EVENTS.

On Sunday afternoon Rev. Dr. D. H. Riddle, formerly the pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Emmitsburg, now living at Falls Church, Va., assisted by Rev. Dr. Spangler Keiffer, conducted the funeral services over the remains of Miss Nancy I. Findlay, late of Tammany, Washington county.

Albert E. Lipphart, formerly of Washington, D. C., was arrested in Hagerstown on Friday last by Secret Service Detectives M. E. Griffin, of Philadelphia, and Charles E. Wright, of Baltimore, on the charge of representing himself as a United States Secret Service officer in Camden, N. J., last June.

He is also wanted on the charge of defrauding the City Hotel at Camden and several prominent citizens of that place of various sums of money.

He left Camden and went to Reading, coming thence to Hagerstown. For five weeks he was employed in the office of the Hagerstown branch of the Scranton International Correspondence Schools. He was taken to Camden, consenting to go without requisition papers.

At Reading he became engaged to marry the daughter of the woman who kept the boarding-house where he stopped. The wedding was set for next week. He had given his fiancée the impression that he was in a Chicago hospital with a broken leg.

Robert J. Moorehead, aged about 50 years, who has been employed as yeaster at the Roxbury Distillery, was instantly killed at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at Roxbury Station, six miles South of Hagerstown, by being struck by a southbound fast freight train while crossing the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in his automobile. The accident was witnessed by several persons at the station. He did not see the approaching train in time to stop his automobile.

The cylinder of the locomotive caught the automobile and dragged the car, with Morehead underneath, for a distance of 60 feet, tearing up the platform at the station. One of his legs was cut off and the other leg and his skull was crushed. The car was completely demolished.

Harry Buttler, 25 years old, was accidentally shot and seriously wounded with a double-barreled shotgun by Walter Rock at the latter's home at Toms-town, near Pen-Mar.

Butler, thinking he would enjoy a little fun at the expense of his neighbor, went to Rock's house, where Butler's wife was making a call, and made noises outside as though a burglar was breaking in. Mrs. Rock, who was seated in the parlor with Mrs. Butler, called, but received no answer. She summoned her husband, and Rock procured and fired his shotgun out of the window. Part of the load entered Butler's head, arms and lungs. He was removed to a hospital, where he is in a critical state.

Patrons desiring delicacies will kindly notify us in advance. Special orders for Sunday must be in by Friday noon.—Baker's Tea Rooms.

GETTYSBURG NEWS

A. F. Hendrex, of Fayette, N. Y., a student at Harvard University, was found dead in the rooms of his uncle, Prof. H. O. Himes, Thursday Oct. 3. Mr. Hendrex was only 31 years of age and had been on the street fifteen minutes before his body was found. Death was ascribed to heart failure.

For the first time since 1900 when class rushes were abolished by the authorities of Gettysburg College, the under class men got together in a "rush" on Monday night and before it was over a broken nose, a broken arm and a number of more or less serious injuries had resulted. The fight took place on the college campus and was witnessed by large crowds of upper classmen. The Freshmen were victorious.

Governor Stuart on Wednesday appointed the following commission to erect a monument or memorial structure on the battlefield of Gettysburg, in memory of the volunteer soldiers from Pennsylvania who participated in the Civil War, for which the recent Legislature appropriated $150,000:—

FRIDAY, OCT. 11, 1907.

TOWARDS the end of every campaign, when the political situation is tense and candidates and their supporters are doing all in their power to strengthen the position of their respective parties, information concerning some contemplated fraud or sharp practice on the part of the "other side" begins to go the round of the partisan press and to gain credence among a certain element in both political parties, much to the anxious fear of the excitable, slightly to the worryment of the conservative and decidedly to the detriment of the cause of those who originate and aid in spreading the too often groundless report. Fraud of some kind, or attempt at fraud there undoubtedly has been since political parties came into being, but an effort to lay the blame upon one side rather than upon another would be the result of nothing but crass ignorance. In National and in State elections ballot boxes have been stuffed and false counts have been returned, yet it would be absurd to lay the charge wholly upon one party which, it must certainly appear, could hardly make such an attempt successfully without the consent and the actual assistance of a corrupt official of the other party. Frauds such as these are not as common as they used to be when conditions surrounding elections were far different from what they are today, but practices equally as corrupt in principle and in effect obtain in these times in every county of every State in the Union. We refer to vote buying (whether by the direct employment of money or its equivalent) and to intimidation or coercion. The one method is as fraudulent as the other, but, to show how inconsistent people may become, the latter custom is placed in the category of shrewdness, which in nine cases out of ten, whether applied to politics or business, is but another term for dishonesty. Nor is he who sells his vote in anywise more guilty than the one who offers or who pays the price; and as for him who intimidates, coerces, or takes advantage of a voter by reason of circumstances or conditions that place the voter wholly within another's power—words are incapable of adequately describing his despicability. The fact is that far too many look upon voting as a mere perfunctory thing. They do not stop to consider issues, principles or platforms, or even the qualifications of those who aspire to hold office. These are the ones who can be easily "influenced" and consequently the very ones whom those energetic persons who are always on the lookout on election day, invariably "approach." Realizing the evils that result from this pernicious custom the political parties in some counties of this State have just entered into an agreement to do all in their power to put a stop to it, and it is to be sincerely hoped that other counties will follow suit and that finally the whole of Maryland and other States as well will discountenance every usage that tends to influence a man to vote contrary to his conscience, his judgment or his will. We repeat what we have said before on this subject, that a man's vote should be the concrete expression of his own ideas in respect of local, State or National matters. His vote is his actual participation in popular government, which participation is in itself a privilege which every voter should exercise and cherish. We also spoke before of party loyalty being commendable, and we endeavored to show the fallacy of blind partisanship. We emphasize the latter now as being a reflection on the intelligence and the independence of any enlightened American citizen. To vote is the highest privilege a citizen can have; to vote intelligently and without any regard for intimidation, instigation or coercion is every voter's strict duty to his State, and any man who buys or sells a vote or who threatens, intimidates or coerces a voter in any manner whatsoever is beneath the contempt of every decent citizen.

PETTY thieving has begun again in this neighborhood. Hen roosts have been visited and locks and bolts on several private houses have been tampered with during the past few weeks, a warning to the people of this vicinity that they may from now on expect unwelcome visitors about their premises almost any night. Every year, just as cold weather sets in, small robberies occur, and week after week throughout the entire Winter another house or store is entered by petty thieves. This sort of thing is getting to be monotonous; but it will not cease until some offender is caught red handed, tried and given a jail sentence for a long period of time. The county is already entertaining one man from Emmitsburg who came in contact with and who could not free himself from another's property. But his term—several months awaiting trial and a six months sentence afterwards—does not seem to have had the tendency to deter others from appropriating what does not belong to them. Nothing short of a good example in the way of a lengthy jail term with a good deal of hard work thrown in, will cause a cessation of these midnight visitations, and no doubt before very long that example will be forthcoming.

In his gracious and very flattering allusion to THE CHRONICLE, the able editor of The Democratic Advocate (Westminster, Md.) refers to Emmitsburg as a "a quiet, sleepy old place, living largely in its memories of the past rather than in the rushing, bustling twentieth century," and then adverts to the successful efforts THE CHRONICLE has made in "arousing Emmitsburg to a sense of its importance and unused advantage." The sleepy element of this community—truly a small number—no doubt does live in its memories of the past, and it must derive much true enjoyment from the mild mental exercise.

But truth is that Emmitsburg is proud of her past, and she has a right to be, and the progressive constituency of the good old burg is looking towards the future with a determination to place Emmitsburg in the front rank of Maryland towns, and the day is not far distant when this laudable purpose will have been accomplished. This town is an important one and its natural advantages are many, and if in the past these advantages have not been made the most of, the fault lies with the people of the past. At the present moment conditions are decidedly different, and every week, every day, there is evidence of improvement, of expansion, of advancement all along the line. Emmitsburg does not propose to lag behind in the procession of progress; its good people are now, if never before, aware of the opportunities that are within their reach and they propose to make the very best of them. That this can be the more satisfactorily and the more quickly accomplished by a Business Association or some like organization there is little doubt. We have urged the formation of such a society of business men and we urge it again, believing that it is necessary in keeping alive a progressive spirit.

THE CHRONICLE is intensely interested in all that pertains to Emmitsburg and to this entire community; it stands for progress, for enlargement and for everything that can in any manner benefit the people of this neighborhood.

All that it asks in return is that the people continue to cooperate with it in its good work.

SUNDAY after Sunday automobiles whiz through town at any rate of speed the owners of the machines may determine upon, and nothing is done by the authorities to carry out the provisions of the ordinance referring to motor cars etc. A very natural question is, how are the owners or operators of these machines to know what the speed is if there are no signs calling their attention to the matter? And after all what can be the sense in passing the ordinance if it is not to be enforced? We assume that automobilists are not all mind readers and that consequently they are ignorant of the fact that there are any regulations concerning their cars, and we take it as a matter of course that if signs were posted near town—as is done in all towns where there is a limit to the speed at which machines may enter and pass through—there would be no further complaint from any source. Four signs are all that are needed; the cost of the four signs would be nominal, and the time required to paint them would be very short. Will we get them?

WE congratulate the Commissioners for determining to improve the Square at once. The change will be much appreciated and will add greatly to the appearance of the town.

MET AT LAST.

DIED IN HER ARMS.

The morning sun was shining down on Mrs. Westervelt's country place. It glistened on the roof of her house, on the leaves of the trees and the plants in the flower beds. Mrs. Westervelt had opened all the windows, put the pillows on the sill and left the beds open for the regular daily airing. She had servants to do her bidding, but there were certain duties she reserved for herself. She was an excellent housekeeper and especially particular as to cleanliness and fresh air.

Mrs. Westervelt had at seventeen loved a man of thirty-five. He never knew that she loved him. He drifted away from her and married. Later she gave her hand to a man of means. Her heart was like a clock that had stopped, or, rather, beat for her first and only love.

Mrs. Westervelt was in one of the upper rooms dusting her own especial memento trinkets when she heard carriage wheels on the gravel driveway and a vehicle stop at the front porch. Then a maid came up and said that a gentleman had been driving and had collapsed in his carriage. His coachman begged that he be allowed to rest at the house. Mrs. Westervelt went downstairs and out to the carriage. There, his head resting on the cushions, his eyes half closed, his white locks falling on his forehead, was the man she had loved in her youth—had always loved.

In a few minutes servants had carried the invalid to a divan, where he lay propped with pillows while Mrs. Westervelt ministered to him. A physician came and pronounced the heart so feeble that the old man could not be moved, at least for a time, without serious risk, and Mrs. Westervelt persuaded him to remain for an indefinite period. He had broken down while making a tour from the city in his carriage, not being able to endure the excitement of a train. His wife was herself an invalid, and his children were occupied with families of their own. His stay at Mrs. Westervelt's proved his last sojourn on earth.

He was carried to a bedroom upstairs. From a window he could look upon a height of land, on the crest of which were forest trees. He would lie looking up at these trees, watching their topmost branches sway in the wind. Is there anything more soothing than a slow, monotonous motion—hither, thither; hither, thither; hither, thither?

One morning Mrs. Westervelt brought a likeness of herself taken forty years before and showed it to him. It was a daguerreotype. The skirt of her dress was covered with little flounces, and on her head was a bonnet. The hair was parted in the middle of her head and smoothed down on each side. The face was young, innocent, loving. He asked who the girl was. Mrs. Westervelt sighed, closed the case and put the picture away.

Again she asked him if he remembered Agnes Lee. He pondered and said no. Then she referred to several incidents that had occurred when he had known her. At last she touched upon one that he remembered. They had been out together on horseback. Her horse had thrown her, and he had picked her up for dead. The impression stamped upon his brain by this incident served as a spark to kindle a flame. A succession of memories sprang up in his mind.

"I remember," he said. "She was Agnes Lee, a beautiful girl, a lovely girl! But I have no recollection of her face or figure. Singular," he added musingly, "how the past fades. I remember one evening that I came very near making love to Agnes Lee. I checked myself in time. I was midway between thirty and forty, while she was not long out of short dresses. It's more than a quarter of a century since the incident has occurred to me. What a life she would have had had she married me with all my vicissitudes! And now that I'm a broken old man she would be burdened with my care. What a lucky escape for her!"

He felt a hand stealing over his. "Yes," said the woman beside him, "she would have been in my place."

One day, while he was looking out upon the crest of the hill, he said to his nurse:

"I have a wish. I dare say it can't be gratified. I would like when my spirit goes outward that my body should pass to a resting place up there under those trees."

"You can have your wish," she replied. "The hill is included within my grounds."

Letters came from the old man's children thanking her for her kindness to their father. They would gladly have remunerated her, but surmised that such a course would be out of the question. A son was abroad and a daughter on the Pacific coast. Neither could come to him without seriously disarranging their plans. Their mother was an invalid herself and unable to nurse him.

The man died in the arms of the woman who had ministered to him. She wrote his children that he had expressed a wish to be buried on her premises and asked permission to carry out his desire. It was granted.

WET WEATHER SHOE.

Flap Prevents Melted Snow Entering Interior of Shoe.

A good idea in storm boots is shown in the accompanying illustration. As every one knows, the fault with so-called storm boots is that, although they protect the feet from cold, they do not prevent snow and slush from entering the interstices formed by the lacing. In a short time the snow is melted by contact with the foot, and the resultant water finds its way down to the stocking. In the shoe shown here this objection is overcome by providing a flap which overlaps the lacing and clamps on the side of the shoe. It will be obvious that it would be impossible for melted snow to work into the interior of a shoe provided with such a covering. The snow that adheres to the fastening would melt and drop down the side of the boot.

What The Sphinx Thinks

—That a blue Monday is frequently the result of a red Sunday.

—That more people need medicine for their minds than for their stomachs.

—That premiums are often conferred on eccentricity under the impression that it is genius.

—That men and women when not engaged in actual employment should keep tidy or keep out of sight.

—That the tendency to accumulate trash is a bad one. This applies to mental as well as to ordinary trash.

—That if people reversed the usual order of things and forgot the kindnesses they did and remembered only the kindnesses done them, the world would be brighter than it sometimes is.

—That temporary ill-fortune shows the real material out of which men are made. A hard knock puts one person down and out, while its effect upon another is that of a stimulant, an incentive to do better than ever before.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Lingerie Blouse Designed by May Manton—No. 5750.

Pointed yokes are apt to be becoming, and here is a blouse that includes one of a quite novel sort. It is made of handkerchief lawn, with trimming of lace insertion and dotted bands, but it can be used for the soft silks and thin wools that are treated in a similar way. Again, it is adapted both to the separate blouse and the gown, and the entire yoke can be cut from all over lace, or it can be made of strips of insertion held by beading or by embroidery, and the design can be varied in numerous ways. Cotton nets of all sorts are being extensively used for the separate blouse and promise to be great favorites for the coming season.

The blouse is made with front and back portions, which are gathered and joined to the yoke, the closing being made invisibly at the back. The moderately full sleeves are gathered into hand cuffs, and there is a regulation stock collar finishing the neck.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 3½ yards 27, 2½ yards 32 or 1½ yards 44 inches wide, with 6 yards of insertion.

Sizes for a 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inch bust measure.

DIRECTIONS FOR ORDERING. Send 10 cents to this office, give number of this pattern, No. 5750, and state size desired. It will then be sent to you by mail postpaid. Be sure to write plainly and always give full address. Several days must be allowed for delivery of pattern.

BEATEN BY A BELLOWS.

How a Horn Blowing Duke Was Silenced by a Blacksmith.

Once upon a time there was a French duke who was anxious to excel every other member of the nobility living in his neighborhood.

The duke really was the best huntsman, he could tell the best story and sing the best song, and he could blow his hunting horn louder and longer than any one else.

He so enjoyed winding his horn that every morning he betook himself to the highest turret of his castle and there made himself blue in the face by his tooting.

For the people who lived near by it was torture to hear this fearful din each day. Finally a count, who lived near, hit upon a plan. He fastened a huge horn on the parapet about his castle and stationed behind it a giant blacksmith with a monster bellows.

When the duke blew his horn the next morning he was greeted by a louder blast from the count's castle. Try as he would, he couldn't make nearly so loud a sound as the horn blown by the bellows.

Imagining himself beaten by some great rival, the duke would not be comforted. His spirit was crushed. He pined away and at last died.—Philadelphia North American.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

To wash white silk well use lukewarm water and nothing but pure white soap and iron with just a warm iron. It is the yellow soap, too hot water and too hot irons that make the silk turn yellow.

Malines that is crushed and bedraggled, showing that it has suffered from the effects of dampness or even a rain shower, may be revived and freshened by passing it through the steam from a teakettle or a pan of boiling water. After it has been thoroughly moistened the tulle should then be hung in a current of air until it is crisp and dry. Chiffon and mouseline de sole readily respond to a similar treatment.

One woman who does her own ironing has a high chair made for the purpose, in which she sits before the board while she is working.

In dampening clothes use a clean whisk broom. This will dampen the clothes evenly all over and make the weekly ironing a much easier task.

To Clean a White Plume. A white plume that has become soiled may be cleaned by dipping in a paste made of flour and gasoline. Run it lightly through the fingers after each dipping. It should be hung out of doors until the gasoline has evaporated, when the flour can be easily shaken off, and it will be found that the plume retains its curl. If it should not be perfectly clean, repeat the operation.

Save candle ends, for, melted and with an equal quantity of turpentine, they make an excellent polish for floors, oilcloth, etc. This polish costs almost nothing and is often considered superior to beeswax and turpentine.

KINDLY CRITICISM.

Imagine Yourself in Another's Place Before Passing Judgment.

None of us would deliberately injure another, but I am afraid that we all do from time to time by talking when it would be better to keep still. If we cannot say something nice about a friend we should be silent, but instead we go heedlessly on expressing opinions or telling facts that prejudice others, and thus we have done harm when none was intended.

We all need a little more charity in our compositions, I think. With that the temptation to say critical or unkind things would be greatly lessened, and we would make excuses where now we do not even think of them.

To make ourselves learn to do this is one of the important things in life, and a help toward accomplishing it is not only honestly to put ourselves in the other person's place when we are critically inclined, but also frankly to admit that we know nothing of the factors that governed the act.

This last, I think, is even more important than the first. With the best will in the world it is practically impossible to put ourselves in another's place unless one happens to be such a close friend that all the circumstances are known. Only then can we form an opinion that is worth the time of telling. But the fact that we know only the thing that was done and none of the causes therefor does not prevent us from laying down the law, and in our ignorance lies the capacity to do harm. If we could know what influenced the person to act as she did, we might see that under the circumstances we might not even have done so well, and, far from blaming, we would praise.

That is why I think a realization of ignorance will do much to bring toleration and suspend criticism.

It ought to be as easy to say nice things as unkind ones, but with many persons this does not seem to be the case. Yet it is true that the most critical are the most ignorant, for those who know anything of life, its complications, difficulties and trials, are the most lenient and forgiving. A woman who has lived a secluded existence out of the stress of life is far more apt to be quite sure that she knows all about it and what should be done at all times than one who has lived in the thick of it and garnered knowledge. It is a woman who learns as she grows who becomes kindly, and criticism is not as often heard from her as justification.

She it is who is helpful to others and not antagonistic in superiority. If we cannot say kind things about another or cannot justify an act, at least we may keep silent about it. Even more, we may try to apply a kindly motive and not a disagreeable one. In that way certainly we shall not be harming another, and we may be doing good.—Edith Caruth.

DO YOU FRECKLE?

If So, These Remedies May Be of Service.

Freckle remedies are always in order. Here are several:

Morning and night rub over the skin a combination made of a half dram of boracic acid and a quarter of an ounce of ointment of rosewater. Do not think that this is going to cause the freckles to disappear like magic. It will not. It will simply prevent them from increasing and if they are very light in color will cause them to fade after a time.

Stronger, but quite usable, if one does not unnecessarily expose the face at the time, are sixteen grains of oleate of copper mixed with half an ounce of oxide of zinc ointment. This should be rubbed on night and morning after washing.

Still another lotion that can be applied several times during the day is a mixture of two ounces of lactic acid, one ounce of glycerin and half an ounce of rosewater. It should be mopped on with a bit of muslin.

An ointment that is sometimes more convenient to pack than a liquid is made of ten grains of levigated sulphate of zinc and a half ounce of elder flower ointment. These are mixed and rubbed on night and morning.

Men's Suits and Topcoats

Every garment, as usual, was made expressly for us, under our stringent rules for securing the highest excellence. Every requirement of good quality and correct fashioning has been fully met. Selections of cloths and trimmings, as to texture, pattern, and coloring, have been carefully made, from exclusive sources when possible.

The best mills of Europe and America have been drawn upon for specially desirable weaves and choicest color effects. A glance at this superb assemblage of Men's Fall Suits and Topcoats reveals the fact that our standard is higher than ever, approaching in every respect and detail the very finest custom tailoring. Our legion of regular patrons will express gratification upon being shown such splendid examples of artistic tailoring, while those who may as yet be unacquainted with Parker-Bridget clothing will find it to their advantage to see what is to be seen, and will readily understand why the name Parker, Bridget & Co. stands for the highest expression of sartorial merit—and why this house, season after season, increases its business and prestige and maintains its leadership.

Entertained The Q. R. S.

The Q. R. S. Society was delightfully entertained on Tuesday evening at the home of Rev. and Mrs. W. C. B. Shulenberg. The programme, largely musical, was excellent. In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Gluck who was to read a paper on the Hague Conference, the Rev. Mr. Kenneth M. Craig made a few impromptu remarks relative to the subject under discussion. This was the beginning of the regular monthly meetings of this society and the members and many invited guests were welcomed by Mr. Craig.

An Honor to Franklin County.

The Waynesboro Record calls the attention of its readers to what it styles "Franklin county's Roll of Honor." It is somewhat of a coincidence," says the article, "that what is best in the theology and hymnology of the Reformed Church should have been produced by natives of Franklin county— Drs. Nevin and Harbaugh. The Reformed church owes very much to this county." It might be added, so also does the world.

IN JUSTICE TO MR. WILLARD.

A Communication Which Puts a Different Aspect On State's Attorney's Side Of Debold Case.

MR. EDITOR:

Give me space for a word or two in reference to some strictures passed upon our State's Attorney, Mr. A. D. Willard, in regard to his conduct of the Debold case. Let me say, in the first place, that the jury in the case and not the State's Attorney passes upon the guilt or innocence of the accused. After the acquittal of Debold, Senior, the jury disagreed, eight for acquittal to four for conviction, in the case of the son. Now, it is almost a maxim in criminal practice that you rarely convict on a re-trial after a disagreement, and this the more when the party re-tried is a boy and a man has already been acquitted of the same offence. In the present status of this case Frederick county is relieved of the burden of the traverser's costs, some $200, which would be imposed on the County in the event of a re-trial and acquittal, making the total of useless costs for a re-trial about $700. This issue would be almost inevitable, as there is no new attainable evidence in the case.

Mr. Willard is a patient, painstaking, conscientious officer who does not chase rainbows or attitudinize, but who considers the interest of our County and seeks to save useless expense. Knowing the subject and Mr. Willard as I do, I think it mere justice to speak as I have here.

JUSTICE.

THE CHRONICLE which is always desirous of doing justice to everyone is very glad to get the above expression of opinion from a member of the Frederick Bar, an opinion decidedly at variance with that held generally in this community, but one that is based on good judgment and grounded on personal knowledge of the case in question.

CATHARINE L. BAKER.

On Saturday, October 5th, Catharine L. Baker, beloved wife of James A. Baker, died at her home in this place after an illness of two years. The funeral services were held in St. Joseph's Church on Tuesday morning. Mrs. Baker was forty-five years old at the time of her death. She is survived by her husband, James A. Baker, three children, three brothers, Joseph F. Baker, of St. Joseph Mo., J. Edward Baker, of Emmitsburg, and Charles H. Baker, of Harney, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Goulden, of Liberty township, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Baker wishes to take this opportunity to thank all those who showed him and his family so many courtesies during his sad bereavement.

Tendered A Banquet.

On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart Annan, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Shriver and Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Zimmerman gave a banquet at the Emmitt House in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Jones, of Baltimore. The menu was elaborate and the table decorations were very beautiful. Mr. Jones, after the menu had been served, entertained the diners with vocal and instrumental music.

For Lutheran Synod Of Maryland

BEGINS ON THURSDAY

Two Hundred Delegates Expected To Attend.

WILL OPEN WITH COMMUNION

Rev. Mr. Reinewald Will Deliver Address of Welcome Which Will be Responded to by Rev. Dr. S. W. Owen.—Dr. Albert Will Preach Opening Sermon.

On next Thursday, October 17th, the eighty-eighth Annual Convention of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Maryland will be held in Elias Evangelical Lutheran Church, in this place. On Thursday afternoon the delegates, nearly 200 in number, will begin to arrive and it is expected that at 8 o'clock that evening, at which time a Synodical Communion will be celebrated, every delegate will be present. At this service Rev. Dr. C. S. Albert, of Philadelphia, will preach. Dr. Albert is one of the leading ministers in the Lutheran denomination and a noted preacher whom all will be anxious to hear.

Rev. Mr. Reinewald, of Emmitsburg, who has the honor of holding the position of President of the Lutheran Synod of Maryland, will deliver the address of welcome at this service and Rev. Dr. S. W. Owen, president of the General Synod, will respond.

This Synod which will be in session for five days will bring to this community delegates representing 150 churches and 21 stations in Maryland, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia, and one church in Pennsylvania, the Evangelical Church, of Waynesboro, where the last Synod met in 1906.

At the various services which will be held every evening during the Synod, a large special choir will render the music which in addition to the Canticles and the regular hymns, will comprise appropriate anthems by noted composers.

Emmitsburg extends a hearty welcome to the delegates of this large and influential denomination and the good people of this town and neighborhood will do all in their power to show their appreciation of the honor which will be accorded Emmitsburg by the presence of these distinguished gentlemen.

THE FIRST OF THE SEASON.

Society In Emmitsburg Enjoys Two Delightful Dances.

In the last few weeks the young society people of Emmitsburg have been enjoying a round of dances. On Friday, September 27, a most enjoyable function of this kind was given by the young gentlemen in the Opera House, and last Friday night the second dance was given in the same place. On both these occasions the music was furnished by the Emmitsburg Band.

The guests of the first dance were Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Zimmerman, Mr. and Mrs. B. Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Beam, Dr. and Mrs. Foreman, Dr. and Mrs. Stone, Mrs. Eichelberger, Miss Liggett, of Walkersville, Miss Miller, of Frederick, Miss Stone, of Mt. Pleasant, Messrs. Robert L. Kerschner, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Hugh Scott, of Gettysburg, Robert Marshall, Guy King, Byron Horner, of Fairfield, Pa., Grover and Herbert Braem, of Gettysburg, the Misses Bruce Morrison, Edythe Nunemaker, Rachel Shulenberg, Nellie Eyster, Helen Shuff, Barbara and Tabitha Beam, Ruth and Rhoda Gillelan, Helen and Ruth Hoke, Madeline Frailey and Grace Rowe; Messrs. Robert Beam, Carson Frailey, Charles Hoke, Annan Horner, Andrew Annan, Richard Zacharias, Dr. Jamison, Robert Annan, Robert Gillelan, George Cook and Mr. Fennel, of Baltimore.

It is understood that throughout the Winter a series of dances will be given by the young men in recognition of the courtesies which have been shown them by Emmitsburg's fairer sex who are noted for their hospitality and their many other graces.

WILL HOLD CATHOLIC MISSION.

Rev. Father Robert To Resume His Instructive Lectures Begun Last Year.

Rev. Father Robert, of the Congregation of the Passinn will conduct a Mission at Mount Carmel Catholic Church, Thurmont, and at St. Anthony's Church, Mount St. Mary's. The Mission will open at Mount Carmel Church, Thurmont, on Sunday evening, October 27th, at 7 o'clock and will close on Wednesday evening, October 30th, at 7 o'clock.

During the Mission in the morning there will be Mass and Instruction at 7.30 o'clock, and in the evening Rosary, Sermon and Benediction at 7 o'clock. At Mount Carmel Church, Thurmont, there will be Mass at eight A. M., on Sunday, Oct. 27, Nov. 3 and 10th and on All Saints' Day, Friday, Nov. 1. At St. Anthony's Church, Mount St. Mary's, Father Robert will preach on Sunday morning, Oct. 27th, at 10 o'clock, a sermon preparatory for the Mission, which will open at St. Anthony's on Thursday morning, Oct. 31st and close on Tuesday evening, November 5th. During the Mission the Forty Hours' Devotion will open at St. Anthony's on Sunday morning November 3rd and close on the following Tuesday evening.

Father Robert is well known by St. Anthony's Congregation to whom he returns to preach a renewal of his Mission of last year. He also delivered at Thurmont, a year ago, a very interesting and instructive lecture on the Confessional, which was largely attended by non-Catholics and which made a profound impression.

During the Mission at both churches the seats will be free. Not only the Catholics of Mt. St. Mary's and Thurmont but also all non-Catholics are cordially invited to attend the Mission.

UNUSUAL CORN STALKS.

Mr. Hartman Can Raise The Tallest Corn in This Section of the County.

Mr. Russell Hartman brought to this office two stalks of corn taken from the fields on his father's farm which measured thirteen feet and nine inches and thirteen feet and three inches respectively. The ears were also unusually large. These two stalks can be seen at THE CHRONICLE office. Mr. Daniel Hartman is one of our most successful farmers and has long been noted as is also his neighbor, Mr. Jacob Hoke, for his fine stock. These examples of his success in raising corn show conclusively that he can raise other things beside large horses.

BAKER'S TEA ROOM

Emmitsburg had long been in need of a tea room, a place where one could get a dainty meal at any time or from which one could have sent, for serving at home, tempting and attractive dishes, salads, cakes, etc. The want has been supplied by L. M. Baker who, judging from the success already attained, is adequately supplying the demand. At the Tea Room and Delicatessen Shop there are things that would please the most fastidious palate and those who have had delicious dishes delivered to their homes have been loud in their praises of the new venture.

NILES MADISON WILHIDE.

Mr. Niles Madison Wilhide, a well-known and respected citizen of Four Points, near Emmitsburg, died suddenly last Sunday at the home of his son, Mr. George N. Wilhide. Mr. Wilhide was born in Thurmont in 1843. Since his residence in this vicinity he has been actively connected with the Lutheran Church in this place, holding offices of trust in that congregation. He was a successful farmer and had a wide circle of friends. The funeral services were held in Keysville on Monday, the Rev. Mr. Reinewald officiating.

Mr. Wilhide is survived by three sons, George N. Wilhide, of Four Points, John M., of York, Pa., and Peter R., of Keysville.

A BRAND NEW SANDWICH

A Novelty That Has Proved Its Worth For Afternoon Teas or Picnics.—How to Make It.

Fannie Merrill Farmer, an authority on cooking, gives the following recipe for a new sandwich in the Woman's Home Companion:

"Somerset sandwiches are as acceptable at an afternoon tea or evening reception as at a picnic. They are made from a bread the recipe of which, I think, is unknown to most of my readers, so I will give a list of the ingredients which go to make it, but will presuppose that you know the principles of breadmaking: One-half cupful of scalded milk, one-half cupful of boiling water, one-half tablespoonful of lard, one-half tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of molasses, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half a yeast cake dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of lukewarm water, one half cupful of white flour and enough entire wheat flour to knead and one cupful of English walnut or pecan nut meats broken in pieces. The result is more satisfactory if the nut meats are added while kneading after the first raising. When this bread is twenty-four hours' old, slice as thin as possible, spread sparingly and evenly with creamed butter and put orange marmalade between slices. Remove crusts, cut in triangles or any desired shape and garnish with halves of nut meats, which need a bit of butter on their undersurfaces to keep them in place. To keep moist pack the same as other sandwiches. If orange marmalade is not procurable, make the sandwiches without it, and even then you will have a delicious novelty."

FEW NOVELTIES IN FURNITURE.

An Umbrella Cabinet That Will Accommodate Overshoes and Veils.

A piece of furniture that is a decided novelty is an umbrella cabinet.

No matter how handsome or elaborate it may be, the ordinary receptacle for umbrellas and walking sticks is not a thing of beauty and does not add to the appearance of the hall in which it stands.

This cabinet, however, is a really attractive piece of furniture, which has the added advantage of protecting its contents from dust and dirt and concealing them so that they do not seem to add to the decorative features of the hall.

Around the sides of the cabinet and also inside both doors are brass hooks, into which the handles of the umbrellas or walking sticks are fastened. Several of the hooks have silk bags attached for the protection of light colored parasols or particularly handsome umbrellas.

A long drawer in the lower part of the cabinet may be used for overshoes, and a shelflike arrangement in the top, which opens on hinges, is useful for holding veils or gloves or small articles left temporarily in the hall.

The whole arrangement is quite compact, occupying but small space, and the inlaid wood of which it is made adds much to the beauty of an article that is built on plain but well proportioned lines.

Caring For Invalids.

Allow them to suggest the arrangement of their rooms if they wish.

Leave the windows free that there may be plenty of room to see the outside world.

Always strive to take a cheerful and comforting atmosphere to the sickroom. Prepare the invalid's tray as daintily and temptingly as possible.

Be cheerful and pleasant, but not loud. Do not crowd the room with visitors or allow too long calls to be made.

Be careful not to criticize, argue or antagonize an invalid in any way. It will make a weak person nervous.

Be careful not to jar the bed or chair or sit so as to keep fresh air from the patient.

To Look Tall.

A woman must learn to hold up her head.

To dress her neck higher.

To wear her hair as high as possible.

To wear her gowns broader on the shoulders.

To take skipping and jumping exercises.

To acquire limberness. The lithe woman is taller in appearance than the little stiff woman who walks as if she were in a vise.

When Sending Flowers.

When sending flowers a distance, if the ends are first dipped in candle grease they will keep perfectly fresh for a week. Each stem of the large flowers, such as roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, should be taken separately, but violets and pansies may be bunched and dipped. When the flowers arrive at their destination the ends should be clipped before they are placed in tepid water.

Lamp Suggestions.

Many clever women find most beautiful lamps for their drawing room or dining room by buying a vase of quaint design with a suitable receptacle for oil and having a burner fitted to the top at some lamp establishment.

In this way one can easily find pottery to harmonize with the furnishings of the room and have a wider range of choice than by making a selection at the lamp shop.

SOME THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Simple Receipts That All Should Know.—An Excellent Hair Tonic.

An excellent mouth wash, especially in fruit season, because of its good effect upon the teeth, is lime water. To make it pour a quart of boiled or distilled water over a teaspoonful of slaked lime. Pour into a bottle and shake well every fifteen minutes for the first hour. Then allow the lime to settle and pour off the water, which should be bottled for use.

There is no need of brushing the hair if the brush brings it out. Comb it gently with the coarse teeth and apply this tonic: Tincture of nux vomica, one ounce; spirits of rosemary, two ounces; alcohol, two ounces. Apply several times a week to the roots of the hair.

A bad complexion, lacking luster, elasticity and plumpness, often indicates want of goodness in the vital or nutritive system. A mild diet, a gentle temperature, an even digestion, open air exercise, sleep and tranquillity of mind are all necessary to loveliness. Fresh meats to be nutritious should be rare. Avoid all highly spiced foods and drink plenty of water. Oranges, pineapples, grape fruit, olives, whole wheat bread, tomatoes and apples are all beauty foods. Substitute lemon juice for vinegar and eat sparingly of rich salads and pastries.

Gifts For a Boy's Room.

Every girl who has brothers, cousins or friends in college or school is anxious to know what would be useful and proper for the furnishing of the schoolroom. Girls are becoming somewhat diffident about offering gifts of this nature to their masculine relatives, because so many times the most carefully planned and executed piece of needlework has proved useless and out of place in the boy's room. Fragile and very dainty things, fussy things, objects for the toilet table which are not really necessary, trifles for the desk that are more ornamental than useful, are all apt to be out of place in the boy's room. The most acceptable things are the really useful things, which are solid and substantial as well as attractive in appearance. As regards aesthetics merely, most boys like pictures of certain sorts, but rather dread ornaments, which are sure to be broken in some of the scrambles.

Among sofa pillows the linen ones in the college or school colors, with big monograms in leather stitched on one side, are very popular with boys. Pillows made of soft leather are also very good, and those made of small Navajo blankets are received with the greatest joy. Of course it isn't easy making a Navajo blanket pillow or one of leather either, but for a beloved brother or cousin one will do much. It is a good plan not to attempt to stitch the two sides of the cushion in either case, but to lace them together with leather thongs.

A set of laundry bags may also be made for a boy relative. There should be a large bag for general use and a small one for collars and cuffs, as these frequently go to different laundries. These bags are made of linen, with monograms in white braid or embroidery. Blue linen or brown bags are the best, as they wash very well.

A housewife or comfort bag, such as soldiers carry, is always liked by the college boy. This may be in several shapes, but the best is a long strip of cloth or leather fitted with pockets and with cords at one end, so that it may be rolled up and tied. The pockets contain buttons, black and white cotton, needles, scissors, tape and other useful things for bachelor mending.

As for pictures, of course that is a matter of individual taste with most boys. There are a few pictures, however, which almost all boys like, among which Remington's Indian and cowboy pictures probably take first rank.

The True Value of Lemons.

Lemons are very useful in health and sickness. Hot lemonade is one of the best remedies for an incipient cold. It is also excellent in cases of biliousness. For malaria the "Roman cure" is prepared by cutting the rind and pulp of a lemon into a pint of water, then boiling until there is only half a pint. One teaspoonful is taken before each meal. This has cured obstinate cases when quinine failed. Lemon sirup made by baking a lemon twenty minutes and then squeezing the juice upon half a cupful of sugar is excellent for hoarseness and to break up a cold. Tie a piece of lemon on a corn at night for five nights, leaving it on all night. Soak the foot in warm water and the corn can be easily removed. When the root of the corn is taken out cover the toe with collodion or some other preparation to protect the skin, which will be sensitive, says Woman's Life. Unless the tender skin is protected it will soon form another corn. A piece of cotton saturated with vaseline and put over the toe will doubtless protect it just as well.

Graham Bread.

Set a sponge overnight as for white bread and in the morning work into it three scant tablespoonfuls of molasses and enough graham flour to make a soft dough. Knead thoroughly and after forming into loaves knead each loaf for five minutes. Put into well greased tins, set to rise until very light and bake in a moderate oven.

To keep doughnuts from burning drop a piece of raw potato in the boiling fat, and you will have no trouble with them.

Hangnails can be cured if the ends of the fingers be rubbed with sweet oil as far down as the first joint.

RACE HATRED IN CANADA.

Member of Clerical Element in France Speaks of Conditions in The West Concerning The Japanese.

Abbe Felix Klein, a prominent member of the clerical element in France, after a study of social and economic conditions in the West says that the anti-Japanese feeling existing at Vancouver and in British Columbia is far more intense than in the United States. He declares that it is not a question of labor, but of race. "Before coming to the United States," the Abbe said "I shared the view of a considerable element in France and throughout Europe that the Japanese question might lead the United States into war. But personal investigation through the Middle West and the Far West has completely changed my views. The people of the West are not thinking of such a thing, and scout the very idea of war."

TAKES HIS OWN LIFE.

Editor Lewis Found Dead In An Outbuilding At Woodsboro Hanging From a Rafter.

The body of Harry W. Lewis, editor and publisher of the Banner of Liberty, a weekly newspaper published at Woodsboro, this county, was found hanging from a rafter of one of the outbuildings of the Woodsboro Canning Company. All the circumstances of the finding of the body and the position it was in point conclusively to suicide. Mr. Lewis for sometime, had been despondent over his financial affairs and this may have been the cause of the deed.

The Banner of Liberty has been established eleven years, and after the installation of modern equipment was considered a successful venture. The deceased is survived by a widow and five small children.

VIOLATE IMMIGRATION LAW.

States Can Not Pay Passage Money as Has Been Done by Several Southern States.

Attorney General Bonaparte has rendered an opinion in an important case involving the right of a State to solicit immigration from a foreign country. He holds that in the case submitted to him the State violates the immigration laws in paying the passage money of the immigrant, and that in this respect the State does not differ in law from an individual. The case was brought by the State of Louisiana, and was of great interest to other Southern States.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF FARMERS

A Word on the Subject of Feeding Stock to the Farmer's Best Advantage

SOME INFORMATION REGARDING FOOD STUFFS

The Importance of the Subject From an Economic Stand Point.—The Proper Feed Will Bring Results That Can Not be Otherwise Attained.—The Experience of Others Sifted Down for Chronicle Readers.—What Men Who Know Have to Say on This Important Subject.—A Word for the Wise.

On the subject of feeding stock the Encyclopedia Americana in a signed article on "The Nutrition of Farm Animals" has this to say which is of vital interest to farmers:

The common domestic animals are fed for a variety of purposes. With cattle, sheep, and pigs, it is the object to induce gains in weight, that is, to fatten them, or in the case of milch cows, to produce gains in the form of body secretions,—milk, rather than fat on the body. In a similar way, sheep are fed for the production of wool; goats for milk or their fleece, and poultry, for the market and the production of eggs. Cattle are sometimes, and horses are almost universally, fed as beasts of burden. Animals with young require food for their development and after birth the young animal needs it for growth and the development of the body as well as for maintenance.

A great deal of information regarding food requirements has accumulated from the experiments of countless generations, and for many years the problem has been studied experimentally at agricultural colleges, experiment stations, and similar institutions, in this and other countries. It is fair to say, at the present time, that the feeding of farm animals rests upon quite well defined general principles, derived from the studies of the chemist and the animal physiologist, concerning the composition and functions of food and the way it is utilized after it is eaten. Such studies show that the materials composing the body are constantly breaking down and being consumed, and that to keep the animal in a healthy and vigorous condition requires a constant supply of new material; if this is lacking or is insufficient, hunger, and finally death, result. To supply the needed materials is one of the chief functions of food, but in addition to this it maintains body temperature and also furnishes the force or energy which enables the animal to do work, and to perform the necessary functions of the body, such as keeping up the beating of the heart, the respiratory movements, and so on. Since it furnishes heat and energy, the food may be said to serve as fuel. If, in addition to maintaining the system, growth is made, as in case of a young animal, or milk is secreted, more food is needed than for maintenance. If the supply is in excess of all demands, some is stored as a reserve material, principally in the form of fat. To supply food in the right proportions to meet the various requirements, without waste, constitutes scientific feeding. By carefully studying the composition of feeding stuffs, the proportion in which they are digested and the requirements of different animals when at rest, at work, producing wool, giving milk, etc., the principles of feeding have been deduced. In applying these in practice, the cost and special adaptations of different feeding stuffs must also be taken into account.

The feeding stuffs of most importance for farm animals are of vegetable origin and include cereal grains, such as oats and corn, either ground or unground; leguminous seeds, as beans, peas, and cowpeas; oil cakes and other commercial by-products, as linseed cake, cotton-seed meal, gluten feed and so on; fodder crops, fresh and cured; and the different roots, tubers and green vegetables. In quite recent times, cane molasses, beet molasses, and other beet sugar by-products have also assumed more or less importance in this connection. As regards feeding stuffs of animal origin, milk is the natural food of the young of all mammals. After weaning, skim milk is a common food, especially for pigs. Dried blood, meat meal, and similar feeds of animal origin are also sometimes fed.

MORMONS INVADE GERMANY.

They Disregard Edicts Against Them And Large Party Left For There On Wednesday.

In spite of the recent edicts issued in Germany against Mormon missionaries, the fact that out of a large party of missionaries of that sect which sailed from Boston on Wednesday, at least seventeen declared their intention of going straight into Germany would seem to indicate that the Mormon Church now regards itself "strong enough to defy the measures of the German Government. When the White Star Line steamer Cymric sailed for Liverpool at 11.30 o'clock Wednesday morning fully half her first cabin passengers were Mormon missionaries. These are bound for fields all over Europe and Great Britain, and at least two will work in South Africa. The party is in charge of Elder James Brown, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and its members are drawn from Utah and Idaho.

Wants $1,000,000.

The Pittsburgh Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States, so a news dispatch in the papers of last Monday says, will demand $1,000,000 from the First German Evangelical Protestant Church of Pittsburgh on the ground that they own a half interest in that land in that city now controlled by the other church. This land is bounded by Smithfield street, Sixth avenue, Montour Way and Strawberry alley and is worth $2,000,000.

Congratulations To The Herald.

Tuesday, October 8, was the first anniversary of the establishment of the Washington Herald which is, to use its own words, "essentially a newspaper for Washington people." The Herald is the cleanest paper published in the National capital; it is fearless and independent and deserves the large patronage it is now receiving.

FUNERALS PROHIBITED.

In Pennsylvania a recent law prohibits funeral services other than those usually held at the grave where the cause of death was a contagious disease. The law commands that a notice of the death be published with the name of the disease and the announcement, "no funeral".

Perhaps you can't spare the time to call—and maybe you don't care to write. Use either phone—we have them both—and your orders will receive prompt attention from

LIVE CAPITAL TOPICS.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

Reports from Col. Goethals, the chief engineer of the Panama Canal indicate that the work on the Isthmus is going forward as it should, the showing for each month being a little better than the last. The million mark in the number of cubic yards of earth excavated was passed in July and for the past month the record was 1,481,307. This makes the next mark to be aimed at a million and a half a month and there is no question that this will be reached either this month or next. This figure accounted for all the excavation on the Isthmus, including the Culebra Cut, the Gatun Dam and the dredging and harbor work. But the excavation from the Culebra Cut was over three times what it was this month a year ago and this is one of the best features of the whole showing.

Some of the elders of the Mormon church have had the refreshing nerve to protest to the State Department against the discrimination against their agents that was being exercised in Germany. It is needless to say that the Department will take no notice of the complaint, but the fact that it has been filed shows that the German government is making it uncomfortable for the Mormon recruiting agents. As a matter of fact the authorities in Germany have announced that they consider the Mormon proselyting agents "undesirable citizens" and have deported several of them. They are breaking up their missionary work wherever it can be discovered and making Germany much less a happy hunting ground for recruits than it formerly was.

There are renewed reports that the telegraph strike is about to collapse. The date now set for a settlement is Oct. 15, and President Small of the Telegraphers Union is coming on to Washington to consult with the Commissioner of Labor about it. The companies do not profess to be in any more of a mind for settlement than they were two months ago when the strike was first called and the men themselves are ready to quit with very small concessions if any. The only practical point in which the strikers have recently shown their strength has been in the delay they caused in the cotton ginners' report this week. The report, which is one of the most important of the yearly cotton reports, was lacking in statements from several thousand ginners in Louisiana and Texas where the strike has the greatest hold. The men claimed that this showed the companies were not able to handle even the government business with any degree of efficiency. The same thing shows in the failure of the commercial companies to give efficient service to the newspapers, but with all these short comings, it is understood that the companies are in a position to continue the fight indefinitely while the operators are on the verge of a collapse.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has appointed a new special committee to assist in fixing rates. One of the serious points made by the railroads in reporting their fixed expenses, which of course militate against low rates, was the deterioration of equipment. The Commission has therefore set out to study the lasting power of rails, ties and rolling stock. A committee of four experts has been appointed for work and it is expected to dig up some curious and interesting, and possibly important data.

It is interesting to see that one member of the cabinet at any rate has come out squarely in favor of tariff revision. This of course is going to be one of the serious issues of the next Congress. The President is in favor of it and Speaker Cannon is bitterly opposed to it. Secretary Taft has always been classed a fairly ardent revisionist till his recent Ohio speech when he rather sidetracked the issue. But at the meeting of the Cotton Convention in Washington this week, Secretary Straus of the Department of Commerce and Labor came out in a straightforward speech on the subject, saying that the tariff wall with which this country had surrounded itself had been built to the height where there was no hope for a further expansion of foreign trade unless concessions were made to the foreigners with whom we traded. Now the Department of Secretary Straus is one having to deal most closely with foreign trade and commerce and the Secretary ought to know from observation what he is talking about. He was addressing himself particularly with reference to the foreign trade of the United States in cotton goods and said that the record trade of this country of $53,000,000 in cotton goods with the Orient had fallen off $20,000,000 in the past year. He said that this was argument enough in favor of a revision of our tariff system. He pointed out at the same time that while the late President McKinley was a high tariff man, he had seen quite as clearly as anyone the necessity for trade concessions if the tariff was to be effective, and he was quite as much an advocate of reciprocity as he was of high initial tariff. Such a talk as this coming from a member of the cabinet indicates that there are things doing revisionwards in administration circles and argues for a lively debate when the matter comes up for discussion at the next session of Congress. But the question will not come up at all if the Speaker can prevent it.

The Attorney-General rendered an opinion last week that opens the door to foreign ship owners in competing for the coal contracts while the battleship fleet is going to the Pacific. The point has been made by native ship owners that as San Francisco is an American port, it would be in contravention of the coastwise navigation laws for coal to be transported from any Atlantic port to San Francisco in foreign bottoms. If this contention had been upheld it would have placed the government in a nice position, leaving it practically at the mercy of the coal trust and a few domestic ship owners. But the Attorney-General has held that in case of scarcity of American owned vessels or exorbitant charges by the same, the government is perfectly at liberty to have its coal carried from the Atlantic to the Pacific in any colliers it can get hold of. This opens the door to foreign carrying competition and will in large measure obviate the danger of a hold-up by the American ship owners.

If your competitor advertises, you must advertise to keep up with him. If he doesn't you ought to advertise to get ahead of him. Don't rely upon the truth of the old adage that "honesty is the best policy." Honesty reinforced by publicity goes it one better.

To Farmers---A Word of Explanation.

There seems to be an impression that the Fine Set of Harness offered by the EMMITSBURG CHRONICLE for the best article on farming will be awarded to the farmer who has raised the biggest crop.

This is a decided mistake.

The sole idea is to get a series of articles for publication, written by practical farmers, explaining the methods by which they have succeeded with various crops.

Thus the man who farms 30 acres is on the same footing with the one who farms 300, for the one who cultivates the small farm may have far better ideas than he who owns a greater number of acres, and his product, in proportion, may be greater.

It is simply a question of who has the best ideas.

Valuable Offer to Farmers

In order to benefit farmers in general by giving them—

Free of Cost

—the most practical suggestions about raising paying crops of various kinds, gained from actual experience.

The Chronicle Will Present a Set of Fine Harness to the farmer who sends to this office before January 1st, 1908, the best article on the methods by which he has raised the most successful crops.

As substance is what is wanted, writing, punctuation or expression will not be counted—thus an article indifferently written, but containing the best ideas, will count for more than a well written but less practical one.

CONDITIONS:

1. Every competitor must be a yearly subscriber to THE CHRONICLE.
2. The number of acres cultivated, the character of the soil and the reasons for everything done, must be given.
3. Under each article must appear a fictitious name, and accompanying it must be a sealed envelope containing the real name of the writer. The outside of the envelope must bear the same name that is appended to each article.
4. Every manuscript submitted is to become the property of THE CHRONICLE.
5. Articles must be written on one side of the paper only.
6. None but the assumed name will be published with each article.
7. The decision as to which article is the best will be made by three farmers residing in another county and unknown to those competing.
8. The result of the award will be published in some issue of THE CHRONICLE as soon after January 1st, 1908, as possible and the real name of the successful competitor and his name only will be published, and the harness delivered.
9. Any farmer or farm worker, no matter where he resides, may submit articles and any number of articles may be sent in by the same person.

SUGGESTIONS:—Send in your articles as soon as possible. In giving your experience with any particular crop state the kind of weather that prevailed when you began to plow—why you plowed deep or shallow as the case may be—what work you did on the crop before it was harvested and for what reason—what fertilizer and how much you used and why—when you harvested your crop or crops—the gross and net weight or measurement of the same.
