GLANCE AT AGE OF RULERS

Oldest Is Almost Seventy-Nine

MIKADO BORN IN 1862

Joseph Emperor of Austria Is the Patriarch

KING MANUEL II THE YOUNGEST

Emperor of Germany and Roosevelt About the Same Age.—Autocrat of Russia Is Only Forty Years Old While King of Italy Is One Year Older.

The oldest European ruler is the emperor of Austria-Hungary, Francis Joseph, who is in his seventy-ninth year, having been born on the 18th of August, 1830. He is still active and continues to direct the somewhat complicated policy of the dual empire. This is the more remarkable on account of the many domestic troubles he has had with his children, his nephews, and his wife, who met her tragic death at Geneva in 1898.

President Porfirio Diaz of Mexico, runs him a "close second," having been born on the 15th of September, 1830, and is therefore only a month younger than the Austrian emperor. He was first elected president in 1876, and, with one short interval, has been president ever since.

The next in order of age is King Leopold II., of Belgium, who was born on the 9th of April, 1835, and is now in his seventy-fourth year.

M. Armand Fallieres, the president of the French Republic, was born on the 5th of November, 1841, and thus leads by three days King Edward VII. of England, who was born on the 9th of November in the same year. Each is therefore in his sixty-seventh year.

Frederick VIII., king of Denmark, is the next oldest ruler. He was sixty-five on the 3d of last June, while Abdul Hamid II., of Turkey, is only fifty-seven. It may be news to many persons that the present mikado of Japan is Mutsuhito, and as we cannot trace another Mutsuhito he is apparently Mutsuhito I. He is fifty-six years of age, having been born on the 3d of November, 1852.

Gustavus V., king of Sweden, was born on the 16th of June, 1858, and William II., emperor of Germany, on the 27th of January, 1859, and they are therefore each of them about fifty, and they approach nearest of all to our President in this respect. The Czar of Russia is a mere youth, looked at from the European point of view. He is only forty, and lives in such seclusion that very little is really known about him. There remain Victor Emmanuel, king Italy, who is thirty-nine, which, of course, is very young for a king, and those royal infants, King Alfonso XIII. of Spain, who is twenty-two, and King Manuel II. of Portugal, who is nineteen.

WROTE LITTLE DROPS OF WATER

Author of Famous Verses Dies at Age of Eighty-Five Years.—How She Wrote the Verses.

Mrs. Julia A. Fletcher Carney, who wrote "Little Things" died on Sunday at Galesburg, Ill. She was eighty-five years old. Mrs. Carney wrote "Little Things" when she was a primary school teacher in Boston, in 1845. The first verse was written as an exercise in shorthand, in which it was suggested that the shorter the words the better the results. Mrs. Carney then penned in stenographic characters this verse:

Little drops of water,
Little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean
And the pleasant land.

A Sunday school paper called upon her that same afternoon for some verse and she added three stanzas to the shorthand exercise.

Test New Wireless Telephone System.

Officers of the United States Signal Corps are conducting experiments with a wireless telephone apparatus which is designed to operate over a distance of about 40 miles. The instruments are being tried between Sandy Hook Proving Ground and New York city.

ELECTIONS IN ENGLAND

Money Talks There Just As Persuasive As Here

HEAVY DEMANDS ON ASPIRANTS

Used To Cost $50,000 To Get A Seat In Parliament.—Price Somewhat Reduced but Still Very High.—Not Easy To Come At Details.

Misery loves company and in that light it is consoling to know that over in England vast sums of money are needed to be a successful candidate. The following is taken from the London Standard and refutes the tiresome assertion that over there they do things so much better especially in the realm of politics, than could possibly be the case in benighted America. Money has the same sweet sound even in the tight little island.

"Of course the corrupt practices act has done much to prevent the spending of huge sums of money at the actual election. Expenses then are, we believe, effectually as well as nominally controlled. But if the 'short, sharp shock' of heavy disbursement at an election is a thing of the past, we understand that a new kind of disguised bribery has more than taken its place. The demands upon the pocket of every pliable member are unceasing. His annual subscriptions and donations amount to more, perhaps, than ever before. It has been said that in some cases it costs as much to have a constituency as to keep a steam yacht or a pack of hounds. But even if this is an exaggeration, it is, we are assured, by no means uncommon for constituencies to cost their member between $10,000 and $15,000 a year. In other words, it used to cost a rich man $50,000 down to get into Parliament. Now it cost him $6,000 at the election; and $10,000 a year for the five years, which is the average duration of a Parliament. Naturally it is not easy to come at the details. We can hardly expect members of the house to tell us what they spend, but it is possible that some past members will be good enough to state in the public interest what amount they were compelled to spend each year in order to secure their seats."

REFORMATION DAY CELEBRATED

Protestants Unite In Commemoration of Martin Luther's Act at Wittenburg in the 16th Century

Lutherans and Protestants in general all over this country celebrated the anniversary of the posting of the ninety-five theses on the door of the church in Wittenburg by Martin Luther the great reformer on last Saturday. It was on the 31st of October, 1517 that the German priest nailed his articles where they would attract attention and brought to a head the great movement against the Roman Church and on this anniversary of that day loyal followers of Luther gathered together and sang his wonderful hymn "Ein feste Burg." In the local church it was impossible to hold appropriate services on the anniversary day on account of the absence of Rev. Mr. Reinwald, who as president of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Maryland, was in Frederick attending its sessions, but on the Sunday previous that congregation observed or commemorated the occasion.

Killed at Football Game on Saturday.

During a game of football between the Virginia Military Institute and Roanoke College played last Saturday at Lexington, Va., a player by the name of Ferebee from Norfolk was killed. The game was at once stopped. Ferebee was running with the ball and was tackled, several players falling upon him.

Forty Thousand Catholics Parade.

More than 40,000 men, members of the Holy Name Society, marched through the streets of the residential section of Boston on Sunday in celebration of the centenary of the founding of the Catholic Church in New England, which was closed on that day.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

The national election passed off quietly in Emmitsburg a large vote being polled. There was no evidence of unseemly conduct and withal there was a great deal of good feeling in evidence on all sides.

According to its promise THE CHRONICLE displayed the returns as fast as they were received over the special wire which was placed at its disposal through the courtesy of the C. & P. Telephone Company, one of whose operators was at the receiver from the moment the polls closed until after midnight. It was 6.15 when the first returns came from New York and a half a minute thereafter they were on the canvas giving information to the large and appreciative crowd who were already anxiously awaiting the returns.

It was due to the generosity of Dr. J. McC. Foreman that such perfect arrangements were made possible for the displaying of the returns. This gentleman cooperated with THE CHRONICLE and operated his stereopticon to the perfect satisfaction of the patrons of the paper who came from miles around to hear the result of the election.

It was not until about 10.30 that the election judges finished counting the local vote. The complete returns are as follows:

	1st Precinct	2nd Precinct
Bryan	191	144
Taft	159	138

One vote cast for electors Levering and Sappington. Six votes in the first precinct were for Elector Robinson only and 13 others were thrown out two of which were blank.

In 1898 there were 648 votes polled in the two precincts of Emmitsburg and Pearre received 264 while Poffenberger got 349. This year Lewis received 322 and Pearre 250, 675 votes being cast. The result in the county is given with the returns of 1898 when Pearre first ran for Congress. They are as follows

"Garret and Frederick," says the Baltimore Sun, "pulled Pearre through, but Lewis comes out of the contest with all the glory and the satisfaction of having made as good a fight against overwhelming odds as has ever been made in Maryland. Part of his big vote in Allegany is said to be due to his strength among the miners, and it is also said that Gompers' indorsement of Pearre coming on top of Roosevelt's attack on the Pearre bill injured Pearre to some extent. Lewis ran several

SCAVENGER OF STEEL

Search For Vanadium to Strengthen Metals

VAST DEPOSITS ON TOP OF ANDES

That Found in Colorado Costs Six Dollars a Pound—Output Limited to Few Pounds a Year.—Its Effect on Tool Steel and Cutlery.

Mr. Parker, of New York, who is interested in the exploitation of vanadium in the manufacture of steel says that for years steel men have been searching for vanadium, which is used in steel-making, and acts as a scavenger and strengthener of the metal, and the whole world has been prospected. Fortunes have been spent in the search, and naturally a great fortune probably will be made by the lucky discoverers of the mine that promises to supply the steelmakers of America with all they need or can use for generations.

There is a mine owned by New York and Pittsburgh steel men, located on top of the Andes, in Peru. The deposit is three and a half miles long and a mile and a half wide, and its depth is unknown. While the Peruvian deposit is the greatest known, vanadium is found in many parts of the United States, particularly in the Rocky Mountains. It is in small quantities, however, and in refractory ores, which require chemical treatment, making the cost prohibitive. It is said the cheapest cost at which the Colorado vanadium can be produced is $6 a pound, and even at that cost the output could be only a few pounds a year. In the Peruvian deposit the supply seems to be practically unlimited and the cost of reduction is comparatively small.

Experiments with the vanadium flux are going on daily in all the steel centers of America, toolmakers as well as armorplate manufacturers reporting wonderful results from the new element. One big cutlery firm is now experimenting with it, with the expectation that blades will be made to keep an edge much longer. Saws made of vanadium steel have been tied end to end and left for two weeks, then found to snap back perfectly straight when released.

FOREST FIRE ON THE MOUNTAIN

Damage Was Slight.—Considerable Territory Burned Over.—Efficient Work of Fire Fighters.

Saturday afternoon fire broke out on Carrick's Knob and burnt until late Sunday night. The fire was first noticed near the road at Mr. George Anders' place and is supposed to have been started by a careless pedestrian who threw a match in the woods along the road. From the time it was first noticed which was about six o'clock, landowners and residents joined to fight the flames and worked valiantly until midnight Saturday and all day Sunday. They were able to overcome the fire about ten o'clock Sunday night. The damage was slight due to the work of the fire fighters. From where the fire started it burned up the mountain to Cross Rocks and Garden Rocks. It was at this place that it burned out. The following men fought the fire: Walter Hess, William, George S., Milton, Harry and Grant Springer, Charles and Joseph Hess and James Myers.

More Aliens Coming Than Going.

Secretary Straus says: "For the nine months ending Sept. 30, the total arrival of immigrants at New York was 272,000, while for the same time, the number of alien departures was 414,000. Last month immigration exceeded emigration; the number incoming being about 41,000 as against 35,000 outgoing."

Victim of Hazing Found at Last.

Following a search lasting six weeks and covering the greater part of the United States, Willis E. Smith, member of the freshman class at the State University of Kentucky, Lexington, who disappeared Sept. 22, is believed to have been located at Russellville, Ky.

German Chancellor Has Resigned.

A special dispatch to this country from Berlin says that Prince von Bulow, the German Imperial Chancellor, has resigned.

The forest fire losses of 1908 directly and indirectly will amount to about $40,000,000.

WHAT WE OWE OUR GOD

Thanksgiving Day Proclamation

NOVEMBER 26TH NAMED

President Urges Moral And Spiritual Progress

GROWTH IN WORDLY STRENGTH

Have Prospered in Material Things to A Degree Never Known Before and Not Now Known in Any Other Country.—Prayer For Civic Righteousness.

Last Saturday the President issued his annual Thanksgiving proclamation which reads as follows:

"BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
"A Proclamation.

"Once again the season is at hand when, according to the ancient custom of our people, it becomes the duty of the President to appoint a day of prayer and of thanksgiving to God.

"Year by year this nation grows in strength and worldly power. During the century and a quarter that has elapsed since our entry into the circle of independent peoples we have grown and prospered in material things to a degree never known before and not now known in any other country. The 13 Colonies which struggled along the sea coast of the Atlantic and were hemmed in but a few miles West of tidewater by the Indian-haunted wilderness have been transformed into the mightiest republic which the world has ever seen. Its domains stretch across the Continent from one to another of the two greatest oceans, and it exercises dominion alike in the Arctic and Tropic realms. The growth in wealth and population has surpassed even the growth in territory. Nowhere else in the world is the average of individual comfort and material well-being as high as in our fortunate land.

"For the very reason that in material well-being we have thus abounded, we owe it to the Almighty to show equal progress in moral and spiritual things.

"With a nation, as with the individuals who make up a nation, material well-being is an indispensable foundation. But the foundation avails nothing by itself. That life is wasted, and worse than wasted, which is spent in piling, heap upon heap, those things which minister merely to the pleasure of the body and to the power that rests only on wealth. Upon material well-being as a foundation must be raised the structure of the lofty life of the spirit, if this nation is properly to fulfill its great mission and to accomplish all that we so ardently hope and desire. The things of the body are good; the things of the intellect better; but best of all are the things of the soul, for, in the nation as in the individual, in the long run it is character that counts.

W. M. RAILROAD'S BIG ORDER

To Spend $1,250,000 For New Equipment.—Largest Announced Order From The South for a Year.

The Western Maryland Railroad has arranged to spend within the next few months, $1,250,000 on new equipment. Already the company has asked builders to submit bids for furnishing five hundred all-steel gondola hopper coal cars, ten consolidated freight locomotives, three switch locomotives and ten ca-boose cars.

The foregoing equipment will call for an expenditure of more than $1,000,000. Later the company will place an order for 500 steel under-frame gondola hopper cars. The order is the largest announced in any system in the South for more than a year, and it is believed to be the forerunner of other important purchases.

CURRENT COMMENT AND VARIOUS OPINIONS

Discussion of Affairs in General from Leading Journals of The Country.

Step Forward From Rooseveltism. (New York Sun.)

We wish well, with all our heart, to William H. Taft. If he will use his power to enforce our laws instead of dispensing them, inculcate the spirit of unity and good will and cultivate the sense of national solidarity and equality among all the people, he will do all that may be hoped or asked of him.

Credit Awarded. (New York Sun.)

It has been the fortune of few Republicans to be credited with a greater service to the party and the nation than Hon. Joe Cannon rendered when in cooperation with Senator Crane of Massachusetts and a few other men of true courage and discernment, he parried at Chicago the deadly blow which Theodore Roosevelt, at the instance of Samuel Gompers, aimed at the courts and at government by law.

Servant of the Whole People. (Washington Herald.)

A staunch Republican from principle, Governor Hughes is free from negligence to the party machine, and feels free to be a servant of the whole people, not a mere partisan leader or political boss. His personal independence in office is one of the most striking features of American politics, and his reelection solely on the merits of his administration, on the quality of his official record, not on the mere valuation of his party service, is a fine tribute to the man and the Governor.

Proved His Weakness. (Hartford Times.)

Mr. Bryan chose to conduct his third campaign on a platform of hostility, not merely to the trusts, but to the business interests of the country in general. He has proved the most efficient helper the Republicans have had in their campaign, thus completely justifying the expectations of Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Taft and other leading men of that party in their earnest desire to have him nominated at Denver.

Like A Bull In A China Shop. (New York Evening Post.)

The longer the German emperor's "blazing indiscretion" is studied, the more incomprehensible appears his motive. International indiscretions usually turn out to the advantage of some country, or to the furtherance of some policy, but in this case William II. appears to have offended everybody and to have gained no conceivable end. In his own empire, nothing which he has ever done has brought such general disapproval upon him.

Therefore Deeper Sting In Defeat. (Philadelphia Record.)

Had William Jennings Bryan been elected to the Presidency yesterday there would indeed have been profound cause for congratulation. There is, therefore, a deeper sting in defeat: but there is no reason for despair. The nation has still made a step in advance.

Independent Labor Vote. (Baltimore News.)

The utter collapse of Mr. Gompers' effort to swing the labor vote in this country as a solid mass is exactly what was expected. It was demonstrated not only throughout the Union but most emphatically in Congress districts like that of Mr. Cannon and Mr. Dalzell— which, having large numbers of workmen, were naturally looked to to show the result of the Gompers fight—that organized labor cannot be delivered.

The Voice Of Only One In The Wilderness. (Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.)

Most emphatically this year the braying of the donkey is not the voice of the people. The thing Mr. Gompers tried to do has been tried before, and it always fails. Organized labor recognizes the danger of such efforts, and it is its policy to try to keep politics out of the Federation.

Bryan's Imprint. (New York Evening Post.)

Mr. Bryan may truthfully claim as he did in his final speech that, whatever the result of the election, he has left his mark on his times. Just how deep an imprint it is not for the present generation to say. It is beyond doubt, however, that he has played an important part in the battle to separate business from politics.

The European Peril. (Hartford Times.)

That Wilhelm II. was innocent of any comprehension of the mischief which would follow the publication of his talk is still generally believed, but there is a fear that the final result may be to involve the country in a situation which may precipitate a war in which France, Great Britain and Russia will be united against the German nation.

Yes, Spank Him. (New Haven Journal-Courier.)

The South-American dictator-president is a big bluffer and every time he gets the better end on an international diplomatic controversy such as his present one with the Netherlands, he only acquires greater assurance with which to enter upon similar escapades with other Powers.

Giving The Reason. (New Bedford Standard.)

The next week will be devoted to telling why it didn't happen exactly the way some folks thought it was going to happen.

Window Glass Her Test. "Some people study the architecture of houses under construction or comment on the building material employed," said the woman. "That's all very well, and I try to appreciate these things too. But somehow I can't get my mind off one detail concerning new buildings. I always look at the kind of glass put in."

"The windows in a house seem to me to indicate whether the building is cheaply put up or the reverse. If the glass is of good quality—it needn't be plate, though that of course is the supreme mark—I know that pretty much everything regarding the structure is intended to be first class. Poor glass, on the other hand, inspires me with suspicion. I feel that with such an advertisement everything within and without is apt to be shoddy. At least I have my doubts until convinced otherwise."—New York Press.

Marital Troubles. Most of the people who write about troubles of married life are single. If they were married they would be so busy with their troubles they would not have time to write.—Moorhead Independent.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Another presidential election is over. The voice of the people has been heard throughout the length and breadth of the land, and William Howard Taft has been chosen President of the United States.

To those who simply wanted a change let it be said that the change will come, and that it will be a very decided change. Let those of each party who predicted a lamentable end to the welfare and prosperity of the country if their opponents won, think it all over again and see how unreasonable, how groundless such forecasts inevitably prove to be.

It must be conceded that Mr. Taft has every qualification for the presidential office, and it must be acknowledged, from his sweeping victory over his opponent, that the people of the country have every confidence that he will serve their interests better than Mr. Bryan would have done.

A REVIVAL OF THE OLD CRAFTS.

Styles and fashions, arts and cults change as we know from time to time, and upon each succeeding term of years, be it of short or long duration, a certain mode of decoration, a simple or involved method or design, a plain or elaborate style of architecture, or some particular form or school of handicraft leaves it impress upon that period.

In the process of ceaseless evolution man's creative and recreative faculties have had full sway. New effects have been produced and fresh thoughts set in motion that have led onward to fields yet undiscovered or have pointed backward to some almost forgotten age in which there flourished for a period distinctive models or original and unique examples of workmanship worthy of again being taken up, studied and developed.

With the advent of machinery, with its lowering of prices, there came an increased demand for that which was formerly handmade, and the weaver, the potter, the basket-maker, the lace worker, the metal beater, and those of kindred crafts were as a general thing forced from their home employment and their wares multiplied a thousand-fold by the faster modern method. But with regard to many things the output of the factory, so far as what we have mentioned is concerned, is not as acceptable as it once was, and the tendency is in favor of that which bears the personal touch and the individual impression of the honest craftsman's hands.

We find the governments of various countries encouraging the descendants of families which once made their living through handicraft, to take up and continue the work, to start again their hand-looms, to continue their wood-carving, their inlaying, their pottery making, their rug weaving, and so on. Especially is this so in Russia, in Germany, in Switzerland, and in Hungary, among the peasants, the idea being to furnish work for the population, but above all to preserve and further develop those designs which have been handed down from time immemorial and to create a sale for hand-made wares and fabrics which once furnished the means of livelihood for many cantons and villages.

What our government has not yet taken up—and no doubt the time is not yet ripe for America—is being successfully accomplished by individual capital, by societies, and schools, and clubs, and these are reviving lost arts, as it were, and fostering a taste and desire for all that bears the stamp of individuality and careful workmanship.

Districts and villages, and mountain regions are being searched for past crafts and for craftsmen who have long since laid aside their looms and tools. Carpet and rug makers, basket twines, furniture carvers and the like are being animated with the new desire to create things with their own hands, and central places for the satisfactory disposition for the results of these labors are being supplied. In many cities arts and crafts schools are teaching young men and women how to develop the latent talent that is in them, and while the work goes on, that which they produce is sold for a sum that gives them, after a certain apprenticeship a profit upon which to live—a profit which expands as the scholar's aptitude and proficiency increases.

In the districts near Emmitsburg and near the various towns in this part of the country there are no doubt many men and women whose parents followed or who themselves followed some of the crafts which we have mentioned, and all they need, perhaps, is a suggestion that a continuance of their work could be made profitable. Their children, who have no doubt inherited some of this talent, are particularly well qualified to become students at these schools, and it is needless to say how profitable their future lives would be made thereby. This new impetus to old crafts, that is in any considerable magnitude, is yet in its infancy, and those who embrace the opportunities that are now offered for an education that is refining, up-lifting, and that has for its object a spreading of the creative, and at the same time the making of an honest livelihood, can do many a worse thing than give their serious consideration to the subject.

The "frazzle" that Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the day before election is very much in evidence.

WHAT OF the men and women who go about from house to house with "they say," "did you hear about it," and such gossips' phrases, upon their chattering lips? Whose eyes sparkle in the rehearsing of a bit of scandal or in the telling of a disagreeable tale about a neighbor or an acquaintance? What of the person who is forever erecting a mental spite fence, whose whole nature is interwoven with threads of malice, envy and uncharitableness?

Are such persons not a burden to themselves and a thorn in the flesh of society? No one who takes pleasure in the foibles, the errors, the peccadillos, the little misfortunes, the scandals or the wrongs of their fellow men, and who then spreads them broadcast, can spend one truly happy day. None ever did.

No one who looks into the closet of his own life will fail to find a skeleton of a buried wrong which he once committed, some accusing guilt to confront his own conscience; and until that one lends a hand to draw the curtain of charity across the records of the unfortunate, the erring, and the helpless, there will come at some time in his career a long night of inward darkness, a pall that will enshroud the soul, a sting that will penetrate the heart and leave a lasting scar.

JUST as the country was about to congratulate itself that all the "brainstorms" had blown up with the Thaw trial, the Hains Brothers had to upset everything with a think cyclone and start the ball rolling in another criminal trial that bids fair to include several performances in the main tent, a few side shows, and then some.

COLONEL PEARRE can thank his lucky stars that he slid in for this, his last term in Congress. That he lost his home county will not be a thing for him to contemplate with much pleasure, and the fact that he was cut all along the line will not have a tendency to make him feel over proud of himself or of his record.

THE government report shows that 6,900,000,000 lemons represent this year's crop. No wonder there were enough to go 'round on election day.

HEALTH REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER

During the month of September, tuberculosis caused 78 deaths. Sixty persons were massacred by typhoid fever alone, with 363 additionally reported cases. Compared with the previous month, however, these figures show a very substantial diminution. Only two of the infectious and communicable diseases are on the increase, namely, diphtheria and scarlet fever. The number of diphtheria cases has arisen from 22 to 93; the number of scarlet fever cases, from 30 to 54. As a majority of the cases occurred in school children, this increase can be ascribed to the role played by the public school as a disseminator of disease.

The State Board of Health again wishes to urge upon parents and guardians, the importance of submitting to their family physician every case of sore throat or eruption, no matter how seemingly simple its character, occurring in school children, entrusted to their care. The diseases of children are usually acute, that is, a sick child either gets well quickly, or dies quickly. Should recovery ensue, irreparable damage has oftentimes been done to the tender tissues and organs of the growing child, who is then compelled to go through life maimed and halt. In antitoxin we have a specific remedy for diphtheria, but no such curative serum has as yet been discovered for scarlet fever. Antitoxin should be administered at once, without waiting for the results of a throat culture, which, however, should always be made. Isolation and disinfection are invaluable adjuncts in the treatment of any contagious disease.

For the first time since October, 1907 the State has been entirely clear of mumps. No case of influenza has been reported for four months. June 8th was the date of the last smallpox case. Measles, which disease reached a maximum of 715 cases in the month of March, has dwindled down to 17 cases. Only 2 cases of chickenpox and 15 of whooping cough were reported.

Tuberculosis: Number of deaths reported 78, as against 86 in August, 91 in July, and 100 in June. Of these 78 deaths, 43, or 55 per cent. occurred in white persons; the remainder, 35 deaths, or 45 per cent. occurred in colored persons. Two deaths occurred in institutions. The youngest decedent was a colored female infant aged 6 months; the eldest was a white woman 78 years old. Five other decedents were septuagenarians. The shortest period of illness was 3 weeks: the longest 10 years.

Influenza: Deaths reported 4, as compared with 2 in August, and 3 in July. The youngest decedent was a white male infant aged 18 days; the eldest was a colored woman 75 years old. No new cases have been reported for a period of four months. Three of the 4 deaths occurred in Pocomoke City. Mumps: No deaths, and no reported cases, as against no death and one reported case in August. Since the Bulletin has been issued, only once before the month of October, 1907 has the State been entirely clear of mumps.

Smallpox: No deaths, and no reported cases, as in July and August. The State has been free from smallpox all summer. June 8th was the date of the last case.

Chickenpox: No deaths, and only 2 cases reported, as against no deaths and no reported cases in August.

Whooping Cough: Deaths reported 8, as against an equivalent number for August. Additional cases reported 15, as against an equivalent number for August. All of the deaths occurred in children, 6 white, and 2 colored. The youngest was a colored female aged one month. All of the additionally reported cases were in white children, 7 occurred in Carroll County.

Measles: No deaths, and 17 reported cases, as compared with 2 deaths and 6 additional cases in August. Three of the cases were in adults. There is a house epidemic (6 cases) in Middletown, Frederick County.

Scarlet Fever: Two deaths, as compared with no deaths in either July or August. Additional cases reported 54, as compared with 30 in August. With one exception, all of the cases occurred in white persons. Four of the cases of sickness are in adults. Thirteen of the cases of sickness occurred in Cumberland, and 6 in Salisbury.

Diphtheria: Number of deaths 6, cases of sickness reported 93, as against an equivalent number of deaths and 22 additional cases reported in August. The youngest decedent was a colored female aged 6 months; the eldest was a colored boy of 8 years. Diphtheria has been epidemic at St. Michaels, Talbot County (26 cases) at Crocheron, Dorchester County (8 cases), and at Myersville, Frederick County (6 cases).

Erysipelas: No deaths and no cases reported, as against one death and no cases of sickness reported in August.

Meningitis: Number of deaths reported 15, as against 13 in August. No cases of sickness reported, as against 1 in August.

Malaria: One death reported, as against 2 in August. No case of sickness reported in either September or August.

Septicemia: Deaths reported 10, as against none in August. No case of sickness reported in either August or September.

Typhoid Fever: Deaths reported 60, as compared with 54 in August, 33 in July, and 15 in June. Additional cases reported 363, as compared with 402 in August, 215 in July, and 60 in June. Forty-two of the decedents were white, and 18 colored. The youngest decedent was a colored male age 1 year 10 months, the eldest was a white woman 68 years of age. Of the 363 additionally reported cases, 200 were males and 163 females; 325 were white, and 38 colored. The disease prevailed most extensively in Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick, Wicomico, and Worcester Counties. In Cumberland, there were 13 cases; in Mt. Washington, 11 cases, in Frederick City and suburban towns, 30 cases; in Salisbury, 19 cases, and in Ocean City, 11 cases.

TAWDRY COLORED SUPPLEMENT

One Big Paper Listens to Plea of Outraged Parents and Discontinues Comic Sheet.

The announcement made several weeks ago by a prominent Boston newspaper that it would discontinue its colored comic Sunday supplement called forth the following from that conservative New York daily the Evening Post: A distinct movement against the colored supplements of Sunday papers has for some time been noticeable. Educational conferences have resolved against them. Meetings of mothers have protested that their influence was degrading, and have called upon newspapers to discontinue them. Such public objection has been gathering force and volume; and it is in obedience, the Herald says, to the appeals of parents and teachers that it has resolved to banish "the clown of the newspaper establishment."

Clownish, vulgar, idiotic the colored "comics" of American Sunday newspapers undeniably are. It is a reproach to our civilization that they should have been allowed to swarm over the land. They are a glory all our own. No other journalism has anything like them. They leave visiting foreigners absolutely astounded and aghast. For the reproach inevitably runs beyond the individual of editor or journal, and is an impeachment of the taste and even common sense of the whole country. Who has not seen intelligent Germans and Frenchmen and Englishmen completely puzzled by the Sunday comic? It is a phenomenon which they cannot in the least understand. They meet Americans freely, and find that they are not so different from other peoples. The average of our taste and manners does not strike them as extraordinarily low, and they are even ready to compliment us, until they see the Sunday supplements! Then they ask if Americans are really grown up, if they are really educated, if they really ever discriminate between what is childish and what is tawdry and what is excellent. Material which in no other country in the world would be offered to anybody but infants or semi-idiot, is here gravely thrust by newspapers upon their presumably intelligent readers, and hailed as a great advance in journalism!

The complaint is almost universal that American Sunday newspapers are too bulky. When seriously set about reducing their dropical proportions, they cannot make a better beginning than by cutting away the so-called comic supplements, which are really more tragic than comic, and more barbarian than either.

"WHISKERS WEEK" IS HERE

Many Quit Shaving For Winter and Raise Beards For Protection.—Big Loss to Chicago Shops

This is "whiskers week," the season of the year when the wise man "blocks out" a hirsute adornment to protect his face from the rigors of winter.

It is the saddest week in the year for the "tonsorial artists," as thousands of patrons who shave every other day will not need a barber's attention oftener than once or twice a month from now until next April. It means a loss of $250,000 to the barbers of Chicago. There are 50,000 men, it is estimated, who have taken out a membership card in the Facial Hirsute Club, and these would have spent $5 each which they will save by reason of wearing whiskers.

"Whiskers week" is no joke in the barber business," said a Chicago shop owner. "It puts an awful crimp in the receipts for about six months."

"What is known among barbers as 'whiskers week' begins about the middle of October. Nearly one-fourth of my customers let some kind of whiskers sprout this week, and a great many others will follow suit before the end of next week."

"Old John J. Coughlin was one of the first in my chair this evening to observe the annual custom of 'whiskers week.' He told me to block out boot straps for him."

"Don't you know what 'boot straps' are? You've seen those little whiskers straight down from the ear, haven't you? Well, those are the 'boot strap' brand. Alderman Coughlin will look swell in them. His face is just the shape for this adornment."

"As in past seasons, the Van Dyke will be much the vogue. This is one of the smartest whiskers that a man can hang on his face. It is much effected by professional men, especially doctors. 'Strange thing about the Van Dyke is that every 'con' man in the country who can raise whiskers is sure to have the pointed beard. It gives the wearer a distinguished appearance."

"Several of my patrons have blocked out mutton chops. This style of facial adornment is called 'fire escapes' by uncouth persons. For my part I prefer the 'fire escapes' to the 'lace curtain effect' that you see on some men's faces. There isn't one barber in fifty who knows how to hang the 'lace curtains properly, and they make the wearer look like a monkey."

"The 'sea weed' and 'alfalfa' are two other styles that will be worn much this winter. Those are the full set of whiskers, and I don't think there is any thing prettier or more becoming to any man."

"Of course, we still have the 'Galways,' that grow wild under the chin and around the neck. This style is worn mostly by old men. It is very popular with foreigners."

"The imperial—that little bunch of spinach on the chin—is rapidly going out of style."—Washington Herald.

Sympathetic.

Young Wife (rather nervously). "Oh, cook, I must really speak to you. Your master is always complaining. One day it is the soup, the second day it is the fish, the third day it is the joint—in fact, it is always something or other."

A Course Of Study.

"See here, sir, before you married my daughter you said you could support her in the style to which she was accustomed; and yet for almost a year now you have made your home at my house."

Today's Suggestion by Ellen Stan.

PRETTY CLOTHES FOR BABY.

An idea which is new and effective is that of using sheer batiste or handkerchief linen for children's dresses. These materials are beautifully hand embroidered in dainty designs and worn over fine cotton slips that are made very full and give them a fluffy appearance. Hats and quaint little Dutch bonnets have the same idea carried out.

The design in the accompanying illustration is particularly suited to this style of dress, as the deep yoke gives ample opportunity for hand work.

The lower edge of the dress should be finished with hemstitching. This pattern, however, may be used with equally good effect for making up light and heavy cotton materials, and on these embroideries will also give a pretty finish. If preferred, the garment may be made as shown in the back view.

This tucked dress closes at the back and has a yoke and a berth. A white batiste or nainsook would be neat copied exactly after the illustration, with a piece of embroidery used for the yoke and the ruffle and sleeves buttonhole scalloped.

If the suggestion of hand work on the yoke is followed it will simplify the laundering of the little frock. The average laundress unfortunately is incompetent, and the more simple the ironing of the garment is made the more likely it is to be properly done.

The set illustrated consists of a dress, slip, cambric petticoat, flannel petticoat and kimono. The pattern is cut in one size and fits any child under six months of age. The dress requires 2 3/4 yards of material 36 inches wide. The slip requires 2 1/2 yards of material 36 inches wide. The cambric petticoat requires 1 3/4 yards 36 inches wide. The flannel petticoat requires 1 1/2 yards 36 inches wide. The kimono requires 1 1/2 yards 36 inches wide.

Any reader of this paper who desires to secure this pattern may do so by sending 10 cents to this office. Give the number, 3415, state size desired and write the full address plainly. The pattern will be forwarded promptly by mail.

EXERCISE NECESSARY.

Cleanliness, Fresh Air, Deep Breathing and Good Food Equal Health.

Hard physical exercise is most important, for through it only can the blood be made to circulate, says an authority. Walking, calisthenics, swimming, tennis, indeed, it makes no difference what, as long as the main object of making the blood move has been accomplished, should each or all be tried; none must be given up because one walk, for instance, has not brought the nose to an alabaster hue. When arising in the morning one should take some simple movements, either with or without dumbbells. The latter are not necessary, but they make the work a trifle easier. Before any constricting bands have been put on a woman should place her hands on her hips, with the fingers forward, and draw a long breath until she can feel her diaphragm expand. During this time the head must be erect and the lips closed, inhaling through the nostrils. Needless to add, plenty of fresh air is required, otherwise the lungs will be filled with that which is stale.

OUR LADY OF THE GROTTTO.

"In one of the lonely dells of that picturesque through not lofty range of mountains which extends through the northern part of Maryland, there is a shrine dedicated to the Mother of God, and known throughout that region as the 'Grotto.' It is visited on festival days, when it is gaily decorated with lights and flowers, and devout crowds throng the spot. At other times it wears an aspect of dreariness and neglect.

"Through woodlands dim to thee I come, And low my sad heart maketh moan, To find thee in thy grotto drear, By all forgotten—left alone. Nor lights, nor flowers here are found, With withered leaflets thou art crowned, Mother mine!

"No rose and lilly fair entwine, No violet with its perfume sweet, No taper burns before thy shrine To shed a radiance round thy feet. Dead spray and broken vase I see, Unworthy are such gifts for thee, Maid divine!

"No floral offerings have I, No scented blossoms rich and rare; My heart alone, a care-worn thing, A hymn of praise, an earnest prayer— A prayer of faith and hope and love, That strength and courage from above Be given me.

"I lay my hopes down at thy feet, That they may bloom like roses there; I offer thee my purest thoughts, As lilies for thy flowing hair. My tears like cooling dew of night Shall keep these flowers ever bright, That bloom for thee."

Emmitsburg, Md., October 2, 1878.

One of the solemn and most beautiful services of the centenary of Mount St. Mary's College was held at this Grotto located on the Mountain back of the Old Church on The Hill, decorated and illuminated on this occasion.

The Bridal Race.

By Maude Swalm Evans.

Copyrighted, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

"I want you to ride in the bridal race with me, Frieda," said Wilhelm Roebie as he stood ready to mount Black Nance after having delivered his sister's wedding invitation to Farmer Dietrich's family.

"I can't," answered Frieda Dietrich, with regret in her eyes and voice. "Father has promised Emil Myer that I shall ride with him."

"You wouldn't do that, Frieda?" pleaded Wilhelm. "I've never told you so, but as long back as I can remember I've counted on your being my wife some day. You won't ride in the bridal race with any other man, Frieda? Tell me that you won't," entreated Wilhelm.

"I'd like to ride with you, Wilhelm, but I can't. I must do as father says," and the tears welled to Frieda's eyes as she turned and went into the house.

Dejection and gloom took possession of Wilhelm as he rode away.

"I don't believe that Frieda really cares for Myer," he soliloquized. "He must be at least ten years older than she is, but he's got his farm clear and money in the bank, and of course that talks with Dietrich. Myer's got good horses, and he stands a chance of winning the race with Nance out, and if he does!" Wilhelm's face looked dark and threatening and then perturbed as his thoughts flashed back to a winter's night when he, a half grown boy, sat by the fireplace in Stein's large kitchen and with bulging eyes and open mouth listened to old Granny Stein tell weird stories of her fatherland. Just as vividly as he did that night Wilhelm could see the old woman's face grow witch-like and uncanny under the flickering firelight as she told of a couple who, after winning the bridal race, had disregarded the omen and had refused to marry.

Love had changed to hate, and so bitter was the new passion that they traveled far away from their native home in hope of never meeting again. When a twelvemonth passed the "fire man" gained possession of their souls, and constantly and unceasingly he pursued them, bringing them nearer and nearer together until he succeeded in driving them close enough to encircle with his lightning. At first there was a great circle, but it grew smaller and smaller until the man and woman met, and then in a flash and a roar they disappeared and were never seen again. Wilhelm knew that if Frieda entered the bridal race with Myer she would be irrevocably lost to him.

One morning shortly after Wilhelm had carried the wedding invitation he was in the village. When about to get his horse for the homeward trip he remembered that his mother wanted some things from Funk's grocery. In the store he found Dietrich and Myer. Myer had brought in some farm produce and was settling with Gus Funk, the grocer's boy.

"I owe you a dollar ninety-seven, but I can't make it," said Gus, looking into the money drawer. "I have only one ninety-five in change."

"That's near enough, Myer," interrupted Dietrich; "take it and come on." "I don't know," replied Myer. "A penny here and a penny there and a dollar's soon gone. You put it down, Gus, and pay me the next time," insisted Myer, following Dietrich out.

"There's a stingy man for you," remarked Gus to Wilhelm. "If father owes him an odd sum he'll always say, 'Even it up, Funk; a few pennies don't count,' and father will even it up."

"You don't have money unless you watch it, Gus, my boy," responded Wilhelm.

"There's a limit," retorted Gus. "Myer is an old miser. One time I picked up a few apples from under his trees, and he came out and swore he'd have me arrested. Henry Rubb came along and paid for them, and then the old coward said I ought to be punished anyway, and he gave me a kick that made me sore for a week. I intend to get even with him for that kick some day."

"I believe you're just the fellow I'm looking for, Gus," Wilhelm declared, and he stayed in the store and talked for nearly an hour. When he came out he had a smile on his face and he had regained his usual cheerfulness. Each day until the wedding he carried and brushed Nance until her coat shone like velvet. Whenever he could he took the church road to his home, and when there was no one in sight he urged his mare to her fastest speed and guided her through ditches and over all the rough places that he could find along the road.

"It's no use pulling at my coat, old girl," declared Wilhelm as he brushed Nance the morning of his sister's wedding day. "No, you can't have oats or anything else until you get back. I know it seems mean, Nance, but you'll get all the more by and by. Here are some pretty ribbons for you. Blue means first prize. Do you know that? There, you are as pretty a mare as ever traveled these roads. Now watch me, old girl. See—one, two, three—four measures of oats. In they go. No, don't put; you can't have a bite now. They'll be there when you get back. I'm going to hitch you to a buggy and tie you in the yard until I'm ready to start."

When Wilhelm arrived at the church, he found nearly all of the hitching places occupied. There were horses and vehicles of all sorts, and all were gayly trimmed with plumes and ribbons and bunting. Myer's horse was tied to the post nearest the church porch.

"I suppose he'd have tied at the porch if the place wasn't reserved for Dietrich," Wilhelm muttered as he fastened Nance to the fence on the opposite side of the road. He entered the church a few minutes before the bridal couple arrived.

After the last words of the ceremony were spoken the little organ sent forth a joyous strain, and Fritz and Ann walked down the aisle toward the door, Dietrich alone preceding them. He was to drive them home. All the other guests kept their seats until the chiming of the church bell announced that the bridal party had started, for as deeply rooted as was the belief in the winner's omen was the belief that misfortune would surely follow the bride in her married life did any in the race pass her carriage during the run.

At the first clang of the bell there was a general and hurried uprising. Myer and Wilhelm were the first out, and as they stepped on the porch they saw Myer's horse flying down the road toward his home with a broken hitching strap dangling from his bit. In frantic anger Myer jumped from the porch and went yelling after the horse.

"You're going the wrong way to win the race," called some one after him.

Wilhelm hurried to where Nance was tied. "Oats," he whispered in her ear. He jumped in the buggy and drove to Frieda, who was standing with a group of girls awaiting their escorts.

"Jump in Frieda," invited Wilhelm.

"Nance won't stand." Frieda glanced at her father in the distance and then at Myer's disappearing figure. Then she accepted the help of Wilhelm's free hand and sprang into the buggy. In another second the church bell rang for the start, and she and Wilhelm were speeding, with a dozen other pairs, after the bridal couple.

With ears high and visions of a full feed box, Nance ran as if he had never run before. Through ditches, over ruts and stones, inch by inch she gained on the other horses until at last she had left them all behind. She entered her yard several minutes before the next couple arrived.

Ann and Fritz had gone into the house and Dietrich was tying his horses when he caught sight of Wilhelm and Frieda.

"I thought you were to ride with Myer!" he exclaimed.

"Myer is running the race with his horse," laughed Wilhelm. "He went the other way."

"It'll have to stand now," said Dietrich, shaking Wilhelm's hand. "You don't seem to be very sorry about it, Puss," he remarked, pinching his daughter's cheek as Wilhelm led her in to get the bride's first kiss.

After the last guest had left the church Gus Funk crawled cautiously out through a hole in the foundation of the church.

"Gee, that wasn't much of a trick," he grinned, "to change Myer's strap for a broken one and to 'shoo' the horse down the road. It's a good thing that Dietrich or the married pair didn't look back. I've got even with Myer all right—more than even. I really think he owes me another kick, for this morning's fun, with a good hitching strap thrown in, is certainly worth two."

Propheesied the Phonograph.

An electrician of New York has a collection of prophecies anent the phonograph. It is interesting to note that Emerson propheesied the phonograph's advent. He said:

"We make the sun paint our portraits now. By and by we shall organize the echoes as we now organize the shadows."

Maury, in 1844, propheesied more clearly than Emerson, saying:

"What a pity it is that M. Daguerre, instead of photography, had not invented a process of writing by merely speaking through a trumpet at a piece of paper. Instead of saying, 'I wrote you a letter last Monday,' the phrase would have been, 'I spoke you a ream.'"

Tom Hood propheesied in his Comic Annual for 1839:

"In this century of inventions, when a self acting drawing paper has been discovered for copying invisible objects, who knows but that some future Daguerre or Herschel may find out some sort of Boswellish writing paper to repeat whatever it hears?"

John Chinaman's Joke.

All around Chaotung lies abundance of silver, copper, coal and iron, but the Chinese have very primitive ways of getting the minerals. They admit foreigners are the best at that kind of thing, because they have the power of seeing underground. Some years ago two Japanese went to Chaotung exploring for silver. The authorities wanted to test their powers. They buried some silver ingots on the parade ground. Then they took the Japanese a walk that way. "Is there any silver about here?" they asked. "No," said the Japanese, "this is not the kind of soil in which silver is found." Then the buried metal was produced from under their feet, amid the loud hilarity of all Celestial officialdom, since which time the Chaotungese have had a prodigious contempt for foreigners.

Old Pals.

A member of the school board of Cleveland was once addressing a class when he touched upon the beauties of friendship.

"Friendship, boys and girls," said he. "is a thing to be cultivated and practiced by all of us. Read and ponder the stories of the great friendships of sacred and profane history. Take them for your models—David and Jonathan, Damon and Pythias and Scylla and Charybdis."—Harper's Weekly.

REVIVAL OF STATELY MINUET

Directorie Gowns Bring Back the Old-fashioned Dances.—Merry Widow Waltz Thing of Past.

It has been decreed by a good authority that the Merry Widow waltzes, the barn dances, and cake walks are to be superseded by the old time minuet, the gavotte, and the graceful cotillon. A celebrated teacher of fancy dancing says "The old-fashioned minuet is infinitely more graceful than the modern society dances. Its greatest charm lies in the dignity and stately grace used in the figures. There is not one abrupt motion; not one sudden turn.

"It is quite natural that we should return to the old minuet. There are two reasons. The tendency has always been to change, change, constantly change, and it would be hard to find a greater change from the slap-bang dances that are the fashion now to the minuet of long ago.

"Then, too, the costumes that are to be worn this season point back to the costumes of the empire period. They are not adapted to the popular dances, and they are singularly adapted to the dances of that same period.

"The minuet is not an easy dance. The steps themselves are not difficult, but there is more to the dance than the step.

"The minuet is a test of a woman's grace. An awkward woman cannot dance it.

"One really delightful result of the reviving of the old dances is that the old minuet music will be heard again. It is quite slow, full of old-fashioned trills, and quite typical of the dance."

The minuet has changed greatly since it originated in the empire period. At first it was a simple, stately dance, which developed into a really intricate maze of stately turns in the quadrille.

Close Quarters

The following extract from a letter of thanks is cherished by its recipient: "The beautiful clock you sent us came in perfect condition, and is now in the parlor on top of the book-shelves, where we hope to see you soon, and your husband, also, if he can make it convenient."—Youths Companion.

Out Of The Fullness of The Heart

"What shall I play?" asked the organist of an absent-minded clergyman. "What sort of a hand have you got?" was the unexpected reply.—Wasp.

The whole thing was yours for seven long years, And you chucked a considerable bluff, But soon I'll be there in the White House, Ted, And you'll find out that I am the stuff.

As a stepping-stone you were all right, dear Ted, And I'm glad you revised my speech; For it worked all right for the purpose, Ted, And it proved that at times you're a "peach."

But you might as well know it right here, old man, That your policies can't bind me; You can write them by miles at a dollar a word And let Abbott then print them all, see?

You can shoot all the tigers and leopards you want, And compile jungle books by the score, But you musn't attempt to butt-in on my plans, For I won't stand for that any more.

So, good-bye, old Teddy, I am sure much obliged For the trick you accomplished for me, But remember that when I am up on the job The whole bloomin' show I will be.

—Bilt Aft.

BACK TO THE FARMS.

East and West there is a tendency to return to the farms. Twenty years ago New England states established commissions whose duty it was to dispose of the abandoned farms in those states. To-day not an abandoned farm is to be found in any of them. While many have been purchased for summer homes, the majority of them have passed into the hands of men who have regenerated them and made them profitable investments. What is true of the New England states is more or less true of all other states East of the Mississippi river. There is a sharper demand for farming property than at any time during the last two decades.

Twenty years ago the state of Oklahoma was practically an Indian reservation. Opened for "entry" it was the scene of the first mad rush for farm sites that the country witnessed. But since that memorable event other reservations have been opened, allotted and settled, and to-day present prosperous farming communities. On Oct. 19 the Rosebud reservation of 820,000 acres was allotted, and nearly 200,000 people registered for an opportunity to secure a 160 acre slice. Meanwhile, other Western states, in which the government is promoting irrigation projects, are fast increasing their farming population, while Texas provides a conclusive demonstration that the people are going back to the farms.

Nor is this all. During the last 20 years 400,000 American families have emigrated to the Canadian northwest, and engaged in wheat raising and other farming. They have been attracted there by the wonderful fertility of the soil and the large profits reaped therefrom. Their success has contributed not a little to the present tendency of people to go back to the farms.

Their True Mission

"Heaven first taught letters for some wretch's aid, Some banished lover, or some captivo maid." But now we know they're handy for devising Good, up-to-date, effective advertising. —Nixon Waterman.

Japan's standing army at the time of the Russian War numbered about 100,000 men; her army now numbers at least 300,000. Her navy has increased since that date from six battleships of the first class to 11; from a tonnage of 253,681 to 422,496, and enlisted personnel from 27,833 to 41,070, with a proportionate increase of officers.

FOR RELIEF OF TUBERCULOSIS

Efforts of Humanity to Wipe Out Consumption.—Maryland in the Lead in Great Campaign.

Now that the presidential campaign is a thing of the past interest is largely centered in another campaign of equal if not more wide-spread importance: the efforts of humanity to wipe out consumption.

Since the close of the International Congress on Tuberculosis in Washington last month, the issue of tuberculosis in the United States is almost everywhere now recognized as a political problem. It is a problem in which city officials, county officials, state law-makers and executives, and the judges in all classes of courts are beginning to recognize their responsibility.

Maryland was behind no other state in the United States in its showing at the Congress. Ten prizes, medals, and diplomas were won by the State's public and private activities. The Maryland Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis was given a silver medal for having the largest membership in proportion to population of any voluntary association in the United States. With the exception of the Swedish Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, it has the largest membership in this relation in the world. An active campaign is now being made to increase its membership. During the four years of its existence, the Association has drawn almost entirely upon Baltimore City for its members and financial support. It will now seek to extend its activity into every county in the State, and secure there as many members as possible. County branches have already been formed in Anne Arundel, Dorchester, Washington, and Frederick counties, and arrangements are being perfected to organize in Montgomery and Allegany counties.

The large membership of the Association makes it a very potent force in securing remedial legislation at Annapolis, in Baltimore City, and from the boards of county commissioners in the counties.

The educational work of the association is being pushed with vigor. The traveling exhibit has just finished a tour of the county fairs, where it has been seen by thousands of Maryland people, and it will continue its itinerary during the winter.

A patent has been granted a Chicago man on an electric piano that produces music from bells, instead of wires.

Let us, therefore, as a people set our faces resolutely against evil and with broad charity, with kindness and good will toward all men, but with unflinching determination to smite down wrong, strive with all the strength that is given us for righteousness in public and in private life.

"Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, do set apart Thursday, the 26th day of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and on that day I recommend that the people shall cease from their daily work, and in their homes or in their churches meet devoutly to thank the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received in the past and to pray that they may be given strength so to order their lives as to deserve a continuation of these blessings in the future.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington this thirty-first day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eight, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-third.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

"By the President: "ALVEY A. ADEE, Acting Secretary of State."

The peat in the extensive bogs of Central Ireland is to be utilized with a view to generating electric power sufficient to drive the mills, run the railways and light the cities of that region. The bogs cover 874 square miles. One works can get 15,000-horsepower for 50 years on a 30 per cent. load factor.

The radish, greatly modified by cultivation, probably had its origin in the temperate zone, but from what wild species it is derived is not exactly known.

Sums have now been received amounting to a total of $225,000 for the Koch endowment, to be applied against tuberculosis as Dr. Koch may direct.

It is estimated by coal dealers that the coal consumption of New York city in the next six months will be 7,320,000 tons.

During each month for the last two years about 21,000 Russian immigrants have entered the port of New York.
